NEW 'NAZI BEAST' FILM CYCLE

Plenty of Show Biz Angles in Bow Of American League's 10-Team Loop

By HAROLD ROSENTHAL

Baseball takes its most important step in more than a half-century early next week when the American League opens as a 10-team loop, offering two new clubs and a franchise switch. When Pres. Kennedy flips the opening-day pitch for the first time in Washington's Griffith Stadium next Monday (10) half the players lined up to catch it as a possible souvenir will be members of a new Washington Senators ball club which didn't exist prior to last fall. It's a $3,000,000 replacement for the old Washington club which moved to greener and cooler Minneapolis-St. Paul pastures.

The following afternoon, Minnapolis-St. Paul, bearing strange handle of "Minnesota Twins" opens in Yankee Stadium while another mint-new group, Gene Autry's Los Angeles Angels, makes its debut in Baltimore. Angels, slated to play for a year in shoe-pinching (20,000 capacity) Wrigley Field before moving in with Walter O'Malley's Dodgers in the now-building Chavez Ravine, represent another $3,000,000 investment. Principal bankrollers are Autry and broadcasting-business partner, Bob Reynolds, one-time all-America footballer at Stanford and president of Golden West Broadcasters (KMPC, KSFO, etc.).

New Washington group is headed by Elwood R. (Pete) Que-

See 'Less Aggression' In Chi as Mayor Daley Reverses Police Board

Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley has reversed ruling of city's police censor board and granted an exhibition license to Trans-Lux Distributing's "The Savage Eye." Action is deemed of particular interest since the mayor approved the pic without any cuts, while the censor board had turned down a version in which several major cuts had already been made.

N.Y. attorney Felix Bilgrey, who worked with Trans-Lux in its negotiations with Chicago board (and who also argued the Times Film "Don Juan" case before U.S. Supreme Court), said yesterday (Tues.) action seems to indicate that local censors are going to be much more careful, instead of aggressive, as result of the "Juan" decision. Vast majority of opinion following the court's decision in January was that it would encourage more censorship, since decision upheld right of Chicago's board to see a film before issuing a license.

"Savage Eye" will open at Chicago's World Playhouse in about three weeks.

Adenauer Biog On LP

Berlin, April 4.

Electrola, has another unusual release on the domestic market: A double-LP album entitled "Aus meinem Leben" (From My Life) on which the West German Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer, depicts episodes of his long (he's 85) life.

Adenauer tells that it was a Communist Kapo who probably saved his life while he was in Nazi jail in 1944.

Adenauer, chancellor since 1949, proves a fine raconteur. Profits of the two Adenauer LP's go to Red Cross.

No TV in Israel; Eichmann Trial Only Via Radio

By JOSEPH LAPID

Tel Aviv, April 4.

There is one country in the free world where the Eichmann trial will not be watched by a mass audience. That country is Israel.

There is no tv in Israel, so that the only way for Israelis to see the trial is via movie documentaries. But the two Israeli studios, Geva and Herzlia, which provide the films with local documentary staff, have refused to sign up with Capital Cities Broadcasting Co. of New York, the company that got the exclusive rights to put cameras into the courtroom. The Israeli studios argue with the government that they should be given priority in the courtroom. They definitely refuse to buy Israeli material from a foreign company.

So the only documentaries which will carry pictures of the trial will

L.B. MAYER ESTATE NEARS CLEARANCE

Hollywood, April 4.

With the Federal government paid $1,500,000 tax by Louis B. Mayer estate last January, $2,000,000 state tax is now being examined by authorities and is in process of being paid off. Clearance of all legatee payments are expected in 60 days.

Residue of estate will be transferred to Louis B. Mayer Foundation of which Myron Fox, close associate of late producer, is trustee. Residue includes real estate and

10 DUE IN WAKE OF BOOKS' BOOM

By VINCENT CANBY

Stories about Hitler, Eichmann and Nazi pals have been boff at the bookstores and great on the newsstands, but their U.S. theatre boxoffice value still remains to be proven. The point is made in view of the fact that there are no less than 10 film properties on the "Nazi Beast" theme either in release, completed or in various stages of preparation here and abroad.

The current cycle seems to have been launched (chronologically, anyway) by the Swedish documentary, "Mein Kampf," which has been packing them in all over Europe since it first went into release last year. Picture will go out in this market later under the Columbia banner.

However, while "Mein Kampf" has been breaking records in the overseas markets, the first of the new Nazi pix to be seen this side, Allied Artists' "Operation Eichmann," has been having a comparatively spotty time of it in its first 100 or so dates.

Whether this is a reflection on the subject matter, or on the qual-

Russos May Start Paying Royalties

Paris, April 4.

A break may be coming in the matter of author's royalty payments by the Russians. The U.S.S.R. government has invited Jean Darcante, secretary general of the International Theatre Institute (Unesco), to discuss the situation with Russian theatre authorities.

While the move thus far is restricted only to theatre, the fact that the move was initiated by the Russian government is notable. No details, but indication from Moscow was that they would like to pay royalties on plays, but in barter rather than cash, if such a thing can be arranged. The I.T.T. officials feel that, since the Russians are paying nothing, anything that can be arranged will be welcome. Chances are, the scheme, when fully developed, will consist of credits abroad (rather than rubles to be used only in Russia as heretofore), possibly deducted from moneys owing to Russian enterprises abroad in other, non-theatrical fields.

If the scheme can be made workable, obviously, it will be spread to take in book writers as well as playwrights. At any rate, Darcante eagerly said okay and started booking his plane, stopping long enough to consult with authors' societies in Europe, Britain, America, etc.

Moslem-Christian-Jew 'Brotherhood' Play Cairo's Biggest Current Click

By ROGER BOWER

Cairo, April 4

The leading legit theatres offer strong entries to good business. They are reminiscent of the old repertory companies. At Theatre El Rihani, named for one of Egypt's great playwrights, Naguib El Rahani—called the Moliere of Egypt—the El Rihani players are reviving his "Hassan, Morcos and Cohen." The playwright died in '48. This is one of his greatest efforts, a plea for tolerance and the brotherhood of man. Hassan is a Moslem, Morcos a Christian, and Cohen a Jew. El Rihani's point of view is that they can live peacefully and profitably together. Strong stuff. The house is sold out weeks in advance.

The Theatre Ismail Yassine (he's called "The Fernandel of Egypt") features Yassine, supported by some of the best farceurs of the theatre and cinema in "Leilet Dokhlet" (My Marriage Night). This is more of a three-act vaudeville sketch than a play, but it's loaded with laughs expertly delivered.

The Theatre July 26 (so called after the date of Farouk's heave-ho) was established last year by Abdel Rahman El Khanisi, former editor, novelist and poet. This is an "intellectual" theatre and the actors are "young intellectuals." They came up with a hit, "Nagalet Bonlac," a "social" comedy. The oldest theatre in Cairo, the Ezhe-

There is also a playground in Toledo named for the former Hollywood star.

It's Prize Play Time on B'way; See Field Open

It's prize time again on Broadway and the field is figured to be wide open. Although the current season is generally regarded as one of the worst in recent years there have been several productions considered good enough to qualify as contenders for the annual awards of the N. Y. Drama Critics Circle and the American Theatre Wing.

It's figured questionable whether there will be a Pulitzer Prize for drama this year. Not only are the quality requirements for the award considered more demanding than in other areas, but there's still theoretically the restriction (ignored several times in the past) limiting the competition to "an American play, preferably original and dealing with American life, which shall represent the educational value and power of the

RAP '64 WORLD'S FAIR AS 'PVT. TRADE SHOW'

The forthcoming 1964 World's Fair to be held at Flushing Meadows Park, has been attacked as a "private trade show" in a letter to Robert Moses, fair corporation head, by Leon Gordon Miller, president of the Industrial Designers' Institute. Miller stated that unless cooperation was sought in this venture from artists, engineers, architects, site planners and industrial designers to make the fair more representative of the U.S., it should be called off immediately to save all concerned further embarrassment.

Miller also said that he found it difficult to conceive that the Government was sanctioning so "narrowly private an affair." There was no comment from Moses on this matter.

Musicians Stand in Line For Inaugural Gala Pay Just Like Everybody Else

Washington, April 4.

As 70 musicians who played for the Sinatra-Lawford Inaugural Gala on Jan. 19 have learned the hard way, the message from Democratic National Committee officials is: "If we owe you money, stand in line."

There has always been an air of mystery around party headquarters about the gross and the expenses involved in the Gala, where general admission went for $100 per ticket and boxes seating 10 cost $10,000. Although the Democratic National Committee must make public all its receipts and expenditures, it

No Blacklist, Studios Just Reacted Similarly to Common Stimuli Of Commies' Infiltrating Tactics

By JAY LEWIS

Washington, April 4.

Hiring Communists doesn't mesh with the rsponsibility the public demands of motion picture producers.

Motion Picture Assn. of America and the eight major film companies make this though a big part of their defense in U. S. District Court here in the case of the 12 self-styled "blacklisted" writers and actors.

Former Attorney General William P. Rogers, counsel for MPAA and the companies, filed a joint 58-page brief asking the court to reject the demand for a preliminary injunction requiring the defendants to cease enforcing the "blacklist."

The writers and actors in an antitrust suit lodged early in January, accuse the companies of engaging in an illegal conspiracy thwarting their ability to sell their products or services. The plaintiffs are writers Albert Maltz, Ned Young, Lester Cole, John Howard Lawson, Herbert Biberman, Robert L. Richards, Philip Stevenson, Fred I. Rinaldo and actors Alvin Hammer, Gale Sondergaard, Frances Farmer and Shimen Ruskin.

All Face Problem

In their plea against the sought-for injunction, the picture firms denied the conspiracy charge in these words: "We vigorously deny the existence of any such conspiracy, assert that each acted in its own separate economic interest, and insist that any similarity between the conduct of one producer-distributor defendant and that of another resulted entirely from the impact of identical stimuli, under similar conditions, upon com-

Blames Critic's Stunting For 1940 Expo Music Flop Though Well Planned

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

Your letter from Ken Klein does not even hint at the underlying cause of the failure of the great international music program which the late Dr. Walter Damrosch and I originally projected for the 1939 World's Fair.

The Music Advisory Committee (of which I was secretary) under Mrs. Vincent Astor implemented such a program by getting its approval from the Fair's directors and then getting the Music Hall built. It was not long after I was appointed Music Manager by Grover Whalen that I had to take a leave of absence because critic Olin Downes ("Artistic Director") had ambitions to become an impresario. His ineptness not only botched the job, but was the principal reason for failure of an ambitious and inspired program. He should have stuck to the writing of criticisms and left management to those who know how.

It was never our idea that the Fair's Music Hall should have been the setting for run-of-the-mill concert programs any more than that it should become a prime source of girlie shows.

If the directors of the forthcoming Fair should be interested, I will be glad to provide them with a copy of the program (which Dr. Damrosch and I spent a year in researching and writing) together with a copy of his splendid address in presenting it for acceptance. Julian Olney.

Disney's Vienna Choir

Vienna, April 4.

Walt Disney Films will make a full-length film here based on the Vienna Choir Boys. Pic will feature the young singers, but will primarily concentrate on their multi activities, the castle they live in, their school, studies, etc., all pointing to four full company choir groups constantly on tour around the world.

All these activities were detailed in a VARIETY story about a year ago which, it is understood, first got Disney interested.

Plenty Glam To Ringling Circus' 91st Annual Spec

By JACK PITMAN

With all that tradition and reputation for the "mostest," the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey circus has to be a kind of midway endsville for the "children of all ages." That, plainly, can be a strain as well as a blessing for the Big Show.

Current edition (billed as the 91st), which opened a 47-day run Wednesday (29) at Madison Sq. Garden, N. Y., is a foregone hit by its very nature—the sheer outpouring of antics (human and animal) which, for spectacle, is in a class alone. If there be a problem, it's that at times the show seems strapped by its own weight, this being a matter of sustained amusement in a three-ring dimension.

What might be wished for are shorter intervals between excitement peaks, which is to threw into some focus the problem of daredevil supply. Moppet reaction, on the other hand, is likely to be more passive. For them it's figured wow and gee-whiz all the way—and it's the kids, after all, who pied-piper the grownup admissions.

The '61 frolic doesn't stint on fun, color and diversity of interest—not, if memory serves, that this company ever did for its time. This visit, also, continues the spectacle kick. They're no longer "extra," but part and parcel, with four new production numbers fashioned by John Ringling North and stager Richard Barstow—"Anchors Aweigh," "Out of this World," "Polka Dot Polka" (with polka-dotted elephants for hefty good measure), and a finale salute to

Affectionate Biog Of 'Mr. Laurel & Mr. Hardy'

"Mr. Laurel and Mr. Hardy" by John McCabe (Doubleday; $4.50) is a penetrating recap of the careers of two of the screen's favorite clowns. Author, an associate professor of dramatic art at N.Y.U., has long been a friend of Stan Laurel's, and his book is helped by reproduction of revealing correspondence with Oliver Hardy's widow, Lucille, who met Hardy in 1939 when she was script girl for the Boris Morros production of the comedians' feature film, "The Flying Deuces."

By intention, volume is far more a study of the comic art of the team, than an investigation of their private lives. Careful analysis is given to many of the pair's celebrated routines, and to the manner in which they worked. Little doubt remains that Laurel was the brains and workhorse of the duo, but Hardy's brilliant contributions are not minimized. Each career is traced through its formative stages. Laurel was a British variety comedian who came to America as Chaplin's understudy with Fred Karno's "A Night in an English Music Hall" (1910). Hardy grew up in Georgia, and started his

'West Side Story' Breaks Rule That Paris Hates Modern U.S. Musicals

By GENE MOSKOWITZ

Paris, April 4.

"West Side Story," in Paris for a month's booking at the Alhambra-Chevalier Theatre, opened sensationally Thursday (30) before a wildly excited audience of showfolk, diplomats and V.I.P.'s. Impresari are a Yank, Pete Kameron, an Israeli, Giara Godik, and Paris agent Felix Marouani. It was smart to include story points on a little screen, so that those not conversant with English as she is spoke in this text could follow.

Previously Paris has not been responsive to American progressivism in musical drama which allows dance and song to carry the storyline rather than represent separate components in the entertainment. Constant outbursts of applause and a 10-minute ovation at the end made clear that "West Side Story" may have secured acceptance for these American staging ideas.

American musical films have rarely fared well due to the French bias for conventional operetta. But Kameron and Godik have struck a blow for more comprehension of what a musical could be—per the book by Arthur Laurents, music by Leonard Bernstein, lyrics by Stephen Sondheim and the stag-

Greenwich Village gamesmanship takes a new twist, credited to a group of anonymous police court reporters who are answering the "Rent A Beatnik For Your Party" ads in the Village Voice. A party needs squares as well as beatniks, the square being the ideal patsy on which to work out all frustrations.

Oratorio Society 'Home' Date at Carnegie Hall

The Oratorio Society of New York, founded 88 years ago, originally under the presidency of Andrew Carnegie who built Carnegie Hall for this group, returns to their "home" on April 12, after one concert at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Interest centers on featured tenor George Shirley. This Negro singer is attracting global attention and has been invited to this year's Spoleto Festival.

Carnegie "home" booking was set in anticipation of Carnegie Hall razing but that threat has since dissipated. T. Charles Lee is musical director and other soloists next week will include Mary MacKenzie, contralto, and basso Chester Watson.

PERCENTAGE OVER PURCHASE

Hard-Ducat Not for Reissues?

'King and I' in Grandeur 70 Reverts Quickly To Grind at Rivoli, N. Y.

Twentieth-Fox's 70m (Grandeur 70) reissue of "The King and I," launched as a hardticket, roadshow attraction at the Rivoli Theatre in New York last Thursday (23), abruptly switched over to a pop price, grind policy Saturday (1) for the declared purpose of reaping as big returns as possible during the always profitable Easter biz period.

When the unusual reissue was first announced, skeptics wondered how a 70m roadshow reissue might do less than six years after the film's original 35m pop price run. The company stated just before the reopening that the pic had a $20,000 advance, but mostly in group sales and mostly for the first week.

Apparently the first week's window sales indicated that continuing on a roadshow basis would be unprofitable. Some of the advance also included special morning shows which will go on as originally sold, since they'll be held prior to the theatre's opening each day for the grind showing.

Whether or not the company will make any further dates for the 70m reissue has not yet been decided. At the present time, 20th has just two Grandeur 70 prints of the pic on hand, with both in use at the Rivoli. Because of the unusual problems involved in transferring the pic from the original CinemaScope 55 negative to an unanamorphisized 70m print, the two present "King" prints are said to have cost more than $11,000 each.

Subsequent prints would undoubtedly cost less, particularly since 20th's DeLuxe Labs will soon be in a position to turn out 70m material. However, the print investment would still remain comparatively high for reissue purposes.

Opera and Popcorn

Chicago, April 3.

Opera with popcorn is a big hit at two Chi theatres, the Valencia and the Will Rogers, both nabe houses operated by Balaban & Katz.

Single night showing of "Tosca" two weeks ago at the Valencia brought an SRO house, so theatres will show "Pagliacci," "Madame Butterfly" and "La Traviata" on upcoming three Thursday nights.

At "Tosca" showing, Valencia manager Larry Whittaker greeted viewers in top hat and tails. Films will be shown only one time each evening for opera house similitude.

'Nobody Asked': Zanuck On 20th 'Control' Question

Producer Darryl F. Zanuck, former 20th-Fox production chief and still one of the company's biggest single stockholders, said in New York Monday (3) that he has not been approached by any group of 20th holders who might be interested in securing his support in any power struggle with 20th management.

Statement was made in answer to a query as to whether Zanuck had had any contact with the brokerage house interests (Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades & Co. and Treves & Co.) which have recently acquired substantial 20th stock holdings and now have two men on 20th board.

Zanuck, who arrived in New York Sunday (2) night from his Paris headquarters, said only: "All I've ever heard is rumors."

Principal reason for his visit, he said, was to bring in the final answer print on his "Big Gamble" to show 20th homeoffice toppers and to discuss plans for his forthcoming D-Day epic, "The Longest Day." Latter is due to get underway in July on European locations.

Before returning to Paris later in the week, Zanuck said he expected to announce names of first talent signed for "Day."

Sells Control Of Palace Chain In Jamaica, BWI

By D. G. MACMILLAN

Kingston, April 4.

For a figure estimated to be between $800,000-$900,000, A. Russell Graham has acquired the majority (55%) share holding interest of the J. Arthur Rank Organization in the Palace Amusement Co. (1921), Ltd., the largest and oldest cinema chain in Jamaica, thus making the film distribution business in Jamaica a virtual monopoly.

Palace Amusement, apart from owning Jamaica's largest airconditioned theatre, the Carib (built in 1939), the Palace, Gaiety, Odeon, Ambassador, in Kingston, and five other theatres in the island and a minority interest in the newly-built air-conditioned State Theatre owned and operated by the Colony Theatre Co., Ltd., also runs a Film Exchange which books films of seven major producing companies into 30 independent theatres in Jamaica.

Graham, who is also a director and large shareholder in Tropical Cinema Co. (operating Tropical and Rialto theatres), Ritz Theatre Ltd. (Ritz Theatre), Astor Cinema Co., Ltd. (Astor Theatre), also owns and operates the A. Russell Graham Film Agency which books films into these and other 12 theatres in the island.

Rivals in the film distributing business in Jamaica since 1950 when the Graham Exchange commenced, the two companies entered into a cross-distribution arrangement last January approximately seven months after Amalgamated Cinemas Ltd., opened the

'HIS & HERS' DEAL POINTS CHANGE

Deal whereby Arthur Kerman acquired the new British comedy, "His and Hers," for his newly reorganized Favorite Films involved an outright purchase of all Western Hemisphere rights from producer Hal. E. Chester, Kerman revealed in New York Thursday (30).

The agreement is significant in this day when outright purchases of film rights to class product are becoming more and more rare as overseas producers "want in" on the increasingly lucrative U. S. market. Kerman declined to name the figure for which he bought the Terry-Thomas starrer, but said it was obviously satisfactory to both parties.

He also pointed out that Chester, producer of the extremely successful "School for Scoundrels," being an American is also quite familiar with the U. S. market potential of his films.

As the U. S. market has become more and more receptive to British and foreign language films, more and more producers have sought —and obtained—percentage deals from importers this side. While the most perfectly "policed" percentage deal often leads to debate between friends, complications are compounded when the deal involves two people separated by a minimum of 3,000 miles and often a language barrier to boot. Thus Kerman's observation that he prefers an outright sale agreement would seem to be an understatement.

No release date has yet been set on "His," but the Favorite prexy hopes to bring over Thomas for promotion purposes when bookings are set. He noted that the star, who in the last year has hit the U. S. screens with such pix as "I'm All Right," "School for Scoundrels," "Make Mine Mink" and "Man in a Cocked Hat," is fast becoming one of the more potent British names in the U. S. art circuit.

While "His" will be the first new pic to go out for Favorite, Kerman also is planning the theatrical reissue of two William Wyler wartime documentaries, "The Memphis Belle" and "Thunderbolt."

Orr In Gotham Reveals Rationale Of Production Plans At Warners

By GENE ARNEEL

Double Exposure

In an unusual situation, two pictures opening in New York (Wed.) are from the same director.

Gordon Douglas called the turns both on "Sins of Rachel Cade" and "Gold of the Seven Saints" for Warners. They're bowing as a combo at the RKO circuit and other spots.

The new head of both theatrical and television production at Warner Bros., believes the public demand is the primary consideration and this does not go hand in hand necessarily with the exhibitors' call for more film-making. William T. Orr made a couple of points at a press conference in Manhattan this past week:

(2). The investment in a limited number of pictures today is equal to the outlay for numerically-greater programs of the past.

It boils down to this, in Orr's words: "We could rapidly go out of business by just producing a lot of pictures. We are not dedicated to numbers. Each picture must be a carefully-appraised enterprise. We have new opportunities because the public is buying substantial properties, which see grosses going higher and higher."

Current year will see WB making 15 to 18 features, said Orr, who adds: "I hope this is a figure I don't get stuck with."

Exec revealed himself as a candid spokesman for a company which through recent years has notoriously refrained from confiding. As Richard Lederer put it (he's the ad-pub chief), "a company must have the stamp of leadership. Bill Orr and Jack Warner want to open up a new chapter in the Warners history."

Releasing schedules have a "tendency to chance," observed Orr, this being a situation dependent upon the skeds of other companies. To this he adds his company can't produce just to meet the demands of exhibitors.

Orr says WB will be more aggressive in making new studio and outside production deals but there are no specific plans for more production abroad. "There's a great

Gene Picker To Distrib Pix, Too; Scouting Paris

Hollywood, April 4.

Eugene Picker's future career plans are not limited to producing films in Hollywood. He will also distribute others' product. For this purpose he will soon fly to Paris seeking screen fare to handle in States.

Picker cannot resume in exhibition end of trade as a condition of his settlement with Loew's Circuit, of which he was president. His retirement accruals with latter has been settled for $300,000 cash.

He is currently vacationing at Golden Beach, Fla.

COLUMBIA PRIMED TO START ½-DOZEN PRONTO

Columbia has six "major" productions slated to go before the cameras this month, bringing to 20 the total number of features shooting during the next four months. Adds up to the heftiest production schedule in the company's history, Abe Schneider, president, told homeoffice execs upon his return to Manhattan after a month's huddles at the studio.

Schneider also showed the N.Y. execs some roughs of John Ford's "Two Rode Together" and the Mervyn LeRoy-Fred Kohlmar production of "The Devil at Four O'Clock," which are billed as two of Col's top films for the current year.

Schneider leaves shortly for a tour of London (taking in the April 27 premiere of "Guns of Navarone") and the Continent. He will be off to see producers working abroad and will report back to the Gotham brass on his findings.

Meanwhile, in N.Y., he's also talking to Otto Preminger who is now preparing "Bunny Lake is Missing."

DeLuxe Able To Manage Big-Gauge Prints April 15

DeLuxe Laboratories, 20th-Fox subsid, will be ready to roll out 70m prints by April 15, a company spokesman reported in New York Friday (31).

With installation of the 70m processing equipment completed before the weekend, DeLuxe expects to be able to turn out between 25 and 30 big gauge prints a day by the middle of the month, thus offering firm competition to Technicolor which heretofore has had the 70m field to itself.

Completion of DeLuxe's 70m tooling program will also mean a big saving to 20th, who now will be able to get its wide negative prints done almost at cost.

See 1961 as Italians' Year

While Sweden's Ingmar Bergman and France's "new wave" seemed to dominate the 1960 artie market in the U. S., it now looks as if the motif is going to be Italian Renaissance when this year's story is written. And, to some critics anyway, the renaissance is going to be particularly encouraging in view of the fact that for the last several years the chief Italo contributions to U. S. screens have been a series of less than earth-shaking bicep spectacles.

Not in at least a decade, and perhaps never before in one year, have the Italians had so many promising "quality" pix ready for the U. S. market.

The year was launched with Continental Distributing's "General Della Rovere" and Richard Davis' "Big Deal on Madonna Street," both critical if not recordbreaking boxoffice hits. Last night (Tues.) saw the U. S. premiere of the widely acclaimed Janus import, "L'Avventura," directed by Michelangelo Antonioni, whose latest film, "La Notte," has just opened abroad to even greater critical applause.

Upcoming April 19 is the U. S. premiere of Federico Fellini's "La Dolce Vita," an Astor Pictures International import. Astor also has on tap for fall opening in New York another controversial Italian prize-winner, "Rocco and His Brothers."

Also scheduled for an early opening is Films Around The World's Italo entry, "Violent Summer."

These will be followed by a Lopert import, "The Great War," a top prize winner at last year's Venice festival, and the still unsold (to a U. S. distrib) "Kapo," Italy's official entry for the foreign language award in this year's Oscar derby.

Nothing to Rumor Metro-Cinerama Swapping Shares

Heavy activity in Cinerama stock this week was attributed to a Wall Street rumor that the company and Metro were cooking up a stock-exchange deal. Story went that M-G would acquire Cinerama via issuance of its own common shares for the holdings of Cinerama investor holdings on a three-or-more for one basis.

Key source at M-G said there's just nothing to it. M-G has a distribution deal with Cinerama, but nothing more. As for the rumor, it was just one of those things. The man from M-G said he had gotten several calls from Wall St. houses about the gossip.

Cinerama went to 17¾ on Monday, three points up.

Invading Gotham, Ferman & Ackerman Deny 'Art' Theatre An Obsolete Term

By JACK PITMAN

Exhibitors Robert Ferman and Meyer Ackerman, cracking the Manhattan art theatre circuit May 4 with their renovated Carnegie Hall Cinema, argue that the art house isn't extinct, just distracted from its original course. And they postulate what could be (for exhibition) novel: Art films are where you find them—and that takes in Hollywood as well as Paris and the Bergman country.

Pair demur from the contention (expressed by pioneer importer Ilya Lopert, for one) that "art theatre" and "art picture" have become obsolete terminology for the film trade. More accurate, the partners hold, to say the terminology has been corrupted as mode and more of the small class houses confuse their identity by switching from art to conventional product and back.

They also gainsay the contention (Lopert, again) that in the prevailing market an exhib couldn't sustain himself on only true art product—a "World of Apu," for example. Their reply to this is, "How can the industry know if it's not being tried?"

Stressing again the distinction of "art" versus merely foreign, they counter that the key factor is consistency of policy in the former genre. That, as they project it, makes for the image an arty needs to succeed on its own austere terms.

Interchangeable

As they see it, if the true art film is often sloughed today, enances are it's for the "mistaken identity" factor. They wouldn't expect such pix to perform well in a N.Y. eastside class house—situations like the Beekman, 68th Street Playhouse, Plaza, Trans-Lux 52d Street, etc., most of which play import and domestic pictures interchangeably. Same view applies to the Guild, which consistently books imports, but not what Ferman and Ackerman would characterize as "art."

It is axiomatic that subjectivity easily leads the "art" pro-and-con into semantic fog. As Ackerman tries to pinpoint it, "art" not only doesn't necessarily equate with foreign, it also doesn't refer merely to the "unusual." On that count, as a matter of possibly helpful illustration, the pair would have rejected "Shadows," John Cassavetes' heralded venture into improvisation, and currently in its Times Square U.S. preem run.

Eye 30, Pick Two

Out of some 30 or so possibilities scrutinized by the partners so far, they have two pictures spoken for at this stage, launching with "White Knight," Italian film based on a Dostoyevsky short story. Other pic they've grabbed is the Japanese "Ichikawa," based on a folk legend.

Carnegie Hall Cinema, fifth in a chain Ferman and Ackerman operate in New York and New Jersey, is the whilom 300-seat Playhouse, off-Broadway legiter in the basement of the longhair citadel. Extensive remodeling is underway.

The pair have some feeling that in addition to such definitive image as a policy may shape, it won't hurt to have the obvious Carnegie Hall identification going for them either.

New L.A. Daily?

Hollywood, April 4.

Bart Lytton, prexy of Lytton Savings & Loan Assn., is "interested in publishing a daily newspaper in Los Angeles County," according to a spokesman for banker. Toward end of acquiring such a property, Lytton has held conversations "with many newspapers," spokesman stated, and hopes to close a deal "in the not too distant future."

Among papers for which Lytton is dickering, it's said, are the Herald-Express and Hollywood Citizen-News. Seven months ago, Lytton acquired control of three weeklies, which he's publishing, including Beverly Hills Times, West Hollywood Herald and Westwood-Brentwood Villager.

Assets of Lytton Savings now total $100,618,043, prexy reported last week, as of March 10. Figure compares with $36,162,981 on same date in 1960.

Republic Corp.'s Bettered Take

Hollywood, April 4.

Republic Corp. boosted its first-quarter 1961 fiscal earnings for period ended Jan. 28 from last year's $488,085 to $559,677, prexy-board chairman Victor M. Carter reported. Net per share, based on 2,004,190 shares of common outstanding and after payment of $100,000 in preferred dividends, was equivalent to 23 cents per share, a 20% increase over the 19 cents per share for similar period in 1961, he said.

Exec stated that Rep sales for first three months of 1961 were trimmed to $7,094,067 as against $7,205,719 for corresponding period last year, due to consolidation of Rep's eastern film processing labs into one operation at Fort Lee, N. J. Although move resulted in a slight temporary downturn in revenues from this division, increased efficiencies and economies resulting from the consolidation will soon boost gross income substantially, he said.

Company's current ratio — current assets compared with current liabilities—and working capital is significantly improved, according to Carter, in reporting firm's increase in profits during first quarter continues a trend maintained through the previous year. Current assets for 1961 first quarter totalled $12,460,390, against current liabilities of $5,181,807. Working capital for first three months of 1961 amounted to $7,281,283, an increase of $1,216,155 over comparable 1961 period.

Carter also reported that as a result of greater efficiencies effected throughout Rep operations, the ratio of pre-tax profits to sales in fiscal 1961 first-quarter rose to 16%, a 15% boost over the similar period last year. All of Rep's four principal operating divisions—film processing plastics design and production, tv and theatrical film distribution and studio rentals — showed continued progress during current first quarter, Carter declared.

Fine Sees Censorship Masked as Classification; 'Imposition of Bias'

Detroit, April 4.

"I am unalterably opposed to either voluntary or mandatory classification of films," Allied States Assn. prexy Marshall Fine declared in a statement. He added: "Classification is merely a nice name with which to disguise the evils of censorship. Classification of films is the means by which one individual may impose his opinions, biases, prejudices and will upon his fellow men. Classification of films would deny one of our great American heritages, the freedom of choice.

"Motion pictures do not fall into any natural classifications and most motion pictures defy any artifical classification. Whether a film is 'objectionable' or not depends entirely upon the reaction of the individual who views it. The classification of film reflects only the personal taste, background and preferences of the classifier.

"If the reasons advanced for classifying films were applied to books, the children's horror classics of Hans Christian Andersen and Grimm's Fairy Tales would obviously be forbidden to children, and the Holy Scriptures would be restricted to adults only.

"Censorship, by any name, is the vehicle by which dictators seek to enslave the minds of men. It has no place in free America."

Merton of the Movie Columns

[Anita Loos' Orange Cokey]

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

Undoubtedly Anita Loos' new pingpong-light novel, "No Mother To Guide Her" (McGraw-Hill, $3.95), will be represented as about Hollywood and films. More accurately, these are only aspects of the preposterous scene of Southern California, circa 1928. The book is about orange juice, sunshine, heroin, a Bible-quoting Bluebeard, assorted nuts from the east and an idiot-idealist, Elmer Bliss, who did have a mother to guide him.

Miss Loos, an old hand in the fudge kitchen, may have the makings here of another of her fortunes. If her plot won't stand inspection, her wit will and nobody will be other than amused. Already there is talk of a musical comedy adaptation. What price nostalgia!

Her Elmer Bliss is not an actor, but the writer of a sentimental column of positive thinking. Even so, oldtimers will be reminded of Harry Leon Wilson's "Merton of the Movies." There is the same invincible American innocence, congenital boosterism and a certain folksy gall. In the present set of complications the protagonist gets involved, at first honorably, with a madcap star (she who had no mother) who has been taking narcotics so she won't fluff her lines (talkies have just arrived) and have a breakdown.

From these familiar elements of Hollywood literature, throwing in a nasty Los Angeles district attorney for realism, Miss Loos has fashioned a good deal of entertainment, including a star's diary that cannot be read in court.

Back to 'The Hustler' After Production Puffs Given Substitute Title

Announcement in New York last week that Robert Rossen's now-shooting pic had returned to its original title of "The Hustler" raises some interesting questions as the damage done by title changes and the value of production publicity.

The 20th-Fox release was known as "The Hustler" all during its preproduction work, but just as shooting commenced in New York, went briefly to "Stroke of Luck" and then to "Sin of Angels." Production publicity breaks for the picture in Time Magazine, the New York Times, N. Y. Herald Tribune, and numerous other publications (including a page one news story in the Times), all referred to "Sin of Angels."

Since the picture now has returned to "The Hustler" tag, question may fairly be asked: have all the breaks gone for naught? And, if they haven't, does that mean that production publicity doesn't mean anything anyway?

According to the official announcement, title was changed back to the original following "a scientific, in-depth survey conducted among the public and exhibitors throughout the United States." The first title had been dropped when 20th prexy Spyros P. Skouras thought that it might connotate a prostie, instead of the pool shark (Paul Newman) who is the picture's hero.

Perhaps helping 20th make the decision to return to "The Hustler" was the objection registered with the Motion Picture Assn. of America's title board by United Artists, who thought that "Sin of Angels" was too similar to its "The Side of the Angels" title. In any case, it's understood that producer-director Rossen was more than happy to return to the original tag. It's a good, short, punchy title, and he likes it.

'Religious Film Week' In Spain, April 9, Includes 'Apartment' From U.S.

Madrid, April 4.

International Religious and Humanitarian Film Week, scheduled to take place at Valladolid from April 9-16, is one of the few European film festivals that is still proud of its growing pains.

Now in its sixth year, the Valladolid film meet has become identified with prominent Catholic film organizations and personalities and has succeeded as a magnetic pole for film intellectuals with an unlimited penchant for film viewing and discussion. This is possible at Valladolid, where the festival organizers have again programmed a week of International Catholic Film Discussions in the morning to parallel twin screenings at evening and night sessions.

Three American films already programmed at Valladolid include two directed by Billy Wilder—"The Apartment" and "The Spirit of St. Louis." "Crime and Punishment U.S.A." is the third Yank entry. France gets major fest screen time with five entries: Marcel Carne's "Terrain Vague," "Voyage en Ballon," "Etoiles du Midi," "Il Suffit

20th-Fox Decision: Nine Roll Pronto

Hollywood, April 4.

Parlays by studio toppers which ended last week at 20th-Fox finalized plans for production of nine high-budget films within the next 90 days. Booming need for technicians, actors, extras and crewmen not seen on lot in many months will result, per studio chief Robert Goldstein.

Total of 40 execs and producers participated in confabs in which plans were coordinated for upcoming programs. Films and starting dates are as follows:

"Tender Is The Night," April 14. Pic, only one to be shot partly on a French Riviera location, stars Jennifer Jones, Jason Robards Jr., Joan Fontaine, Jill St. John and Paul Lucas. Henry Weinstein produces, Henry King directs. Ivan Moffat screenscripted the F. Scott Fitzgerald novel.

"Watcher in The Shadows," novel by Geoffrey Household. The Jo Eisinger script starts lensing June 5. Weinstein producing.

"The Inspector," a Red Lion production, rolls May 14 in Europe. Nelson Gidding is scripting, Mark Robson produces, but director and cast is yet undetermined.

"Mr. Hobbs Takes a Vacation," Jerry Wald production, rolls April 24 starring James Stewart. Nunnally Johnson scripted the Edward Streeter novel.

"The Chapman Report," a Darryl F. Zanuck production to be produced by Richard Zanuck, will lens May 9 under direction of Jose Ferrer from script of Ron Alexander and Don Mankiewicz. Pic, based on the controversial novel by Irving Wallace, toplines Shelley Winters and Janet Leigh.

"A Star in The West," to be produced by Jack Cummings, starts April 10. Robert Parrish directs the script by Clair Huffaker and Sally Benson from the Richard Emery Roberts novel.

"The Comancheros" rolls June 12. Charles Brackett producing, Douglas Heyes directing. Clair Huffaker scripted the Paul Wellman novel. James Stewart stars.

"Blue Denim Baby" lenses tentatively in mid-June with Fabian starring, William Noble scripting the James Herlihy book for the Charles Brackett production. Noble also co-wrote novel.

"Bachelor Flat," to be produced by Jack Cummings, shoots April 10. Frank Tashlin directs the Tuesday Weld, Fabian starrer, Budd Grossman scripted from his own Broadway play.

CRADDOCK AS BUYER

Drop Second Name From Rugoff & Becker Chain

Gordon Craddock has joined Rugoff Theatres to be in charge of buying and programming for all out-of-town theatres. Formerly Rugoff & Becker, the New York area art circuit became Rugoff Theatres two weeks ago following the purchase, by the Rugoff family, of interests in the firm held by the estate of the late Herman Becker.

Craddock was formerly assistant sales manager of Lopert Films, and prior to that was associated with Rank Film Distributors. He replaces Morton Lightstone who left Rugoff to form his own company.

LEVINE'S HOLLYWOOD STARTER

Musicals: Not Impossible, Difficult

[Per Rouben Mamoulian]

The motion picture medium is equally suited to the "fantasy" world of musical comedy as to the realistic world of drama and adventure, according to Rouben Mamoulian.

The director, who has such legit credits as "Oklahoma," "Carousel," "Lost in the Stars," and works with equal facility in films ("Silk Stockings," "Never Steal Anything Small," etc.), made the remark in New York recently when asked to comment on the present dearth of screen musicals. Was it, he was asked because films are basically unsuitable for the essential "unrealism" of musical comedy?

Not at all, answered Mamoulian, but the film musical must be so designed as to pursuade the audience to accept the conventions of musical comedy as totally believable. By this he meant, accepting the view of ordinary people singing and dancing, where in real life such behavior would send them packing off to the booby hatch. A good film musical, he said, must "combine psychological truth with poetry. If this is achieved, the audience will accept the wildest exaggerations and extensions of reality.

This may be difficult to do, he suggested, but certainly not impossible. In his book, the most successful musical pic was "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers."

He also still thinks very highly of his own 1932 Paramount film, "Love Me Tonight," an original film musical with a score by Rodgers and Hart. While everyone has dated the modern "integrated" musical from the 1943 debut of "Oklahoma," Mamoulian says "Love Me Tonight" pointed the way 11 years before, and not only was it "integrated" (songs contributing to the book), but it utilized all the tricks available to the imaginative filmmaker, slow motion, exaggerated sound effects, etc.

Consent Decree Date Legal Scratch For Defendants in Skouras Chain Suit

Defendant major film companies won a round last week (30) in the long-pending antitrust action brought by Skouras Theatres circuit in New York, New Jersey and Long Island.

Judge Edward Dimock in N. Y. Federal Court ruled on technical motions that the circuit has no claim beyond each producer's consent decree date. Plaintiff had sought conspiracy damages totaling over $100,000,000 covering the period 1935-53.

In the case of Paramount, the bench ruled no claims were valid after Dec. 30, 1949, date Par effected its divorcement from exhibition. No claims from Warner's, Columbia, Universal and United Artists were allowed beyond 1950.

Plaintiff previously settled with RKO out of court, and arranged partial settlement with Loew's, one of the major circuits said to have been favored by the alleged conspiracy.

ALEX GORDON'S 'RED DEATH'

First-Refusal For Columbia — Or Might Be UA

Hollywood, April 4.

Alex Gordon, slated to roll "Mask of the Red Death" at Columbia Pictures in May, will offer pic to studio as a release under his multiple pix pact. Should Col show disinterest, however, producer indicates he may submit property to United Artists for release.

Gordon, who recently completed "Underwater City" for Col distribution, has inked Vincent Price as star of "Mask."

Broader Burstyn Awards Pending

The festival and awards committee of the Independent Film Importers and Distributors of America has recommended establishment of three additional awards, in addition to IFIDA's annual Joseph Burstyn award for the best foreign language film of the year.

Being recommended are awards for the best foreign short subject, of 45 minutes or less in length; for the best English language film from abroad, whether originally shot in English or dubbed after being shot in another language, and an award for the best feature pic dubbing job of the year.

Recommendations must be okayed by the full IFIDA membership.

'DOLCE VITA' GUARANTEE FOR L.A. IS $75,000

Herbert Rosener, California art house circuit operater, outbid regular theatre chains for local release of Italian "La Dolce Vita," which he set for dual openings July 7 at Music Hall and Beverly Canyon theatres, both in Beverly Hills.

Deal involves $75,000 guarantee, eight-week minimum run, negotiated through Manhattan Film International, which holds distrib rights in 11 Western states.

Greeks Springing Surprise on U.S.

Madrid, April 4.

Leo Hochstetter, Motion Picture Export Assn. director for the Mediterranean area, left for Greece last week to meet a critical situation developing in Athenian film circles. According to trade sources in Madrid, Hochstetter faces a surprise ruling in Greece remarkably similar to the 4-1 decree sprung on MPEA negotiators by Spanish film officials some five years ago.

In Greece the ratio is different. American distributors, reports say, may be forced to distribute one Greek film feature in Greece for every five foreign films imported. Pending Greek restrictions are said to have been taken over intact from the five-year old Spanish precedent.

BACK FROM DENMARK, SID PINK SLATES 3

Hollywood, April 4.

Sidney Pink has set a three-feature program for his return to Hollywood following his current filming of two features in Copenhagen.

Trio include "Phantom of the Ferris Wheel," starring Vincent Price; "Story of a Seduction," Rossano Brabbi starrer; and "Blood Brothers," for which Pink is seeking Tony Curtis. Negotiations are on with United Artists for program.

Pink is now doing "Journey to the Seventh Planet," starring John Agar, and next will do "The Invisible City," to star Jack Palance and Cesar Romero, under his Cinemagic banner.

SETS VID-ADMAN AS PRODUCER

"Boys Night Out," which is being readied in Hollywood and Manhattan by and for Joe Levine's Embassy Pictures, and representing Levine's maiden production on the West Coast, has also catapulted Martin Ransohoff into theatrical production and the N. Y.-L. A. shuttle.

A new name to ranks of "Hollywood producers," the 33-year-old New Yorker is an oldtimer in the manufacture of commercial film inserts for television programs. His Filmways, however, came closer to storyline activity with a recent tv syndicated film series, "Mr. Ed," and two other vid skeins are on the company's boards.

Ransohoff's tie with the Boston Barnum as producer of "Boys" reflects in part personal penchant, but also (and mainly) fiscal common sense for his Gotham vid blurb operation. The simple logic is that theatrical and tele activity represents equity and residuals—the sounder financial base for onward-and-upward corporate mobility. Contrast is Filmways' till-now treadmill position as a mere facility (albeit for some blue-chip tele sponsors), and it's reflected in the company's listless display on the American Stock Exchange.

"Boys" for the past month or more has kept Ransohoff in the N. Y.-L. A. commutation jet stream for pre-production powwows with director Michael Gordon, but also to dicker stars. He expects to have his cast set within a month, and the pic should roll in Hollywood in July or August on an eight-week schedule.

Confidence

It perhaps measures Levine's confidence in him that Ransohoff has virtual carte blanche on production, even though Levine is bankrolling, and with the most coin he's yet gambled. Film's budget is put at near $2,000,000, but advertising and exploitation are expected to hike the ultimate outlay well past $3,000,000. While it's Ransohoff's initialer, he's not exactly lacking production experience, per some global treks in the past to amass footage for some of his sponsorial clients.

"Boys" will also serve as a milestone of sorts for Levine, marking

Easter Hypos Biz; 'Exodus' No. 1, '101 D's' 2d, 'Professor' 3d, 'Work' 4th, 'Pepe' 5th

Easter and the holidays will boost first-run biz in most key cities covered by VARIETY this stanza. Favorable theatre-going weather is helping, too, along with some new, very strong screen fare.

"Exodus" (UA) again is champ, making the sixth week in a row that this opus has been on top. Again it is being closely pressed by "101 Dalmatians" (BV), which is winding up a big second-place winner.

"Absent-Minded Professor" (BV) is capturing third position, with its great showing at N. Y. Music Hall, of course, providing a hefty boost. "All in Night's Work" (Par), third a week ago, is finish-fourth.

"Pepe" (Col) is winding in fifth place, same as last round. "The Alamo" (UA) is taking sixth spot, with its standing not taking in several multiple-run engagements and biz enjoyed in smaller key's. "Spartacus" (U) is finishing a close seventh.

"Cimarron" (M-G), which was 10th last stanza, is pushing up to eighth. "Ben-Hur" (M-G) is capturing ninth place. "All Hands on Deck" (20th), out for first time this round, is landing 10th position.

"Tunes of Glory" (Lope) is winding up in 11th place while "Never On Sunday" (Lope) rounds out the Top 12. "Suzie Wong" (Par) and "Sanctuary" (20th) are the runner-up films.

"Gone With Wind" (M-G), out on reissue, again is making history this week to be an outstanding new entry. It is rated wow in Washington, sock in Portland and L.A., huge in Frisco and mighty in St. Louis. "One-Eyed Jacks" (Par) shapes potentially big, based on its showing this round, being great in Washington and Boston, wham in Philly and socko in N.Y.

"Hoodlum Priest" (UA), also new, is fine in Washington, big in Chi and great on first few days at N.Y. Astor. "White Warrior" (WB) is disappointing this session, being fair in Washington and Cincy, okay in Buffalo but slow in L.A. and Cleveland.

"Raisin in Sun" (Col), also new, looms great in Detroit and big in N.Y. "Trapp Family" (20th), hot in Chi, shapes nice in L.A. "Sins of Rachel Cade" (WB) is uneven, being hotsy in Detroit, okay in Frisco and light in Philly.

"Great Impostor" (U), long high on the weekly list, looks wow in N.Y. for two theatres, big in St. Louis and smooth in Philly. "Make Mine Mink" (Cont), good in Balto and Minneapolis, shapes nice in Chi.

"The Entertainer" (Cont) is torrid in Cincy. "Breathless" (Films Around World) shapes socko on longrun in N.Y.

New Wave Cameraman Raoul Coutard: Lensers Don't Make Good Directors

EXTENDED REHEARSALS

Martin Starr, After 25 Hours, Still In Pre-Trial Examination

After some 25 hours of pre-trial questioning, the end is not yet for commentator Martin Starr who is suing for $200,000 defamation against United Artists and Roger H. Lewis, and Columbia Pictures and Robert S. Ferguson, respectively. Suit arises in Starr's charge that he was cancelled from a five-year radio contract with AB-PT because he was "defamed" by the defendants.

Starr's most recent questioning before trial, his third session, ran six hours, Schwartz & Frohlich for Columbia and Ferguson reserving the right to continue at further length. Harry Heller of Brooklyn, attorney for Starr, is trying to disengage from pre-trial phase and get the case on the court calendar.

Only 2 U.S. Pix For Berlin Fest

Hollywood, April 4.

Only two American features will compete officially this year at the Berlin Film Festival as result of new rule governing all class-A festivals, according to Bert Reisfeld, U.S. rep for Berlin fete. One of entries will be nominated by Motion Picture Export Assn., other invited by the festival committee.

Reisfeld said, however, that "one or possibly two dates" during festival, which runs from June 23 to July 4, will be set aside for out-of-competition, or trade, screenings for U.S. pix.

Dietrich To Hollywood

Marlene Dietrich reported Monday (3) on the Coast for "Judgment at Nuremberg" filming after week-ending in Gotham for wardrobe (Jean Louis) fittings. She also conferred with Doubleday publishers on her "The ABC's of Dietrich," down for early fall publication.

Actress just completed a cabaret stand in Puerto Rico.

"No good cameraman has ever become a really good film director."

That statement, which brushes aside the directorial achievements of such cameramen as George Stevens and Jack Cardiff, among others, might go unnoticed except for the fact that it was made by one of the hottest young cameramen in France today, Raoul Coutard, who was responsible for lensing the current attic hit, "Breathless."

Coutard, in New York on a quick visit last week, gave the opinion when asked if he had any desire to start directing films himself. His was an appropriately iconoclastic answer for a guy who has worked with some of the best "new wave" directors (Jean-Luc Godard, Francois Truffaut, among others). Coutard, in fact, acts like someone who hasn't read the heavily portentious news reports that the new wave has subsided.

The cameraman was flown to New York for a fast four days by French producer Pierre Braunberger to confer with U. S. "new waver" Morris Engel ("The Little Fugitive," "Lovers and Lollipops," "Weddings and Babies"). Coutard was interested in seeing the unique setup camera which Engel has developed for shooting location sound footage. In addition to taking in N. Y. sights, he also found time to meet Richard Leacock, whose film, "Primary," was just awarded the annual Robert Flaherty award (see separate story).

No Trademarks

Although every cameraman probably has certain subjects which interest him more than others, he's not a good cameraman if he develops a recognizable style, Coutard suggested. He's only a good cameraman when he knows what a specific director wants and is able to deliver. As it's turned out, he's worked particularly well with Godard, for whom, in addition to "Breathless," he's also lensed "Le Petit Soldat" and "Une Femme Est

'NO OFFENSE TO MEXICO' A CONDITION OF FILM

Houston, April 4.

Feature originally titled "The Battle of San Jacinto" is now titled "The Birth of Texas." Producers have approval to film a portion of the picture—the battle scenes—at the San Jacinto Battlegrounds.

W. N. Blanton Sr., chairman of the battleground's three member commission, which approved the filming, said producers and been afraid to broaden the scope of the picture. "We don't want anything shown that will hurt our relations not only with Mexico, but with South America," he said.

Blanton said he changed his mind after Jack Vance, executive producer for Big Four Films Inc., inspected the battle ground and agreed to broaden the scope of the film and change the title.

All Hands On Deck
(C'SCOPE—COLOR)

Shopworn service comedy with songs. Boxoffice fate depends on extent of kiddie appeal and teen pull of Pat Boone.

If "All Hands on Deck" is to make the boxoffice grade, it will have to enlist the support of junior America. Only the moppets are likely to get much of a sustained charge out of producer Oscar Brodney's amiable naval rumpus. The 20th-Fox release should generate some teen response via Pat Boone, but for most grownup wicketeers it will amount to little more than a drab and predictable variation on dozens of service comedies that have preceded it to the screen.

Screenwriter Jay Sommers' rub-a-dub hubbub is rather insecurely anchored to a novel by Donald R. Morris. The plot is elementary, for anyone in elementary school, that is. Lt. Donald (Pat Boone) falls instantly in love with newshen Sally Hobson (Barbara Eden). He wants to marry her, but his ship sails to the Aleutians. The voyage is complicated by the presence aboard of a Chickasaw Indian sailor Buddy Hackett) who has grown attached to a stowaway turkey Owasso, who in turn has grown attached to the captain (Dennis O'Keefe). Hackett solves this little everyday problem by smuggling aboard a pelican. Result: an unhatched turkey-pelican egg.

When the ship returns to port in Long Beach, there is an inspection by admirable admiral Gale Gordon. The main problem is to prevent the admiral from encountering: 1) the turkey; 2) the egg; 3) Miss Eden who, impatient to see her lover, has slipped onboard concealed in an ashcan. The admiral discovers: 1) the turkey; 2) the egg; 3) Miss Eden, and is about to make his black report when it develops that Miss Eden is employed by a senator in charge of naval appropriations.

Boone, U.S. teendom's good humor man, smiles and warbles his way out of histrionic difficulty. His comedy reactions need work, but his clean-cut, youthful good looks go well with the naval officer's attire. Hackett's zany approach to merriment should go over with the types. O'Keefe, a pro at comedy, delivers competently. Miss Eden, equipped with a delectable figure and a face to match, is good to have around. There's a nifty comic performance by Pat McCaffrie and generally agreeable support by Warren Berlinger, Gordon, Ann B. Davis, David Brandon, Joe E. Ross, Bartlett Robinson, Paul von Schreiber and Jody McCrea. Norman Taurog has directed with a light touch, but the material leaves too much to be desired.

Leo Tover's photography is vivid and colorful (De Luxe). Frederick Y. Smith's editing snappy. Cyril J. Mockridge's score unobtrusively helpful. There are several listenable, but not very memorable, songs. Art direction by Jack Martin Smith and Walter M. Simonds conveys the appropriate nautical flavor. Tube.

Les Laches Vivent D'Espoir

Paris, March 28.

UFA release of Athos production. With Gerard Heath, Francoise Giret, Aram Stephan, Walter and directed by Claude Bernard Aubert. Camera, Raoul Fodelenter, Gabriel Renker. At George V, Paris. Running time, 90 MINS.

David	Gerden Heath
Francoise	Francoise Giret
Professor	Aram Stephan

. Negro African student and a ch white girl fall in love. The film details the various aspects of bigotry, prejudice and self doubts that almost break them up until a coming child leads to marriage and overcoming all the difficulties. This seems well meaning and sincere, but has a tendency to get preachy and one track. It looms mainly as an exploitation item abroad.

Love comes quickly to this couple and there are many scenes of them wandering happily through Paris and making love. Then comes the encroachment of her family's disgust and hatred, many little petty actions of people, and his growing anger and her bewilderment. There is also a professor who gives a course on racism and tries to get to its aimless, dangerous roots.

But all this is somewhat stilted. And the rage against this form of prejudice is rarely put into acceptable dramatic form. The result is a series of tableaus showing them reacting to the growing pressures but rarely do they seem really alive or to have the love needed to surmount their problems.

American actor Gordon Heath can not quite overcome the almost symbolic quality of his role as the loving but angry, proud Negro student. Francoise Giret is appealing as the girl.

Technical qualities are good but director Claude-Bernard Aubert has been too didactic rather than allowing his characters to grow within their crises. The love scenes naturally will keep this out of the south in the U.S. Mosk.

L'Amant De Cinq Jours

(FRENCH)

Paris, March 28.

Cinedis release of Ariane-Filmsonor-Monces-Cinériz production. Stars Jean Seberg, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Micheline Presle, Francois Perier; features Paolo Stoppa, Jean Poiret, Michel Serrault. Directed by Philippe De Broca. Screenplay, Daniel Boulanger, De Broca from novel by Francoise Parturier; camera, Jean Penzer; editor, L. Mery. At Marignan, Paris. Running time, 85 MINS.

Claire	Jean Seberg
Antoine	Jean-Pierre Cassel
Madeleine	Micheline Presle
Georges	Francois Perier

Film is a situation comedy concerning adultery. Its people are stereotypes, and, though there are a few inventive moments, this is somewhat repetitive in its love scenes and never becomes very engaging. It is mainly for exploitation possibilities without the true insight for weightier chances.

Yank actress Jean Seberg, becoming a regular here, plays a wife of a rather dullish civil servant who is in the midst of an affair with a man she met by accident. He happens to be kept by her best friend, a snobbish couturier. Then things are uncovered and a party brings them all face-to-face.

She finally goes back to the husband, who will stand for her affairs, and the lover, who wanted to go to work and marry her, goes back to his position of gigolo. There is no feeling for place or time, and so this is like a pre-war comedy of saucy French sex manners.

Miss Seberg, looking like Shirley Temple in a wig, is hard put to give a lively knowing air to the wife while Jean-Pierre Cassel plays the gigolo in his usual airy manner. Micheline Presle and Francois Perier, as the cheated partners, are more in character. Direction segues between love, comedy and satire. He does not quite pin down a point of view on the whole thing, there being little flair to make all this bed hopping palatable. Technical aspects are okay. Mosk.

La Princesse De Cleves
(The Princess of Cleves)
(FRENCH—COLOR—DYALISCOPE)

Paris, April 4.

Cinedis release of Cinetel-Silver Films production. Stars Jean Marais, Marina Vlady; features Jean-Francois Poron, Annie Ducaux, Lea Padovani, Raymond Gerome, Pieral. Directed by Jean Delannoy. Screenplay, Jean Cocteau from novel by Madame De La Fayette; camera (Eastmancolor), Henri Alekan; editor, Henri Taverna. At Colisee, Paris. Running time, 115 MINS.

Prince De Cleves	Jean Marais
Princesse De Cleves	Marina Vlady
Duc De Nemeurs	Jean-Francois Poron
Dame De Poitiers	Annie Ducaux
Catherine De Medecis	Lea Padovani
Henri II	Raymond Gerome
Dwarf	Pieral

Based on one of the first French literary classics of the 16th Century, this concerns a pure but tragic love affair in the court of the King Henri II of that era. It is somewhat static and resembles a series of well constructed tableaus. Though a faithful transposition of the book, it lacks a true feeling for recreating the period and stays mainly in formal court pageantry pattern. This makes it primarily a specialized entry abroad with little depth possibilities since it lacks action. However, its local chances look good.

A 16-year-old girl marries a 40-year-old prince only to fall in love at first sight with a young nobleman. Her purity and breeding keep her faithful to her husband who actually dies when told a false rumor about her infidelity. She still remains true to her husband's memory, and dies young.

Film has a rich sheen, with the court life well done. But director Jean Delannoy rarely has been able to give this a visual insight and breadth to have the times and emotions come to life. A jousting scene leading to the death of the king is one of the fairly actionful sequences. Court dances, intrigues and coincidences mark its literary antecedents.

Marina Vlady has the porcelain looks for the role of the ill-fated Princess while her star-crossed lover Jean-Francois Poron lacks the dash for his part. Jean Marais is acceptable as the suffering husband. Lesser characters are better blocked.

Production values are excellent and technical credits are high. This just misses in making this pic pulsate with life. Hence, this calls for special handling abroad and the hard sell on its nobility of purpose and theme. Mosk.

El Globero
(Balloon Man)
(MEXICAN)

Mexico City, March 28.

Columbia Pictures release of Jose Luis Calderon production. Stars Clavillazo and Pulgarcito; features Rodolfo Landa, Irma Dorantes, Rita Macedo, Roberto G. Rivera. Directed by Rene Cardona; music Antonio Diaz Conde; camera, Raul Martinez Solares. At Palacio Chino, Mexico City. Running time, 90 MINS.

While the Rene Cardona direction is good and comic Clavillazo turns in a better performance than recently, the sum total of this one is a weak carbon copy of Chaplin's "The Kid," and a number of films made here in the past.

Story revolves about son of a good family played by Pulgarcito of "Tom Thumb" fame) who is lost and found by Clavillazo, who is a humble balloon vender. He takes boy under his protective wing. The theme of a father without a son, and a son without a father is milked dry. But there are pathos and comedy touches.

Most important point to this film is fact that comic Clavillazo, who is contracted to churn out pictures like a sausage factory, displays considerable historic talent in straight dramatic acting. And in this one, he avoids the grimaces and bald slapstick of former roles. With the proper script and intelligent direction, Clavillazo shows he could become one of the top performers able to handle both comedy and straight roles capably.

This will do good business at nabe houses and throughout Latin America where the Clavillazo name is being built up. Emil.

Les Godelureaux
(The Wise Guys)
(FRENCH)

Paris, March 28.

Cocinor release of International SPA production. Stars Jean-Claude Brialy, Bernadette Lafont; features Charles Belmont, Jean Tissier, Jean Galland, Sacha Briquet. Directed by Claude Chabrol. Screenplay, Eric Ollivier, Paul Gegauff from novel by Ollivier; camera, Jean Rabier; editor, James Cuenet. At Marignan, Paris. Running time, 100 MINS.

Ronald	Jean-Claude Brialy
Ambrosine	Bernadette Lafont
Arthur	Charles Belmont
President	Jean Tissier
Uncle	Jean Galland
Fiancee	Sacha Briquet

The most prolific "New Waver" (also the first), Claude Chabrol, again contributes a satirical pic about the French youth of today. It is sardonic but takes its potshots at hypocritical conformism. Film has some emotional passages plus a serio-comedic edge which could make this an arty theatre possibility abroad. However, it calls for the hard sell in general situations.

A free living youth has a run-in with an effeminate esthete who swears revenge. The former lives with a sensual, young tart from the provinces. They all become friends. Then comes several escapades as they break up phony art shows, seduce pompous people and show up some professional do-gooders. But the esthete takes over the boy's girl and shows her up.

Chabrol has a flair for comic routine but still has yet to get a point of view into his destructively themed pix. The usual orgies are more subdued in this and more attention is paid to these youths whose revolt against their elders is brazen. Yet nothing is introduced to put in its place. In some ways, it is reminiscent of U.S. slapstick films.

This has some bite and wit with Chabrol showing himself to be one of the most technically adept "wavers" in pix here. Jean-Claude Brialy is properly seductive as the rococo character while Charles Belmont is effective as the more serious youth. Bernadette Lafont is a revelation as the perfidious, impulsive girl.

Technical credits are good. While this is uneven it has enough exploitation handles and provocative subject matter for offshore chances. Mosk.

The Adventure
(L'AVVENTURA)

This Italo entry was reviewed from Cannes Fest by VARIETY May 25, 1960. Mosk. prognosticated "tough boxoffice going," and suggested pic was flawed by overlength and ambiguous characterization. Film runs the same 145 minutes in its American preem at the Beekman, N. Y., where it opened last night (Tues.).

Yarn castigates the emptiness and decadence of Italian high life, but "it is long, grave and sometimes over-emphatic." Janus Films is handling national release in the U. S.

Fuenf Tage - Fuenf Naechte

(E. GERMAN-RUSSIAN)
(COLOR)

Berlin, March 28.

Progress release of coproduction of Defa (East German) and Mosfilm (Soviet). Directed by Lew Arnstam. Screenplay, Arnstam and Wolfgang Ebeling; camera, Alexander Schelenkow and Tschen Julan; music, Dmitri Shostakovich; editor, Tatjana Lichatschowa. At the Babylon, East Berlin. Running time, 103 MINS.

Paul Naumann	Heinz Dieter Knaup
Captain Leanow	Wsewolod Safanow
Sergeant Koslow	Wsewolod Sonnjew
Katrin	Annekathrin Buerger
Nikitina	Jewgenija Kosirjewa
Luise Rank	Marga Legal
Erich Braun	Wilhelm Koch-Hooge
General	Michael Majorow

This is the first East German-Soviet Russian coproduction. Both Defa, sole producing outfit in East Germany, and the Russian Mosfilm contributed about the same number of players and technicians, with Lew Arnstam, a Russian, handling the overall direction. Of can be said, both keep about in can be said both keep about in balance. Too much propaganda makes it an item of little interest for western release.

Story starts in 1945 in Dresden, a few weeks after this city's heavy destruction by Anglo-American bombers. It tells in semi-documentary form the rescue, safeguarding and restoration of Dresden's world-famous picture-gallery by Soviet soldiers.

Pic follows an extremely human tendency showing both Russians and the defeated Germans as friends although the war chaos is still at its peak. As well meant as this film probably is, its super-human attitude gives it a flair of naivety throughout. Latter and frequent overly sentimental passages turnished by the script rob this film of a considerable part of its conviction.

While the script must be called the film's most essential deficiency, there are definite assets in the fine color photography and the score written by Dmitri Shostakovich. The acting is passable although everybody in this tends to wax sentimental. Technically, the pic reps a very good standard. Hans.

film career in Florida in 1913 with the Lubin organization. Hal Roach united his future stars for the first time in 1926 in "Slipping Wives." In 1929, they made their first sound film, "Unaccustomed as We Are," for Roach.

Feature films followed until 1952, when they did "Atoll K" ("Utopia") abroad. Their feature movie days at MGM and 20th Century-Fox were not happy times for the comics, forced into creative methods not strictly their own. Hardy died in 1957. Laurel lives in retirement in Santa Monica.

Book is well-illustrated and offers a check-list of pix the men made singly and as a team. Obviously a labor of love, volume emerges in every way worthy of its attempt to record the ebullience and magic of two of the screen's most gifted artists. Rodo.

La Mort De Belle

(FRENCH)

Paris, March 28.

Lux release of Cinephonic-Chavanne-Odeon production. With Jean Desailly, Alexandra Stewart, Monique Melinand, Marc Cassot, Yves Robert. Directed by Edouard Molinaro. Screenplay, Jean Anouilh from novel by Georges Simenon; camera, Jean-Louis Picavet; editor, Robert and Monique Isnardon. At Marbeuf, Paris. Running time, 100 MINS.

Stephane	Jean Desailly
Belle	Alexandra Stewart
Blanchon	Monique Melinand
Policeman	Marc Cassot
Barman	Yves Robert

This whodunit is more interested in atmosphere, characterization and psychology than suspense. The oversimplified psycho aspects, and a lack of true insight into motives and, place makes this primarily a dualer item abroad. Specialized spotting also is a possibility.

A withdrawn, shy professor, who has an uneventful life with his wife, suddenly finds himself suspected of the murder of an 18-year-old boarder, a comely American daughter of his wife's friend. Then it develops that she had secretly loved him and that she was a loose little girl who drank a lot. And the man begins to emerge from his cocoon of inhibition as the police hound him.

Ironic note is struck as the real murderer is caught. Acting is good. The direction is somewhat too stolid for the fairly routine analysis of the affair. The petty reactions of the townspeople are also cursory. Technical credits are good. Mosk.

El Hombre de la Ametralladora
(Machine-Gun Man)
(MEXICAN)

Mexico City, March 28.

Peliculas Nacionales release of Alameda Films and Cesar Santos Galindo production. Stars Fernando Casanova, Rafael Bertrand, Silvia Fournier; features Alfonso Mejia, David Silva, Rocio Rosales, Lucero Tabaada. Directed by Chano Urueta. Screenplay, Ramon Obon. At Cine Olimpia, Mexico City. Running time, 90 MINS.

A crime film with suspense overtones, with actor David Silva, usually cast in hero roles, turning in a highly realistic performance of a born killer, with henchman Rafael Bertrand equally villainous. Action revolves around the kidnapping of heroine Silvia Fournier and two children, played by child actors Rocio Rosales and Lucero Taboada.

Two-fisted Fernando Casanova is the law man who sniffs out the trail of kidnappers. It all leads to a smash end, after some tricky scenes where it looks as though the kidnappers will win, with the hero facing bad men only with his fists and vanquishing them.

Director Urueta has kept up suspense, mystery and action scenes in this one. Oddly enough the actors do not ham it up or overplay. Better than average Mexican effort of its type slated for good boxoffice business throughout Latin America. Emil.

Hire Alan Villiers For 'Billy Budd' Flotilla In Allied Artists Pic

Alan Villiers, author-shipmaster, has been signed by Allied Artists as commodore of a flotilla of three sailing vessels to be used in "Billy Budd," the Peter Ustinov-Ronald Lubin filmization of the Herman Melville classic. Pic goes into production in the Mediterranean in June.

Villiers won't appear in the film, but is figured for lore and aft exploitation, besides the actual commodore chore. He's written more than 20 books, mostly on seagoing adventures. It was he who brought the Mayflower replica from England to Plymouth, Mass., in 1957.

Women Got Theatre License Killed, Owner Calls Action Unconstitutional

Los Angeles, April 4.

William A. Gunther, operator of the Lyric Theatre in nearby Walnut Park, filed action in L.A. Superior Court for restoration of theatre's license which was revoked recently (21) by the County Board of Supervisors following complaints by a number of women's clubs. House was shut down as result of witnesses appearing last January before board, testifying films exhibited at theatre were, in their opinion, "offensive, detrimental to community."

Product cited included "Nude Set," "Hideout In Sun," "Isle of Levant," "Garden of Eden," "Nudist Story."

Gunther contends supervisors' action violated California constitution, the First and 14th amendments of U.S. constitution (free speech, free press), and claims his showing of these pix is protected by this right.

New Queue Technique: Seek White Admissions For Segregated Shelf

San Antonio, April 4.

A fourth peaceful stand-in was held Sunday by 25 members of the Students for Civil Liberties at the Majestic Theatre—this time trying to gain admission for white students in the theatre's balcony reserved for Negroes.

The white and Negro college and university students staged their demonstration from 4:30 to 7 p.m. at the theatre's rear entrance.

Lynn Krueger, manager of the Majestic, told the students the Interstate Theatres chain policy still calls for segregation.

In the reverse of stand-ins staged in February and early March, Negro students approached the balcony entrance and asked for tickets for their White friends.

"The demonstration was to show there is as much injustice in the back as in the front," Lone Castillo, SCL president, said.

EUROPE PICKUP PRODUCT ISSUE

Competition is growing between U. S. major companies and domestic Manila distributors for product for the Philippine market, according to the first hand experience of two Manila film men. Situation has been sharpened in recent years as the U. S. companies have supplemented their list of American releases with more and more product picked up abroad for release in the booming Philippine film market.

It's estimated that approximately 30% of all the pix now being released by the U. S. majors in the Philippines is outside product, acquired in Britain, France, Italy, Germany, or one of the other major film producing companies abroad. Such product might otherwise be available to the local distribs.

This was the picture presented in New York Friday (31) by Alberto R. Navoa, president and chairman, and Francisco V. Umali, veep and general manager, of the newly formed East Asia Films Inc. of Manila.

The pair, interviewed in the office of Munio Podhorzer, producers' rep for Franco London Films and a number of other European filmmakers, is on the second leg of a round-the-world film buying tour. They had just come up from Mexico, where they acquired five features, and from N. Y. will go on to London, Paris and Rome.

East Asia, according to Navoa, is geared to handle between 40 and 60 "foreign" films a year. In addition to distributing pix, company imports film equipment and is prepared to enter into coproduction deals. It also is making plans for the construction of its own firstrun house in Manila. The city presently has 10 firstruns for foreign pix and three for domestic product.

While television has been introduced into the islands, it still hasn't had an appreciable effect on film-going, according to Umali, principally because the cost of a single set, ranging from $500 to $1,000, is way out of reach of the average citizen. The public remains film-minded, providing a market for approximately 120 domestic films and as many as 300 foreign films a year.

Umali estimated that of the 900 to 1,000 theatres in the islands, about 50% play foreign product. He also estimated that the country represents about a $10,000,000 annual market to the U. S. majors, though the figures are hard to come by ("Nobody likes to let his competition know when business is good").

Although, with few exceptions, all domestic films, of which over 100 are shot annually, are in Tagalog, the public accepts with equal facility foreign films dubbed into English, says Navoa. They don't dig subtitles and they don't dig product from other Asian film centers. Almost any kind of film in the American and European vein goes, however, with action and adventure fare being best.

Navoa noted that the government censor board is now beginning to crack down on gangster and horror pix, as well films with a heavy emphasis on sex and/or nudity. In this respect, he finds European product the most chancy, adding that most U. S. films have had (until recently, anyway) few problems with the watchdogs of the nation's morals.

The foreign exchange situation is not too difficult, he said, though there is liable to be a time lag when one attempts to send money out at the official two-pesos-for-one-dollar rate. Dollars are freely available on the open market, though, at a three-to-one rate.

Up Ushers To 95c Hr.

Concord, N.H., April 4.

The minimum wage for theatre ushers would be increased from 70c to 95c an hour under one of the "exceptional categories" of a bill which has been introduced in the legislature here to boost this state's minimum scale to $1.25 an hour.

The measure was filed in the House of Representatives by Rep. Horace W. Sanders of Concord.

Urge Budget To Ballyhoo French Stars in States

Unifrance, the association of French film producers, should annually set aside between $100,000 and $150,000 a year for the promotion of three or four French stars in the American market, Jean Goldwurm, prexy of Times Film, suggested in New York last week.

Goldwurm said he had broached the idea in Paris and that it had been "favorably" received. Idea would be to have a board of French newspaper critics select the stars to be so promoted, and to have the promotion campaigns directed by the French Film Office in New York. As Goldwurm sees it, the campaigns would have to be tied in with the availability of specific films featuring the chosen stars.

However, he would not launch an individual campaign until several weeks after the star's film had opened in the States, just to make sure that the film's reception warranted the star campaign follow-up.

Times prexy also reported he had suggested to the Center National du Cinema, the official government office concerned with film matters, that it put together a monthly "newsreel" of clips from new French releases for showing in the U.S. Cost would be nominal, he said, and it could serve to stimulate U.S. audience interest in upcoming French film fare.

Goldwurm returned from Paris and Switzerland earlier in March where he made a U.S. distribution deal for Lazar Wechsler's now-shooting film adaptation of a macabrely comic play by Friedrich Duerrenmatt, "The Marriage of Mr. Mississippi," and took an option on the same producer's upcoming documentary, "The Eichmann Story." In addition, Times forthcoming release schedule includes three French imports, "Plein Soleil," "Double Twist" and "Frantic," formerly known as "Elevator to The Gallows."

GELSEY'S N.Y. BERTH

Sets Up As Eastern Story Ed for Columbia Pictures

Erwin Gelsey in New York from the Coast Monday (3) to take over as eastern story editor at the Columbia homeoffice. His appointment to the job was disclosed last week by Samuel J. Briskin, Col's v.p. in charge of production.

Gelsey, who has worked the pix literati field for some time, will be Col's eastern contact with publishers, literary agents, novelists and playwrights, and also will seek out new writing talent.

He formerly was literary editor for the Famous Players agency, and worked before at Col along with Metro and Paramount. He also was associate producer of Billy Wilder's "Sabrina" at Par.

Lion International is taking a cautious selling stanza on "Shadows," John Cassavetes' American "significant film" entry in the lower depth idiom, which started its domestic preem a week ago (Tues.) at the Embassy, N.Y. Lion is going slow partly for the fact it's the distrib's first effort at national release (instead of parceling to territorial sub-distribs); but the chief reason seems to be anticipation of a click Manhattan run for the pic which it can use to lever better deals than otherwise for hinterland arties.

Michael Bromhead, Lion topper here, figures to have several other keys booked by mid-April, with Los Angeles already pencilled in. Boston, Chicago and Washington are also in line for early dates.

Fast there are several exploitable angles, including pic's total improvisation, cued what Bromhead said was a "larger than normal" (for Lion) ad-promo campaign for "Shadows." Bally efforts also had Lelia Goldoni, ex-Lester Horton concert dance trouper, who has the femme lead, come in from the Coast for the press-radio-tv rounds.

Shot catch-as-catch-can in N.Y. in 1957, "Shadows" finally bowed last October at the Academy Theatre, London, and just finaled there. It's still currrent in some 30 other United Kingdom locations, and dates on the Continent are being lined up. Impact across the pond has been strong so far, per critical and public plaudits alike, and including last year's John Georges Auriol (France) award and the Venice Film Critics accolade.

Film is proving beneficent careerwise for several of its principals, most of whom were unknown quantities. Cassavetes, heretofore with a thesp identity primarily, and the only "name" connected with it, is now on the Coast as director-producer of "Dreams For Sale" for Paramount. With him is associate "Shadows" producer Seymour Cassel. Producer Maurice McKendree has several projects in blueprint stage, chief being a production for Europa Films, Stockholm. Miss Goldoni goes into an Israel-located film later this year, and in '62 does another pic with Cassavetes to be shot in Mexico. Tom Allen, a featured player, is currently doing a picture in Japan.

'Birth Of a Nation' Plays Outside Atlanta But TV Ducks Burg's Censor

Atlanta, April 4

Denied opportunity to see David Wark Griffith's 1915 silent blackface "Birth of a Nation" because of thumbs down ruling by City Motion Picture Censor Mrs. Christine Smith Gilliam, Atlantans have been motoring to Roswell Theatre (in nearby Roswell, suburb in adjacent Cobb Co.) to see pic. Scheduled for three-days, a seven-day holdover was necessary.

Storey Theatre Inc., operators of chain of six hardtops and four drive-ins, are getting on bandwagon with old race-and-rape classic and have booked it into their Gwinnett Drive-In, only a few minutes by auto from Atlanta City Limits.

And for other Atlantans who can bide their time "Birth" is scheduled for 30 mins. of it on ABC television's "Silents, Please."

SCHOOLS AS BOXOFFICE RIVALS

Inside Stuff—Pictures

When St. Albans, Vt., law enforcement officers converged on the Bellevue theatre in response to a report of $2,396 "robbery," it looked like the real thing, but actually it was all part of an FBI Case School problem involving some 25 area officers who have been studying crime investigation here under the supervision of Police Chief George Hebert and FBI agents. Paul Gamache, owner of the theatre, cooperated with the FBI men, reporting he had "found a basement safe broken into" and giving other details to get the investigators going on the "crime."

Irwin Allen and Pyramid Books have completed a deal for publishing in book form a version of his present 20th-Fox release, "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea." Rider to the deal is that Chancellor Records will distribute the title tune as sung by Frankie Avalon, and both companies will cross-plug each other's product—as well as the pic. Allen's production—which he also directed—gets national release July 4.

Instead of chartering a liner and filming scenes at sea at double shooting time and cost, Mervyn LeRoy, producer for "A Majority Of One," is building replica of S.S. President Hoover on Warner Bros. sound stages. John Beekman is art director and Ralph Hurst set designer. Construction will be largest since Spanish Castle was built for "Don Juan" in 1947. Steamship scenes will take two weeks starring Rosalind Russell, Alec Guinness and other performers.

Paramount press reps broke into print in an offbeat manner with "One-Eyed Jacks." The "Topics" column on the editorial page of Wednesday's (29) New York Times was devoted to poker terminology in wide usage. Peg for the piece was the title of the Marlon Brando picture, which refers to a hypocrite who exposes only one side of his face, covering up the bad side.

Apparently on the q.t., vet industryite Lester Isaacs has taken a field rep post with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes. He was a prominent unionist years ago as chief projectionist for the Loew's circuit, and later served as general manager of Cinerama. He'd been inactive of late until getting the IA nod, a month or so back, from his longtime chum, Richard F. Walsh, prez of IATSE.

Film and telepix industry hit highest employment for February in 15 years, according tabulation California Labor Dept. Total of 43,100 were actively on payrolls, record since May, 1946 when studios ran up alltime high of 48,500. Latter was doubly notable, pointed out, since there was no telefilm production then whereas today vidpix play major role in overall employment tally.

Features displaying "extreme violence, crime, gangsters and sex are becoming a problem" in Manitoba, that province's censor board declared in its annual report. Of 376 pictures reviewed in 1960, the board classified 197 as "general" and OK for the family, 170 "adult" and nine "restricted" (to those 18 and over). It named the year's "outstanding pictures": "Ben Hur" and "Inherit the Wind."

Word from Curtis Kenyon, new script chief there, is that Paramount has 24 writers pounding out 20 projects, biggest gust of activity in years at that Hollywood plant.

In the Houston area, the old 31 days' wait for suburban houses to show motion pictures after the downtown showings has been cut to 21 days.

Dad Takes Mexican Job With Cadena de Oro; Son Operates in Texas

El Paso, Tex., April 4.

Ruben A. Calderon Jr. has taken over the management of the Valley Theatre from his father Ruben A. Calderon Sr. Latter has accepted an appointment as zone manager of more than 40 theatres in Chihuahua of the consolidated Cadena de Oro—Operadora de Teatros chains, combining more than 400 theatres in the Republic of Mexico.

Calderon recently took over operation of the 800 seat deluxe nabe house.

REST IS THE DREAM IN IN DaCOSTA'S CAREER

Holywood, April 4.

After Morton DaCosta completes direction of "The Music Man" at Warners he has one play and two pic commitments to get under his belt before he can take siesta.

DaCosta is trying to sneak in a month's layoff between assignments but admits it may not come off. After 80-day shooting sked for "Music Man" winds in September, he will direct "The King From Ashtabula" on Broadway. Columbia is financing.

After Times Square chore, DaCosta heads for Columbia Studio here to do film version of straight play. Credits will be producer-director for Belgrave Prod., unit formed by DaCosta and Vera Sneider who wrote novel on which "King" is based.

After Col assignment, he returns to Warners for one more, as yet undecided. That's more than a year off in view of contemplated March 1962 preem slated for "King" on Broadway and pic undertaking to follow.

Hennings Take Over Lyric in Des Moines

Des Moines, April 4.

The Lyric, West Des Moines, is now being operated by Paul Henning and Paul Henning Jr. It was formerly operated by Earl Manbeck Jr. While the house will continue as a neighborhood re-run outlet, heavy promotion is under way to announce a new "family-type" entertainment in bookings and the response to this approach has been surprising. Currently the theatre is playing "Ten Commandments" to excellent business. Theatre has Cinamascope installation.

With matinees Saturdays and Sundays only, prices are the same day and night—25c for kids under 11; 50c for children 12 to 16 and for adults 16 and over, 65c—and the 272-seat house has had few empty seats.

To take the "family" promotion idea further, and in recognition of the large number of students in local highschool, college and university classes studying Spanish, Spanish-dialog pictures are also being booked. In addition to the backing of the school "profs," it has been established that there are more than 200 Spanish-speaking families who, with the students, make up a new and enthusiastic audience.

PT ADS: 'SEE NEW FILMS FOR 25C.'

Dallas, April 4.

Texas unit of COMPO (Council of Motion Picture Orgs) has released results of a survey, instituted last fall by request of concerned exhibitors who feared the sale of 16 millimeter films to schools, factories, clubs and other organizations was mushrooming as a direct competitor to commercial theatres. Although a limited number of replies came in, response was enough to indicate that the use of 16m film could become more widespread, as it was noted that, in some cases, subreleasing agents seem to be ignoring contract provisions that prohibit competitive 16m exhibition in a commercial theatre area.

Survey's results showed that there are around 10 distributors of feature length 16m movies in the Dallas area; however, the bulk of entertainment films are made available by Films Inc., which releases MGM, Warners and 20th-Fox; United World Films, a Universal Picture subsidiary (former Castle Films) releasing only Universal product, and Ideal Pictures, distributors of Buena Vista and Allied Artists features.

These three big 16m releasing outlets make available attractively designed catalogs, offering more than 2,500 features—450, or almost 20% of which are post-1955 product. It was further revealed that better than 25 pictures were only released to theatres in 1960, with a great number of the post-1955 variety still available for 35m theatre exhibition. A few future attractions were advertised that haven't yet been released to theatres.

Prices for a one-time showing range from $10 up to terms per the potential size of the audience. Sliding scale rates are made to schools, according to size of enrollment. As an example, less than 150 students—the cost is $15 for a black-and-white feature, or $22.50 for color print, with the selling price graduating to $27.50 black-and-white and $42.50 color for school enrollments of 750 to 1,000. If the enrollment exceeds 1,000, the catalog implies even better rates are available. For CinemaScope pictures the user is furnished a special lens, for a small fee.

Big Violators

One of the company contracts which the applicant is required to agree to stipulates, among other things, "the producers of feature film in 16m require that each location be submitted and approved. There is to be no advertising and no admission charged, except where a small charge is made to defray the rental cost of film." The application blank requests information as to the name and location of the nearest 35m theatre and the reasons why the audience cannot attend that commercial theatre. In the case of schools, the applicant must agree that feature programs must be shown during school hours to the students and faculty, only. After these conditions are met, then the local branch manager or authorized personnel of the film company is supposed to approve the 16m film deal before the print is shipped.

Biggest violators of these agreements are Parent-Teacher Councils, mostly in elementary and some secondary schools, where it was discovered that, occasionally, fairly recent product was being shown after school, at night and on Saturdays to audiences of children and their parents, at admission prices ranging from 5c to 25c per person. In most instances written notices were sent to parents that the films were being shown as a fund-raising project. Number of showings ranged from two a week to three per year.

Disregard for these rules, which were established by the film companies in the late '40s, is evidenced by the use of newspaper notices to advertise feature film entertainment in churches. One such notice even received front page banner

Trade Personal Belittlements in Proxy Fight Involving National Theatre & Tel

By ALBERT SCHARPER

Hollywood, April 4.

The curtain went up publicly last week (29) on showbiz's latest proxy fight—over control of National Theatres & Television. Dissident stockholder Leonard Davis thrust and NT&T prexy Eugene V. Klein parried at press parleys at the Statler hotel.

Davis went to bat first and after swinging away an hour, charging "incompetence" in management of company, Klein met with press with the quiet statement that Davis was "a character assassin who borders on libel."

Overall, Davis had no concrete proposals to make. Should his group win and get National management control he would "expand film theatre operation and put men at the helm of the corporation more experienced in that field." He would not name them; he also acknowledged that he, himself, a group insurance exec, has had no showbiz experience. Klein's retort was that National's 220 theatres are headed up by Spencer Leve, 30-year exhibition vet long a NT&T staffer.

To Davis' flat, reiterated charge that "more than $15,000,000 of theatre properties have been sold in past two years," Klein produced reports showing houses with book value of $4,134,000 had been sold, for $5,448,000 in last two years. Whereas Davis insisted National's 38% stock of NTA gives NT&T control of the former, now spunoff subsid, Klein insisted it did not, although he acknowledged it gives NT&T a "voice" in NTA via two "of our men on its board." Klein is for NTA seling WNTA, TV-AM-FM, New York; Davis is not. As NTA paid around $2,000,000 for outlets and looks to get more than $8,000,000, Klein calls it a "good proposition." Davis claims stations are worth more.

Made A Profit

Klein admitted Davis' charge is true that National's board chairman B. Gerald Cantor's investment firm (Cantor, Fitzgerald & Co.) "along with other such firms" in 1957 helped underwrite NTA securities and did share in commissions for such services. Davis charges that Cantor "has been working both sides of the fence at our expense." That Cantor engineered a "debacle" when NT&T two years ago acquired control of NTA, Klein (Cantor not being present last week) denied, stating, "we made a venture hoping to make money. We didn't. That happens everyday. We have spunoff NTA, but retain large holdings and when that company again makes money so will we through our holdings." In addition to 620,000 NTA shares National now owns, Klein confirmed that NT&T holds debentures which can be converted July 1 into 900,000 more NTA shares—thus giving NT&T overwhelming control. NTA shares, over the counter, yesterday were quoted at $5 each.

Davis' charge that NT&T advanced NTA when latter was its subsid, was acknowledged by Klein, who also observed that all Davis' charges against management which management agrees are correct stem out-of NT&T fiscal reports of recent years.

Klein's arguments against Davis' moves are predicated on (1) he has never been on board of a publicly-owned corporation; (2) has never run a showbiz firm; owns only 1,500 shares out of NT&T's 2,816,247 outstanding whereas NT&T's boardmen own aggregately 355,303 shares. Cantor is largest shareholder with 110,000. Klein has 42,023.

Skipped Divvy

Davis charged NT&T's losses incurred during short time it canopied NTA has caused corporation to skip dividends recently, a point to which Klein in general agreed, but yesterday disclosed that NT&T has come back into profit column, stating (with treasurer Alan May, at his elbow, concurring) that during January NT&T had net of $360,000 after suffering $114,000 loss during three-month period preceding. Klein said company will resume divvies as soon as it is able, but disclosed it has some loan agreements which now prohibit such; also, that NT&T is paying around $1,000,000 yearly now on interest on loans.

Davis has only one stockholder ally he has unveiled, Philip Handsman, 104 shares. His proxy fight reaches decision stage April 11 at annual NT&T shareholders' meet here April 11. Davis, who owns 5,400 shares of NTA, will attend that company's stockholders' session Monday in N.Y., to protest WNTA sale—although trade believes it will have been accomplished by then.

NT&T officials believe proxy fight will cost corporations "around $30,000." Davis thinks his costs will be "at least $25,000," which he and associates must pay unless they win.

Bob Kennedy Book Gets Documentary Approach; Script Bivouacs in D.C.

Hollywood, April 4.

Screenplay of Attorney General Robert Kennedy's "The Enemy Within" will "minimize fictional" approach, and will "tend strongly toward documentation," per Jerry Wald, following conferences in Washington with author last week when general format was agreed upon. Budd Schulberg will write screenplay.

"Schulberg will headquarter in Washington to help compile records and other documentation for the picture, which I expect to have ready for 20th-Fox release late this year," Wald stated. Elia Kazan is being firmed to direct, and Paul Newman sought for lead role.

Aiding Schulberg's D.C. research project will be Labor Secretary Arthur Goldberg, Press Secretary Pierre Salinger, and Kennedy staff assistants Carmine Bellino and Walter Sheridan. Also, Kenny O'Donnell, Presidential assistant, and Jerry Alderman, new general counsel of the Senate Subcommittee on Investigations.

Kennedy's tome deals with labor racketeering, exposed during Senate investigations into this field, when Kennedy was committee counsel. Some years ago Schulberg scripted Sam Spiegel's "On the Waterfront," fictionization of probes of Longshoremen's Union racketeering on N.Y. waterfront.

Wald has purchased 500 copies of Kennedy book, which the Attorney General will autograph for Wald to mail to film critics in conjunction with the promotion campaign.

ONTARIO STRATEGY FOR 'DAVID & GOLIATH'

Beaver-Champion's "David and Goliath" will open in 24 theatres in Toronto and Southern Ontario April 24. It's to be a new marketing approach for the Canadian area, patterned after the day-date saturations, with heavy exploitation, which have become more or less routine in the states.

B-C v.p. Mike Hutner said spots will be used hourly for 10 days on Toronto tv, three radio outlets will be used and 300 24 sheets will be posted.

Frank Ross' Africa Tale

Hollywood, April 4.

Frank Ross will return to production with "Mister Moses," new novel of present-day Africa by Max Catto, for which he reports he paid $310,000. Pic will be filmed in Africa in color for United Artists release.

His last film was "Kings Go Forth," also for UA.

Boston Festival Deadline April 30

Boston, April 4.

Films submitted for the international film festival set for May 22-27 in Loeb Drama Center at Harvard, will be placed in two divisions, consisting of (a) films designed for general entertainment and (b) film documentaries of 3,000 feet or less.

Only films not previously shown in the U.S. may be submitted and more than one film in each category from any producer may be submitted, George Papadopoulo, director, said. There is no participation fee requirement, but all films must be submitted before April 30, 1961.

Purpose of the first international film festival for Boston is to reward film makers, "who seek to promote a better understanding of man and his environment," the director said. A jury composed of art and drama critics, playwrights and cinematologists from the Greater Boston area are to make the final awards based on overall excellence in terms of "dramatic impact," "inherent cinematic worth," and "message in relation to contemporary life."

Boston International Film Festival is nonprofit, listing its address as P.O. Box 79, Cambridge.

John E. Fitzgerald Ends 40 Weeks of Consulting On Stevens Bible Pic

John E. Fitzgerald, editor of the Catholic publication, Our Sunday Visitor, is winding up some 40 weeks (stretched from the original 10) as script consultant to George Stevens in the pre-production planning of "The Greatest Story Ever Told." This Biblical epic will be produced for 20th-Fox.

He's remaining in Beverly Hills with his recent bride, Dolores Kokot, former publicist for the Sheraton-Atlantic (former McAlpin Hotel) in Manhattan.

Fitzgerald won the "Critic of the Year" award of the Screen Producers Guild a couple of years ago, that leading to his religious consultancy for Stevens.

BELGIUM ENTWINES BROW OF 'SPARTACUS'

Brussels, April 4.

Universal's "Spartacus," currently in its 16th roadshow week at the Varietes Theatre here, has been awarded the Grand Prix Exceptionnel, with the designation of "above all competition," by the Femina Belge du Cinema, Belgium's leading women's organization. Only one other film has been similarly singled out by the group, which is headed by Princess Paola, sister-in-law of the King.

Universal execs here claim that "Spartacus" cumulative gross in its first 14 weeks has exceeded that for any other similar spectacle film ever exhibited in Brussels. Pic opened its second Belgian date in Antwerp Friday (31).

Despite Lent, March Held Up Okay; 'Exodus' Tops 'Variety's' Estimates; Strong Pace For 'Alamo,' 'Spartacus'

By MIKE WEAR

VARIETY's regular weekly boxoffice reports are summarized each month, retrospectively. Based on an average of 24 key situations, the source data constitute an adequate sampling of current releases but are not, of course, fully "definitive." An index of relative grossing strength in the U. S. - Canada market, this monthly reprise does not pretend to express total rentals.

Exhibitors across the country fared amazingly well last month despite Lent, nearness of income tax deadline and some less-than-great boxoffice product that was unleashed during March. Some exhibs were baffled at the lukewarm reception accorded some of the new fare, and where they had some faltering weeks blamed it largely on the product. The weather was in the cinema's favor most of the month.

It was a month that saw "Exodus" (UA) take undisputed possession of first place after narrowly missing such laurels in February. It copped No. 1 spot every week during March. "The Alamo," also from United Artists, was a strong second-place winner, moving up so high by dint of numerous popscale, continuous-run engagements. Even so, it ran up much higher gross totals than "Exodus," if smaller key cities, such as numerous spots in Texas and the south, were included in the totals. In numerous keys, the John Wayne opus is beating the best done by recent United Artists' champ grossers.

The amazing thing about the showing by "Alamo" is that now the producer figures on a domestic gross of upwards of $8,00,000 whereas the pic on hard-ticket had been running at a pace that suggested half that amount.

"Spartacus" (U), which was fifth in February, is climbing to third position. It was champ in January. "Pepe" (Col), a newcomer, is taking fourth money. It is closely followed by "Great Impostor," another from Universal, in fifth spot.

"World of Suzie Wong" (Par), fourth in February, is finishing sixth. "101 Dalmatians" (BV), another newcomer, is winding up seventh, with every indication that it will climb higher with additional engagements and the Easter holiday.

"Ben-Hur" (M-G), which was seventh in the preceding month, wound up eighth for March as it concludes many of its major first-runs on hard-ticket. "Cry For Happy" (Col), also new, is capturing ninth position.

"Gorgo" (M-G) is finishing 10th. "The Misfits" (UA), which was champ in February, is winding up in 11th spot. "Where Boys Are" (M-G), sixth in the preceding month, rounds out the Top 12 pix.

"Swiss Family Robinson" (BV), third in February; "Never On Sunday" (Lope), 11th in preceding month; "Tunes of Glory," also from Lopert and a runner-up pic in February; and "Ballad of Soldier" (Kings) are the runner-up films for March.

As the month was being concluded, "Gone With Wind" (M-G), out on reissue again, shaped as one of the films, going out in release currently, most likely to be heard from in a big way. Initial engagements, such as in Los Angeles and Seattle, hit amazing figures. It goes into N. Y. State later this month.

"All In Night's Work" (Par), also launched in the final week last month, is another to be reckoned with. It did well enough the first week out in circulation to cop third place in VARIETY weekly totals. "Konga" (AI), also a newie, was fast in Boston.

"All Hands on Deck" (20th), just getting started, too, was loud in Minneapolis and nice in Washington. "White Warrior" (WB), another newcomer, was fine in Detroit and fairish in Frisco. "Look in Any Window" (AA) was mild in Philly.

"Absent-Minded Professor" (BV), a new entrant, should be heard from plenty in the future judging from its lusty showing in Chi, wow returns in L. A. and sock second week at N. Y. Music Hall where paired with the annual Easter stageshow. "Sanctuary" (20th) so far has been spotty.

"Cimarron" (M-G), released in February, did well enough in the final March week, via some fresh bookings, to cop 10th position that stanza. "Operation Eichmann" (AA), which was 11th the same week, had showings that ranged from mild and fair to big and brisk.

"Go Naked in World" (M-G) has been largely disappointing in playdates so far but managed some dates that were rated good. "Millionairess" (20th) was in much the same category, doing best in small, arty theatres.

"Breathless" (Films Around World) continues its amazing long-run in N. Y. at the arty Fine Arts. "Make Mine Mink" (Cont') still was scoring nicely in several arty cinemas including Chi and Minneapolis after its extended-run in N. Y.

Allied Sees Mild N.Y. Pow Apr. 11-12

Exec director Milton London sees a "routine" powwow in National Allied's spring board meeting next Tuesday and Wednesday (11-12) at the Warwick, N.Y. This despite the internecine feuding, dim finances, etc., recently plaguing the exhibitor body.

Parley is expected to ratify president Marshall Fine's enunciated position rejecting classification for the film industry. Another appeal to patch up the National Screen Service-Columbia trailer quarrel is also expected. Meet will also discuss ways of improving press relations, with emphasis on the grass roots approach to improved image.

Allied of New Jersey is host unit.

Drive-In Gets 'Sanctuary' Firstrun; Reynolds: 'Once Got Three-Year Old Films'

Dallas, April 4.

Bordertown Theatre has scored a major breakthrough in this area, and perhaps in the Southwest, for the circuit's Northwest Highway Drive-In Theatre here. The ozoner, the first built in the city and one of the first in the state, has booked a top product for an extended first-run engagement — "Sanctuary" (20th) starring Lee Remick, Yves Montand and Bradford Dillman.

Al Reynolds, veepee in charge of theatre operations for Bordertown which has six local theatres in this area, recalls that when the Northwest Highway Drive-in was opened 20 years ago the product exhibited was at least three years old.

"Constant plugging cut that time to six months and then to the present policy of 30 days after first run release," Reynolds said. "The booking of this major film for a first run at a drive-in is an important step toward the general improvement of the product which these theatres can offer."

MGM SUES STATION USING SAME LETTERS

Albuquerque, April 4.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has accused Holiday Broadcasters Inc., operators of indie radio station KMGM here, of unfair competition and infringement of its registered trademark MGM.

Metro, in a suit filed Tues. (21) in U.S. District Court here, asked $25,000 damages and asked that KMGM be restrained and enjoined from using the call letters in connection with the station. In alternative, Metro asked that KMGM be ordered to get its call letters changed and be restrained and enjoined from using any call letters similar to that of the trademark "MGM."

Metro claimed it had correspondence with the station, but such communications failed to persuade the station to change.

Detroit, April 4

Michigan Allied won a major victory in its fight against excessive fees and charges imposed upon the use of air-conditioning equipment. Upon appeal to the Michigan State Supreme Court, the $20 per ton annual license fee which the City of Highland Park had sought to charge for water-cooled air-conditioning equipment was ruled invalid. Michigan Allied says this will result in a savings of $2,000 a year for the average theatre which has 100 tons of air-conditioning equipment.

In Detroit and suburbs a $7.50 per ton demand charge is made upon the use of water for air conditioning. This suit is now awaiting decision by the Michigan Supreme Court.

New S.F. Jolt As Naify's Coronet In Firstrun Quest

San Francisco, April 4

United California Circuit has written all exchanges in San Francisco to demand it be allowed to bid on first-run product for its 1,250-seat Coronet, a former neighborhood house and now a road-show house outside of downtown area.

Letters, sent out 10 days ago, follow Metro's decision to pull "Ben-Hur" out of Coronet May 31, so that Metro can cash in on summer-time subsequent-runs through northern California.

Circuit's president, Robert Naify, said, "So far we've had no replies" from the exchanges. "But he felt exchanges have "no alternative, they must let us bid." Coronet, he said, has "proven it if as a showcase." Theatre is Frisco's newest, having been completed after World War II, and is about two miles from downtown.

Naify revealed that circuit is negotiating with Warner Bros. for "Fanny" and also seeking "One-Eyed Jack," though latter may have been sold. He also indicated interest in 20th's "St. Francis of Assisi" and Universal's "Romance and Juliet."

Naify demand relates to series of antitrust suits filed by neighborhood exhibitors Ray Syufy, Nasser Brothers and Ben Levin, all of whom are seeking first-run for their neighborhood houses. So far UA and Columbia have agreed to give nabes a crack at first-run, and late in April Universal lawyer from New York is due in Frisco to confer with nabes' lawyer, Joseph Alioto, in antitrust action.

American League

sada, ex-Air Force general. Minneapolis-St. Paul is still controlled by Calvin Griffith, whose final seasons in Washington were marked by repeated unsuccessful attempts by minority stockholders to unseat him.

Burgeoning of American League represents first breakthrough beyond traditional eight-team major league setup since prehandlebar moustache days. The National League also goes to 10 in '62.

The New York team in National League is bankrolled largely by Mrs. Joan Payson (sister of financier and communications palladin, John Hay Whitney). Other newcomer, Houston, grounded on Cullinan fortune is scheduled to offer the only airconditioned, domed, outdoor area in the world. New York backers expect to operate in Flushing Meadow Stadium, to be built as one of the big-spectacle selling points for 1964 World's Fair.

Curious Logistics

Triggered by a threat posed by the since-defunct Continental League, expansion will offer acute problems in logistics (both leagues will go coast-to-coast first time in history), and promotion (how do you sell a ninth-place team playing a weekend series with a 10th-place team in September?) At same time it will offer unparalleled opportunity to cash in on continued growth of major-league brand of ball at the expense of dwindling minors. Commissioner Ford C. Frick went on record last week that there will be two dozen major-league clubs operating within three or four years, with leagues probably based on seniority and geographical alignments.

It's not all sweetness and light, however, as indicated in grumblings by big clubs reluctant to give up pieces of money-making rivalries. In the new setup each team will play the other nine times at home, instead of 11. Giving up two big Yankee-White Sox dates, either in New York or Chicago, f'instance, will hurt.

TV is also slated for some adjustment. Yankees plan to transmit only one game, a Sunday, from the West Coast because of time differential and line charges. K.C. and Minn.-St. Paul pipings back to N. Y. will not get the full treatment, either.

Traditional travel pattern of leagues will be disrupted. Each city will be visited three times instead of four trips, the custom since World War II. Tight scheduling calls for commercial jet connections to accommodate such situations like a night game in L. A. followed by a series opener in Cleveland. Any labor disputes in the airlines industry could send the American League race into record confusion.

Traditional records and figger-filbert aspects of the game is also due for revision. Within the framework of eight additional games Babe Ruth's 60-homers record will be in jeopardy and could be eclipsed by such as Mantle, Maris, Killebrew, Colavito. Next year National League stars like Banks, Mathews, etc., will be afforded same shiny opportunity. Also, pitchers will get one and possibly two additional starts and a better chance for the magical 20-game winners circle.

Managements in the new cities survived keen group bidding last fall. Autry, famed cowboy entertainer, is a former Oklahoma semipro ball player who took up the guitar and telegraphy instead. Reynolds started as salesman at KMPC, and moved up the ladder to general manager.

Yanks 'Raisin' Cannes

Columbia's "Raisin in The Sun" has been chosen as the official U.S. entry at the upcoming Cannes film festival May 3-14.

Other U.S. films set to be screened at the fest are Otto Preminger's United Artists release, "Exodus" and indie "The Connection." Both of the pix, however, will be out-of-competition.

Levine's Coaster

his first domestic venture, and to boot one that's a real switch from the spectacle genre that's identified his post-exhibition career so far. Ransohoff describes the yarn as a "satiric treatment of manners and morals" but knowing Levine, and what's at stake, the expectation is for plenty of exploitable angles for the boxoffice. Impression persists, however, that "Boys" looms as Levine's first class-for-the-mass entry.

Due In 1962

Plan now is to put the feature into release in the summer of '62. It'll be widescreen, but whether in color or not isn't decided. Seems probable, though, per Levine's preference to date for tint. Exteriors will be shot in New York, with studio lensing in the Filmways upper eastside plant—but that's provided soap-and-cereal commitments are out of the way. Otherwise, interior work will be done on the Coast.

Ransohoff says he looked two years for a yarn to launch him theatrically. He finally got what he wanted from writers Arne Sultan and Marvin Worth, and an intermediary was responsible for bringing Levine into the deal.

In Tinkers-Evers-Chance fashion, the Sultan-Worth creation passed to Marion Hargrove for treatment, thence to Henry and Phoebe Ephron for shaping the final screenplay. Gordon, as director, has been in on the scripting from the start since Ransohoff believes that solves needless budgetary problems later on, when a director just getting the completed scenario might order costly revisions.

As for stars unbalancing the budget, Ransohoff intends to make the cast fit the yarn and, near as possible, the cost sheet, instead of the reverse.

While his focus is on "Boys," Ransohoff is projecting two tv action series to be shot abroad. First, an hourlong affair tentatively titled "Adventures of Pandora," will be shot as a feature for distribution on the Continent (and possibly elsewhere), then pruned to a 65-minute pilot for Madison Ave. scrutiny. This two-birds-with-one-stone concept is Ransohoff's way of licking the high cost of pilots—especially if the series doesn't find a buyer.

Spain's semi-new wave director Julio Coll will send his latest film "Los Cuervos" for the lone native entry.

HELP US PREVENT ANOTHER NEEDLESS MOTION PICTURE STRIKE:

The managements of UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL, COLUMBIA PICTURES and 20th CENTURY-FOX are balking at negotiating a settlement with their homeoffice Publicity and Advertising employees.

They are denying the very men who have helped to build them into America's No. 1 Goodwill ambassadors around the world any greater job security than they now have.

Their attitude has brought about a serious breakdown in collective bargaining which could lead to costly and unnecessary tragedy for all concerned.

Help us prevent another needless motion picture strike.

WRITE, WIRE, CALL the managements of these companies now, URGE them to give us greater job security.

SCREEN PUBLICISTS' GUILD
District 65, AFL-CIO

Taste-Takers

William T. Orr, new production boss at Warners, opines that while television "might sound like a farm team or a minor league, it's still, like Broadway legit and books, useful to indicate what the public wants."

In its talent development WB is interested in all these media, along with its own establishment of performers, etc.

Orr's Rationale

value in making a picture on location," he noted, but only if the location-shooting enhances the production. For example, "Majority of One" would not be benefitted by lensing in Japan; the studio locale is adequate.

Talking with a "bit of trepidation," Orr said he hasn't formed any "colossal or super-colossal pictures for quite a while" and there won't be any decisions about whether a picture will go hard-ticket or not until after the picture is finished. The expressed-thought was refreshing in an industry where so many an impresario deludes himself about roadshow long before his film even goes before the cameras.

New Authority Pyramid

Orr said that Hugh Benson, formerly on the WB television end, is his key exec assistant in both theatrical and vidfilm production and all are under the direction of Jack Warner. Also prominent in the tv division are Richard Bluel and Cedric Francis.

Benson, also talking to reporters, said new personnel are being established in Paris, Rome and London to seek out new production talent.

This was the first press meeting in years with a top WB exec and Orr made a good impression, evidencing a genuine try to explain the problems of a production chief in a complex industry. Mere fact that he met newsmen is regarded as a genuine plus. He was asked, incidentally, if he's in line to succeed Jack L. Warner, and replied: "He's now making no changes and I hope he doesn't."

headlines in a small town weekly newspaper, with two-column, 10-inch art and story for a Saturday night church playdate.

Comparatively Late

Of most concern to exhibitors is the exhibition of feature films in universities and colleges around the state. Program notices in school papers and bulletins advertise films like "Mr. Roberts," "Caine Mutiny," "Diary of Anne Frank," "Sun Also Rises," "The Robe," "Lust for Life," "Anastasia," etc. As a rule, films are shown matinee and night in student union buildings on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, for 25c admission to students, faculty and their guests. Some universities have projection equipment to show 35m film, which they obtain from regular branch distribution channels.

Source for another exhibitor complaint was the exhibition of recent releases in the Convair Aircraft plant in Fort Worth. It was reasoned that hundreds of workers who were exposed to good, new pictures free during the lunch hour at the plant would not be interested in buying tickets to comparable movies at theatres in the evening.

Kyle Rorex, executive director of Texas COMPO, reported that investigation showed much of the abuse could be attributed to subleasing agents who disregard the agreements they sign. Discussions with branch officials revealed that they were often not aware of the discrepancies and promised cooperation to see that they were corrected, while pledging to be more vigilant in granting future authorizations on to applicants for 16m feature films.

Further, it was suggested that exhibitors notify the film company branch office any time they discover that the rules governing the exhibition of 16m films are violated.

ity of the film itself, will remain a moot point until further Nazi items come on the market. Among these are:

"Judgment at Nuremberg"—Stanley Kramer's all-star dramatization of the famous war crimes trials. The film, now shooting in Hollywood, is probably the most ambitious of the Nazi cycle.

Shirer Book, Too

"The Rise and Fall of The Third Reich"—Metro's projected documentary based on William L. Shirer's No. 1 current bestseller. Film will utilize a large portion of the documentary on which Paul Rotha has been working in Germany and England for the last couple of years (see separate story).

"Hitler" — Allied Artists' announced dramatization of "the personal life story" of the late German dictator. No starting date yet announced for the film to be made by E. Charles Straus' Three Crown Productions.

"Hitler's Woman"—an indie production announced by N. Y. attorney, Ferdinand J. Wolf, based on a book by Anthony B. Gronowicz.

"The Eichmann Story"—a documentary being prepared by Swiss producer Lazar Wechsler and scheduled to be completed soon. Jean Goldwurm, prexy of Times Film, has an option for U. S. and Canadian rights.

"After Mein Kampf"—an exploitation fiction item, made in England in the early 1940s and originally released here as "Mein Kampf—My Crimes." Indie distrib Joe Brenner is reissuing pic.

"The Wall"—John Hersey novel about Warsaw Ghetto life under the Nazis, the screen rights to which are owned by David O. Selznick. A stage dramatization of the property failed on Broadway earlier this season. As yet, no definite screen plans announced.

Sade As A Nazi

An untitled property to be directed by Roger (''And God Created Woman'') Vadim, based on the life of the 18th Century homme des maurais lettres, the Marquis de Sade, author of "100 Days in Sodom," Justine," etc. Film would update de Sade as a 20th Century Nazi.

Although during and after World War Two there were the usual run of anti-Nazi pix, there was never the kind of cycle which is now taking shape. Obviously the cloak-and-dagger apprehension, and upcoming trial, of Adolf Eichmann has stimulated producer-distrib interest, as has the bestselling success of Shirer's monumental "Third Reich" at $10 a tome.

At the same time, the publishers of paperback books have for some time now been reaping a rich harvest from the interest in the Nazi era. Among the titles now on the stands: "The Case Against Adolf Eichmann," "Hitler's Ovens," "Eichmann—The Man and His Crimes," "Nuremberg Diary," "Mark of Shame," "Eichmann, Man of Slaughter," "The Rise and Fall of Herman Goering, "The Commandant of Auschwitz," "Hitler, A Study in Tyranny," and a new paperback reissue of Shirer's "Berlin Diary." And the granddaddy of them all, Hitler's own "Mein Kampf," is said still to be a seller, in hardcover, yet.

Another, perhaps significant, item: the March 15, 1960 issue of Look Magazine, which featured a picture of Hitler on its cover, registered the magazine's biggest newstand sales of the year, outstripping such other surefire cover personalities as Marilyn Monroe, Grace Kelly and the British royal family.

Outwardly, anyway, it would appear that film producer-distribs have a ready market for their Nazi-themed wares. However, as any industryite knows, there often is a big slip between the U. S. bookstand and the U. S. boxoffice. A notable example of this was the comparative failure of 20th-Fox's film adaptation of "The Diary of Anne Frank," after the property had been immensely successful as a book and legit play. The fact remains that stories of Nazidom, its causes and/or effects, have never been big on American theatre screens.

It's also interesting to note that while U. S. producers have generally eschewed explorations of the Nazi time and psyche, Europeans have done so with considerable artistic and financial success. The Germans themselves have produced the most noteworthy examples in such films as "The Devil's General," "Leningrad," "The Devil Strikes At Midnight" and "The Bridge," the latter due to be released here soon by Allied Artists.

The current emphasis on Hitler, Eichmann and their war crimes is reported to be regarded with a good deal of trepidation in government circles both here and in Germany. They should obviously prefer the kind of pix which attempt to show "good" Germans and might help heal the wartime breach and make Cold War pals. But, like the anti-Nazi stuff, none of these "good" films ("Decision Before Dawn," "Under Ten Flags," etc.) has been notable b.o. success in the U. S. either.

New Wave Cameraman

Une Femme," the latter in color. Each of these, he says, is totally different from the impromptu, newsreel style of photography which he employed in "Breathless."

He puts in, parenthetically, apropos of "Breathless," that if he had any success with that film it was because at the time it was made, he was not well known, and thus "had the nerve to try new techniques" since he had no reputation to lose if he failed.

As well as the films already cited, he has recently completed the camerawork on "Lola," directed by new "new wave" Jacques Demy, which Films Around The World will release here; "Les Grandes Personnes" (The Adults), starring Jean Seberg, which Zenith International has acquired, and a remake of a classic French comedy, "Tirau Flanc," produced by Truffaut. His next is another Truffaut directorial effort, "Jules and Jim."

Since his own success has been so closely identified with the nouvelle vague, Coutard has some strong opinions about whatever it is that the new wave has done to change previously accepted cinematic methods. For one thing, he says, there has always been too much emphasis on glossy, perfect photography. Too much time spent on perfectly designed camera setups, too many retakes for absurd reasons that no one in the audience would ever notice—an emphasis on photographic perfection, he adds, which too often detracts from the freshness of the actors and the spontaneity of a given moment.

Telephoto N.G.

Asked his opinion of John Cassevets "film improvisation," "Shadows," which is a big hit in Paris, the cameraman said he found it "interesting," but regretted the use, in street scenes, of the telephoto lens which tended to reduce perspective and "flatten" foreground into background.

Also, quite frankly, he said he found the central situation—the confusions that arise when a light-skinned Negro girl unpremeditatedly passes for white—to be "a false problem," that is, a problem so unique that he could not become identified with it. He much preferred Engel's "Weddings and Babies," he said, which dealt with universal problems of love, the need for enough money to live on, etc.

To him, he continued, the problem presented by "Shadows" was just about as significant as the one presented when a Hollywood scripter set Deborah Kerr, as a nun, and Robert Mitchum, as an uncouth, virile Marine, down on an otherwise uninhabited desert island.

Germans Make Impact & Business; Their Madrid 'Week' Well Managed

Madrid, March 28.

The Germans successfully staged one of the best organized Film Weeks ever seen in Madrid. Delegation of Film Export-Union officials, headed by Dr. Gunthar Schwarz, returned home last week leaving behind a sizable pile of distribution contracts, a cordial atmosphere and an excellent press coverage.

Taking over a major Gran Via showcase, Cine Callao, from March 13 to 19, the Rhineland film-makers presented an afternoon retrospective showing of early German film classics and a nightly screening of current product. With warm cooperation from Spanish cine officials, Callao hosts Pedro and Carlos Couret, and the German Ambassador in Madrid, Baron de Welck, organizers of German Film Week interspersed a series of well-attended receptions at the Hotel Ritz, Hotel Fenix, Chicote's famous hard-drink museum and Couret's suburban estate.

Pix shown at the week-long festival included, "A Glass of Water," starring Hilde Krahl and Liselotte Pulver, the Curd Jurgens starrer, "Game of Chess;" "The Bridge of Destiny," with Hannes Messemer and Sabine Sesselman; "The Ambassadress," with Nadja Tiller and James Robertson Justice. "Festival," a German-Spanish coproduction filmed principally in Spain last year, brought the film week to a close. Spain's Cesar Ardavin directed this feature—a lightweight romantic comedy with a San Sebastian film festival backdrop.

Retrospective showings included "The Blue Angel," with Marlene Dietrich and Emil Jannings; "M, The Vampire of Dusseldorf," with Peter Lorre; the Emil Jannings version of "Faust;" "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" and "The House of Wax."

Here in Madrid were film stars Sabine Bethmann, Ellen Schwiers, Hilde Krahl, Maria Sebaldt, Liselotte Pulver and Paul Hubschmidt. Directors Hulmet Kauther and Erika Balque were also on hand. In addition, representatives of the Spanish film industry and film scribes were very much in evidence throughout the week-long program.

Schwarz told VARIETY the cost and effort were well invested. All of the films shown, he said, were picked up by Spanish distributors and the good-will created will go a long way to broaden German film commerce in the Spanish market.

Buenos Aires Film Biz Up After Summer Hiatus; 'Can-Can,' 'Ben-Hur' Big

Buenos Aires, March 28.

Film grosses are on the upbeat here after the summer hiatus probably because of the release of more important productions. "Can-Can" (20th) is now in its fifth month at the Gran Florida and La Dobe Vita after 24 weeks at the Broadway. It is still holding out in a 33d round at the Libertador.

"Ben-Hur" has just completed 25 weeks, and Metro has another big grosser in "Butterfield 8." Latter has now run three weeks at the Metro, Ideal and Astor plus four nabe houses. "Ocean's 11" (WB) released in February day-date at the Opera, Premier and four nabes, is now in its fourth week. "Song Without End" (Col), released on Jan. 5 at the Broadway, and also in Mar del Plata, is still holding.

United Artists is releasing "Elmer Gantry" at the Ocean, Los Angeles and Gran Norte, while "Midnight Lace" (U) goes into the Gran Rex, Gaumont and several nabes. Warner is releasing "Dark at Top of Stairs" at the Opera in Mar del Plata. "Psycho" (Par), released in Mar del Plata on February 6, is scheduled for Buenos Aires this month.

Columbia has signed a deal for exclusive release of "Pepe" at the 1,057-seat Plaza. "Pepe's" release is set for March 22.

Other important March releases are "Spartacus" at the Broadway and "El Alamo" (UA) at the Gran Florida.

Walton Studio Closed By High Court Order

London, March 28.

Walton-on-Thames Studio was officially shuttered last week (20) by order of Mr. Justice Buckley in the High Court. His edict followed a petition by two creditors, film technicians Malcolm Stewart and Cyril Collick, who claimed $602. It was supported by the National Provincial Bank, creditors for $218,400.

Lloyd Stott pleaded for a two-weeks' adjournment on the grounds that the Walton Studio company was fundamentally not insolvent. Sale of the freehold property is fixed for $742,000, and there is also a contract to sell fixtures and fittings for another $84,000.

For the Walton Studio it was claimed that all debts would be paid, but the judge ruled that the petitioners were entitled to their order. Mrs. Hannah Weinstein Fisher, producer of the "Robin Hood" series, was a director of Walton Studios and Sapphire Films, which made the pix. It was said that she would soon be back in the film producing business again via hiring studios.

France Mulling Faster Distrib

Paris, April 4.

Film people feel that one of the problems facing the industry here is the slackness of depth distribution. Many times a hit film may not go into nabe and provincial release until months after its Paris opening thereby losing the impetus given by its early reception. Society of Film Producers is trying to do something about it by asking distributors and exhibitors to speed up the process.

Some dissenters point out that these quick and mass openings would mean extra expenses in more prints but others feel it is worth the effort. It is estimated that films get 47% of their amortization in the first year and 38% in the second. Therefore, it behooves filmsters to get as much as possible out of the first round of playdates.

Another problem here is a growing backlog of pix with most of them the first films made on the heels of the "New Wave" phenomenon. But it is felt they should just be passed over if no exhibs want them so as not to hold up speedier outlets for supposedly more commercial pix.

UFA Comacico opened a Jean Gabin starrer, "Le President" in 202 cinema in 137 leading cities around France a week after its Paris round of bookings. Sixty-three top houses in 52 cities concurrently are being used for Paris first-run of Luchino Visconti's Italy pic, "Rocco and his Brothers."

'Tannhauser' To Launch 1961 Wagner Festival

Bayreuth, March 28.

The biggest music festival of Europe, the Wagner Fest held here every summer, will open this year with a July 23 performance of "Tannhauser," in a new staging by Wieland Wagner and with Wolfgang Sawallisch conducting. Hans Knappertsbusch is set to conduct "Parsifal" and "Meistersingers of Nuernberg," both staged by Wieland Wagner. Sawallisch waves the baton over the performance of "Flying Dutchman," also staged by Wieland while Rudolf Kempe conducts Wolfgang Wagner's only staging this season, "Ring of the Nibelung."

There will be 27 performances, two closed to the public, with the music fest winding up with an Aug. 25 production of "Gotterdaemmerung." Tickets for the fashionable event go up to a top of about $16, with the least expensive seats scaled down to $6. It's expected that, despite the high prices, the ducats will be sold out by the end of this month.

'Birdie' Aussie Click

Melbourne, March 28.

The Aussie production of "Bye Bye Birdie" at Her Majesty's here drew fine crix reception and seems destined to be a solid hit. This has been given the full treatment here by J. C. Williamson Theatre Ltd. Michael Thoma, brought out from Broadway, is credited with a fine job on the staging.

Patricia Finley and Frank Buxton, imported from the U.S., did well in the top roles. Their performances were highly praised by local crix. Aussie dancer Kevan Johnston also is big hit in this show.

Flemish-French Belgians Ecstatic About U.S. Thesps

By JOHN FLORQUIN

Brussels, March 28.

"Here are actors of a stature never before seen over here," was a remark overhead uttered by a lady who had obviously shed many tears, after the nine curtain calls—apparently one more than in Madrid!—that greeted the creation over here of "The Miracle Worker."

This remark eloquently sums up the enthusiasm, fervor and admiration which marked the second European stand of the Theatre Guild-American Repertory Co. lead by Lawrence Langer.

Over-enthusiasm has never been a landmark here; the Brussels public is more inclined to aloofness than hysterics. This town is a permanent platform on which, year in year out, the international theatre essays, succeeds or stumbles. It is the second home of all the great French stars. Therefore it is the more remarkable report this "bowling over" by an American company staging three typically American plays in a true American style.

Since the 1958 Brussels Exposition, where good and bad mixed in an ambitious season labelled Americana in the vast field of art, theatregoers know what to expect, or shall we say: thought they knew. This latest experiment has opened new vistas, brought new fields of appreciation.

The opening night with Marcella Cisney's exciting production of "Skin of Our Teeth" drew the discerning and the blase, probably in equal numbers. Brussels' American colony was there, along with local society but also plenty of those for whom the full appreciation of a play in a foreign language remains a definite effort. Thornton Wilder's message came through very beautifully and June Havoc, right from the start, took the puplic by storm; her personal triumph in this play was impressive. Helen Hayes and Leif Erickson scored equally. Seen here before both in French and Flemish, "Skin," to some local scribes, strangely enough, appeared perhaps a trifle too exhuberant, the delineation of characters being described as "anti-poetical." Wilder, who supervised the rehearsals, could not be all that wrong though! There was unanimous praise for acting, production, lighting and entertainment values.

"The Miracle Worker," with its simple human message, did not draw a full house on its first night but served as a test for an extremely interesting experience: its matinee drew the young, from schools and colleges, a public only half-

Competition for Hurok; Forrester Goes USSR, Cami Eyes Leningrad

Columbia Concerts is stepping up its contacts in Moscow with the object of not allowing Sol Hurok to be undisputed American culture tradesman there. One result is that Canadian lieder singer Maureen Forrester will have a Soviet one-month this autumn.

Various projects are pending with the Soviet Culture Ministry and CAMI. One possibility is a tour of the Leningrad Symphony in the U.S.—partly financed by a fat guarantee of a Dutch recording combine interested in the album angle of the orchestra.

Columbia's Andre Merrens has booked pianist Jerge Bolet for 10 concerts in six cities of Poland.

French Legit Season Loaded With Many Plays But Few Quality Hits; 'L'Idiote,' 'Glorious Ones' Score

Paris, March 28.

French legit season in Paris so far has been found wanting. Some old name standbys came up with boulevard hits, but they're not up to past entries. Hit holdovers just about drowned out the new successes. However, if not qualitative, the season was again big in quantity as a profusion of plays, about 80, came in and out of more than 50 theatres.

Top hit looks to be Marcel Achard's "L'Idiote," mainly carried by star Annie Girardot, as a dim witted maid whose loyalties help clear up a murder mystery. Second to it and scoring was Andre Roussin's comedy on abusive widows of great men and the wives of live ones, "The Glorious Ones." Jean Cocteau's adaptation of Jerome Kilty's "Dear Liar" is also boffo. All three look to be around next season.

Achard's pre-war comedy, "Coconut," will probably finish the season as well as Marc Camelotti's slickly done bedroom farce, "Boeing-Boeing." Margeurite Duras' version of Michael Redgrave's play adaptation of Henry James' "The Aspern Papers" may also be a full-season entry.

Philipe Heriat's familiar tale of a crusty old woman fooling her rapacious heirs, "Family Joys," may also finish the season thanks to Gaby Morlay's thesping and draw. Roger-Ferdinand's "Sign of Kikota" appears in for a few months only.

Metro, Laurie Sign Pact For 'Suzie' Run

Sydney, March 28.

Metro and James Laurie, British legit producer, have signatured a pact for the lease of the Minerva, King's Cross, over a limited term for the production of "World of Suzie Wong" next May. House has been under the Metro banner for many years on a film policy.

"Suzie" preems at the Palais, St. Kilda, Melbourne on March 25, with Jacqui Chan starred. Understood that if it clicks, Laurie will set up a permanent production schedule Down Under.

'Fair Lady' Into New Berlin House

Berlin, March 28.

West Berlin finally is to have an operetta theatre of its own. The local Senate has approved a plan to turn the Municipal Opera here into a privately-run operetta house. The operetta theatre will operate on a lease basis. Hans Woelffer, head of Komoedie, local boulevard theatre, is head of the new operetta house. His initial contract with the Senate spans a tentative period, from next Oct. 1 to March 31, 1962. Both Woelffer and the Senate have agreed to start new discussions on extension of the lease by Nov. 30.

Woelffer intends to inaugurate his operetta house with "My Fair Lady." He recently negotiated here with Lars Schmidt who owns the European rights. The local "Lady" production is to be "international," Woelffer said. The stage director and the choreographer are to be Broadwayites, while a German will be assistant director.

"Lady" is to be followed by another American hit, "West Side Story." During the Cultural Festival time here, the operetta house is to be placed at guest ensembles' disposal. But before all this, the house will be given some face-lifting.

Resnais Winding 2d French Feature Pic

Paris, March 28.

Alain Resnais, who made "Hiroshima Mon Amour," which spilled over into regular channels for worldwide biz, is now winding his second French feature film, "L'Annee Derniere a Marienbad" (Last Year In Marienbad). Resnais says this one will be even more literary in tone and mood.

Resnais again collaborated with a contemporary novelist, this time Alain Robbe-Grillet, on the film.

Story takes place in a big, glacial European castle.

ARGENTINA NEWSREELS

Will Be Fed Into U. S. Video Supply Stream

Buenos Aires, March 28.

In Argentina a deal has been signed between Hearst Metrotone News and Antonio Angel Diaz' 23-year-old "Susesos Argentinos," whereby Argentine newsreels will be exhibited in a 600 U.S. film-theatre circuit and 44 TV outlets in various countries, including Japan, West Germany, Belgium, Spain, Britain, India, Italy, etc. The material to be used will be selected for the foreign outlets by "Sucesos Internacional," one of Diaz' affiliates.

Argentine news will be issued on tv outlets in 36 States of the U.S., three in Brazil and one in Japan.

Augusto Cesar Vatteone, a film director, until recently head of the State-owned Channel 7 local tv outlet, has been selected to produce and direct a 39 episode series of videofilms, each lasting 25 minutes at a 350,000 peso cost, and intended for distribution on foreign TV channels.

London, March 28

There is likely to be less screen time for U. S. and other foreign pix in Britain, if the Federation of British Film Makers gets its way.

Under present quota, 30% of first feature pix show in U.K. must be British. Now the Council of the Federation is calling for a figure that is "considerably higher for circuit cinemas so as to safeguard British production."

How high is "considerably higher?" Said Lord Archibald, the Federation's chairman: "I would have no objection to putting it up to 50% for the major circuits, but I am speaking purely personally."

Figure of 30% stays put until the end of the year. Government decision is likely soon on whether to make a change next January and, if so, what the new figure will be.

Call for higher quota springs from the Federation's disquiet on continuing shutdown of British cinemas and doubts about the present release pattern, frequently criticized as being too rigid. "Monopolistic trends in exhibition are harmful to producers and distributors and are against the public interest," states the council's report.

Shutdowns, it alleges, are sometimes caused not by a decline in attendance, but by the increased site value of the theatre. It calls for local government authorities to use their planning powers to demand that a new, possibly smaller, cinema, be included in the redeveloped site.

The council also calls for "a more imaginative and flexible release pattern, because the present rigidities mean that many films cannot enjoy their full boxoffice potential."

'Grass' Turns to French

London, April 4.

The audience at a cinema in Staines, Middlesex, got a shock the other night while watching "Grass Is Greener" (U). For 15 minutes in the middle of the pic, Cary Grant, Jean Simmons, Deborah Kerr and Robert Mitchum lapsed into French.

The management had been sent a wrong reel—part of the French version. But how come it wasn't spotted during "rehearsal?"

Aussie Economic Downbeat No Blow To Show Biz; Record Easter Sesh

Sydney, March 28.

Despite governmental economic pressure to curb inflation, with unemployment growing in the auto industry, the average Aussie has ample spending coin in his pocket after deducting living expenses. A lot of this money is finding its way easily enough into the cinema and legit shows.

However, patrons pass up run-of-mill fare for the top offerings, irrespective of higher admissions.

Aussie show biz executives believe this Easter will see a record intake at the boxoffice, especially, too, as the wool-and-wheat men will have heavy spending coin available, regardless of any economic pressure by the government.

Cinema marquees for Easter will have "Grass Is Greener" (U), "Great Impostor" (U), "Misfits" (UA), "Rat Race" (Par), "Make Mine Mink" (Rank), "Millionairess" (20th), "Where Boys Are" (M-G), "Ben-Hur" (M-G), now in 46th week; "South Pacific" (20th), third year; "Can-Can" (20th), in 50th week; "Spartacus" (U), 16th week; "South Seas Adventure" (Cinerama), ninth month; and "Strangers When We Meet" (Col), in 9th week.

Also, legit shows are doing well. There's strong coin here for "My Fair Lady," "Irma La Douce," both under the J. C. Williamson Ltd. banner; "West Side Story," Garnet Carroll, and "Glass Menagerie," Elizabeth Trust.

B'dcast 'Pirates' Transmit On High Seas to Scuttle Danish-Swed. Govt. AM-TV

Copenhagen, April 4.

Jolly Roger or not, Cheeta II and Bon Jour are sheltering pirates—and Denmark and Sweden are ready to shiver their timbres.

Danish pirate Radio Mercur, anchored aboard the Cheeta in international waters between the two countries, was told earlier last week that new laws may soon be passed to put it out of action.

A day later, off the Swedish coast, Bon Jour-bound Radio Nord switched on its transmitters. A government order banning the ship from ever entering Sweden's harbors for repairs or equipment didn't bother either.

Now a couple of Danes have announced they would start a pirate TV station in the same troubled waters in May. Next day, came word that a second TV transmitter would be turned on at sea, with a reported $700,000 Danish backing.

Radio Nord sees no serious inconvenience as a result of Swedish harbor ban. Bon Jour is riding Baltic international waves just off the Stockholm archipelago. When necessary, she'll probably haul anchor and put into a Finnish port.

Manager Jack S. Kotschak has stood firm and cool while the station weathered many storms. It was supposed to begin broadcasting last Aug. 1. Then delayed until fall. Then Christmas. Then early 1961. Storms, unsuitable equipment, government opposition and some advertiser dropouts hung it up.

On March 3, however, the Bon Jour, converted coastal freighter, aired a test of recorded music on the 495 meter band. Listeners in Stockholm reported fairly good reception.

Radio Mercur is firmly anchored after four years of increasing prosperity. Station moved in January into the new ship, Cheeta II, permanently staked out in the Oresund between Sweden and Denmark.

Commercial radio TV of course is prohibited in both countries, whose stations are state-owned and tax-supported. Market-minded outfits like Esso, Coca-Cola, Kellogg, Campbell Soup, Ford, Pan Am have swung aboard the Cheeta. Appropriate name, that.

Mercur's FM fare is mostly music—pop, rock 'n' roll, a rare dash of classical—from 7 to 9.30 a.m., and 3:30 p.m. to midnight.

Young Danes who announced May inauguration of a commercial pirate TV station are Ole and Jutta Georg. They have the usual equipment—money, a ship, a place

TO KISS—OR NOT TO KISS

Italo, Pakistan Co-Prod Pact May End Film Kissing Ban

Karachi, March 28.

In Pakistan, as in India, kissing in public is not considered good manners and as such kiss-scenes are banned in films. With the latest pact concluded between the government of Pakistan and ANICA of Italy, the stage has been set for the production of films on a joint venture basis between pakistan and Italy.

Since Pakistani players will work alongside the Italians, the question of kissing scenes has become a matter of debate in local film industry circles. The debate was touched off when a Pakistani actress, Bahar, told newspapermen that if she were given a role in a Pakistan-Italy coproduction she would not mind being kissed. One Sunday paper here plans to run a "Readers' Forum" feature on the subject of kissing in films.

FRENCH WON'T ALLOW BIG STUDIO CLOSINGS

Paris, April 4.

About the recent film industry perturbation over possible razing of the Joinville and Victorine studios, the former outside Paris and the latter in Nice, Culture Ministry head Andre Malraux has informed the industry that the government had an eye on things and would not let a disproportion develop between studio space and actual film production. In other words, needed space would be ascertained, and no studio could be torn down until replacements were built in other spots.

Thus, Joinville may go when the required sound stages are replaced at the Joinville-Saint Maurice Studios. Meanwhile, production is still high despite building of a big backlog of pix. Foreign films are also occupying studio space here with the U. S. Seven Arts production of "Gigot," with Jackie Gleason, due at the Bologne Studio.

Paris, April 4.

The governmental Centre Du Cinema has revealed how the Film Aid money, collected via special parafiscal levies on cinema admissions, will be distributed in 1961. About $4,870,000 is to be advanced to producers on current productions via percentages on local (60%) and foreign (25%) grosses of their last pix and around $2,700,000, for refurbishing hardtop theatres, will go to exhibs.

The special orgs to hypo French pix abroad and internally will get $900,000 while $500,000 will go for film industry technical aspects. About $680,000 will go for quality short subjects and $600,000 for government controlled newsreels.

Armendariz Plans For French, Italo Co-Prods.

Mexico City, March 28.

When Pedro Armendariz goes to France in April, where he will be a judge at the Cannes Film Fest, he plans to complete negotiations leading to tripartate coproduction. Involved will be his newly created producing unit with associates in France and Italy. Prelim basis for collaboration has been worked out, the actor said, with final details to be ironed out during his European visit.

While first picture of series to be turned out has not been selected, Armendariz said he and his associates will jointly provide capital, talent and technicians. The tripartate partnership will turn out three or four films annually at the outset.

Zarzana, Boriski Expand

Houston, Tex., April 4.

Al-Ray Theatre Circuit operated by Al Zarzana and Ray Boriski, have eye on another theatre.

Expect to take over the operation of the South Houston Theatre shortly.

Murnau Memorial Week

Berlin, March 28.

In memory of the late German film director F. W. Murnau (he was killed in an auto accident in Santa Barbara in 1931), the new Academy of Arts staged a F. W. Murnau Memorial Week here with nine of his films screened. Lineup included "Last Man" (1924), "Faust" (1926), "Walk Into the Night" (1920) and his U.S. pix, "Sunrise" (1927) and "Taboo" (1931).

The films found such a public response that most of them had to be given repeat performances. Most of the prints came from the Cinematheque Francaise, Paris, and the Danish film museum.

Yank Product In Gran Via Lead

Madrid, April 4.

Hollywood this year is out ahead by far with eight entries among the 12 Easter Sunday premieres and film observers here were impressed with Yank domination of Gran Via showcases. Holy Week starters for the traditional switch in marquee titles include Hitchcock's "Psycho," John Wayne's "The Alamo," Columbia's "Pepe," Par's "The Five Pennies," and the 20th-Fox entry, "Stranger Than Life." "Please Don't Eat The Daisies" is one of the two Metro entries while Universal opened "Portrait in Black."

Of the remaining contenders, Britain unspooled "23 Steps to Baker Street" and "The League of Gentlemen." Spain's "Cochecito," belittled at home and acclaimed abroad, is expected to raise Easter controversy on the main stem. Volume of new holiday film fare was completed with "Ursus," a low-budget spectacle coproduced here with Italy.

Absence of product from France, Italy and Germany was particularly noted in film circles.

Asquith Urges Confab To Iron Out Wrinkles Of TV, Pix Censorship

London, March 28.

The Lord Chamberlain, the British film censor and the tele companies should get together for a conference on censorship interests. That's the view of Anthony Asquith, president of the Assn. of Cinematograph, Television and Allied Technicians. Asquith says that standards should be clearly set down so "that one does not have to rush from one medium to another to see what the other one has forbidden us to see."

Asquith went on to praise the way that for some time film censorship had, on the whole, operated in an "enlightened and intelligent way." But he went on to cite certain inconsistencies which might be ironed out by such a confab.

For instance, why Graham Greene's play, "The Complaisant Lover," had been running happily in the West End but that nine cuts were demanded when it was to be televised.

He pointed out that the film, "The Warsaw Ghetto," was refused a certificate by the film censors unless certain scenes were removed, but that these scenes were seen by millions of viewers on a commercial tv program.

'The Mark,' Cannes Entry, Has Booking Trouble

London, April 4.

"The Mark," the Raymond Stross film which stars Stuart Whitman, Maria Schell and Rod Steiger, and which is Britain's entry for the Cannes Film Fest, has run into booking trouble. 20th-Fox, which is releasing the pic, has been unable to set a deal with the two big circuits, Rank and Associated British.

The circuits feel that its theme, that of a man who has been convicted of kidnapping a small girl with intent to rape her, may be too hot for general consumption.

A 20th-Fox rep explained that the company will be releasing the picture to independent bookers at end of May. The film was, on the whole, favorably received by the critics.

Alan Ladd Sounds a Warning

Americans In for Some Jolts When Signing For Overseas—Customs Not Those of Hollywood

Hollywood, April 4.

There is no substitute anywhere for key American production personnel and no actor should even take out a passport for a picture abroad unless he has a signed contract and coin in escrow in an American bank, according to Alan Ladd in a blast at European picture-making.

Actor, who returned last week from a film assignment in Rome, where, it will be recalled, he took a walkout on the filming of "Horatio" after 11 weeks of filming when no salary was forthcoming, had high praise for the oft-criticized production facilities of studios abroad, blasted out with a word of warning to thesps who go overseas for foreign-produced and financed films.

"There appears to be no such thing as living up to contractual agreements as far as I can see," he said. "The thing you settle with a handshake in Hollywood are things you have to take action to achieve overseas."

Ladd, after ankling "Horatio," returned to complete film only after Lux Films of Rome guaranteed his money.

"It wasn't that alone," he noted. "It was a culmination of hundreds of little advantages taken. I agreed upon a 10-hour working day, but more often than not found myself scheduled to work 12 to 14 hours into the night.

"The complete laxity and indifference of film crews in production methods and procedures was another thing that appalled me. The stages are excellent; the equipment is modern. It's what they do with the equipment and how they make use of it that gives European studios the reputation they know. There is no substitute anywhere for key American personnel."

Ladd has made four pix in Europe on four prior occasions—pix produced by Columbia and 20th-Fox. He has no arguments with them. But as he explains, that's different; they are American firms.

Actor reports next for star role in Columbia Pictures' "The Tiger Among Us."

RESENT CINEMA CLOSINGS

British Patrons, Councils Take Over To-BeShuttered Theatres

London, April 4.

Cinemas may be closing down in Britain but there are many people who are not prepared to see the houses shuttered without a struggle. The urban council of Beaconsfield, Bucks, has gone into film business with the aid of a government loan towards the $75,600 purchase price for that town's only cinema, the Picture House. The council will only not show pix but have a stage available for amateur dramatic and operatic shows.

James Boothroyd, manager of the 390-seater, now becomes the town entertainments manager, and the present staff is being retained. The council expects to pick their films with the aid of special "Request Weeks" from the taxpayers.

The State Cinema at Leytonstone, East London, is to be saved by 5,000 filmgoers forming a syndicate to be run as a private concern. Monica Slater, for two years manager of the State, formed a Sunday evening film society last year. These are the people who intend to take over the lease. Application has been made for registration as a friendly society.

Cimex Ready for U.S., Other Film Markets

Mexico City, March 28.

Although keeping it well under wraps, Cimex is about ready to initiate its drive to broaden its market in the U.S. and English speaking areas via dubbing of selected top quality national product. It's revealed that at least a dozen pix have been deemed suitable for dubbing into English, with this probably upped to a higher figure as the program develops.

Cimex policy is to make a strong bid to open up a market throughout the U.S. to offset boxoffice declines in traditional Spanish language markets because of political or exchange difficulties. In any case, few films that have been dubbed, including "Adam and Eve" have been excellent income producers.

Inside word is that Salvador Amelio, Cimex head responsible for the assault on the American market, does not feel this will cause any complications or aggravate matters by reopening former denied request by Hollywood to dub its product in Spanish idiom. Amelio feels that deals being arranged, through Mexican distributors in America and individual exhibitors, is entirely apart from the Hollywood production end and industry as a whole.

Belgrade, March 28.

The Vardar-Film, producing company serving the Republic of Macedonia, is shooting the "Trial of Salonica Mutineers" in Rijeka, northern Adriatic. About 300 extras, besides several of the best domestic actors, have been engaged while the leading roles are handled by German stars.

The femme lead is in the hands of German film star Marliense Behrense. German actor Joachim Mook has an important male role.

Mexican Censorship Campaign Set; Eight Pix Hit in Recent Months

Mexico City, March 28.

Mexican censors have indicated that they are in earnest about current drive to clean up motion pictures. During last five months or so, the Film Bureau has cracked down on about eight films because of immoral themes, juvenile delinquency and distortion of historic fact.

Drive on dubious pictures is principally aimed at foreign product, for only three national films have been frowned on by authorities.

Most outstanding case is that of "The Shadow of the Leader," controversial but well-made picture. It is a presentation of the greed and graft of political and military figures during revolution. While producers are still attempting to cut through bureaucratic bans, chances of general release of this one are rather slim.

Another controversial Mexican film although reportedly financially backed by a foreign outfit is "The Strong Arm," here again the picture languishing in the cans because the theme treats of episodes centering around political bosses. These little Caesars or dictators have been part of the Mexican scene, with one man ruling anything from a village to a state with an iron hand, and his word the law.

Another national picture "Los Jovenes" (The Young Ones), produced by Filmex, will not receive an exhibition permit until the ending is completely changed.

Censorship gained teeth in Mexico immediately after the end of the third World Review of Film Festivals. Italy's "La Dolce Vita" and "Rocco and his Brothers," despite the fact that they had been shown complete at the fest, were denied general exhibition permits being tabbed "highly immoral."

The most celebrated case was that of "Alamo," with John Wayne first denied permit to shoot the pic in Mexico, and then the several bids for exhibition permits denied. Jorge Ferretis of the Film Bureau turned thumbs down on this one principally because picture "falsified historical facts" and placed Mexico and its national heroes in a defamatory light.

familiarized with the English language. The pantomime parts helped bridge the gap and the applause was uproarious.

"Glass Menagerie" has been done so often here that it has become a sort of landmark. It belongs, of course, to Helen Hayes and her Amanda leaves little room for others. It became perhaps the most popular of the three offerings. Unable to get seats, people sat on the floor of the aisles, reclaiming the perfect sense of timing of a great actress described to them as the first lady of the American stage but not well known to them otherwise. Reception was ecstatic.

A Hit In Barcelona

Barcelona, March 28.

Helen Hayes and her fellow-artists arrived here from Madrid, 59 strong travelling in three Constellations with scenery and baggage. The booking had been eagerly anticipated. Three performances were given at the Calderon Theatre at $3 top, a large admission price in Barcelona. The American colony and English-speaking folk generally naturally had a better time than some of the Spaniards.

It helped that natives knew Miss Hayes, Leif Erickson and June Havoc from films shown here and that at least one of three plays, "The Glass Menagerie" of Tennessee Williams has been in repertory here in translation, "Skin of Our Teeth" was a hard one for many to comprehend. It's hard for Americans to understand, too. Ed.). There was much palaver that if you knew a little English it did not necessarily mean you knew "American" idiom.

But the visit was the undoubted best highlight of a comparatively dull legit season here in Barcelona.

Scottish Police Kayo Vaude Plus Bingo

Edinburgh, March 28.

City police here are banning the playing of "housey-housey" during vaude performances at the Palladium Theatre. The games started as a gimmick for Scots comedian Lex McLean. Audiences at each of the performances were given their "housey" cards free and took their chance of winning $8 prizes, with McLean emceeing the sessions.

According to the police, since there was no skill involved, the game was classified as gambling. In June last year three judges in the Scottish Justiciary Appeal Court ruled that "housey-housey" sessions were legal providing the game was for some charity and "not for personal gain." The ruling enabled hundreds of small clubs to operate in the open for the first time.

Mex Film Biz Financial Situation Seen on Mend With Production Aided

Mexico City, March 28.

The financial situation of the Mexican industry, still far from stable, may be on the mend before many weeks go by as the result of joint efforts of Film Bank, the Film Bureau, official distributorships and National Theatre Operating Company efforts.

Top brass of the film biz has joined forces in a major effort to resolve money and credit problems and to give impetus to production. At this writing, seven pictures have received official okays and financing via Peliculas Mexicanas and Peliculas Nacionales, with Film Bank set to release funds. Three pictures are being readied for the cameras and there is talk of overcoming the financial bugaboo soon.

But producers, somewhat disoriented by events of past weeks, have assumed a cautious standaside policy until they can have a clear indication of Film Bank and federal policy. Such top men as Gregorio Wallerstein, Ismael Rodriguez and Gonzalo Elvira are holding off major efforts and taking time out to analyze the situation. These men, and others, are also veering more and more toward private financing to assure a steady flow of national product.

Consensus of producer opinion is that a shutdown of production effort, or a drastic curtailment, must be avoided at all costs. This is reaction to recent rumors that the Film Bank may be considering financing of only three pictures a month. A check with this institution brought denial that any cutback move was being contemplated even though the money situation, especially because of poor receipts by Peliculas Mexicanas from Latin American exploitation, is very tight at the moment.

Scot Vet Vaude Comic Goes Straight at 67

Edinburgh, March 28.

Dave Willis, 67-year-old Scot vaude comedian, is proving here it's never too late to go straight. He made his legit in "The Comic," new play by Maurice Fleming, in role of a vet Scot trouper challenged by fresh youngsters.

For Willis it was almost typecasting. After rising to heights in local vaude, and earning $1,800 weekly in high-class revues and resident vaude, he lost his lifesavings of $90,000 in a hotel operation, and has been using social assistance ever since.

Comedian clicked in his new role, although the play itself was not so well received. His main fault was in improvising lines and failing to stick to the script. Play was staged at the Gateway Theatre, itself facing a decline in fortunes and with its future uncertain.

Peliculas Mex Takes Over Sao Paulo Chain

Mexico City, March 28.

Peliculas Mexicanas has revealed that it has expanded its Brazilian seven-theatre Rio de Janeiro circuit through the acquisition of a 40-house circuit in Sao Paulo. Latter deal, in association with Brazilian exhibitor Libio Brunni, represents an outlay of $135,000. Pel-Mex paid $200,000 for the Rio theatres.

Both circuits will exploit Mexican material exclusively. Current theatre build up is part of Pel-Mex policy to acquire houses in Latin America for more efficient exploitation of product. Distributor execs are confident that new Brazilian deal will offset in part the losses recently suffered in Cuba, Venezuela and other areas because of political or exchange difficulties.

UA Mulls Prod. Of Film in Arg.

Buenos Aires, March 28.

United Artists' Harold Hecht arrived here March 21 for prelim surveys and negotiations looking to the production of the 16th Century Cossack story, "Taras Bulba." Hecht said he favored Argentina as the probable locale of this Cossack story. Pic all depended on if he could count on aid from the Argentine army and its supplying horses and riders.

Hecht explained this is not to be a co-production although he is seeking studio facilities from an established company. He is to interview Atilio Mentasti of Argentina Sono Film shortly.

The picture is budgeted at $5,000,000. It was generally felt that the Argentine army will willingly cooperate, partly because of pride in its horses, and also because that number of dollars coming into the country would help the national economy.

Tony Curtis is to be the picture's star. Pic would roll in September if arrangements can be made.

Adults-Only Films On Sun. Rapped by Scots

Lochgelly, Fife, March 28.

Magistrates in this East Scotland town have declared themselves opposed to screening of adults-only films on Sundays. They will use this viewpoint when recommending renewal of local cinema licenses. Sunday film shows were only recently introduced here. They are screened on alternate weeks by the town's two cinemas, and are proving popular with teenage customers.

The fact that audiences are mainly youthful has brought complaints from the police, who say that when an X-certificate film is shown, the theatre managers have great difficulty in determining whether patrons have or have not reached the permissible age.

Sharp Cinema Biz Dip In German Ruhr Area

Frankfurt, March 28.

Germany's highly industrial area, the Ruhr coal and iron section, formerly ranked as the strongest cinema patronage area of this country, has been hit with a serious b.o. decline. Attendance in the major cities of the Ruhr has dwindled to only 49% of the record film business year of 1956, according to the Industry and Commerce Chamber of Dortmund.

In 1960, it's figured that every inhabitant of the Ruhr cities bought 10 cinema cards, a dropoff of 18% from 1959.

Metro's Hong Kong Confab

Hong Kong, March 28.

Metro International executives from N.Y., headed by Morton A. Spring, will be coming here in May for a meeting also to be attended by M-G reps from all parts of the Far East. Confab will be one of a series of separate meetings Metro intends holding in Buenos Aires and London for talks in connecton with the worldwide release of "King of Kings."

Although similar meetings were held two years ago to launch impasse between Metro and exhibitors showing M-G product over terms.

Inside Stuff—International

Gian-Carlo Menotti's plans for the 1961 Festival of Two Worlds in the mountain village of Spoleto, Italy, include a return visit of a ballet company of Jerome Robbins, probably including some new and reprised items plus the "Autumn Leaves" variety catch-all. A new stage play by Edoaurdo de Filippo is skedded. Samuel Barber's "Vanessa," not heretofor a success with Europeans, will be mounted as one of two operas. Ivana Tosini has the lead role and Walter Tornakovsky will conduct. No casting is completed yet for "Salome" which Thomas Schippers will conduct. Festival runs June 15-July 15.

May Festival in Florence starts May 6th with a new production of "Don Carlos," staged by Zurich's Herbert Graf (now casting). A world premiere will be Mario Catselnuovo Tedesco's (Florentine making his home in Hollywood) "Merchant of Venice." Eliot Pizzetti's "Murder in the Cathedral" will be given in the Basilica of S. Croce, staged by Margherita Wallman. International flavor in the Italian city are promised via Hinduchorus "Paranjoti." Beryozka all-girl USSR dance company, the London Festival Ballet the American Repertory Theatre and "West Side Story" as well as a German opera company which will present "Lohengrin" and "Arabella."

Milan's La Scala opera in preparing its last new productions for the season has "Parsifal" with an all-German cast. Benjamin Britten's (new for Italy) "Midsummer Nights Dream." Joan Sutherland will be heard in her standard Mad Lucy stunt and Karajan will conduct "Rosenkavalier" with Elisabeth Schwarzkopf. An exhumation after a century of "Ali Baba" by Cherubini is also in prospect. Piccola Scala will do the Brecht-Weil opera "Rise and Fall of the City of Mahogonny."

seems an okay seasonal filler. A reprise of Claude Magnier's farce, "Oscar," is doing biz because of comic Louis De Funes. A restricted run of "Irma La Douce" is also faring well. Friedrich Durrenmatt's "The Marriage of Mr. Mississippi" managed to hold for a few months as did Georges Neveux's romantic tale of turn-of-the-century hotel thieves in London, "La Voleuse De Londres" (The Thief of London), with Marie Bell. Jules Roy's tale of a career soldier suddenly recognizing his guilt, "Le Fleuve Rouge" (Red River) got okay reviews but did not have it for a long run. Alexandre Rivemale's "Le Mobile" (The Rooky) looks to finish the season for okay results.

Many Oldies Doing Biz

Plenty of the oldies are still doing biz with Achard's "Patate" in its fifth year as ditto Eugene Ionesco's "The Bald Singer." Francoise Sagan's "Chateau En Suede" (Castle in Sweden) is still fine in its second year while "Gog and Magog," adapted by Gabriel Arout from the Ted Allen R. MacDougall Anglo play, is going strong in the second year.

Last year's "De Doux Dingues" (Sweet Madcaps) of Marcel Andre; Roger Ferdinand's comedy "Les Croulants Se Porte Bien (Old Fogies Are Okay) and Paule De Beaumont's version of Arthur Watleyn's British thriller, "Bon Weekend M. Bennet," are also good holdovers.

Jean Anouilh's "Becket" is finishing a strong second year as is Camelotti's much-revived comedy, "La Bonne Anna." Actress Edwige Feuillere proved a good seasonal draw with a trio repertory of Somerset Maugham's "Constance," Jean Cocteau's "L'Aigle a Deux Tetes" (Two-Headed Eagle) and Corneille's "Rodugune."

Two Brecht Hits

The subsidized Theatre National Populaire had two hit Bertolt Brecht adaptions with "Arturo Ui" and "The Good Woman of Sechouan." The Comedie-Francaise scored with Victor Hugo's "Ruy Blas." Anton Chekhov's "Uncle Vania" and the pompous but successful "Spanish Cardinal" of Henry De Montherlant. Theatre De France, headed by Jean-Louis Barrault, did not do as well, having only mild success with Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" and Andre Obey's "Rape of Lucrecia."

Final Weeks Show Few Hits

Main new entries in recent weeks are reprises of offshore and local classics or adaptations of foreign plays. Some of these oldie entries loom as successes.

Biggest newcomer looks to be the Nicole and Jean Anouilh version of Shakespeare's "12th Night" at the Vieux Colombier playing as "La Nuit Des Rois" (The Night of Kings). Expert thesping, especially of Suzanne Flon, and direction of Jean Le Paulhan, had this in for solid reviews and probable fine biz.

'Le Voyage' Only Fair

Jean-Louis Barrault's "Le Voyage" looks only a fair new entry at state subsidized Odeon-Theatre De France.

The Comedie-Francaise got fine reviews for its version of Anton Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya" as adapted by Elsa Triolet and staged by Jacques Mauclair. It shapes as another C-F hit. Paul Claudel's "L'Annonce Faite a Marie" also looks in for a run at Theatre De L'Oeuvre.

to park it in the Oresund, and the exuberance of youth. They recently returned from an advertising study trip to the U. S. with estimated $300,000 backing from a California group.

Station will be called "Codan TV"—"Co" for commercial, "Dan" for Danish—and fitted with RCA equipment.

Ship will be the 420-ton Norwegian Malangen, big enough to carry the 120 ft. antenna transmitting at 25 kilowatts. That's enough to cover Danish and Swedish coasts bordering the Oresund.

Plans call for transmission of a filmed program four to six hours a day, against an average two to three hours from the state operated tv.

Ole Georg, 30, who got his commercial start with Mercur, broke his announcement on heels of approval for the Danish Radio Council to spend over $5,000,000 for a new tv house, to be partly finished in three to four years.

No sooner had Scandinavian newspapers published the Georg story, and compared it to 1959's abortive plan for an airborne tv station, than plans for another commercial tv station were announced.

Radio engineer Helge Lind said he could start another pirate station this summer with four to five hours transmission time. He claimed $700,000 in Danish backing.

Sweden so far is the only country to issue a decree banning ships with pirate senders aboard from anchoring in its ports. Negotiations will be taken up between Sweden, Denmark and Finland to extend the new Swedish regulation across Scandinavia, according to one Swedish paper.

But one thing bugs Kotschack. Bon Jour must be supplied with tape recordings from ashore and Radio Nord men are speculating that the next move from the Swedish government might be a law forbidding ships and planes to convey supplies to pirate broadcasters.

Gunnar Pedersen, head of Danish Post and Telegraph service, said a new tv transmitter put up in the sound to break the state monopoly could not avoid spoiling quality of pictures transmitted by Danish and Swedish stations to Zealand and south Sweden.

Last word came from Denmark's advertising authority, Prof. Max Kjaer-Hansen. The Scandinavian Times, American-owned English-language weekly, said the professor remarked that a commercial tv station "just wouldn't pay for itself in Denmark."

NBC AXINGS UPTEMPO JITTERS

WBC's Counter-Paar East-West Punch

Westinghouse Broadcasting's ambitious hour-and-a-half nighttime Monday-Friday strip under the banner of the group's new programming wing, WBC Productions, preems June 3 after a two-week shakedown run on Boston outlet WBZ-TV.

Vidtaped spread, with the first hour taped in New York and the last half hour produced in San Francisco, will be titled "PM East" and "PM West," with SF Chronicle video columnist Terry O'Flaherty emceeing the Coast seg and Mike Wallace being negotiated to host the New York hour. Former CBC talent Joyce Davidson will be a prominent part of the New York show, and hungri i owner Enrico Banducci will be scouting talent for the SF portion.

Blueprinted as an answer to the Jack Paar-NBC dominance in Westinghouse markets against the group's feature films, the shows will air at 11:15 p.m. and will have performing talents and guest interviews and special segments, among them a week-through "Autobiography" feature, a sort of serialized "This Is Your Life." Former Time mag editorial staffer Dick Boeth will be a roving vidtape correspondent, filing special inserts from around the country for nightly slotting.

This first purely entertainment production effort by Westinghouse (and the first production of WBC Productions) has "East" and "West" pilots on tape under supervision of WBC Productions topper Ben Park and is up for sale to non-competing markets. Talks are currently underway for a New York airing with Metropolitan indie WNEW-TV prominent.

Axe Falling at CBS-TV, Too; Add 43 Technicians to Lopoffs

CBS-TV is also undergoing large-scale cutbacks. Forty-three technicians from the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, followed by three lighting directors from Local 1 of the International Alliance of Theatrical & Stage Employees, were axed in the past few days.

These 46 men follow a month of retrenchment, particularly in the area of live production, at CBS. Before the latest lopoff, attributed by the network to a lack of live production, there was a "substantial" cutback of associate directors, more technicians and "lots of" non-union people, reportedly including some lower echelon production execs.

In all, there have been reports of at least 100 people being cut out by CBS in the past month. More cuts might occur in Hollywood, where there were other a year ago, because of the dearth of live production.

One of the reasons the CBS cutbacks have not received the attention of those at NBC, where so far there have been far fewer (although chances are that NBC will have at least as many before its through) is that no big names have been removed from the web's personnel roster.

The firing of lighting directors caused a walkout over the weekend of 300 IATSE stagehands. Replacing the striking union members with management personnel—which seemed to prevent any noticeable falloff in the remaining production timetable in N. Y.—CBS said that it was within the bounds of its IA pact to lay off unneeded labor. A day later, after the workers returned "temporarily" to work, CBS announced the matter had been "amicably" settled.

'Way Out' Is In

No sooner did CBS-TV get Rod Serling into a mood where he reportedly was willing to change his mind and go along with the idea of a 60-minute version of "Twilight Zone" for next season (see separate story), than something happened that might make the move unnecessary. "Way Out," the new David Susskind half-hour stanza, took over for Jackie Gleason at 10 o'clock on Fridays (just before the present half-hour "Twilight") and copped the Arbitron field.

ABC's "Sunset Strip" was licked, with "Way Out" getting a 19.7 (Gleason's last was 11.3) to "Sunset's" 18.1. ("Way Out" was theoreticaly brought in as a shorttermer to fill out the Gleason time.)

CBS Bans P&G 'Hazel' Because ABC Got 1st Look

Add sponsor woes of the video buying season: A Procter & Gamble fave, "Hazel," has been nixed at 485 Madison, CBS-TV prexy James Aubrey, in fact, won't even allow a screening of the Shirley Booth comedy skein that's based on the Saturday Evening Post cartoon "Hazel."

Word is that Aubrey won't o.o. the Screen Gems "Hazel" pilot because ABC had the initial screening. P&G (and presumably Quaker Oats) wanted to slot the show in place of the outgoing Tom Ewell series Tuesdays at 9 p.m., which they sponsored this season.

The CBS prexy's action has prompted a P&G spokesman to ask, "Is Mr. Aubrey interested in good shows or shows he sees first?"

Anyhow, both P&G and Quaker Oats have relinquished their hold on the Tuesday 9 p.m. time, and CBS is putting in "Ichabod," the Connelly & Mosher produced George Chandler starrer. It'll get a new title, and Robert Sterling may replace Chandler.

CBS execs may yet get a look at "Hazel," if P&G can slot her in the 9:30 Thursday time that ABC has opened up between "Three Sons" and "Untouchables."

NBC Loot Pours In For 'Kildare'

Hottest sales property on NBC-TV is "Dr. Kildare," Thursday-8:30 hour is now SRO with the addition of Colgate and Warner Lambert.

Duo join Liggett & Myers, Singer Sewing and Sterling Drug.

Meantime, the Friday circus stanza on the same web (no title chosen) made its first sale for the 7:30-8:30 hour. Seven-Up came in for a full half of the stanza (about $140,000 weekly time and talent, latter about a third of normal hour production tag). Fizz buy is three minutes every week.

Last sale of the week was to Noxzema, with a minute in the Saturday night two-hour motion picture stanza. Noxzema's entry makes the 20th Fox features 5/12s of SRO.

NBC Names Geo. Fuchs

With B. Lowell Jacobson leaving for a management job at Pepsi-Cola, George Fuchs last week became his replacement as vicepresident, personnel at NBC.

Fuchs has been a veep, labor relations since August of 1960.

BUT TOP ECHELON IS NOT AFFECTED

By ART WOODSTONE

A lot of people are going to be laid off at NBC-TV before too much longer. And while the reasons for this cutback differ, apparently, from all those other periodic retrenchments at the network, it hasn't kept many people in the organization from becoming as nervous as cats who sense they are about to lose their comfortable sinecure with old Aunt Jane.

In all previous cutbacks in personnel, NBC-TV seemed to be making them because they were running scared — budgets needed pairing, business wasn't good, parent RCA needed money or some such thing. But this doesn't seem to be the case now. The changes—those already made and the ones to be made in the next few weeks—are the result of what might be called organic recomposition.

In terms of how '61-'62 shapes up, NBC-TV has never had it so good economically or programmatically. The parent NBC, if not the tv network itself, had a record return last year, so the cutbacks are not simply budgetary devices. Since the fall schedule is virtually firm and the business is rolling in, neither are the cutbacks going to be the result, according to high NBC brass, of fear or confusion.

Moreover, NBC used to lay men off, sometimes by the carload, but invariably they were rehired months later when the "pressure was off" or someone new was hired to fill their roles. This time, the web toppers offer assurances that if a job is considered supernumerary, it will not be filled again.

For years, jokes about the "little men at NBC hiding so that maybe the bosses will forget they are there" have had a high degree of popularity about industry quarters—sometimes even among the men who were allegedly hiding. But this is reportedly the area which NBC prexy Bob Kintner and NBC-TV general manager Bob Stone are most interested in closing once and for all.

"Of course, we have been looking at the possibility of changes in our organization," one top level exec said at the end of last week. "If we can find better and more efficient ways to operate, we're going to do it."

Tired of the jokes, tired of the "excessive" cost of maintaining staffs that don't have enough work to do, NBC is going to pare. Big cuts in manpower are due on the Coast, where this summer not a single live show will be made for NBC. It seems that NBC gained some of the momentum for the present slicing from the object lesson taught by ABC. Latter web works with about half the manpower of either NBC or CBS.

As for the mainline of NBC-TV's management, "it couldn't," NBC declares, "be more steady." All the rumors about Bob Kintner have long since died. Web assures that exec veep Walter Scott is there to stay and then there's the fresh blood at the tv web, which

TOM FISHER'S UPPED STATUS AT CBS-TV

Thomas K. Fisher becomes veep and general counsel for CBS Inc., partly filling the void made several weeks ago when Richard Salant left that post to become boss of CBS News. Reportedly, there is still room for more administrative aid at the corporate level under prexy Frank Stanton.

With the Fisher appointment at the corporate level the was veep and general attorney for the tv web), there's going to be a consolidation of several legal staffs into one under his aegis.

Previously, there were separate legal units for each of the CBS operating divisions and there was also the office of economic analysis. All now fall under Fisher's new CBS law department.

Should NBC Take Rap (On License Renewals) for Anti-Trust Record? FCC to Justice Dep't: 'T'aint Fair'

Washington, April 4.

Federal Communications Commission attacked Monday (3) the Justice Dept. court memo which suggested that anti-trust consent decrees be taken into account in license renewal cases.

FCC's Office of General Counsel told the U.S. Court of Appeals here that the Justice memo "Directed itself to broader questions than those before this court—questions which need not be resolved here."

The Justice Dept. brief, filed 10 days ago in the Philco-NBC case, indicated that NBC-RCA's anti-record was a proper subject for FCC consideration. For this reason, the Dept. suggested that the FCC erred in turning down Philco's protest against renewal of NBC's Philadelphia outlet, WRCA-TV (Channel 3), as part of its multi-station package deal. NBC proposes to swap WRCV for RKO General's Boston properties.

Import of FCC's answer was that the court had no reason to decide the con-sent decree issue as posed by Justice. Commission also said there was nothing in the Justice memo which showed that the FCC should have handled the Philco protest differently.

Meanwhile, Philco attacked NBC via the unusual device of comments in an FCC rulemaking proceeding. The Philco comments on FCC's proposed new broadcast application form declared that it essentially involves the "narrative" method of relating programming as advocated by NBC and National Assn. of Broadcasters. Philco said this method "does not provide meaningful, verifiable information."

NBC May Take Gamble

NBC-TV will go ahead with plans for its own edition of an action - adventure program based in Las Vegas if sponsors want it, despite the restrictions that are apparently being laid on ABC-TV's "Las Vegas" and its own "Las Vegas Story" by the city in question.

While ABC dropped out, in part because Las Vegas officials, objecting to the violence, were making it difficult to get location footage for both Warner Bros. (ABC) and Goodson-Todson (doing the NBC version), NBC has decided that it already has enough location footage "to last a lifetime if necessary." Nonetheless, NBC is going to try and extract any objectionably violent portions to placate Las Vegas civic and political leaders.

No Dice on 'Vegas,' Bing's 'Ben Casey' May Get ABC Nod

ABC-TV decided that it won't use the Warner Bros. version of "Las Vegas" on its schedule next season, partly because of the block by the city's fathers against unrestricted location shooting. With that program out as the Sunday, 10 to 11 p.m. entry, the network has devised some alternatives:

"Ben Casey," an hour done by Bing Crosby's outfit in collaboration with ABC-TV, could go either Sunday at 10 or Monday at 10. Similarly Robert Taylor's "The Detectives," to be axed from its Friday berth could take either Sunday or Monday from 10 to 10:30, with "The Rebel" taking the companion 10:30-11 slot on whatever night the Taylor stanza gets.

Reason why "Rebel" would be available and the reason also why Monday night at 10 is open temporarily is that ABC-TV wants to move "Adventures in Paradise" from its current Monday time to Sundays 6:30 to 7:30. (Previously, "Rebel" was to go in from 7 to 7:30 on Sundays.)

Besides the alleged foulup on location shooting for "Las Vegas," there might be other reasons for the sudden change of the Sunday and Monday latenight plans at ABC. Neither "Adventures" at 10 Mondays or the tentatively programmed "Las Vegas" on Sundays at 10 drew any largescale sponsor support for the coming season, apart from the rumor of some possible Miles Labs biz in "Vegas" and a small hunk by Alberto Culver for the Monday "Adventures" slotting.

NBC-TV UPS PRICE ON '87TH PRECINCT'

NBC-TV brass erased the pencil markings and wrote in pen last week the title "87th Precinct" in its Thursday 9 to 10 time period. Directly after seeing the pilot of this Hubbell Robinson hour on Thursday (30), Bob Kintner upped the price per minute.

Web had its hooks out for $30,000 for each of the six weekly minutes in the hour. With no pilot available, there were no takers. Right after the screening, the boys jacked up the "Precinct" price tag to $32,000 per minute.

Singer Sewing's $2,500,000 Spree

Singer Sewing has committed just about $2,500,000 for next season to be split between ABC-TV and NBC-TV. Outfit, which was something of a stranger to ABC-TV although a former NBC "steady," has gone the participation route on hour stanzas.

Buying was for two-minutes on alternate weeks in ABC-TV's "Bus Stop," slated for Sundays at 9, and for a like amount of time in "Dr. Kildare," on the NBC Thursday sked 8:30.

"Bus Stop" thus has participations from Singer, Alberto Culver, Brown & Williamson and reportedly Miles Labs. "Kildare" has money from Singer, Warner Lambert, Sterling Drug and Liggett & Myers.

P&G TAKES WOLPER ENTRY TO NBC-TV

CBS-TV, which in a sense opened the door to outside pubaffairs shows in non-news, non controversial areas when web news brass approved showing of the David Wolper-Sterling Film special, "The Golden Age of Hollywood," will not be airing the show after all.

Web could not come up with a time slot to satisfy bankroller Procter & Gamble. Soapery has moved the special to NBC-TV, which is offering a late November "Watson Train" preemption. ABC also was pitching, but P&G liked the potential of the Wednesday night slot he'd down by the western rating topper.

Merck's NBC Special

Merck, Sharp & Dohme, drug house which has never before been on tv, will sponsor "Doctor B," an NBC-TV special, on Tuesday, June 27.

Produced by Ben Park and directed by Harold Mayer, "B" is a medical documentary.

CBS-TV's Graduated Compensation Plan (As New Contracts Come Up) In New Bid For Total Affil Clearances

CBS-TV has undertaken a brand new plan for graduated compensation of its affiliated stations for carrying programming. Yet rather than pitch the whole idea of an "incentive plan" all at once to the outlets, the network is understood to be negotiating the change as the affiliate contract for each station expires and a new one is due.

Plan, which CBS is not proclaiming in any detail, is said to provide a schedule of payments to stations encouraging them to clear for all CBS stanzas. Move may have been inspired because of the intense three-network competition for prime time clearances in one and two station markets.

As a rule, most affiliates (for all webs) clear with relative ease for the "top half" (the better stanzas) of a network program sked, but it becomes increasingly harder for them to get their own contracted affils to take the rest. By its new plan, CBS evidently seeks a reasonable guarantee that 95% to 100% of the CBS-TV sked is cleared.

While no actual percentage figures are available other than to the few affils whose contracts have come up for renewal in the past few days, it might be said that the CBS comp plan is along the following lines: Arbitrarily, it could be said that the lower 40% of any network's programming finds tough sledding on clearances. Consequently, clearance of that lower portion, will afford CBS affils higher rates, like 35% instead of 30 or 33%. Meantime, however, clearance for the first 60% of the lineup, which comes easily, might only afford a CBS affil about 25% compensation. On this basis, it would apparently require nearly total clearance for CBS-TV stanzas before affils can maintain their present levels of money compensation from the network.

Once before this incentive idea was in effect at CBS, but that was several years ago and only a relative few of the web affils worked under it. In an effort to standardize affiliate contracts, CBS ended the plan and put everybody on straight (as opposed to graduated) compensation.

Recently, CBS-TV achieved surprising success in modifying its compensation for morning programs. Unlike the new setup, however, the daytime comp rates were set all at once, and after a few unnerving days for the web, most of its affils went along.

Bishop Decision Due

By later today (Wed.) NBC-TV should know whether Joey Bishop gets Wednesdays at 8:30 next season. Advertisers for the half-hour slot after "Wagon Train"—American Tobacco and Lever—were supposed to give this NBC-supported show the once-over yesterday.

If Bishop doesn't get this prime slot, web will keep the show anyway, moving the half-hour telefilm series to Saturdays at 8:30. Plans are being made to change some of the characters who appeared in the Bishop pilot. Billy Gilbert is being dropped from the stanza.

Iffy Status For CBS 'Eyewitness'

Decision is due this week on whether CBS-TV will retain "Eyewitness" as its 10:30-11 p.m. entry on Fridays next season. So far it has no sponsors.

It was the network's original intention to do an hourlong version of "Twilight Zone," but producer Rod Serling objected to the extension of the half-hour show. That's when "Eyewitness" got a reprieve for '61-'62.

Since then, however, Serling has reportedly revised his own thinking and will go along on a 60-minute weekly edition of "Zone," if "Eyeyitness" doesn't make out sponsorwise.

WBC's Pitt Lineup

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Gov. David Lawrence of Penna., producers Fred Coe and Albert McCleery, Ambassador William Attwood, FCC Commissioner Robert T. Bartley, Bergen Evans, Frank Baxter, designer Jo Mielziner, TIO prexy Lou Hausman, Marya Mannes and researcher Bernard Berelson will be among the names at the Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. pubaffairs conference in Pittsburgh next month. Affair is slated to run from April 9 to 12.

The fourth such confab underwritten by WBC, it'll be devoted to "The Changing Community, The Changing Craft and The Changing World."

No Twofers Necessary On Equal Time Demand When a Station Goofs

Washington, April 4.

Ruling on a Texas case, the Federal Communications Commission held that if a television station goofs during a telecast by a candidate and has to give him a second time slot, the licensee isn't subject to double "equal time" demands from his opponents.

At issue was a paid 15-minute broadcast by Maury Maverick Jr., a U.S. Senate candidate in the current special election, over four Texas stations, KDUB-TV, Lubbock; KPAR-TV, Abilene; KCTV, San Angelo; and KEDY-TV, Big Spring. For reasons beyond the control of the originating station, KDUB-TV, visual signals failed during the entire 15 minutes, although the audio transmission worked. Ironically, the 15-minute segment immediately following, purchased for another candidate, John Tower, had perfect audio and visual transmission.

The four stations offered Maverick another 15-minute slot. FCC, asked for a ruling, freed the licensees of double "equal time" liability, saying they would have to provide one 15-minute period to any other candidate willing to pay for it.

'Mattress,' Ballet Now Look Cold As Breck Specials

After the deal looked closed, Breck Shampoo decided to withdraw—at least temporarily—from buying "Once Upon a Mattress" and the Stravinksy-Balanchine ballet on CBS-TV.

Breck had a hold on the two one-shots, but then decided that it couldn't commit itself for them until it made up its mind about its full tv slate for fall. Breck, via Reach, McClinton agency, has wanted to find a home next season for "Family Classics," the series that has run on CBS-TV, but the going has been rough. However, Reach is still plugging—and that presumably is what detained a decision on Bob Banner's "Mattress" adaptation for tv and the Balanchine work.

Meantime, Breck has definitely decided to repeat two of the "Classics" series this summer, "The Heiress" in June and either "Jane Eyre" or "The Light That Failed" in August. Stanzas will go on CBS-TV.

Jim Hagerty's D.C. Spruce-Up

Washington, April 4.

The Jim Hagerty touch has virtually doubled the Washington ABC news operation.

Latest move doubles the bosses of it. Effective this week, Hagerty has taken the number two man out of the CBS news operation here, Lewis W. Shollenberger, and made him director and special events and news operations of ABC News, D. C. In the action, Robert Fleming remains as chief of ABC's Washington news bureau.

When Hagerty took over as ABC's v.p., there were eight in the web's news operation here. Now, there are 15.

Additions, besides Shollenberger, include three correspondents, John Scali (vet AP State Dept. reporter), Bob Clark (from the Washington Star and formerly INS' White House man) and Peter Clapper (CBS ex and son of Raymond Clapper); a tv editor, Nick Allen (from ABC, N. Y.); Stokes Sharp (radio staff); and a film editor, James Ganser (from Telenews).

Hagerty is preparing for the 11 p.m. web newscast starting April 17, the nine five-minute radio news programs now originating from here in the changeover and a general upgrading of the Washington reports.

On another tv-radio Washington front—over at CBS—Howard K. Smith lately took over as chief from Ted Koop, who moved over to work in the CBS lobbying areas. Shollenberger's CBS replacement was not named.

Will FCC Convert a Gotham 'V' For Educational TV Purposes?

Washington, April 4.

By a 6-1 vote, the Federal Communications Commission has launched a "formal inquiry" of how one of the seven commercial VHF television channels in both New York and Los Angeles can be shifted to noncommercial educational use.

FCC's new chairman, Newton Minow, an enthusiastic booster of educational tv, headed the list of the six voting for the unprecedented action. Only Commissioner Robert E. Lee, the all-UHF champion, dissented.

Comments were asked by May 1. FCC restricted the inquiry to only N. Y. and L. A., although the FCC document took note of the fact that Washington is the only other city with four or more VHF channels which doesn't have an educational VHF assignment. Washington is, of course, under FCC's nose.

The FCC notice observed that more than 13% of the nation's population lives within the VHF service area of the two cities which are now without educational tv, although 54 such stations operate elsewhere in the U. S.

Said FCC's majority: "In view of the incalculable benefits which non-commercial educational services could bring to the vast populations in both the Los Angeles and New York areas, the Commission believes it urgently desirable in the public interest to inquire into available means by which it could enhance the opportunities for the provision of such services, and in particular to assess the possibilities for attaining this objective by making available for non-commercial, educational broadcasting one of the seven VHF channels in each of those areas now used for commercial broadcasting."

One of N. Y.'s seven VHFs, WNTA-TV's Channel 13, is technically assigned to Newark, but FCC said that makes no difference in the educational tv consideration.

Olds in Brinkley Detour

Oldsmobile has decided not to go with that weekly pubaffairs-news format being prepped by NBC-TV next season with Dave Brinkley. The Brinkley stanza, set for 10:30 Wednesdays, may yet get that reported R. J. Reynolds half sponsorship, however.

Meantime, Gulf Oil is mulling part purchase of a similar Friday stanza on NBC-TV to be done with Frank McGee. The McGee show is virtually assured a 10:30 berth, too.

50 Markets For TNTint Closed-TV

Closed-circuit television in large-screen color projection will be available in 50 markets through new facilities of Theatre Network Television.

TNT sees the tintcasts as a boon to industrial closed-circuit tv in the merchandising and marketing promotional areas where color is important, including package design, fashion, automotive, cosmetics, home furnishing and foods.

The new closed web, which is called the TNT Colorvision Network, has on order a fleet of Norelco large screen, compatible color projectors now in production in the Netherlands.

The color projectors, according to TNT, are able to produce pictures several times larger and three times brighter than the compatible color tv equipment currently available. Increased brightness reportedly makes it possible to view the large screen closed-circuit telecast in normally lighted convention halls.

TNT prexy Nathan L. Halpern looks for a sizable closed-circuit biz increase in presentation of new products, sales promotion campaigns and introduction of new packaging.

Upjohn Buys WNEW-TV Child Health Special

Upjohn Co., ethical drug outfit, will come in for one of its rare sponsorship deals via a medical special on WNEW-TV, N.Y. Show is a one-hour primetime outing on "Better Health for Your Children," slated for April 12 and dealing with everything from thumbsucking to smoking.

Cooperating with Upjohn is the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Pabst Coin on Nags

Pabst Brewing, via Kenyon & Eckhardt's Chicago office, will bankroll CBS Radio's ninth annual coverage of the "Triple Crown" of horse racing.

Web will broadcast the 87th Kentucky Derby, May 6; the 84th Preakness, May 20; and the 91st running of the Belmont Stakes, June 3. Producer will be CBS Radio sports director James Dolan.

Clancy Worden Fatally Stricken

Clancy Worden, who died yesterday (Tues.) after collapsing at his WCBS-TV desk, was once billed by VARIETY as the man "hired to give the station away." The 64-year-old broadcasting and newspaper veteran was due for retirement in September from the N. Y. station where he served as assistant to the general manager and as public affairs director.

For 11 years, Worden was responsible for lining up the public affairs programming, done generally without the benefit of advertising remuneration to the outlet, for the CBS flagship in N. Y. He earned the giveaway tag because his unsponsored pubaffairs stanzas, among them many prize winners from the very start were often substituted for heavily commercial programs.

He first collapsed at his desk at the station Monday (3), and after two more attacks the following day, he died.

After a lengthy career in newspapering, first as a general and city hall reporter for the old Brooklyn Standard Union and then on a 14-year pull at the N. Y. Daily News, Worden entered broadcasting in '38 as publicity man for the late Maj. Bowes. Soon he joined CBS, when

Collins' Peace Corps Role Portends New NAB Era

Washington, April 4.

Appointment of National Assn. of Broadcasters prexy LeRoy Collins to the advisory committee of the Peace Corps, pet Kennedy project, illustrates the new concept Collins is bringing to the NAB helm.

Harry Belafonte was also named to the committee.

Collins figures, according to associates, he can serve broadcasting best in the Potomac precincts by assisting the Government when he can be useful. He comes from a political, rather than broadcasting, background (he was Florida's Governor), and in the opinion of many that is an asset in serving radio-tv here.

Other NAB presidents have come from the industry and have, generally speaking, restricted their association with Government to lobbying (and this has largely been in opposing suggested new legislation affecting the industry) rather than broadened to actual participation in Governmental programs.

Collins showed the initiative in the Peace Corps area, it was learned here. Collins went for the Corps when President Kennedy first proposed it. He began getting ideas to suggest on how it should operate and how the broadcasting industry could help. It wasn't long until he had a one-hour appointment with President Kennedy. Despite other published reports of what the President and Collins discussed, the purpose of the meeting (and the reason Collins got the extra long appointment) was to talk about the Peace Corps.

Reliable sources say Collins has already made inquiries within the industry for the gift of many radios (principally battery operated) to be shipped into backward nations where Peace Corps work will be centralized. The radios would be used, not only as a source of news for people who don't know what's going on in the world, but also for educational programming connected directly with the Peace Corps crusade.

Collins is known also to have contacted friends in other industries outside broadcasting to see what they could do usefully for the Peace Corps.

Further, Collins has conceived several ideas for the corps which intrigue the higher echelon of Government. One is reported to be that the corps, as a starter, concentrate on one or more small nations (perhaps in Central America) where results could be detected speedily because of the size of the country. Obviously, strides in literacy—one of the Corps' aims—would show faster.

Collins' attitude is somewhat in the Eric Johnston pattern. Johnston, Motion Picture Assn. of America prez, has taken active part in various Government programs through the years, including leaves of absence actually to hold federal posts. In practice, it builds up a personal association within Government which is a valuable thing for an Assn. prez on the Washington scene to have.

Beach's Stepdown From Central ABC

Chicago, April 4.

James W. Beach has stepped down as ABC-TV veep in charge of Central Division Sales, in what he describes as an "amicable withdrawal." Although he hasn't indicated what his plans are, it's understood he might be moved into another area of network operations. He states that for the time being he's remaining with AB-PT in an inactive capacity.

William Gillogly, Beach's former right hand, has inherited his veep stripes and approximate post. Title revision puts him in charge of Chicago office sales.

Beach joined the network in 1949, initially as commercial manager of the Chicago o&o, WBKB. Gillogly, who previously held the title of director of sales for Central Division, joined up as an account exec in 1951. For a time he was the web's Eastern sales manager.

SPONSORS SOLO BY THE HOUR

In Texas They Do It Big

San Antonio, April 4.

KONO here has a complete new announcing staff since the previous members were either fired or quit in sympathy with the other deejays. It all started when Howard Edwards, early morning man on Friday (31), made a few remarks on the air during his program concerning refusal of the station to allow him off to go on a fishing trip.

Jack Roth, general manager of the outlet fired Edwards. Doug China, program director, then took over and also made several remarks concerning the Edwards dismissal and was also dismissed by Roth.

One by one the other members of the staff, among them Ed Dunn, George Cooper and Ben Laurie also left or were dismissed.

The station's newscasters subbed as announcers for the remainder of the day and night reading the commercial copy while station engineers doubled as disk jockeys spinning the records.

Roth appeared on the air in a brief statement concerning the incident throughout the day and announced that an entire new group of announcers would be on hand by the start of the broadcast day tomorrow (Saturday).

By the beginning of the broadcast day several announcers were brought in from Houston while others will be added to round out the announcing staff.

Edwards has been outspoken in the past concerning his early morning shift.

Who's Getting the Kaiser Biz? ABC & NBC in Variety of Pitches

Machinations of Kaiser Industries grew more involved last week, with NBC-TV as well as ABC-TV huddling with execs of Young & Rubicam, the sponsor's ad agency. Yet the billings ($5,000,000 to $8,000,000 depending on Kaiser's final plan of action) still have no home for next season.

Last week, NBC-TV seemed to have the edge. This week, ABC-TV reportedly has the edge, but Kaiser has made no commitment, and since the bankroller doesn't have to decide until May whether it'll discontinue at ABC-TV, the answer may still be sometime off.

NBC-TV offered 8:30-9:30 p.m. Fridays to Kaiser for the continuation of "Hong Kong." (ABC doesn't want it back next season at all.) While the 8:30 NBC offering seemed attractive to Kaiser, sponsor is afraid that the action-adventure hour might not be right anywhere; while concededly well-produced, stanza is not even winning in many of the tv markets where it doesn't have to compete against NBC's Wednesday "Wagon Train."

It doesn't seem promising, whatever else may be decided, that Kaiser will retain Wednesdays at ABC. But the alternatives are to put all the Kaiser money (a full hour would make the buy worth about $8,000,000) into Sundays at 7:30 on ABC-TV. No program has been selected, however, with an item called "Counter-Intelligence" dropped after a short stay in the tentative lineup. Half of the total could go into 7:30 and the other half into a later Sunday slot at ABC or all of it yet could go into the 7:30-8:30 program.

Steve Still Dangling

Steve Allen still has a fair chance to get a home on Wednesday nights at ABC-TV, and, as a matter of fact, one ciggie company (unnamed), with an interest in live tv for a younger audience wants part of the 60-minute stanza.

However, ABC is not in the position of firming up Allen for 7:30 to 8:30, because Kaiser has not decided what its own plans will be for next fall, and, for the time, Kaiser is the outfit that has a big say in the future of the time period, whether it sticks with it or not next fall.

ABC Nixes Gobel As Thurs. Entry

George Gobel lost out on the choice Thursday 9:30 to 10 p.m. slot on ABC-TV between "My Three Sons" and "The Untouchables." Network didn't want it, and Benton & Bowles, the P&G agency, went along, so for awhile last week it looked as though a half-hour package out of 20th Fox, "Margie," was going to get the time, but even that became shaky at the week's end.

Benton & Bowles and ABC executives are converging on P&G Cincinnati headquarters this week to try and resolve the program for the time period, which the sponsor already owns.

Also for a brief time, another package was in the contest. That's Ziv's "Small Town, D.A." evidently didn't want either "Margie" or "D.A."—at least not last week. Yet the way these things often turn out, either one of them (with the edge said to be "Margie's") could win out just the same by the time the Cinci meetings are over.

CBS Aides 'Win A Little, Lose A Little' on Demands

Reacting to demands two weeks ago from the web's permanent employee - management committee covering white collar workers, CBS has granted salary increases, commencing this Friday (7), to clerical and secretarial employees. But, at the same time, CBS nixed requests for a 10th paid holiday and for a fourth week of vacation time to 20-year employees.

As CBS itself put it to employees last week, they "win a little . . . lost a little."

Salary Grades A through I (covering mostly secretarial and clerical workers) get weekly raises ranging from $3 to $4.

Two other areas came in for CBS increases: While the employee group did not specifically ask for merit increases, the web says it feels "it's important to provide incentives and rewards to those . . . whose job performance calls for special recognition."

Second, CBS employees with nine or more years of service will get a week of severance pay for each year of service up to a maximum of 26 weeks. Formerly, deal was pegged to a maximum of eight weeks severance pay after five years of service.

MILES LABS IN 475G GARROWAY SPREAD

Chicago, April 4.

Miles Labs, a major spender in network tv, is concentrating around $475,000 of its budget this spring in a 16-week campaign on Dave Garroway's "Today" on NBC-TV.

Sponsor is buying spots at the rate of one-a-day for One-a-Day Vitamins through June.

SURPRISING YEN FOR EXCLUSIVITY

There's one aspect of the current sponsor commitments for next season's programming on tv that has taken the networks more or less by surprise, and that's the yen of major clients to hop aboard hour shows on a full sponsorship basis. What makes it all the more extraordinary is that it comes at a time when the so-called "minute participation" vogue on 60-minute entries has matured into full bloom by virtue of the cost-per-thousand payoff on embracing the latter formula.

At NBC-TV alone, it's estimated that upwards of $50,000,000 in billings thus far is represented by bankrollers taking on full hour shows (exclusive of specials) either solo or on an alternate-week basis. Oddly enough, the bulk of this coin is being channelled into Sunday evening.

The "Sunday scorecard" at NBC includes the Eastman-Kodak and RCA dedication to full sponsorship of the new Walt Disney 7:30 to 8:30 series. Also there's the every-week full hour sponsorship by Du Pont in the 10 to 11 period. Similarly, there is Chevy's retention of the 9 to 10 hour, with "Bonanza" going in as replacement for Dinah Shore.

Elsewhere on the NBC sked Kraft will be back full hour and full steam with Perry Como. Reynolds metals is going the whole hour route as alternate week sponsor of the new Dick Powell series and Sterling Drug is going full hour alternate weeks on "The Thriller." American Dairy Assn. is buying into full 60-minute sponsorship with 13 Dinah Shore segments, alternating with the Bell Telephone series of 16 full hour musicals. Ballantine is another dedicated to the full hour formula via its sponsorship of the Mitch Miller songalogs. There's possibility that Nabisco may join the ranks by relieving Ford of some of its sponsorship in "Wagon Train."

Westinghouse, for years a "loner" on hour programming with "Studio One" and later "Desilu Playhouse" returns to the 60-minute exclusivity field with its prestige bundle of shows in which all three tv webs will share billings.

Next season will find both U. S. Steel and Armstrong continuing with their own alternate-week hours of Wednesday night dramas on CBS. Also on CBS: Colgate's alternate week full hour of the Ed Sullivan show; Chevrolet dittoing on "Route 66."

Even on ABC, where the "minute participations" are predominant, there will be an upswing in single sponsorship of hours, as witness Alcoa's purchase of Tuesday night 10 to 11, along with such continued allegiance as Kaiser and Gillette (fights) on 60-minute soloing.

These, of course, are exclusive of the clients hopping aboard full hour specials for solo identity.

Stern, Benny & Bach Draw Over $200,000 For Carnegie Hall Fund

Isaac Stern, Jack Benny (doing a Bach violin duo) helped collect over $200,000 for the Carnegie Hall Foundation, fund raising body for the N. Y. concert hall Monday night (3). Cash, to help preserve the 57th St. edifice, came from contributions made by several of the members of the dressup audience at the taping at the Hall of a Benny special which CBS-TV will air next September. But most of the coin came from a $50-a-plate dinner thrown afterwards at the Waldorf-Astoria.

After an afternoon dress rehearsal, Benny and concert violinist Stern, with Roberta Peters, Van Cliburn and Benny Goodman's jazz sextet, lensed the tv stanza before a packed Carnegie house, many of the pewsters appearing by invitation to "Carnegie Hall Salutes Jack Benny." They appeared with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy.

ABC-TV says it had a nighttime-only gross of $185,000,000 in time and talent billings for next season at the close of business on Friday (March 31). A year ago, on exactly the same day, the network closed out with futures of only $154,000,000, suggesting that the web, once in last place on all counts in the three-web sweepstakes, is closing the money gap.

The fall prospects of $185,000,000 put ABC-TV approximately 20% ahead of last year. The ABC "money march" is reportedly continuing at a "steady pace." Take for instance, the web's January billings. ABC-TV's January gross was up $3,000,000 from January, 1960. That's a 19% increase for the one month.

Three main reasons are thought to have caused the increase this time in ABC's gross take. First, there is the general bullishness of the onetime "third network," and that, evidently, has helped increase the ad billings. In addition, ABC-TV, as noted recently in VARIETY, has been increasing its station lineups for specific programs at night and the size of a lineup aids in determining the amount of money each advertiser spends.

Last — and this has helped all three webs — this past January-March selling period for the coming season represents one of the fastest in history. Many bankrollers used to delay their network program purchases until April, May and even June, but the big sponsors moved in early this year.

Latest sales at ABC-TV were led by a $4,500,000 to $5,000,000 order from Johnson & Johnson, which bought alternate half hours next season in two 9 o'clock hours, "Surfside 6" and "New Breed," latter coming into Tuesday as a new entry for '61-'62.

And when Pontiac renewed alternate halves of "Surfside," on Mondays, it made the Warner Bros. hour a virtual SRO for fall, since Noxzema had also bought a weekly minute and Brown & Williamson adready possessed an alternate half-hour.

More good news hit the web with another near SRO. Miles Labs and Bristol-Myers have taken alternating minutes on "Cheyenne," the veteran Monday-7:30 entry.

Armour bought a spot in the Saturday "Roaring 20s." And perhaps the only downbeat piece of sales news to afflict ABC in several days was R. J. Reynolds decision not to pick up its option on the new Friday half-hour (at 8), "The Hathaways."

CBS-TV Renewal On 'Checkmate' Checkmates NBC

After NBC had leaked the word to some of its Madison Ave. sources that "Checkmate" might very well be switching next season over to its house from CBS-TV, the latter network—which looked like it never wanted to see the stanza again—up and renewed the action-adventure hour. Next season, CBS-TV will utilize this CBS-Jack Benny coproduction Wednesday nights at 8:30.

Decision to axe "Checkmate" from its current Saturday night slot (after "Perry Mason") and replace it in the 8:30-9:30 period with "The Defenders" came several days ago. Almost immediately afterwards, NBC began negotiating with Benny's outfit to bring the cancelled CBS stanza over for either its own Saturday 8:30 hour next semester or maybe for Mondays at 7:30 (in case "The Americans" didn't make it back). It looked good for NBC, too. It would have marked an unusual piece of production casting—NBC controlling a program made originally with CBS money and by a long-time CBS personality, Benny.

CBS merely picked up its option on "Checkmates," and word was that the network had all along been considering the shift. Equally likely, however, is that with "Checkmate" ratings on rise, CBS feared that to let it go might lose Saturday at 8:30 for CBS next season. One feeling is that "Defenders," as good as it might be, would not beat "Checkmate," which not only had a season's head-start on it but more than likely would be retaining the same time

Lawyer In the House?

Hollywood, April 4.

If Thursday is maids' night out, Saturday will be lawyers' night in. With the dropping of "Checkmate," CBS-TV will fill the Saturday time with its own hour show, "The Defenders."

Following "Perry Mason," it will give the web two solid hours of dramas about barristers.

4 BULOVA SPECIALS; BOONE AS TEEOFF

Bulova will sponsor a Pat Boone special on ABC-TV, April 20. A one-hour spec, it'll have as guests Fabian and the Kingston Trio.

Boone buy is to be the first of four Bulova specials, which probably will be spread out across all three tv webs. One is meant for May, another for September or October and the last for December, before Xmas.

McCann-Erickson, the Bulova agency, wants to back an Arthur Godfrey spec at CBS this spring and wanted Perry Como at NBC, but since Como has renewed his Kraft deal, this becomes an impossibility.

Warner Lambert's $4,000,000 to NBC

Warner Lambert Pharmaceuticals reportedly will spend $4,000,000 on NBC-TV next season. Sponsor has already pinned down one of the stanzas it wants, and that's the Thursday hour, "Dr. Kildare."

"Kildare" buy is for a minute a week, worth about $1,250,000. Otherwise, sponsor is looking at about half a dozen other hours on the NBC sked, and will buy into three or four of them.

While obviously the exact shows have not all been picked, NBC appears to have gotten a commitment on the rest of the coin from the drug houses, so that the sponsor can insure a discount. Biz is handled through Lambert & Feasley.

NBC Radio's Biz Upbeat

NBC Radio reports net sales of slightly over $2,000,000 for the period from Jan. 13 to March 15. Of this, according to general manager George A. Graham, $900,000 was in new biz.

Web pacts include Liggett & Myers, Trimount Clothing, Policy-Matic Vending Machines, Chrysler Corp., United Wallpaper and Mennen Co.

Candor from the Coast

One of the briefest and best-known appraisals of Hollywood contends that if you take the trouble to look under the movie capital's top layer of shimmering tinsel, you'll find . . . more tinsel.

Like most epigrammatic catch-alls, that one may have more wit than wisdom on its side. Our own feeling is that Movieland has an abundance of both beauty and truth, and that the two qualities are not mutually exclusive. (There was even one pretty fair English poet who considered them synonymous.)

At any rate, when we launched the Monday-to-Friday "Here's Hollywood" TV show last fall, we were determined that the half-hour interview program should be the most attractive and most genuine such offering ever to originate from the coast.

First of all, it seemed to us, the viewer who's never visited Hollywood generally has no real idea of what the terrain, geography and architecture are like. We thought it would be a nice touch to precede each chat at a star's home with a motoring sequence showing the general route we followed in getting there from central Hollywood.

A minor matter? Perhaps. But these very introductory shots (we've been told by oodles of letter-writers) give watchers a glorious feeling of taking a leisurely drive to Bel-Air, Malibu or the San Fernando Valley. These are magical names for most viewers, and the trips are not only exciting but (California drivers please note) hazard-free.

Of course, beauty out Hollywood-way doesn't end with the scenery along a highway or a row of handsome, low-slung store fronts. There are the homes and surroundings of the stars we're visiting, and, in most cases, the extremely attractive visages of the performers themselves. Character actors are also welcome.

SO MUCH FOR BEAUTY. As for truth, executive producer Peer Oppenheimer feels that the very informality of the entire "Here's Hollywood" setup makes stars want to talk candidly and honestly about something more vital than their last contract or next vehicle.

Contributing to this informality is the fact that the show's two interviewers (Dean Miller and Joanne Jordan) are right there on the premises rather than watching the proceedings from a studio armchair and addressing their questions to a monitor through a cloud of cigarette smoke.

Another point adding to the program's overall casualness is the speed with which the technical equipment is installed in the performer's apartment, home or garden.

When a TV crew bustles around a house for two days to get things arranged, it's enough to make the most placid of actors jittery by the time the interview proper is to begin.

The "Here's Hollywood" technicians wouldn't dream of such dawdling. They've been known to set up their equipment, tape the interview and then restore the residence to its normal tidiness within two hours after arriving at the scene. Some burglars don't work that fast.

It's a show that never gives the impression of being overwhelmed with its own importance. Stuffiness is studiously avoided. It's not hard to understand, therefore, why—in so relaxed an atmosphere—guest Kirk Douglas sounded off on his difficulties in getting along with people; why Jan Sterling freely explored the problems of young widowhood; why Stephen Boyd willingly analyzed the failure of his marriage.

If such subject matter be considered a bit serious for "daytime fare," we can only say that NBC doesn't know what "daytime fare" means. We've always insisted that our daytime programming be just as mature, just as professional and just as entertaining as our evening shows.

Not all of the "Here's Hollywood" interviews are taped at the guests' homes. A performer in the process of having her house remodeled may prefer to have us join her on a shopping expedition in town. A sports-minded entertainer may choose to chat with us on his favorite golf course. An up-and-coming (but not yet affluent) actor may select a restaurant rather than his too-small, too-modest apartment.

BUT THE PROGRAM has actually gone much farther afield than a local golf club or a midtown specialty shop. In keeping with its credo that "Hollywood" means movie-making rather than any particular locality, the show's been ready and eager to travel wherever stars are making pictures, and has already made jaunts to Japan and France for that purpose.

In Paris the show taped sequences with such stars as Joanne Woodward, Melina Mercouri and Michele Morgan.

In the Orient, where "Here's Hollywood" became the very first American program to tape a show with a Japanese TV crew, the interviewees included such well-known Orientals as Yves Montand, Edward G. Robinson, Sessue Hayakawa (how'd he get in here?) and Shirley MacLaine.

The effervescent Miss MacLaine did enough talking in one interview for several weeks of shows, a fact which will surprise no one in Hollywood who's ever asked her any kind of question, including "How are you?"

The bulk of "Here's Hollywood" programs will continue to be taped in California, but during the coming months it's expected that trips will also be made to location sites in England, Italy and Sweden. We suppose the idea of a program's calling itself "Here's Hollywood" and then opening with an interview outside Westminster Abbey or along the Thames embankment sounds like one of those paradoxes Sidney Skolsky delights in ribbing. But don't get us wrong. We love Hollywood.

NTA Management Scores a Victory Despite Verbal Brickbat Barrage

Management of National Telefilm Associates, with the overwhelming majority of proxy votes on their side, stood up to a barrage of dissident stockholder attacks at NTA's annual stockholders meeting.

The verbal brickbats were swamped by the votes, which saw every management proposal adopted and the management board of directors slate elected.

Prexy and board chairman Oliver Unger was matter of fact about the problems of the company, which last year resulted in a loss of $7,001,891. He held out hope in NTA's deal with Home Entertainment Service, a toll tv system which will be unveiled for the first time today (Wed.) in a Los Angeles press demonstration.

Leonard Davis, who is leading a proxy battle against National Theatres & Television, was one of the dissident holders at Monday's (3) meeting. He and his attorney again challenged the legality of selling WNTA-TV, Newark, N.Y., the sole remaining tv station of NTA, without first obtaining a two-thirds vote of NTA stockholders. His debate with management apparently rested on the definition of what is a major asset and what is an integral part of the firm's business. Management said that it does not plan to obtain a two-thirds okay of the holders and expressed hope that Davis' position would not serve as a "threat" to potential customers.

Davis' line of questioning seemed to be aimed at gaining ammunition for his proxy battle with NT&T management. NT&T, which voted on the side of NTA management, holds 38% of the outsanding stock of NTA. Dissident holders questions related to the adopted proposals to authorize an increase the authorized capital stock, to approve a restatement of the capital accounts, and to approve the restricted stock option plan.

Milton N. Leeds, who was voted as a director of the company, was questioned about his association with the Home Entertainment Service toll tv system. Leeds, who has an interest in the system, declined to go into details of his toll tv deal with NTA management for competitive reasons.

A constant refrain from one of the dissident holders was if management is good, how did the company lose $10,000,000? Unger responding to the question blamed the altered syndication situation, the heavy write-down of inventories, and the $2,500,000 yearly paid by NTA in interest on financnig. He said if the company could substantially reduce its interest payments "we would be in a profit position." The sale of the station properties, he said, would reduce obligations and bring in cash. To a hypothetical $8,000,000 figure for the WNTA-TV, AM & FM properties, Unger said the company would net about $2,000,000 in cash and $6,000,000 in the reduction of debts.

Unger, in response to a question, said WNTA-TV now is turning a small profit. He declined to discuss the sale of the station on the grounds that negotiations are now in progress.

Reporting on the first 13 weeks of the current fiscal year, Unger said that company's loss was $104,700 as against a loss of $854,700 during the first quarter of the prior fiscal year. "Business during the second quarter has been disappointing. It is expected, however, that certain major transactions will be completed during the third quarter of the year which will result in a better showing than we have had up to now," he added.

Total income for the 13-week period in the current fiscal year was put at $5,166,943 compared with $5,205,590.

NTA Returns 100 Pix

National Telefilm Associates prexy Oliver Unger revealed that NTA has renegotiated its deal with 20th-Fox.

The renegotiated deal provided for the reduction of $9,260,000 debt owed by NTA to 20th-Fox and the return of distribution rights to Fox of 100 motion pictures.

Robot Rhubarb

Chicago, April 4.

What's the union for robots? That's what WBKB here has to find out before it can use one for "personal appearances" this week.

Station is confronted with a new jurisdictional dispute between NABET and IATSE over who's to operate the remote controls, an engineer or a stagehand. The robot in question is one developed by Screen Gems to promote ABC-TV's "Flintstones." It's a 300 pound mechanical replica of the character, Fred Flintstone.

"Real life" cartoon will tour the ABC-TV affils after making its debut on the Chi station.

Hackett & Junkin In Org Expansion

Sturm Studios, producers of animated and "live" commercials, is being reorganized and expanded to enter the fields of programming production, syndication and other activities, under the aegis of newly-appointed prexy Harold Hackett and exec v.p. Raymond Junkin.

William Sturm, who started the studios 12 years ago, remains as v.p. Orestes Calpini is secretary and George Richfield, treasurer.

One immediate area of expansion will be the field of tv cartoon programming, with pilots slated for production. Future plans also include the formation of several new divisions within the framework of the company, divisions relating to purchase of outside properties, syndication facilities, and production of filmed series. Paralleling the expansion there will be no let up in the planned expansion of current commercial cartoon biz, it was emphasized.

Hackett assumed the presidency following a one-year tenure with Sales Programs, Inc. Prior to that he was prexy and chairman of the board of Official Films for eight years, leaving Official in '60. Before that he was for 19 years v.p. in charge of radio and tv for Music Corp. of America.

Deal was made by ABC's international prexy Donald W. Coyle, and Norman Pentreath, boss of Difusion. Channel 11 goes on the air in June.

B.A. deal brings to eight the number of Latino countries where ABC International is associated with video outlets.

SG TO PUT ON AN INT'L CONFAB

For the first time in its history, Screen Gems' international division will stage a world meet of its foreign representatives. Confabs, slated for the week of June 25 in N.Y., underscores the growing importance of the foreign market to vidfilmeries.

Attending will be the N.Y.-based foreign division, topped by v.p. Lloyd Burns, and the following from other countries: Steve Krantz, v.p. and general manager, Screen Gems, Canada; Joe Joel, managing director, Australia; Harold Winston, general manager, Mexico, and supervisor of Latin America operations; George Blaug, European sales manager; Alwin Zecha, v.p. and general manager, Japan; Helios Alvarez, sales manager, Brazil; and Bruce Ledger, director of business affairs, SG, Canada.

Currently, SG has from 50 to 60 series contracted in the foreign field among 52 countries. Vidfilmery currently is in negotiations on several vidtape and film projects to be made in England and Canada, and possible coproductions in Latin America.

Britain's Bevins Nixes Censorship, Tagging of Vidpix

London, April 4.

Reginald Bevins, the Postmaster-General, has thumbed down a plan for censorship of tv and radio programs. He has also rejected suggestions that tv films should be tagged with "X," "A," and "U" certificates as is the practice in the British cinema. Bevins admitted that he had received "a very wide range" of demands for tighter control on programs.

In a written reply in Parliament he outlined the wide and varying complaints, suggestions and representations that had been made to him. These representations covered practically every type of program. Said Bevins: "If I had accepted these and other suggestions I should have become a general censor, interferring in, or banning a large proportion of programs."

U. of Michigan Series on Bard

Ann Arbor, April 4.

A 15-program series entitled "Plays of Shakespeare" is being offered to the stations throughout the nation by the Univ. of Michigan Television Center. The half-hour films will feature U of M Professor Arthur Eastman, who teaches a course in Shakespeare, as host and commentator.

On each program, Eastman will discuss the plays, pointing up their major elements, the main characters and their significance. Actors will play the major roles and the big scenes to supplement Eastman's commentary.

Individual programs will be devoted to "Macbeth," "Merchant of Venice," "Romeo and Juliet," "Richard II," "Henry IV," "Much Ado About Nothing," "Othello," "Twelfth Night," "King Lear," "Antony and Cleopatra," "Tempest" and "Hamlet." In addition, one program will consider the thought of Shakespeare's world with illustrations from such plays as "Troilus and Cressida" and "Julius Caesar." Another program will treat Shakespeare as artist and craftsman.

11 Shows Already Set, Two More On Tap as SG Preps '61-'62 Start

Scorecard on national deals for Screen Gems now reads 11 shows set for next season, with the possibility of at least two being added before the network nighttime schedule is firmly locked.

Returning are the following: "Dennis the Menace" "Donna Reed," "Flintstones," "Route 66," "Naked City," and the three Kellogg national spot shows, "Yogi Bear," "Huckleberry Hound," and "Quick Draw McGraw." CBS-TV has scheduled repeats of "Father Knows Best" for next season.

New shows sold to date include "Top Cat," Hanna Barbera cartoon series, ABC-TV; and "The Hathaways," ABC-TV. The "Hazel" show, starring Shirly Booth, still is felt to have a good chance. Show is under option by Procter & Gamble.

Another shoo-in for SG is its NBC-TV coproduction, "Daring Deeds of Donny Dru," a kidult fantasy, slotted for Sundays at 7 p.m.

Season now unwinding found SG with 13 shows at the start in the fall. It probably will have a similar number for the '61-'62 fall start.

LEWIS VS. LORETTA SUIT FORMALLY DISMISSED

Hollywood, April 4.

Tom Lewis' suit against Loretta Young for alleged mismanagement for Lewislor Films Inc., which produces Miss Young's teleshows, settled out of court year ago and was formally dismissed yesterday (Mon.) in Superior Court at Lewis' own request. Action was filed three years ago when Lewis sought to dissolve the corporation, claiming then that he had been excluded from a voice in company control.

In allegations, he charged Miss Young and others with "dishonesty, mismanagement and unfairness" in their dealings with him. The actress denied all the allegations and charges.

Assets of the company had been split between the two five years ago, and Miss Young held that Lewis was not entitled to an accounting. Reported yesterday (Mon.), Lewis also received additional consideration on the settlement.

POST-'48s IN FULL TV BLOOM

Agencies Turn Deaf Ear to Oaters

Lack of Hollywood excitement about new oater series for tv is reflected along Madison Ave., too. Which came first can be a matter of debate, the dropping out of the western market either along Mad row or Hollywood, but according to sales execs making the Manhattan rounds, the agency-sponsor interest in western-style shoot-'em-ups has reached a low point.

"Few agencies, if any, want to buy into a new western," was the comment of one sales exec. He added there always will be some entries in the category and the more successful oater returnees will stay on the air. But as to new ones, "we're on the downward curve, if not at the bottom of interest," the sales exec stated.

Only three western pilots were produced for the '61-'62 season by Hollywood's seven major vidfilm producers.

Ted's 'You Cott to be Loyal' Finds Cooperstein 'Man Without a Station'

The tension surrounding the offered sale of WNTA-TV, Newark-N.Y., seems to have exploded around one Ed Cooperstein, a director with the station for 10 years, now a "man without a station."

Management and Cooperstein are at odds in their version of what happened. Whatever the facts, Cooperstein is out and the Directors Guild of America's arbitration machinery will be called into operation to sift the facts and render a judgment.

What touched off the fracas was Cooperstein's attendance at a Trenton meeting called by Governor Robert Meyner. The Tuesday (28) meeting was called to discuss New Jersey's stake in the possible sale of the channel and possibly to gain financial backing for a New Jersey group obtaining the outlet. (There will be another meeting of the New Jersey group Friday (7) in the capital, with the state's Congressional leaders, civic, educational and business officials due to attend.)

Cooperstein attended that Tuesday morning meeting. He was due to report to work at 2:30 p.m., but anticipating that he might be late he got another director to cover for him in the control room from 2:30 to 4 p.m., when a movie was to be telecast. Cooperstein claims that's standard operation procedure with directors at the station. Station manager Henry White claims not so—if the program director also is not informed. Station v.p. Ted Cott charges that Cooperstein used this device to cover up his attendance at the meeting.

The disagreement about that one point is illustrative of the differences on other points—varying from Cooperstein rendering a written report on what transpired at the Trenton meeting, Cooperstein signing a pledge that he would not discuss the internal operation of the company with anyone, to the time limit, if any, on signing such a pledge.

Cooperstein long has been associated with educational tv in New Jersey, working in conjunction with the Newark Development Council for a UHF educational channel. He says he didn't represent WNTA-TV at the meeting. (Cott contends that upon learning of the meeting he called the Governor's secretary and was told that WNTA-TV had a representative there. Cooperstein says he attend-

W. Germany Seen As Lucrative Area For Vidfilm Sales

The turnabout in Western Germany, resulting in each state preparing to go on the air with a second channel, is setting the stage for a more lucrative West German market, according to Angela Cuthbertson, manager of Fremantle's London office.

Miss Cuthbertson, in N.Y. for home office confabs, cited Germany as the most lucrative market for vidfilmeries on the European Continent. The turnabout in Western Germany refers to the Federal government being forced by the courts to drop its planned second network, resulting in each state moving in with a second channel to fill the vacuum.

Miss Cuthbertson, whose territory includes Germany, said she already has sold "RCMP" to the Hamburg outlet which should be ready to go on the air in June. New Stations in Munich and Frankfurt hope to begin telecasting in May and July, respectively.

German market can bring $1,000 to $2,000 per episode and in rare instances $3,000 per half-hour, she explained. Other than in Italy, most European countries still are a good ways off from putting a second channel on the air, she added. In Italy, the second network, another government operation, is due to begin telecasting in October or November of this year.

European market, she opined, is looking for lighter entertainment, not thrillers, and especially not violent vidpix. Practice in Germany is to buy odd quantities, buying a few episodes initially and if the series clicks adding other episodes for a 26 half-hour edition.

Banks Dote On 'Image' Programs

Image-hungry sponsors like tv pubaffairs shows more than ever, to judge by banks and saving companies sponsor deposits at CBS o&o's.

Lincoln Savings of Los Angeles has signed for four 90-minute dramatic vidtaped specials on KNXT. First Pennsylvania Banking & Trust of Philadelphia with half of four WCAU-TV one-hour specials, and Oak Park Savings of Chicago, with bi-weekly "WBBM-TV Views the Press." Week after week, more and more post-'48's are being added to the available-to-tv pix bundle. With 20th-Fox selling off another 88 pix and Metro due to open up its post-'48 tv guns, there's only Paramount and Universal to hear from.

In the foreign field, Intercontinental Television, the subsid of the Walter Reade Organization, is out in the field with an initial pix package. RKO General, in a specialized package, is offering a group of opera pix, gathered from a variety of overseas sources for telecasting in the fall.

In short, predictions of the post-'48 bloom is being borne out. Spring of '61 finds the short supply of new pix product a thing of the past. There already are some solid trends in the post-'48 field, as well as some off-shoot branches hardly expected.

What is apparent at this point in time—about six months after the big post-'48 distribution push—is that prices for post-'48's while higher than the vaultees are not as high as initially sought. How much more monies the post-'48's bring varies from package to package and market to market. Prices, though, in today's post-'48 market are more realistic, set at figures in which the buyer and seller can come to terms. For awhile, there had been hold-out situations in market after market, with the sellers at the one end of the pole and the buyers on the other.

It is of more than passing interest to note that Seven Arts Associated, which bought the Warner Bros. post-'48 pix for about $110,000 per pic less than a year ago, paid $72,727 per pic for its 20th-Fox post-'48 bundle in its deal last week. The lower price may be due to titles, star values, etc., yet it also may be due to Seven Arts' recognition that the syndication market has some price limits and if these are to be met, the initial purchase price, too, must be lower.

The 20th-Fox deal, from another viewpoint, also is of interest. For the first time in syndication, 20th-Fox has sold away from National Telefilm Associates. NTA distributed the 20th-Fox vaultees and made the first deal on 20th-Fox's post-'48's, which numbered about 50 pix. NTA, running in the red, and in the midst of a multiplicity of problems, might not have wanted to take on more pix at this time. But if 20th-Fox can turn away from NTA at this juncture, the question is raised about future moves of 20th-Fox and the future pix supply for NTA.

Currently, the list of majors out in the market with post-'48's embraces Columbia Pictures, United Artists, and Warner Bros., as well as 20th-Fox. There's no indication when Paramount may move, but it's of interest to note a report of Paramount post-'48's figuring in the projected sale of WNTA-TV, Newark-N. Y. Understood NTA expressed an interest in the post-'48 Paramount pix, in connection with David Susskind-Paramount bid for the station.

What wasn't forecast in the pre post-'48 era was a network showcase for the recent pix, as will be experienced next season on NBC-TV Saturday nights. Success of that showcase could be the most meaningful single event in the post-'48 pix era.

Weisberg To Trans-Lux

Robert Weisberg, formerly associated with TV Stations Inc., has joined the Trans-Lux organization as an exec.

Announcement of Weisberg's appointment made no mention of what he would do at Trans-Lux, but it's reported that he will head up a syndication operation which will sell locally-originated shows to other stations.

At TV Stations, Weisberg was exec in charge of buying film for member stations.

Situation Comedies Lead the Pack (20 in All) as H'wood Vidfilmeries Turn Out 47 Pilots for '61-'62 Ride

Hollywood, April 4.

The seven major Hollywood vidfilm plants produced about 47 pilots for next season, with situation comedies commanding nearly half of the pilot entries.

Of the 46 pilots, 20 are situation comedies, nine fall into the action-adventure category, eight are concerned with policeman-detective-crime, three are westerns, and six don't fall under any single programming umbrella other than that of diversity.

Screen Gems and Desilu are the most prolific producers of pilot material this semester with 10 apiece. Arnaz & Co. leads the pack as a source of prospective merriment with seven comedies. Screen Gems is the adventure leader with three. Metro is the offbeat specialist, with three. Twenty-five of the pilots are for the half-hour format and 21 are would-be hourlongers, indicating the phenomenal growth of that form.

Here are the particulars, via category: Screen Gems has designs on the nation's funnybone with "The Hathaways" (Peggy Cass, Jack Weston and the Marquis Chimps, Ezra Stone producing, on the ABC beam) "The Daring Deeds of Donny Dru" (a Green-Rouse nugget about a moppet Mitty, starring Scott Lane, Del Moore and Jeff Donnell); "Hazel" (based on Ted Key's SatEvePost cartoons, whipped up by the "Dennis-Menace" creative unit, starring Shirley Booth), and "His Model Wife" (a Tony Owen mirth package with Jeanne Crain and John "Lucky" Vivyan).

At Four Star, they are amused by "Mother Is a Freshman" (Gertrude Berg and Cedric Hardwicke, for CBS-General Foods); "The Jimmy Durante Show" (in which the Schnoz couples with Eddie Hodges); "The Jane Powell Show" (a sophisticated romanticomedy brightened by the prospect of Miss Powell's singing voice and Pepsi-Cola's money), and "The Secret Life of James Thurber" (with Orson Bean as the great humorist of our time).

Desilu's seven happy (half) hours are "The Joey Bishop Show" (NBC- bound out of the Danny Thomas comic stable); "Mickey and the Contessa" (a Cy Howard creation with Eva Gabor and Mickey Shaughnessy); "The Holidays Abroad" (Josef Shaftel-produced effort starring Dan Duryea as a globetrotting columnist); "Always April" (an Anso—Ann Sothern—

RIDGEWOOD LANES OPENING
With Dennis James, Marie Torre, others Producer: Mitchell Grayson
Director: Don Carney
30 Mins., Thurs., (30) 8:30 p.m.
WPIX-TV, N. Y.

The opening of the chain-operated Ridgewood Lanes bowling alley ("another Lance Lanes Family Center") in the Borough of Queens was aired for the edification of Greater New York's vexing millions by WPIX-TV, and in prime time too. Guest-star studded or no, this kind of half-hour blurb should be restricted to a closed-circuit.

Host Dennis James opened with the exclamation that the 90-alley layout was the most magnificent place he'd ever been in his life. And hostess Marie Torre, video columnist for the N. Y. Herald Tribune, appeared a bit worried lest viewers "wonder what I'm doing here tonight away from my typewriter."

Besides James and Miss Torre, guest talent included heavyweight boxing champ Floyd Patterson, comics Paul Winchell and Phyllis Diller, Gretchen Wyler, Harry Hershfield, Gene Rayburn and Mr. Double-Talk, Al Kelly. Only one who seemed to really fit in was the witty comedienne Miss Diller, who told a nervously acquisitive Miss Torre that she had come figuring it would be a good place to lose a couple of children.

While it was primarily a giant salaam to the benevolent Lance interests, there was plenty of room for the sidewise plugola. Miss Diller got in a word for the Bon Soir where she's appearing; Miss Wyler and Rayburn laid it on for "Bye Bye Birdie," which they go into April 9; and ventriloquist Paul Winchell made an extensive pitch for a new bumpless girdle snap which he dreamed up between tv turns and is putting on the market. Denise Darcel, who's booked at the Empire Room, was billed but didn't show.

There was a vidtape insert with heady endorsement from community leaders for upstairs club rooms, and Al Kelly double-talked a bowling exhibition featuring Floyd Patterson, Phyllis Diller and champ bowlers Buzz Fazio and Marion Ladewig. It was a fiasco with the inscrutable Kelly easier to follow than the action, what with folks mugging, waving and even dancing on the lanes. Bill.

THAT ITALIAN LOOK
With Lee Phillip, others
Exec Producer: Hal Fisher
Producer: Harold Wallace
Director: Phil Bondelli
30 Mins.: Tues. (28), 6:30 p.m.
PERMA-LIFT
WBBM-TV, Chicago (film & tape)
(Cluttenden)

Those twice a year fashion unveilings in Rome that are so momentous to followers of the haut clothing trade aren't as grand and glamorous as they're cracked up to be. That's the unintended revelation in Lee Phillip's first-time-ever film on the recent spring couturier openings in Italy. The "big, exciting night" Miss Phillip kept promising turned out to be a rather businesslike, and visually drab, affair—except perhaps for the costumes. It was disturbing, if not ludicrous, to see the U.S. fashion reporters (or whoever attends on the sidelines) looking so blase and uncomfortable in their chairs vis-a-vis Miss Phillip's zeal and flow of hyperbole.

In the end, the value of this prime time special to any viewer was left to depend on the intensity of her (or his) interest in the latest high fashion designs. Show was best when it stuck to a straight presentation of the fashion display and poorest when it tried to be a documentary, as at the beginning, in tracing a day in the life of a Rome model. This was patently an artificial and pointless gambit.

When commentating on the fashion show itself, Miss Phillip, who is undoubtedly Chi tv's top femme personality, did a commendable job. But she had to strain to describe the one thing black and white television couldn't illustrate for her. And, complicating things, the hallmark of the whole new Italian trend, as she found herself reiterating, was color. Tint might have made all the difference. Les.

THE CHARLIE DRAKE SHOW
With Carl Bernard, Michael Ward, Victor Platt, Hugh Lloyd, Robert Perceval, Charlotte Mitchell, Stuart Saunders, Michael Peake, Tutte Lemkow, Jay Denyer, Michael Greenwood
Producer: Ronald Marsh
Writers: Drake, Richard Waring
30 Mins.; Thurs., 7:30 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

For this new half-hour skein, miniature gagster, Charlie Drake, sets out to guy a string of action heroes. This one took as its target the local tv series, "The World of Tim Frazer," which centered on dubious characters who might, or might not, be spies. Drake was a security officer at a top-secret factory. Everyone, to him, was a spy, and he even inspected colleagues for identification marks in unlikely places. His wife was behaving in a highly nervous fashion, and he suspected her of trafficking secrets with the enemy, but he could never catch her at it.

The situation lent itself to some simple japes, bringing forth the odd yock. But there was a glaring absence of wit, and Drake had to get through with plentiful use of his comic gimmicks—sudden rage, pseudo-refined diction, and his catch-phrase, "Hello, my darlings." This wasn't really enough to disguise the feeble invention of the script. Real trouble was that a take-out of this nature needs a dab of satire to make it stick. Horse-play didn't satisfy.

In fact, it's time for Drake to stand back and take a long, cool look at his personality and its potentiality. Embedded somewhere there's an individual clowning ability, but scripts like this one don't allow it to bloom. The error seems to be that he should be involved in everyday situations, where his improbable size, pathos, and belligerence would shine by contrast. In fantastic tales like this one, he just doesn't stand out.

Ronald Marsh's production squeezed the fun until the pipe squeaked. Minor thesps were okay, despite an overplus of grimaces. Otta.

RABAA ADAWAYAH
Cast: Fatma Zein, Nihad Dallii, Yakoub Abou Gazale, Adnan Ajlouni, Therda Doubsy, Bashshar Kadi, Najwa Soudki
Producer-Director: Nizar Sharabi
Writer: Tahar Abou Fasha
Music: Ryed Sounbati, Mohamed El-Moji, Kamal Tawil
Time: Monday, 9:30 p.m., 2 hours
TELEVISION DAMASCUS

The story of Rabaa Adawayah, now a Moslem saint, is one of the great sagas of the Arab World and its presentation during the Ramadan Feast ranks as a major tv event in Araby.

Rabaa's is a story of faith and the love of God. She lived in the 10th century during the last days of the Arab Empire, the Abbasseena Dynasty, when Bagdad was the capital. The Empire was dying of corruption and licentious living and women were chattels. Her family was poverty stricken and she was the fourth daughter (hence the name—Rabaa means fourth), with no sons. If nothing else, she received a thorough religious training. Losing her family in the plague, she set out on the desert, was picked up and claimed by a tavernowner who catered to the moneyed gentry. Possessing a beautiful face and voice, Rabaa was put to work immediately in the tavern and thus began the series of tests of her faith. She refused to cater to the whims of the customers, a service that was customarily supplied along with food and drink. When told to obey, Rabaa answered that her only master was God. This was her answer to all subsequent masters, despite beatings and torture. Her faith changed the life of every man, who owned her, for the better. The final master, the Prince, after she declined to marry him, freed her under his protection and she lived out her days in a Spartan-like manner, still influencing for good.

Tahar Abou Fasha provided a good script and the cast from the Damascus Theatre did fairly well by it, though at times some seemed awed by the event. The sets and lighting matched the script. The direction kept the show from being stilted and maudlin, while preserving the classical Arabic style. The handling of the big tavern scene brought out all the subtleties of the wanton wastefulness of a decaying feudal system and was highlighted with humor and pathos. The only film bit, part of the desert scene, didn't quite come off and could have been eliminated.

The cast, while not great, was more than adequate. Fatma Zein, as Rabaa, had a tendency to overplay some of her emotional scenes, but otherwise delineated the strength, that came from Rabaa's faith, simply and effectively. Nihad Kalii's characterization of the tavernowner started out as a sort of 10th century Arabic Toots Shor, but he settled down finally, giving the part a gruff tenderness. Yakoub Abou Gazale played the Prince and made a deft transition from an arrogant Feudal lord to a human being.

Rabaa's songs were synchronized by Miss Zein to a recording by the greatest living singer of the classical Arabic style and language, Om Kalsoum. Bowr.

APPOINTMENT WITH CECIL KING
With Malcolm Muggeridge
Director: Eric Harrison
30 Mins.; Fri., 10:30 p.m.
Granada TV, from Manchester

This was a near-perfect sample of how not to conduct an interview. Cecil King, boss of the Daily Mirror newspaper outfit, has just acquired control of the Odhams magazine-publishing empire, and this makes him the biggest thing in print this side of the water. Amongst other things, he has a near-monopoly of woman's fodder, plus two daily and two Sunday sheets. A retiring character, he confessed to shirking the limelight. Consequently, Granada TV can be congratulated on capturing him at a time when his policies and plans have vital public interest.

But there's many a slip between the cup and the lip. And the half-hour turned out a frustrating bore, largely due to the intrusive personality of interviewer Malcolm Muggeridge, who asked long, and fairly relevant, questions, but wouldn't let King answer them satisfactorily. Muggeridge, who disclosed his interest as columnist for the Sunday Pictorial, one of King's sheets, made the fatal mistake of posing long-winded questions, to most of which King could say little but yes or no. When the subject seemed inclined to expand, Muggeridge bull-dozed his way into the response. Consequently, King remained practically as anonymous at the end as he was at the beginning.

There were tantalizing sidelights. King firmly stamped on all the monopoly talk, affirming that if he tried to project any outlandish ideas of his own through his publications, his business would go phut. He wasn't too forthcoming on the Daily Herald, the Socialist sheet he's just bought, as its future direction is still being assessed. He claimed his uncle, Lord Northcliffe, as his inspiration, and came out against restrictions on press interviews.

King, in fact, made an amiable impression, as far as he was permitted to register at all. His sincerity and mild humor were fetching, and his appearance must have allayed a lot of fears.

But Muggeridge didn't cut deep, and he allowed King to do a lot of side-stepping. The result, as indicated, was a fine chance missed, and infuriating to those who wanted to get to grips with the shadowy tycoon, without the smoke-screen of Muggeridge's halting and interminable verbiage. Otta.

TEMPO DI MUSICA
(Music Time)
With Lea Massari, Gianni Agus, Johnny Dorelli, Gisella Sofio, Giustino Durano, Maurice Chevalier, Macario, Franca Valeri, Rascel, others
Producer: Lucio Ardenzi
Director: Daniele D'Anza
Writers: Luciano Salce, Ercole Patti
90 Mins.; Wed., 9:15 p.m.
RAI-TV, from Rome

Lack of clear ideas on what this show should be has resulted in a curious and unsatisfactory melange of its two main elements: oft-biting satire of Italy's fascist days, and a nostalgia for certain non-political aspects of that era. Major production effort was thus smothered by a lack of substance. A sleepy commentary didn't help matters much, while some of the humor directed mainly at blackshirts foibles often backfired via a tasteless approach: the targets, as viewed here appeared strangely harmless and even pathetic.

Several major Italo names were rung in to symbolize the times gone by, and there was a good takeoff of a German musicomedy star by Franca Valeri, but it was only when Maurice Chevalier appeared to sing an anachronistic (we were supposed to be in the '30's) potpourri of songs, mainly from "Gigi" and "Can Can," that the show got a decided lift.

Director Daniele D'Anza, who has turned out some topnotch efforts, must be blamed, at least in part, for the show's spotty impact, though one suspects that the major trouble was more basic. Technical credits were good. Hawk.

The second show in a series, following a fracas (see separate news story) which resulted in censorship of subsequent episodes to render them "inoffensive" to national and/or political sentiments, their stanza showed the hasty last-minute preparations and short rehearsal time. Sketches, which made up the bulk of the first show, were short, continuity jerky, production numbers totally absent—as were several stars — and the accent, consequently, was on a few old songs including the inevitable "Lili Marlene." Ed.

Foreign TV Followups

Sunday Night At The London Palladium

Alan King, smoking, appropriately, a King-sized cigar, returned to head the bill of this Sunday night show pretty confident from past experience of a welcome. He got it, and earned it. The sardonic raconteur with his mordant wit captured his audience with his first gag and never lost it.

King, of course, is more than just a gagster. He's a very expressive actor and director Albert Locke wisely used a number of closeups to give viewers full benefit of the slight sneers, nonchalant throwaway smiles, roving eye and full blast snarls with which he punctuated his patter.

In this show King took the insurance companies apart in brilliant, explosive fashion and then directed his shrewd, observant shafts at the maddening ways of women in general, wives in particular. He wound up with his now familiar description of a tired husband arriving home to be faced with the problem of spanking Junior. But the rest of King's material was new and, apart from being consistently funny, was horribly near the truth.

The rest of the acts made a nicely balanced though not outstanding bill. Songstress, Petula Clark, closed the first half with three songs, "I Want To Be Happy," a new pleasant ballad. "Something Missing" and her own familiar hit disk, "Sailor." This was rather clumsily overtured by a shot of a row full of matelots in the audience. Don Arrol, the emcee, then presented Miss Clark with a Silver Disk to mark the 250,000 sale of "Sailor." This was coyly received, with every evidence of surprise, surprise, though in actual fact it had been announced in the morning paper that it was going to be done. Who was kidding who? Miss Clark is a lightweight but pleasant chanteuse, rather lost on the big Palladium stage.

Kenny Ball's Jazz Men contributed some hip numbers, including Hoagy Carmichael's "Lazy River," and, inevitably their latest disk hit, "Samantha." A wry, slick juggler named Gil Dova nonchalantly did remarkable things with three balls and three clubs and George Carden's girls and boys contributed a couple of neat stints. Emcee Don Arrol's patter was naive and singularly unfunny but he handled the "Beat The Clock" segment with more certainty than his introductions of the artists. Altogether, a fair show, lit up by the comedy of King. Rich.

BREAK OF DAY
(Directions '61)
With Roald Reitan, Mildred Allen, Loren Driscoll, Elaine Bonazzi, Joseph Sopher, John Macurdy, Ray DeVoll, Allen Gildersleeve, Chuck Green, Norman Riggins
Producer: Wiley Hance
Director: William R. Ayers
Composer: George Thaddeus Jones
Musical Director: Glenn Osser
60 Mins.; Sun. (2), 1 p.m.

ABC News & Public Affairs in association with the National Council of Catholic Men made a stab at presenting something new for the Easter celebration with an original hour-long opera composed by George Thaddeus Jones with lyrics by Leo Brady. Unfortunately the presentation didn't measure up to the intention.

The opera, titled "Break of Day," was set in Jerusalem on the day of and after the crucifixion and fictionalized a story of a Roman soldier who attempted to steal the body only to find it gone from the tomb. He was captured in the tomb by other soldiers and was sentenced to die for stealing Christ's body since none believed in the Resurrection.

It was a tale told in basic religioso fashion and Jones' score or Brady's lyrics did little to enhance the telling. The cast, however, was made up of solid vocal talent recruited from the Metropolitan and N. Y. C. Opera Companies. Roald Reitan, Mildred Allen, Loren Driscoll and John Macurdy were among the standout performers.

The numerous scene cuts gave the presentation a choppy effect which the director couldn't seem to overcome. Gros.

NOWHERE FAST
With Jim Jensen, narrator
Executive Producer: Win Baker
Producer-Director: Mel Bernstein
Writer: Harry Durning
30 Mins., Sun. (19) 10:30 p.m.
SPERRY & HUTCHINSON
WBZ-TV, Boston

With metropolitan Boston's highway and rapid transit problems making as much page one copy as President Kennedy's peace corps and Jack Paar's pyrotechnics, WBZ-TV presented a sharp analysis of the hardening rail and road arteries in the Bay State and its capital city.

"Nowhere Fast," the third documentary in Westinghouse Hub outlet's year-long, one-a-month "Complex Community" series of prime time pubaffairs specials, courageously grappled with the transportation dilemma—multi-million dollar expenditures for expressway and transit systems, yet with half a million people going nowhere fast.

Commonwealth's transportation is in "utter chaos," reported State Sen. Mario Umana, chairman of the Mass. Transportation Committee, who also predicted bankruptcy for the New Haven, Boston & Maine RRs unless legislatures "face up to the problems." Gov. John Volpe said Metropolitan Transit Authority's deficit "has gone from $9,000,000 to $22,500,000 in the last several years."

Hub redevelopment planning administrator Donald Graham called for an extension of the rapid transit system. American Automobile Association official, Robert Kretchmar, said the suggestion to ban cars and try to force people to use mass transportation "comes from men who make a profit in mass transportation . . . and it is unrealistic, undemocratic and it won't work".

These statements were skillfully tied together by some first-rate production techniques. Producing braintrust, Win Baker and Mel Bernstein, has had Jim Jensen narrate segments of the program while strap-hanging on a moving subway, sitting in a starkly empty New Haven RR car, and driving an open convertible on the Mass. turnpike. All the time, the jostled Jensen not only maintained his equilibrium, but didn't miss a syllable in his professionally vigorous narrative.

As in previous "Complex Community" programs, scripter Harry Durning's concern for detail, accuracy and pungent phrasing was given visual impact through the lens work of Phil Galligan and Bob Cirace.

Unlike the title of this opus, WBZ-TV's S&H-sponsored series continues to build an enviable reputation in the documentary field by knowing precisely where it is going, and getting there fast. Guy.

Tele Follow-Up Comment

Twentieth Century

A fleeting, peephole view recapturing New York in the '20s, when creativity was in full bloom, made for a fascinating, if all too brief, half-hour on the "Twentieth Century" Sunday night (2). It was a fitting companion piece to "Paris in the 20's" which was one of the highlight installment of last season's series, both of them, incidentally, scripted by ex-Newsweeker, Marvin Barrett.

With swift, pungent observation and reminiscence by Marc Connelly, Stanley Walker (ex-city editor of the N.Y. Herald-Tribune), publisher Alfred A. Knopf and narrator Walter Cronkite, this look-fast-or-you'll-miss-it recap of a fascinating era, notably in its reference to the literary lights of the day, had the benefit of authentic film clips and stills.

It was, of course, the period of the storied Algonquin Round Table lunch & gabfests which numbered Alex Woollcott, Edna Ferber, Dorothy Parker, FPA, Bob Benchley, Charles MacArthur, Harold Ross, Robert Sherwood, George S. Kaufman, Heywood Broun, among others, vividly recreated in Marc Connelly's delightful commentary; it was the period of Eugene O'Neill and the Provincetown Playhouse, George Jean Nathan and H. L. Mencken, of George Gershwin, Fannie Brice and the Follies, of Clark & McCullough, Jimmy Walker, Texas Guinan and Helen Morgan, of Willa Cather and Edna St. Vincent Millay, and it was quite astonishing what flavor and color were jampacked into the brief 30 minutes of retelling.

"Twentieth Century" continues as the most authentic, entertaining and enlightening of the week-to-week historical recaps on tv. Prudential never had it so good.

The Play of The Week

When Samuel Beckett's "Waiting for Godot" was first weighed as a property for "The Play of The Week," National Telefilm Associates execs wondered aloud whether it would go over in Kansas, whether the farmers would understand it, too. Some of the despair inherent in such a question is reflected in the play, currently being telecast by WNTA-TV, Newark-N.Y.

The marvel of the play and its fascination is that most anything about the terror of the human situation can be read into it. The maddening thing about the Beckett excursion is its amorphous quality, its failure to particularize, its repetitiousness. For those wanting an adventure in the theatre, for those willing to give up traditional theatrical forms, there are many compensating moments, wild, original, baffling.

Time and again, though, even from the viewpoint of a fresh adventure, the play loses ground and its strings of tragic, simple music loses the echoes upon echoes it seeks to rumble within the chords of its audience. It is then, that the performances seem like a maddening trick being played on stage.

The small cast was fine, capturing and projecting the spell of their roles. Burgess Meredith and Zero Mostel as two lost vagrant souls had moments of humor, pathos, and low comedy. Kurt Kasznar, who played the Pozzo role on Broadway, was excellent in the vidtaped version. His was a miserable ego, full of spite, scorn and evil, and he succeeded in laying all those qualities bare. Most pitable and frightening was the role of Lucky, his slave, portrayed with fine style by Alvin Epstein, another recruit from the Broadway version. Direction by Alan Schneider helped translate the Beckett experience.

Who is Godot? Why are the characters waiting for him? These are the questions among the many raised and never fully answered. The only response that can be made, as is made by one of the lost souls, is a low groan as an explanation.

Horo.

CBS Reports

An absorbing and fascinating updating of the social, moral and economic fiber that constitutes Britain today was the offering on last Thursday's (30) "CBS Reports," with Eric Severeid's handling of the narration as one of the program's superior attainments. It was a big, immense subject out of all proportion to the storied tight little island, yet what emerged was as provocative as it was enlightening.

"Blood, Sweat and Tears Plus 20 Years" was the awkward handle put on it, but little else in this compelling documentary production suggested awkwardness. At times it was done with a twinkle, but mostly with dead seriousness as it sought out all strata of society for reaction to the profound transition that's taken place in the generation since the war.

Clearly and concisely (made all the more clear and concise by Severeid) it conveyed the sentiments of a people, sometimes baffled and confused (as evidenced by contradictory summation), yet more often triggered to the more abundant life as the laboring class inches into a middle-class consciousness and a car & candy-crazy people (with bad teeth) hug "the tele" and other encroachments from America. It explored the man and woman in the pub, the eccentric, the "hard and angry" protests of the new young playwrights, the barriers to a fuller education, Britain's self-imposed economic strains by shutting herself out of the Common Market, the security system and the Downing St.-White House link; the exodus to Australia and the influx of Jamaicans; the pro & con contradictions of anti-Americanism feeling, capped by a fascinating trip across the Channel at jet-speed.

It was good, exciting talk, matched by equally effective pictorial documentation.

Bell Telephone Hour

To call the NBC-Bell Telephone musical hour wholesome family entertainment in its "Signs of Spring" salute to the season is a bit demeaning, especialy since the Friday (31) outing ended with a serious and musically exceptional seg featuring the Met's ascending dramatic soprano, Birgit Nilsson.

Backed by the Schola Cantorum and Donald Voorhees conducting the Bell Orchestra, Miss Nilsson wound the show including a brilliant excerpt from Rossini's "Sabat Mater." It provided a nice dramatic switch from the preceeding light terp and song routines.

On that lighter side, show featured musicomedy singers Martha Wright and John Raitt (who also hosted), dancers Tommy Rall and Melissa Hayden, vet mime Paul Hartman and The Brothers Four in numbers keyed to Easter and Spring. Brothers Four, folk group that has come into prominence via the unusual expedient of talent as opposed to the big beat in the disk line, were given a good showcasing with four appearances. Hartman, in a circus routine with Miss Hayden and Rall, was not up to his generally poignant miming.

Dobie Gillis

Long on title ("I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier, Sailor or Marine") but short on laughs, this juvenile edition of Phil Silvers' lamented Sgt. Bilko played on two contrived situations that have insured values: mixed identities and boot camp. The combined talents of creator Max Shulman, producer-director Rod Amateau and scripter Joel Kane took more out of it than its inherent worth. Opposites attract to give a spread of comedy the bounce-off quality but here it seemed to be overdone on the high intellect plane to the sacrifice of more elemental humor.

For Dwayne Hickman, the titlist, it was a struggle to rise above the overpowering role of Stephen Franken as the rookie with an IQ higher than Shasta. He gave the show most of its verve and chuckles and displayed a flair for comedy that should give him a preferred position in the casting offices. Hickman played along mostly as a straight for Franken and his beatnik friend, Bob Denver. Taggart Casey as the roaring sergeant and Frank Faylen, Dobie's pater, pulled their own weight in keeping the mood spirited.

Another "Project 20" event, this stanza scored with a brilliant document on the American west in its untamed years between the end of the Civil War and the turn of the century. Here was the frontier as it really was before the myth-makers took over and glamorized it in numberless dime novels, Hollywood epics and half-hour video shows. Perhaps this show will touch off a new cycle of authentic westerns because the raw facts proved to have more dramatic kick than the souped-up legends.

This show told its story by combining a superb narration, written by Philip Reisman Jr. with a poet's sensitivity for the precise colloquial phrase, and a series of still pictures and paintings. Via close-ups on the antique photos, the show managed to evoke the full measure of the heroism, folly and violence that characterized the far west when its promise of riches beckoned the adventurers and the homesteaders.

This hour depicted the gradual conquest of the frontier through the successive migratory waves of gold prospectors, cattle ranchers, railroad builders and farmers. It was vivid history told mainly through the wonderfully rugged and expressive faces of the frontiersman. And, as an aside, the documentary was studded with debunking shafts at the western gods and goddesses, including Kit Carson, Wyatt Earp, Bat Masterson, Billy The Kid, Belle Starr and Calamity Jane. The retelling of the white man's defeat of the Indians was the most powerful and moving sequence of the show.

Having Garry Cooper handle the narration was a perfect piece of type-casting. The veteran player of western heroes was shown against the background of a ghost town, delivering the script in his characteristically underplayed, but flavorsome style. An excellent score by Robert Russell Bennett contributed importantly to the show's impact.

THE STORY OF WILL ROGERS

Writers: Richard Hanser, Rod Reed
Music: Robert Russell Bennett

The Will Rogers legend remains intact. Through deft manipulation of film clips and an affectionate script narrated by Bob Hope, Rogers was brought to life in sharp pictorial and visual terms.

The "Project 20" people are to be commended for portraying Rogers as a full-dimensional character without going overboard in any sentimental directions. Producer-director Donald B. Hyatt lett Rogers on his own and let him be a spokesman via a collection of film clips that brought the cowboy-comedian into clear focus. Rogers' comments on the depression, Presidents Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt came across as barbed and pointed witticisms. Many of the topical comics of today could take lessons from Rogers' style.

Clips from his films, as in a scene with Fifi D'Orsay, and shots of his last airplane trip with Wiley Post, blended hilarity and poignancy in vivid terms. Working with a tasteful script, penned by Richard Hanser and Rod Reed, Bob Hope delivered a commentary that served as an excellent supplement to the stock footage.

Robert Russell Bennett's music also helped to solidify this memorable tribute.

(Ted Bates; BBDO)

NBC-TV came up with a fascinating hour-long basket of Easter Sunday entertainment in "Marine Circus." For this taped excursion into the aquatic wonders at the Marine Studios on Florida's Atlantic coast added up to enjoyable viewing, particularly for the youngsters.

With "Sea Hunt's" Lloyd Bridges on hand to explain the underwater mysteries plus Buster Crabbe and Rosemary Clooney as host and hostess, the color special had some well cast principals. There were the typical "danger of the deep" scenes with copious views of menacing moray eels, octopi and other deepwater denizens.

But producer Ed Pierce went beyond the typical to toss in some imaginative sequences that included an underwater version of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" and a baseball game in which four Los Angeles Dodgers were matched against a porpoise.

Among other highlights was a corking good exhibition of fancy diving by six-male stars. Miss Clooney proved an affable hostess who not only guided viewers around the tanks and pools but found time to warble a flock of tunes in keeping with the surroundings. Her "Ride a Blue Dolphin" and "Porpy the Porpoise" had a delightful, spirited quality.

Crabbe took part in a water ballet which featured Mary Anne Hollingsworth and the Marine Maids. But the years seem to be catching up with him for he was puffing during his lead-in to the Minute Maid juice plug. Judy Joye gave a slick exhibition of skin diving in a bit with Bridges. Comedy diving was provided by the Aquamaniacs.

The taped color was a mite fuzzy on conventional black-and-white sets but not enough to mar the overall image. The Mort Silverstein, Hal Hackady, Don Epstein ably caught the water circus flavor while the original music of Charles Naylor and Hackady was also an asset. Sid Smith's direction was good in the many action sequences. Plugs for Minute Maid and Tupperware Home Parties Inc. were neatly integrated in the continuity.

EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE
NBC-TV, from N.Y. (tape)

(Foote, Cone & Belding)

This show mastered the trick of handling Civil War theme without offending any section of the country. "Not In Vain," which gave the background of Abe Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, was a piece of sentimental and innocuous history, adding very little to the popular legends surrounding that event. Since this show focussed on the North, it seemed to be particularly sensitive about Southern sensibilities. It will be interesting to see if the favor is returned in this series stanza devoted to the South's Robert E. Lee later this month.

The sole dramatic question involved in this half-hour was whether Lincoln would or would not make the speech at Gettysburgh. The plea of a mother, whose son died in the battle there, for the return of another son persuaded Lincoln to make the speech where he laid the stress on the idea of the nation as against the northern advocates of state sovereignty.

Raymond Massey, playing Lincoln for the umpteenth time, brought an appropriate solemnity and simplicity to the role and recited the Gettysburg address without making it a cliche. Others in the cast played competently, but the whole stanza was burdened by self-consciousness as it reenacted the history of a great event.

This new entry from the MGM-TV shop is one of those series that no one will like except the audience. ABC brought in the hour skein as a replacement for "The Islanders" (Sunday, 9:30 p.m.) and while the cops-and-robbers format is nothing new to network tv, the production values and dramatic quality of the preem episode augur well for the series' future.

Initialer concerned itself with the doings of a "Rififi"-type group of burglers who knocked off banks with gay abandon and unquestioned style. The city police force was the adversary and also supplied the stet characters that will continue the sleuthing on a week-to-week basis.

Jack Warden, as a deputy police commissioner, played his role in the best lowercase style demonstrating a rare sense of compassion and understanding for a tv cop. Arch Johnson as his captain was competent although not given much latitude by the script. James Westerfield, as the veteran chief of the burglary detail, had the standout role in this stanza and carried off his duties with true professional ability.

Eric Berry played the English mastermind of the aforesaid criminal elements with elan and dash, his superb casing of the jobs being the key to success for the ring's continued operation. The hoods were eventually nabbed, of course, but not before they had turned the police inside out and the downfall was really due to the experienced observation of the aged lieutenant who solved the crimes from his hospital bed. (He'd been shot in an earlier attempt to grab the heavies).

The script by George Bellak and Joseph Petracca was above average, maintaining interest over the 60-minute span. Character lines were clearly drawn and motivations spelled-out with little confusion. Direction by Herman Hoffman was good, maintaining the pace, with cuts swift and to the point.

Only discordant note was the Duke Ellington score which was too brassy and loud to wear well.

THE OTHER ADOLF
With: Bill Shadel, Robert Lindley, George Bailey, Sidney Darion, others
Producers: Darion, Vincent Dempsey
Director: Jack Sameth
30 Mins., Sun., (2), 3:30 p.m.
ABC-TV (film, tape)

It was not until ABC let the story tell itself, in the last 10 minutes or so, that "The Other Adolf" gained stature or value.

This ABC-TV pubaffairs entry was better than some in the past, but the sum total rates as ordinary. Web served up this half-hour documentary and news program Sunday (2) as preface to the Adolf Eichmann trial in Israel later this month.

While the ABC staffers may have kicked away the economic restraints which, in some measure, has beleaguered them in the past, this time they permitted trivia to hamper the unfolding. F'rinstance, Robert Lindley, recent Latino correspondent acquisition by ABC, wasted footage with a discourse outside the Argentine home where Eichmann lived incognito until spirited back to Israel. The palaver was trifling and the inconsequentials were heightened when commentator Lindley made much of such talk as Mrs. Eichmann setting the dogs on him. Meantime, back in the German terrain George Bailey, who reminds too strongly of the Ed Murrow technique, interviewed Reich nationals on the Eichmann situation.

The program did not come off in its attempt at a study of Eichmann the man, or of German reaction to the forthcoming trial, or of the trial itself. In short, it covered everything—and little—in its 30-minute time span.

Plus values included Jack Sameth's direction. Cuts and fades were better than usual, but there still remained a lack of coordination between the few good moments of sound and the larger segments of film.

Ralston-Purina's Sad Lament: 'Is There a Critic In the House'? —On Other Madison Ave. Fronts

By BILL GREELEY

Ralston Purina is feeling a little lonesome in its efforts to uplift video.

This season the sponsor's ABC-TV series, "Expedition," was turned back to local stations once a month for those who wanted to produce an "Expedition Local." Out of the 77-station lineup, 47 picked up on the plan (the others scheduled syndicated pubservice series), and 37 submitted single entries in a contest run by the network.

Judges from broadcasting and Ralston's Teacher Awards Committee held a final screening late last month for 10 finalists at the Johnny Victor Theatre in the Radio City Exhibition Hall.

Figuring the critics, who have this year more than ever bemoaned the medium mediocrity, would be deeply interested in this extra effort from out yonder, Ralston invited some 30 of the top Metropolitan tv scribes from consumer mags, wire services and New York dailies.

Company didn't expect all 30 to show, but they didn't expect none to show, either, which is what happened.

Each invitation was followed up by a phone call, which elicited from one very prominent newspaper critic the exclaimer, "Five hours of public service? Ouch!" Crix weren't generally as explicit in their turn down, but only two that expressed a desire to cover were able to offer legitimate excuses for not making it.

Company spokesman says that practically all of the 10 finalists are metropolitan market quality (winners will be announced soon), and feels there's surely something there that would have been a copy antidote to the medium's hoof and gumshoe disease.

If the climax was a bomb via crix indifference, the local idea still had its compensations. When Ralston reps offered the plan to ABC last summer, nobody expected even a dozen stations would take part. The 47 that did represent all the major markets and some surprisingly small ones—Boise, Bakersfield, Monahaus, Mt. Washington, Klamath Falls, Fargo, and others. Several, via local sponsor interest, were able to pass on Ralston's offer of a third sponsorship of the 13 half-hours. Production budgets ranged from $300 to $5,000 a stanza.

And for ABC, the monthly locals provided a bankrolled answer to former FCC Commissioner Doerfer's primetime pubservice plan.

Web plans to give the best shows a summer replacement run. Ralston is hoping maybe a critic or two will take a look.

Pitchmen's Pitchmen

American Association of Advertising Agencies has okayed a public relations campaign on behalf of advertising which has been recommended by the org's p. r. council, Hill & Knowlton.

H&K has based the recommended campaign on a four-month study of public opinion toward advertising. Study included "depth" interviews of opinion leaders in six areas, including university economists and sociologists, business executives, writers, government officials and clergymen. Firm also considered recent opinion polls, current literature and opinions within the ad industry.

With the Station Reps

NBC Spot Sales lost its first station via the Government order to shed other than o&o's from the rep list with the announcement last week that WAVE-TV-AM, Louisville, would switch to the Katz agency.

Sametime, TvAR formally announced pickup of three of the stations left on the CBS Spot Sales roster. It had been known that WTOP-TV, Washington, and WJXT, Jacksonville, Fla. (Washington Post stations), were joining the Westinghouse Broadcasting house reppery, and the switch of WBTV, Charlotte, N. C., also was announced. Moves are effective June 25.

With acquisition of WAVE, Katz also gets WFIE-TV, Evansville. Both outlets are owned by George W. Norton.

Katz deal may also cause a shakeup in the Green Bay, Wis., situation, where the reppery a year ago took over the CBS affiliate WBAY-TV from Weed. WBAY may have to be dropped for WFRV, which was bought a few months back by the WAVE interests.

Miss Powell's association with Pepsi is mapped for continuation next fall, with tentative preem of half-hour "Jane Powell Show" series, for which web, timespot and co-sponsor are now being sought.

Midgley's 'Take 5, Use 1'

'Eyewitness' Strips Up Flock of Entries Before Making a Decision

Though it's only a one-a-week show, "Eyewitness to History" on occasion makes like a five-a-week strip before coming up with a final choice for its major Friday night story. Such an occasion was the week before last, when the "Eyewitness" staff tackled five stories during the week, with the fifth and final one, the Laotian crisis, getting the nod.

Week started with editing of footage shot at the U. of Minnesota for a yarn on President Kennedy's plan for Federal aid to higher education. Meanwhile, another unit was working on the story of Gen. James Gavin, the new Ambassador to France. On Tuesday (21), that story fizzled because though Gavin had promised cooperation while still in Washington, once he arrived in Paris his embassy staff advised against the show.

On the following day, footage began arriving from Geneva on a projected atom test-ban yarn, but because the story couldn't be told properly with the footage available, that was postponed. On Thursday morning, anchorman Walter Cronkite and producer Leslie Midgley flew to Cape Canaveral by way of Miami and arranged for live cameras to be sent to Canaveral for a story on the Astronauts. Everything was set when word came down about the President's press conference on Laos that day. Cronkite and Midgley dropped the Astronauts story and hustled back to N. Y.—Laos was definitely the next night's yarn.

Though the five-in-one-week case was by far the strongest example of the show's flexibility and selectivity, it's not the only one. Cases of three stories a week have been frequent over the program's 26-week course, and in one case, a complete show—the Japanese elections last fall—was taped and discarded at the last moment in favor of the New Orleans school story.

Midgley, who joined CBS News some six years ago after having been managing editor of Look, a Collier's correspondent and boss of the Paris Herald in 1944 and 1945, sees this sort of frenetic activity as both natural and desirable, since it gives his staff the utmost flexibility and permits them to handle the hottest story of the week at the last minute. But Midgley's conception of news is a broad one, and he sees the Paris fashions, for example, as legitimate a news story as the Polaris missile. So three of this year's "Eyewitness" stanzas have been "soft" news—the Paris fashions and the World Series were two of them.

For Midgley, even in six years, this sort of thing is old stuff. Shortly after joining the network to write the pilot of the Will Rogers "Morning Show," he shifted over to the news operation to head up a then-new special unit to prepare news specials at a moment's notice. Some memorable stanzas—like the one on Cyprus and shortly afterwards, the hour-long show on the Hungarian Revolution and the Suez crisis—followed, and thereafter it was only natural that Midgley's special unit evolve into the nucleus of the "Eyewitness" operation.

VARIETY-ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top ten network shows on a local level and offers a rating study in depth of the top six syndicated shows in the same particular market. This week five different markets are covered.

In the syndicated program listings of the top ten shows, rating data such as the average share of audience, coupled with data as to time and day of telecasting competitive programming in the particular slot, etc., is furnished. Reason for detailing an exact picture of the rating performance of syndicated shows is to reflect the true rating strength of particular series. Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations and/or advertisers to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY. Coupled with the rating performance of the top ten network shows on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every tv market in the U. S

(*) ARB's Nov.-Dec. 1960 survey covered a multi-week period. Syndicated shows sharing one of the weeks with an alternating or special program could not be properly judged for comparative performance. Therefore, Nov.-Dec. data will be limited to those syndicated shows which played in all weeks.

VARIETY - ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top ten network shows on a local level and offers a rating study in depth of the top ten syndicated shows in the same particular market. This week five different markets are covered.

In the syndicated program listings of the top ten shows, rating data such as the average share of audience, coupled with data as to time and day of telecasting competitive programming in the particular slot, etc., is furnished. Reason for detailing an exact picture of the rating performance of syndicated shows is to reflect the true rating strength of particular series. Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations and/or advertisers to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY. Coupled with the rating performance of the top ten network shows on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every tv market in the U. S.

Caldwell's 8 English Indies For Canada Web

Toronto, April 4.

In direct competition to outlets of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., a second web of eight indie English language trans-Canada tv stations has been completed by Spencer Caldwell—if he gets the approval of the board of broadcast governors of the CBC, still smarting at the $750,000 snaffling of the "Big Four" football games this Fall when the CBC dropped out of the bidding.

Rival web will be known as the Canadian Television Network Ltd., according to prexy Caldwell, with eight coast-to-coast stations to form a second tv setup. These include CFTO-TV, Toronto; CFCF-TV, Montreal; CJOH-TV, Ottawa; CJCH-TV, Halifax; CJAY-TV Winnipeg; CFCN-TV,Calgary; CFRN-TV, Edmonton; CHAN-TV, Vancouver.

To start in mid-August—with aforementioned CBC approval—the eight trans-Canada stations have signed up for a microwave hookup after a two-day meeting in Toronto of tv station heads, the initial agreement calling for 10 hours per week of indie network broadcasting, to be increased to 28 hours a week.

Canadian Television Network Ltd. plans to use studios and equipment of their affiliated key stations but will not—as yet—undertake to originate any shows of its own. Network will be in full operation first week of September, said Caldwell.

Canada AFM Blacklists 11 Stations on Pickup of 'Easter Parade of Stars'

Ottawa, April 4.

Eleven Canadian tv and radio stations were denied by AFM the use of CBC-TV's network "Easter Parade of Stars" in aid of crippled children. Show used an estimated $2,000,000 worth of free talent, including Imogene Coca, Gloria De Haven, Juliette, Teresa Stratas, Bob Goulet, Jan Rubes and King Ganam.

AFM blacklist covered stations that had refused to hire union musicians during the past year—and in some cases use only non-union sidemen. AFM supplied, free, 70 musicians and $25,000 worth of music to "Easter Parade of Stars," a spokesman said.

STORER BEEFING UP B'CAST STANDARDS

Miami, April 4.

Ewald Kockritz, Storer veepee and national program director for tv, has been switched to director of broadcast standards and will head up the group's newly-created department of broadcast standards.

With Storer since 1941 and a veepee since '54, Kockritz will report to Stanton P. Kettler, exec veepee for operations. Kettler says the new department, an outgrowth of Storer's quality control department, will allow more efficiency in handling broadcast standards and complex regulatory considerations.

"This isn't a 'watchdog' department," says Kettler. It's a new approach through which we hope to relieve many of the burdens placed on our station personnel. True, the broadcast standards department will serve as a very helpful check point in conforming with all FCC and company standards, but its primary purpose is to be of service to our actual operating people at the station level."

CBS-TV Gets 'Relief' Coin

Some springtime biz came into CBS-TV's coffers last week from R. J. Reynolds and Sinclair Oil, but mostly as relief for other sponsors.

Reynolds has picked up the available alternate half-hour in "To Tell the Truth," which Helene Curtis leaves, and the oil company is buying four Red Skelton half-hours to relieve Johnson's Wax.

Have Another Million, Old Chap

By GEORGE ROSEN

London, April 4.

Great Britain's "new millionaires"—the handful of commercial television impresarios—have got it made so good that they're now dwelling in administrative marble halls. The recently completed ATV House in the Great Cumberland Place sanctuary of Associated Television in London; the soon-to-be-opened ATV Elstree production center representing a $7,000,000 outlay with its multiple studio complex rivalling if not exceeding anything in the world; the grandiose Manchester center of Sidney (& Cecil) Bernstein's Granada TV, are all reflections of the upbeat tv character of Croeses-on-the-Thames.

For that matter, video's "affluent society" in England even spills over into the non-commercial BBC, with its elaborate new Television Center in White City and the extensions to Broadcast House in London. Both on and off the screen, tv is jumping in England.

Par for the course these days for any self-respecting commercial tv programming contractor in Britain (taking, as an example, Associated Television, or Associated Rediffusion, or Granada TV, which in turn could be translated into CBS vs. NBC vs. ABC in the U. S.) is somewhere in the neighborhood of $15,000,000 per year profits. In the case of ATV, the net last year was $16,000,000. For the current fiscal year, which winds up April 30, Val Parnell and Lew Grade, the show biz-minded factotums of the operation, expect it will hit $17,000,000.

What makes it all the more remarkable—and why those shut out of the tv programming franchises handed out by the Independent Television Authority, including the newspaper empires of Lord Beaverbrook and Lord Rothermere, are bitterly resentful of the "new millionaires" after walking away from their own tv franchises years back—is that the projected $17,000,000 represents a 33⅓% net return on the overall gross billings from ATV's television and auxiliary enterprises. These include, for example, vested interests in eight Australian stations, in Halifax and Canada; its major vidfilm operation, its ownership of ITC (which alone makes it the biggest vidfilm distributor in the Eastern Hemisphere with 4,000 half-hours sold in the past 11 months); 50% ownership of Pye Records (one of the four major diskeries in Britain), and sundry auxiliary businesses, such as a British exclusivity on Muzak and Wired Wireless.

To fully appreciate the Midas overtones of a 33⅓% net return on the gross income, one has only to equate it with the CBS corporate figures in the U. S. and its $23,000,000 net last year—a net which required a gross intake exceeding $460,000,000.

Britain's 'Glamor Boys'

With such staggering financial rewards, it's no wonder that the "glamor boys" of Britain comprise the Lew Grade-Val Parnell-Prince Littler-Norman Collins combine at ATV; the Sidney-Cecil Bernstein tv empire in Manchester, or the "mystery man of British finance" Harley Drayton in adding his A-R video (it's just a sideline) to his vast Rediffusion holding company (Wembley Stadium, Chicago Transit, London Transport, coal mines, shipping, etc.).

An updated viewing of British tv suggests that it is now at a stage somewhat paralleling U. S. video about five years ago, before viewer disenchantment set in. Not that British tv is immune from criticism, or that disenchantment on the same scale won't possibly set in a few years hence. Far from it. Save for the fact that the British are more squeamish about the type of violence as exemplified by "The Untouchables" (which nobody would dare buy here), the U. S. vidfilm product on both the BBC and commercial skeins here (which represent altogether about 14% of the programming schedules), enjoy popularity throughout Britain. Tastes are not that much different.

But whereas these constitute, in the main, the bread-and-butter, hour-after-hour fare in the U. S., British tv can hold its head higher in its respect for live programming (totalling more than 60% of the schedules, in contrast to the 88% celluloid dedication on tap for next season in the U. S.). Live drama, mostly in hour form, is a seven-nights-a-week attraction on the British channels, whether out of the ATV, Granada, A-R, Britain's ABC-TV or BBC shop, and most of it constitutes original fare.

The talent is the finest, recruited mainly from the London stage and films, with no name too big. There's a respect for writers, and the writers, in turn, respect the medium (and that also applies to the vidfilm creators, now that the writer fees have been upped to sums commensurate with U. S. scales).

To find the type of free-wheeling expression and experimentation that's to be found in live drama here, one would have to go back to the days of early "Studio One" and "Philco Playhouse" in the U. S. for its equivalent. Last week, for example, witnessed an event in the London tv drama sweepstakes that would occasion hosannahs in America, yet was taken in stride here. It was a Granada Television Playhouse production of a D. H. Lawrence play, "The Widowing of Mrs. Holroyd," never before played professionally in Britain, in any medium. Typical Lawrence of the "Sons and Lovers" period, both in setting and subject, it was an extraordinarily skillful execution of a wholly absorbing play—certainly a far cry from anything ventured on U. S. tv in recent years.

Rock 'n' Roll Passion Play

Sometimes the yen for originality can be carried to extremes here, creating Parliamentary nipups, as for example in the announcement last week of the scheduling of a jive-style Passion Play on the commercial ABC skein. Seventeen M.P.'s stood up in righteous indignation to protest the fact that the play's cast would be exhorted to drink from a chalice with the words:

"Knock it back, fill your heads
It's not worth holding off till you're dead."

The play in question, "A Man Dies," is told in jive and rock 'n' roll, with a 19th-century-old cleric portraying Christ in blue jeans and sweat shirt. Sir Robert Fraser, director-general of the Independent Television Authority, refused to intervene, despite the Parliamentary jitters, though ABC itself had some qualms. However, it did get on the air.

But whether or not, it's an indication of the prevailing excitement and enthusiasm and a shooting-for-something different and new that characterizes the medium here, as opposed to the custom-built trivia emanating from the Hollywood celluloid grind mills.

Which makes it easier to understand, and lends considerable credence, to the gripes from ATV's Lew Grade over the virtual shutout of British product on the U. S. tv screens. In contrast to the 14% U. S.-made fare shown on ATV, there's been a solid wall of U. S. network resistance to Grade's continuing efforts to peddle programs to America, even in the face of evidence of a recent upgrading in the quality.

"They keep telling us that nobody understands the British accent," laments Grade. "And I say this is hogwash. They're simply using it as an excuse because they don't want anything different." He acknowledges that the turndown of British vidfilm product has been somewhat justified over the past few years, dating back perhaps to the days of "Robin Hood," because the shows have been short on quality.

But with the advent of "Danger Man" which finally "made it" and bows this week on CBS-TV; "Adventures of Sir Francis Drake," currently shooting at the leased Warner Bros. studios; the on-location-in-Australia "Whiplash" series and the upcoming "Ghost Squad" series, among others, Parnell & Grade have embarked on a major "shoot the works" undertaking involving in all 10 different series. They have given international vidfilm tooner Lee Harris the go-ahead for 26 installments on each, representing a multi-million outlay, on the strength that sooner or later the U. S. will have to sit up and take notice.

On the basis of the initial three installments of "Drake" as viewed even in rough cut here, there's no denying the qualitative merits of the production. Brought in for some $35,000 per installment, a comparable Hollywood-produced segment of similar quality would represent a minimum tab of $60,000. It's a departure in costume production for tv, combining historical values (based on authentic episodes in the life and times of "the king of the seas"), with a format designed for both youth and adult appeal.

Both the production and performance components are topnotch. It's the economic potential, because of the U. S. attitude and subsequent freezeouts that's disturbing. With the assured British-Canada-Australia sales, there's only a 50% guarantee on recapturing costs from these home and Dominion markets. Without the U. S., it's pretty much of a boneless cause. The ATV production ambitions nipped in the bud. That's why it's become so imperative for Parnell and Grade to break down resistance to British accent.

And that's why Parnell and Grade, in a now-it-can-be-told story, were willing to gamble to the tune of some $20,000,000 to prove their point that with quality product, British accent should prove no U. S. deterrent. Just about a year ago, when Parnell and Grade were trying to sell "Danger Man" to either of the three U. S. tv networks they were rebuffed on all counts. So the ATV impresarios then and there expressed a willingness to buy a full hour weekly on all three webs as a showcase for "Danger Man" and other British product, with ATV taking responsibility for delivering the sponsors. Grade says the proposal never got past the FCC. Subsequently "Danger Man" was sold to CBS-TV, premiering this week, (ironically, as they now recall, it was CBS that put up the strongest resistance a year ago.)

Grade and Parnell are somewhat reconciled to the probability of "Danger Man," for all the virtues they attribute to it, taking a shellacking from its "Price Is Right" competition. Nor does it bother them that the Wed. 8:30 p.m. CBS time has hardly enjoyed the most advantageous warmup during the preceding months of the "My Sister Eileen" tenancy. What is important, however, is how the U. S. audiences react to a purely British-made series. If, as they anticipate, the reaction is favorable, it could finally put an end to the one-way street relationship and final acceptance of British product on the U. S. networks.

Oddly enough the deplorable track record of the made-in-Britain-for-the-U. S.-market telefilms over recent years, it's argued here, stems primarily from the Americans themselves, through production interference and inflicting their own U. S. attitudes on British product. Cited as but one recent illustration: "The Invisible Man," which had a something less than spectacular career on CBS. Had the British been left alone to produce as they saw fit, it's contended, the chances for success would have been considerably enhanced.

The ATV grievances against "U. S. attitudes" goes beyond tv film reaction. For some time the production arm of the company has been projecting a major series of taped specials designed to give U. S. television a universality in scope and dimension. For example, a production of "The Aspern Papers" with Michael Redgrave, to be done on location in Venice, the original locale of the story. Other items proposed: The Vienna Ice Revue, taped out of doors at St. Moritz; the London Palladium Christmas Shows; the famed Lido show in Paris; an origination from the Tivoli Gardens in Copenhagen; from London the Royal Ballet with Margot Fonteyn, and the French Ballet with either Jeanmaire or Colette Marchand. Also the Old Vic Co., which is under contract to ATV, and the Stratford Shakespearean troupe.

However, with the lone exception of a London Palladium special which Val Parnell will produce for an NBC-TV showcasing late in April, the U. S. networks have turned a deaf ear to each and every proposal.

That is why both Parnell and Grade, despairing of

Italo Director Ankles RAI Show In Censor Hassle

Rome, April 4.

The major censorship hassle which has in recent weeks surrounded the Italo tv show, "Music Time" (Tempo di Musica), has culminated in the dramatic walkout of the stanza's writer-director, Daniele D'Anza.

Ankling occurred, according to reports, when D'Anza (rated one of the best video directors in this country) was presented by RAI-TV with censored copy of his script for the third episode in the controversial series, dedicated to the years between 1945-1950 and written in collaboration with Giancarlo Fusco.

Script had been previously okayed by RAI-TV, but recent protests in Parliament and the even more recent personal intervention by Italian Prime Minister Fanfani—who asked that satirical treatment of recent Italo history (with an accent on the fascist years ie "toned down" so as not to be offensive to national susceptibilities—had prompted a second look at material.

D'Anza has now been replaced by a new director, Stefano de Stefani, while a new script is being prepped by "other authors" following co-author D'Anza's protest walkout. Talent slated to appear in upcoming show will presumably be used regardless. Among names originally booked for stanza are Juliette Greco, Johnny Desmond, Carol Danell, Lilian Terry, Piero Piccioni, Walter Chiari, and Carlo Dapporto.

Mpls. WTCN-TV's Unique 'Farewell' as ABC Affil In Plugging Opposition

Minneapolis, April 4.

In an unusually candid newspaper advertising campaign, WTCN-TV is boosting its rival stations and competing networks while promoting its own future program plans.

The Time, Inc.-owned station, which loses its ABC-TV affiliation to KMSP-TV April 15, is running quarter-page institutional ads in Twin Cities papers to explain its position and problems as an independent operator. With rare candor, station points out that it expects to lose some viewers of ABC's shows to KMSP but that it hopes to retain a large share of its audience by telecasting Minnesota Twins' American league baseball games and by stressing news coverage.

Plugging other competitors, WTCN's ads state that many tv fans "will continue to pledge allegiance to the excellent network shows on CBS' WCCO-TV and NBC's KSTP-TV. Still others will seek the intellectual and cultural rewards to be gained by tuning in (KTCA-TV), the fine educational television facility of the Univ. of Minnesota."

Ads note that tv competition in Minneapolis and St. Paul is "keener than in 90% of the cities in America. This makes Twin Cities television better, it makes your free viewing choice more varied—and it makes life tougher for an independent station."

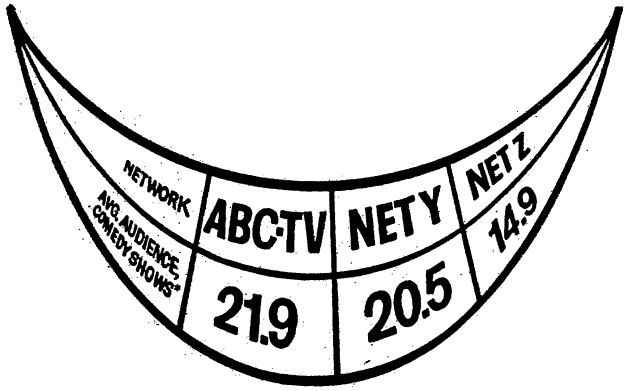
Ads are signed by Weston C. Pullen Jr., Time, Inc. vp. for broadcasting, and Theodore C. Streibert, WTCN vp. and general manager.

JOE LEVINE INTO TV?

Boston Unchainer of Hercules May Produce For Homes

Is Joe Levine, the Boston Barnum, mapping a foray into television?

Understood he may do it on the shoulders of a "Hercules" series, partnering with Martin Ransohoff's Filmways video commercial outfit. Latter is currently producing Levine's first domestic feature, "Boys Night Out." Pair, it's known, have been mulling a tele skein based on one of the Levine properties, with "Hercules" the likely vehicle.



Who's laughing now?

ABC's national audience—and more than any other network audience.*

If the audience doesn't howl, the sponsor will. Hence our broad grin, as we report the situation comedy situation according to the National Nielsen, Jan. thru March*: ABC, as the chart happily shows, leads in average audience. What you're getting, in the way of smiling homes, is 656,600 more of 'em on ABC-TV than on Net Y...3,283,000 more than on Net Z. And for a last ha!, get this: 3 new situation comedies appear in Nielsen's top 15. Two of them are ABC's.†

With Upswing in Editorializing, Senate Mulls New Groundrules For Stations With Political Ax to Grind

Washington, April 4.

A move to lay down some legislative groundrules for broadcast political editorials may emerge from Senate hearings on political complaints against stations during last year's electioneering.

The Senate Freedom of Communications Subcommittee found the so-called "fairness doctrine" almost as sticky a wicket as the equal time provisions of Section 315.

Republican National Chairman Thurston Morton (also junior Senator from Kentucky) posed the issue in griping about the editorial endorsement of the Democratic Presidential slate by New York's WMCA last fall. Morton's complaint was not with the station's right to editorialize, but with the way it promoted the broadcast editorial through page ads in New York dailies and the way it handled GOP efforts to reply.

Morton told the subcommittee that the station nixed Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.) to reply on behalf of Republican nominee Richard M. Nixon because, for unexplained reasons, the Senator could not be billed as official spokesman for Nixon. A seven-minute tape by GOP Vice Presidential contender Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., used across the nation for routine broadcast spots, was then aired over WMCA as the GOP reply.

With Democratic Subcommittee member Gale McGee of Wyoming concurring, Morton said he thought the candidate attacked by an editorial should have the right to select his spokesman when he can't reply personally—as is often the case with busy national contenders. Morton suggested that county, state or national party chairmen be given the right to select spokesmen rather than leave the discretion with the stations.

At the same time, Morton foresaw more difficulties arising in the future from the growing practice of broadcast editorials (62 radio and tv stations endorsed politicos last year, according to Federal Communications Commission). "One of the best publicity gags" a station could essay, Morton said, would be to unleash an editorial blast at a Presidential candidate merely in hopes of snaring him for an exclusive interview in reply.

The GOP chieftain also assailed the page ads bought by WMCA promoting its editorial endorsement of Kennedy. He said this was a way of putting out "clever political propaganda" and deducting it as a regular business expense.

WMCA Board Chairman Nathan Straus and his son Peter, President of WMCA and WBYY in Buffalo, said the Kennedy endorsement was designed "to open some new trails where the FCC has already pointed the direction, but where no broadcaster had cleared the brush or even blazed the trees." They both insisted the station should have the right to choose a spokesman when the unendorsed candidate can't reply.

Joseph M. Nelson, Chief of the Renewal and Transfer Branch of FCC's Broadcast Bureau, stated FCC's policy in support of station editorializing. He said it must be practiced within bounds of the fairness doctrine obliging broadcasters to seek out opposing points of view when they broach a controversial issue of public importance. The fairness doctrine is now mentioned in the Communications Act as a coveat to the 1959 equal time amendments. The caveat added to the amendments exempting news-type programs from Section 315, states that nothing in the amendments relieves broadcasters of their duty to seek out opposite points of view on contentious public issues.

Other notable case bringing the fairness doctrine into play arose from former President Eisenhower's "non-political" speech in San Francisco last fall containing thinly veiled assaults on Kennedy. California Democrat Central Committee Chairman Roger Kent testified that San Francisco stations who carried the speech rebuffed Democ efforts to get air time for a reply. "We were very unfairly treated," he complained. Kent hit at the position of the stations that they had to take the word of then White House news secretary James Hagerty that the Ike speech was nonpartisan. "Not even Hagerty can call a dog a cat and make it stick," was Kent's answer to this stance.

Speaking for FCC, Nelson assured Kent that the whole matter would be held open for examination when the S.F. stations come up for license renewal.

However, Nelson did say that FCC policy leaves it up to the individual licensee to evaluate a speech to determine whether "controversial issues of public importance" requiring balanced treatment are raised.

In shifting through equal time complaints, the subcommittee (actually a subcommittee of the Commerce Committee's Communications Subcommittee) heard Sen. Styles Bridges' peeve against FCC's handling of his equal time troubles arising from his appearance on "American Forum of the Air" broadcast by WBZ-TV (Westinghouse, Boston) last fall. Bridges, joined by Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.), suggested that FCC should have held the appearance exempt from Section 315 under the 1959 amendments instead of requiring WBZ to give matching time to his Democratic Senatorial opponent, Dartmouth Professor Herbert Hill.

The subcommittee, headed by Sen. Ralph Yarborough (D-Tex.), also took testimony of Morris Novik of New York City who took the position that the broadcasting industry is wrong in claiming Kennedy is greatly indebted to the "Great Debates" for his November victory. Ten network tv affiliates and 35 independents didn't carry the talks, and thereby drew "substantial numbers of viewers" away from the debates. Novik was connected with a political educational radio series sponsored by the Ladies Garment Workers Union.

Houston—Victor Junger, formerly with the Houston Post for seven and a half years, has joined the news staff of KTRH.

Hi Brown Reactivates 'Inner Sanctum' As An Hour Radio Strip

Producer Hi Brown, who originated "Inner Sanctum" on network radio and who produced the syndicated video series of the same title, wants to return the mystery anthology to radio, this time as an hour daily strip to be sold market by market.

Radio drama, says Brown, has been a part of the American culture and a way of life for 32 years, and it would be a shame to see it die out.

Brown says he's aware of the success of "My True Story," which is distributed via closed circuit daily by Mutual Broadcasting with a good pick up by local stations, but denies that it has influenced his desire to reopen the creeking door. He points out that "True Story" is a barter deal dreamed up by Ted Lloyd (the 55-minute daily stanza is bankrolled by Belltone for its hearing aids and peddled to stations free for local sale around Belltone blurbs), and he would rather sell "Sanctum" direct to stations. "Story" deal is according to MBS plan, with station feed gratis in return for national sale by the web.

In 1953, Brown produced 39 "Inner Sanctum" half hours which went to syndication. Currently a topper with Production Center Inc., New York film studios, Brown last summer produced the 18 one-hour Chevy mystery series.

Allen Ludden Tapped As Dick Salant Aide

Allen Ludden is leaving the CBS Radio owned & operated stations where he's been "director of program services" to move over to CBS News under boss Dick Salant as "consultant for creative services."

Ludden, who will continue emceeing his Sunday "General-Electric College Bowl," if it stays on CBS, will be concerned, says CBS, with the "creation and development of new information-related programs."

His replacement over at the o&o side will be his former assistant Leon Schlosser.

Also at CBS News, Bill Eames was made the department's first assistant to the tv assignment editor, reporting directly to assignment manager Ralph Paskman.

'Once a Liar...'

By COL. BARNEY OLDFIELD

Once a liar, always a liar—this is what I have to live with since becoming an "on call" type with a CBS-TV weekly opus tagged "To Tell the Truth."

It was on Jan. 29, 1957, that Gil Fates and Roger Kielty of the Goodson-Todman office were offered a photo of one Ted Crosby by the owner of a Spokane radio station, suggestion being that he would fit in a slot on G-T's very new TTTT.

Most Crosbys are known for making money, meeting pretty girls, having boxoffice, and being fair-to-middlin' caterwaulers, but Ted Crosby is known in Spokane as a rainmaker. It's really true. He has a way of injecting a cloud bank with silver iodide which causes the moisture to congeal into either raindrops or snow after which it dives to earth.

Ted was on the way into town, and it was necessary to team him with a couple of fakers. The first in hand was a Navy captain whose carrier, the Saratoga, was in Brooklyn Navy Yard for repairs.

My turn came when Kielty laid arm on me in an elevator and told me I was a ringer for Bing Crosby. Being a country boy, and having heard about what goes on in New York, I was about to bash him in the kisser and leave the elevator at the next floor.

The next floor turned out to be the reception room of Goodson-Todman.

At any rate, they calmed me, conned me, and the next thing I knew a panel composed then of Polly Bergen, Hildy Parks, John Cameron Swayze and Hy Gardner voted three-to-one for me as Bing Crosby's brother!

The novelty was that the show was only nine performances old and it was the night the sponsor was going to make his determination to whether he should drop or drive on. On the basis of our hanky-panky, so legend goes, the show was given the greenlight and it's been going ever since.

A couple of weeks ago, Kielty popped up on the phone (it's a bit safer than being closeted with a country-jake in an elevator) with the idea for a rematch. The panel is entirely new—Peggy Cass, Kitty Carlisle, Don Ameche and Tom Poston. This time, since the Navy Captain is now a Rear Admiral named Robert B. Moore, they had Ted Crosby and I come back to make like admirals. Miss Carlisle and Poston voted for us fakes, but Miss Cass and Ameche, know an admiral when they see one.

We were in good company for this performance, but the police evidently have an eye on this trio, and generally we appear to be suspicious. On with us Monday (13), was a real Richard Van Gelder (with Frank Conkling, NBC-TV producer and Jack Farren, airwick manufacturer respectively) who is a skunk expert, and Sidney Sperbeck (plus Candice Taylor, pro ice skater and Kathleen O'Rourke, physiologist), a lady policewoman who specializes in forgery and bad check cases in Riverside, Calif.

The admiral, Ted Crosby and I are gaining a little character, however, as on Jan. 29, 1957, we were followed on the show by the warden of Sing Sing prison.

If the show survives long enough, maybe I'll get to tell the truth one day. The others in our trio have had a chance apiece to be honest.

Why KPRC-TV bought Warner's "Films of the 50's"

Says Jack Harris:

"When you buy feature films of this high quality, you can lead from strength in your programming. We have already used some of these Warner films as sponsored ed because the Governor knew of his long association with educational tv and of a personal relationship stemming from Cooperstein directing the Governor's report-to-the-people show on Channel 13.) The variances on what happened could go on and on.

"Later we'll use them as Saturday night double features and, of course, as participating shows in prime time."

Upshot was that Cooperstein was fired under the union clause of "insubordination" and "gross misconduct."

Says Cooperstein: "This is the phrase in the Directors Guild of America contract by which management doesn't have to give you any severence pay, which in my case is ten weeks' of salary for my ten years work, or about $1,800."

Director affirms that he has no desire to be destructive or negative about the present management of WNTA-TV. Cott & Co., by their actions and statements, affirm otherwise, leaving Cooperstein a "man without a station."

merce and the Las Vegas Police Dept., have come out firmly against the proposed Goodson & Todman "Las Vegas Beat," because of the reported accent on crime and violence in the forthcoming video series. Same attitude against Warner Bros. (ABC-TV) proped "Las Vegas File" is said to have caused the Burbank plant to back down and/or shoot it in the studios. Goodson & Todman, which has considerable montage and other atmospheric footage, reportedly have expressed themselves circumventing any legal technicalities by supposedly shooting the action in a "phoney" (contrived name) hotel albeit in a LV setting.

It is to this that the local community objects and, furthermore, is seeking legal interpretation how a pseudo-realistic aura (because of the montage shots) could be made to endow a fictitious plot with faked "authenticity."

The top Strip hotels have retorted to Goodson & Todman, when the latter cited shows such as "Hawaiian Eye" and "Miami Undercover," that that kind of publicity LV doesn't need; and, besides, Honolulu tourism is off and Miami has had one of its worst seasons, "so maybe that is the wrong kind of publicity too!"

Further in line with the serious approach to what constitutes "good" or "not good" publicity is the local C. of C. attitude that Vegas has its share of crime, as does any community, but also stresses that it has more police, per capita, than any American city; that hoodlumism, drunkenness etc. are "minimal here"; that it prides itself on being a "clean town" and "does everything possible to ease out undesirable elements."

And as for the argument about Frank Sinatra's feature film, "Ocean's 11," the attitude is (1) this was a fantasy about (2) a "Rififi"-type of heist, done in adult melodramatic manner, differing from a campaign of calumny and crime, week after week, for 39 weeks, or more, into the American home which would make for the "worst type of advertising" any community could get.

Keefe Brasselle's production, "Beachfront," made partly with CBS-TV coin, almost won the Wednesday slot between 8:30 and 9:30 p.m. on the web's fall sked.

Kimberly-Clark, with a half-hour alternate-weeks and Liggett & Myers, with an hour alternate-weeks, looked to be hooked into the action-adventure stanza. They might stay with "Checkmate."

Meantime, "The Investigators" has been tied in by CBS-TV to the Thursday 9 to 10 time instead of "Gunslingers." Revue-made stanza has no bankrolling yet.

VARIETY-ARB's weekly chart offers a day-by-day analysis of the top feature evening slots in a particular market. On Saturdays and Sundays, daytime feature slots compete with nighttime pix periods for designation as the top feature slot of the day. The analysis is confined to the top rated feature slots in the ARB measured period, broken down by days in the week. The ARB measured period usually covers three or four weeks. Other data such as the time slot and overage share of audience is furnished. Top competition and competitive ratings also are highlighted.

spinoff with Constance Bennett, John Emery, Susan Silo); "Pandora" (another Anso project, with Pat Carroll); "My Wife's Brother" (Cy Howard, again) and an untitled half-hour in which Phil Harris and Alice Faye would re-team, professionally speaking.

Balance of the comedy brew consists of Metro's "Father of the Bride" (an extension of the picture, which practice has become a habit out at Leo-the-Lionsville); Revue's outrageously titled "Mother Climbs Trees" (with Jan Clayton presumably the Tarzanesque female); Warner's "Room for One More" (another picture extension, a popular gimmick at the tv-happy major picture plants) and 20th's "Margie" (picture turned-series again, Cynthia Pepper taking over for Jeanne Crain) and "The Ginger Rogers Show" with Miss Rogers as twins, one a high-fashion designer, other a mag scribe.

Action-Adventure: At Screen Gems it centers around "The Venturers" (Burt Leonard's Mediterranean-based test escapade which would blossom into a spread about a three-man manned sub, two of whom are Jim Brown and Johnny Seven); "Shannon" (a syndication entry topped by George Nader), and "The Insider" (with David Janssen as a high-powered N. Y. p.r. man—Bill Sackheim's pilot costarred Polly Bergen). Desilu chips in with "The Silent Ones" (stories behind U. S. Army Counter-Intelligance Corps) and "The Man From Telegraph Hill" (the experience of Bay Area scribe Herb Caen, as played by Dan Dailey). Others of this ilk are Four Star's "The Corrupters" (hourlonger starring Stephen McNally); 20th's "The Hunters" (African safari type project teaming Brett Halsey and Guy Stockwell with writer-producer Robert Blees), and Warner's "Solitaire" (pairing Ray Danton and John van Dreelen against a background of European capital cities) and "Las Vegas File" (with Peter Breck and Mike Road whirling around the gambling mecca).

Crime: Screen Gems' Green-Rouse unit has revived and expanded the defunct Mike Connors starrer, "Tightrope," and turned it into an hourlong opus, re-tagged "The Expendables." Also at SG is "The Joan Crawford Show," in which the star plays a female legal whiz. Revue's two crime capers are "89th Precinct" (with Bob Lansing) and "The Investigators," both going the fashionable full-hour route. Other criminal activity is divided among Metro, with "The Asphalt Jungle" (another theatrical outgrowth, with Jack Warden, Arte Johnson and Bill Smith), Four Star with "Boston Terrier" (a Blake Edwards-Tom Waldman creation featuring Robert Vaughn), Desilu with the long-range projected "Homicide" (a Mort Briskin project), and Warners with "The Force" (uncast description of present-day exploits of the Royal Canadian Mounties.

Western: Four Star's "Durant" (a "Wanted—Dead Or Alive" spinoff, Noah Beery and Jonathan Bolt toplined); 20th's "The Jayhawker" (A Roy Huggins brainchild, with Jack Betts and Jock Gaynor as regulars, Ann Blyth a periodic participant, Dan Dailey and Eddie Foy III as pilot guest stars) and Revue's "Frontier Circus" (an hourlong hoss opera starring Chill Wills).

Miscellany: Metro leads in the more-or-less novelty department with "Dr. Kildare" (starring palsy-walsy cutups Richard Chamberlain and Raymond Massey); "Cain's Hundred" (a dramatic suspense entry created by Paul Monash and starring Mark Richman), and "Harry's Girls" (Alan Jay Lerner's touring romp with Larry Blyden, three half-hours completed on the French Riviera). 20th has "Bus Stop" (another Robert Blees baby, with Marilyn Maxwell and Rhodes Reason regulars, Tuesday Weld recurrent) and "The House On Rue Riviera" (cloak-and-dagger-o-type endeavor starring John Ericson and Richard Anderson, and in which Jayne Mansfield and Diana Trask helped shape up the pilot film). Finally, there is Hanna-Barbera's animated "Top Cat" number for Screen Gems, sold to ABC.

That, at any rate, is what's going into the tube this season. What comes out is another story.

"free network" acceptance of their wares, have set their sights on the potentials of pay-tv in the U. S. When, in the latter part of April, Leland Hayward arrives in London to scan properties for the RKO Teleradio feevee experimentations in Hartford, he'll sit down with the ATV execs for a discussion of their projects. Both share the conviction of others that if pay television takes holds in America, the responsibility for its success will lie in the abdication of the networks in lowering their sights and values.

P&G—Showmen From Way Back

Parnell and Grade, are quite unique, either individually or as a team. Long before ATV hit the spectrum, they "had it made" as top-bracketed showmen with the own distinctive flair and impact on the populace—one the ex-circus performer ("The Flying Grades") before setting up with brother Leslie what was to emerge as one of the major talent agencies in the world and with ownership franchises in many of the top amusement enterprises throughout Europe, while Parnell hit an equally prominent stride as a showman as managing director of the Palladium and as a member of the Moss Empire. (Moss, which owns and controls virtually all the legitimate theatres in London, along with H. M. Tennant, leading theatrical production organization in the United Kingdom, are part and parcel of the "ATV package.")

On the basis of such a track record, Parnell and Grade will put in a bid to extend their performance as tv entrepeneurs by seeking a crack at the third British tv channel so that they can program in London seven nights a week instead of the present weekends in London and midweek in the midlands. They are slated to appear next month before the Pilkington Committee, which is entrusted with the task of determining the most qualified. Practically everybody and his brother wants in.

At the moment it's strictly conjectural who will get it. Some say the BBC. Others feel there will be no alternative but to invite new people and fresh minds to join the ranks of the "new millionaires." Parnell and Grade are convinced that their performance warrants further perpetuation.

Says Norman Collins (ex-BBC, now a principal cog in the ATV operation as deputy board chairman and regarded as "the father of independent television in Britain" by virtue of having persuaded Parliament of the need for an independent tv setup): "What is chiefly needed in commercial tv is competition. ATV in its annual reports has consistently advocated that there be at least two commercial tv stations. Secondly, what is needed is a painless means of going over to 625 lines from the pre-war standard of 405 lines. Our submissions to the Pilkington Committee will include these cardinal points."

(It's ATV proposal, if new standards are adopted, to transmit on both 625 and 405 lines during the next 10 years to prevent obsolescence and "sudden death" for all existing sets.)

But that's all in the foreseeable future. For the moment, if there are any doubts as to tv's progress here, one has only to see how the Elstree Studios are being transformed into a wondrous razzmatazz of electronic wizardry to clinch any argument.

And the P & G that spells out Parnell and Grade go together like Procter & Gamble.

Canadian TV-Radio Talent to Tour UN, NATO Bases O'seas

Ottawa, April 4.

Starting April 13, radio and tv performers from Canadian webs will tour UN and NATO bases in Europe under arrangements set at the Ottawa headquarters of both the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. and the Federal defense department. Tour will go 16 days and cover France, West Germany and the Gaza Strip, under UN auspices.

Performers named so far include Tommy Hunter, Wally Traugott, Al Harris, Mike Ferby, Marc Wald and Jack Jenkins, all of the Tommy Hunter Show (CBC AM), plus chanters Joyce Hahn and Denyse Ange, terpers Sandra O'Neill and Sherry Moore, vibist Peter Appleyard. Emceeing chores go to Gordy Tapp with Ken Dalzell producing. Group is expected to do 20 shows of 120 minutes each. Hunter show will be taped for scheduled times on CBC web.

Dallas—Casey Cohlmia has been named director of promtion and publicity for WFAA radio and tv. He'll be in charge of advertising, merchandising, promotion and publicity for the broadcast properties of the Dallas Morning News, WFAA-AM-FM-TV.

GM's 'Bullwinkle' Gets NBC Sun. Slot

General Mills gave NBC-TV the money and program to fill Sundays from 6:30 to 7 p.m. next season. Sponsor is supplying a cartoon show called "Bullwinkle."

Meantime, the network has decided that it might be a good idea to slot "National Velvet" from 7 to 7:30 p.m. on Sunday. Berthed between "Bullwinkle" and the new 7:30 Disney hour, chances are, web figures, that it'll be sold in short order even though current bankroller Rexall won't be back with the Metro production.

A weekly half-hour news wrap-up with Frank McGee might take 6 p.m. Gulf is being talked to by NBC and interest is reportedly fair to high in backing McGee. This would be in addition to Gulf's financial support for the web's intermittent news specials, which McGee hosts most of the time. The 5:30 p.m. preceding spot could remain Chet Huntley time, as it is now, but this is not set; perhaps the web is not anxious to have two of its ranking commentators back-to-back.

is steadiest yet. There's Stone, as g.m., Dave Levy assured continuation as program veep, Ed Friendly as administrative boss of programming, and Jim Stabile as the guy who does most of the negotiation for the network.

A look at some of the people who are leaving middle or middle-high level posts at NBC gives a clue as to why the cutbacks are taking place this time. With Stabile in charge of contracts, there was no need financially or administratively for a second veep in the same area, and that's why Burt Hanft is going. George Matson, who preceded Stone, as general manager of the tv web, is soon to go, it's understood, and that's essentially because he has no fulltime responsibility in the nether area as Kintner's special assistant, post he got right after the advent of Stone.

Once upon a time at NBC, there was the "T - H - T" "Today"-"Home"-"Tonight") operation, a participating program setup that required a separate administrative topper to make a whole out of the three programs. Only the morning version (Dave Garroway) and the nighttime Jack Paar show remain of the three, and since many other network programs are now sold in participations (single minutes), it's probable changes will affect veep Jerry Danzig's Paar-Garroway department, with the stanzas simply ending up as "other programs at NBC."

Cutbacks are expected in the program, research, publicity and operations areas of NBC. Sales seems relatively safe (maybe one loss), with Don Durgin, another of NBC's so-called "new team" remaining as head. And Tom McFadden, one of the senior veeps in the department, is back, too, having just returned to his desk after months in a sick-bed.

it was only in the radio biz, as a staffer in the press information department. With the war he entered the Army as a major, and before retiring as a Lt. Colonel, Worden wrote a book for the Army Medical Department called "Men Without Guns."

In 1947, he became public affairs director for WCBS Radio and when tv was started the title covered both the network's radio and tv outlets in N. Y. In 1950, however, WCBS Radio and WCBS-TV were put under separate managements, and Worden went with the tv station, where he remained until his sudden death this week.

Foster, who calls himself the "Rebel with a Cause," turned in the old handle so as to avoid possible conflict with tv emcee Dennis James.

Women Are Wonderful.

Ann Colone's a Woman.

Ann Colone's Wonderful.

If there's a misogynist in the house, our authority for the major premise, Women Are Wonderful, is TV Radio Mirror, which made the comment while giving WANE-TV's Ann Colone its gold medal award for "Best TV Women's Interest Show—Midwest States."

The minor premise (minor only in formal logic terms) is axiomatic. Ann's a most attractive, vivacious, witty and entertaining lady.

The conclusion, shared by viewers, visitors and vendors alike, is inescapable. She's wonderful in providing everything from exercise gymnastics to festive cooking hints, from parakeet keepers to parachute jumpers, from the Dukes of Dixieland (in person) to the Chief of the Congolese Lunda tribe (in person). And there's always time to discuss and help community activities.

The Ann Colone Show is one-o'clock watching five days a week for large numbers of the ladies of Fort Wayne and vicinity, reaching about 60% and 100% more homes, respectively, than competing network programs; adult ladies comprise 74% of its audience.

All Corinthian stations create programs which, like the Ann Colone Show, meet local and regional tastes. This encourages local talent, builds viewer respect and helps make friendly prospects for advertisers.

VOA's Hong Kong-Packaged Radio Shows With All-Chinese Talent

Hong Kong, April 4.

Voice of America, through the radio arm of the U.S. Information Service here, draws on native Chinese talent for all of its packaged programs distributed to radio stations in Southeast Asia for their Chinese listeners. In short, Hong Kong is the production center for such fare.

"The World of Science" and "Hong Kong This Week," the latter touching on latest happenings in field of motion pictures, music literature and art, are among the programs produced. Hong Kong is the showcase for Chinese talent.

According to outgoing USI radio officer Fred Fisher, who is returning to Washington for reassignment, these programs have been popular—over 90% of fare sent has been used. These packaged programs are sent to USI offices in Bangkok, Kuala Lumpur, Manila, Saigon, Singapore and Taipei, which subsequently forward material to the radio stations which decide on what to use.

Fisher is being replaced here by Fukien-born Hong Sheng-hwa who, though connected with USI for many years, recently became an American citizen.

VOA broadcasts in Chinese emanating from Washingon are heavily jammed by Communist China which leave the VOA English broadcasts practically untouched, according to Fisher who says there is evidence to support this fact.

The Colony's three broadcasting stations, the government-controlled Radio Hong Kong, the newly-formed Hong Kong Commercial Broadcasting Co., in which actor Bill Holden is a large shareholder, and Rediffusion have been using VOA packaged programs sent here from Washington.

ANTA (American National Theatre and Academy) radio dramas, such as "Glass Menagerie," "Picnic," and "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" have been locally broadcast, with a growing demand for them by the stations in question.

Radio Hong Kong is currently broadcasting a series titled "The Philosophical Perspective," which is a discussion on the history of philosophy down through the ages. Tapes on the Newport Jazz Festival were sent to and used by Radio HK which provided their own narration. Jazz is popular here.

The Commercial Radio have broadcast at least two VOA presentations called "Ocean Depths" and "America on Stage." A VOA offering, "The Jazz Beat," was broadcast by Rediffusion.

Wales Wants Better Shake on Television

London, April 4.

Wales wants more Welsh-based television. This is the view of The Council for Wales who are telling the Pilkington Committee on Broadcasting that a separate Welsh tv channel is essential.

According to Professor Richard Aaron, the Council's chairman, both Welsh and English-speaking people in Wales are dissatisfied with the present tv setup.

Both the BBC and a commercial station—TWW—have Welsh studios sending out programs in both languages. But, owing to geographical conditions, commercial tv cannot be received in certain areas of North and Mid-Wales and there is one small, mountainous region where BBC-TV cannot be received either.

Seattle—Lee Desilet is joining the sports and special events dept. of KOMO here as assistant to director Keith Jackson.

AN HOUR WITH ARTHUR FIEDLER
Producer: Gene King
Director: Martin Magner
Writer: Fiedler
60 Mins., Sat., 8:15 p.m.
TIME MAGAZINE
WCBS, N.Y.

(Young & Rubicam)

Boston Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler adds a lot of class to the New York deejay ranks with this WCBS, N. Y., hour of classical disks and enlightening chatter.

Fiedler selects the music for the show and writes and delivers his own commentary in a casual, informative style. His tolerance for the lighter side of music (Pops orch has even played a collection of broadcast commercial jingles) gives the musical segs variety.

Show caught (1), included "War March of the Priests," from the Opera "Athalia" by Mendelssohn; "Organ Concerto, Opus 4, No. 2," by Handel; "Three Dances" from "The Three Cornered Hat," by de Falla; and Casella's "Paganiniana." Two of the selections were Fiedler directed Pops recordings, and at least one number on each show is a Pops disk.

With the maestro based in Boston and on the concert route a good deal, the commentary is often taped three shows at a sitting, or recorded on the road and put together with the music at the station. Technique works out fine. Bill.

Set Hearing on Rees Murder Case in Sequel To WBAL-TV Program

Baltimore, April 4.

Hearing in Federal court has been set for Thursday on motion contending that the rights of Melvin Davis Rees Jr., convicted of murdering a Virginia mother and her five-year-old daughter, were prejudiced by program presented by WBAL-TV, in which nine of 12 jurors who found him guilty, reenacted jury proceedings.

Program was presented March 22 on tape and was shown only a few hours after Judge Roszel C. Thomsen denied a motion for a new trial, and only 12 hours before he was scheduled to sentence Rees.

Sentencing was postponed after court-appointed attorney for Rees asked that it be deferred until he had itme to see a script of the program, adding that the jurors, on tv had "discussed facts which hadn't been brought out in the trial."

This move was followed by FBI action when agents began questioning jurors who had appeared on the program. Station was widely criticized by the press for presenting the show and a judge in another case now being tried locally said he questioned the "taste" and "good judgment" of jurors who would lend themselves to such a program.

New motion asks court to grant a new trial, declare a mistrial or to set aside the guilty verdict returned by the jury.

STATION MEN SET UP A FINANCIAL ORG

Chicago, April 4.

A group of 20 representatives of the business side of station operations met here to set up a national organization of broadcasting's financial personnel.

Representing stations and groups in most sections of the country, the execs selected a 12-man steering committee headed by Henry W. Dornself, assistant treasurer of WCCO-AM-TV, Minneapolis.

Named committee subdivisions were: incoporation & bylaws—Tom Carroll, WFBM, Indianapolis; John Hinkle WISN, Milwaukee; and E. S. Zimmerman, Crosley group, Cinncinnati; membership—Richard S. Stakes, Evening Star group, Washington; Joseph Madden, Metropolitan, New York; and James Flynn, WPIX, New York; objectives & purposes—Arthur H. Hertz, Wometco Enterprises, Miami; Charles A. Hart, WHDH, Boston; Norman C. Hadley, CBS Television Stations, New York; and Herbert J. Mayes, WOR, New York.

Membership info is available from Richard Stakes, Evening Star Broadcasting, Washington, D.C.

Sponsors Rally Round O'Connor 'Editorials'

Chicago, April 4.

Here's proof that broadcast editorials do pay. "Len O'Connor Comments," a 10-minute strip aired thrice daily in Chicago, is SRO in its 15 outings per week. Sinclair Refineries just plucked the remaining four video availabilities.

The O'Connor commentaries are personal editorials rather than station think-pieces, but the local NBC management believes enough in his responsibleness as a newsman to give him total freedom—with of course the disclaimer that the views are his own. Same show is aired once daily on radio (WMAQ) and twice on tv (WNBQ), via audio and video tape. It's a spot carrier in the audio version but singly sponsored on tv. Latest Nielsens give it a 7 average at 5:50 p.m. on video and nearly an 8 at 12:05 ayem, when it's reprised (after the Jack Paar show).

Canada, U.S. in 'V' Border Agreement

Washington, April 4.

Uncle Sam and Canada have completed a working arrangement for allocation of VHV television channels under the Canadian-U. S. tv agreement of 1952.

The agreement was concluded in an exchange of letters between Federal Communications Chairman Newton N. Minow and the Director of Telecommunications and Electronics of Canada. The pact governs allocation of channels in an area within 250 miles of the border.

FCC said the working agreement lays down a set of standards to which each government can readily refer to in making tv assignment decisions in the overlap area.

"The use of the standards thus set out will facilitate television allocation planning in the border areas by both the Canadian and U. S. authorities as a working tool in preparing proposals for acceptance required under the 1952 Agreement," FCC said.

FCC's 5,000 Test Spots In N.Y. UHF Experiment

Washington, April 4.

Federal Communications Commission, during its $2,000,000 UHF experiment in New York, will measure tv signals at 5,000 locations in the city.

Commission asked for bids from firms to carry out the measurements with hand-carried equipment. Signals of New York's VHF stations as well as the experimental FCC UHF transmitters will be measured. The FCC test is designed to furnish conclusive evidence as to whether UHF is feasible.

Mail is usually a good barometer of one's popularity. Yet, because WPIX-11 has no mail, we're more popular with advertisers! An extraordinary statement except when you understand the kind of mail we mean: No Mail Order Advertisers! WPIX-11 advertisers are national, representing the foremost advertisers in the land. General Motors, General Foods, P & G, Coca-Cola, R. J. Reynolds—they're all here in quantity. It makes good sense to join in the fine company of national advertisers on WPIX-11. Where are your 60 second commercials tonight?

genious doler-outer, being governed by mechanical means, which seemingly is not controlled by the human hand. It's an example of electronic largesse in which by pressing buttons, a contestant comes up with passes, stops, bonuses and penalties, on a huge panel which lights up and ultimately halts at a picture of a character who must be identified. There is also a gimmick for the homefolks who can participate in this version of share-the-wealth.

There are some drawbacks, the most serious being that with all the gadgetry, a participant has little chance to show personality. But then, Jack Narz, who emcees is sufficiently endowed in that department for a half-hour.

The show is noisy, liberal and with enough complications to create interest and even though it's difficult to create either sympathy or antipathy to the machine, there is a degree of suspense involved and there is the added lure of a multitude of prizes going either by the wayside or passing on to some fortunate individual.

The dressing for the show is attractive. Models flit in and out, the prizes are presented nicely and what's more, there is provision for participants to return and walk off with even more loot. Seems like the old days are here again.

WAY OUT
With Henry Jones, Mildred Dunnock, Fritz Weaver, others
Producer: Jacqueline Babbin
Director: Marc Daniels
Writer: Roald Dahl
30 Mins., Fri., 10 p.m.
LIGGETT & MYERS
CBS-TV (tape)

(Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample)

This companion on CBS-TV to Rod Serling's "Twilight Zone" began its run with a Roald Dahl adaptation of a Roald Dahl short story, "William and Mary," and the result, it should be said, was thoroughly original if not thoroughly successful television.

Sometimes called "The first of the sick comics," Dahl, an excellent writer, provided for the first half-hour of "Way Out," the tale of an irascible professor (Henry Jones), who at the orotund urgings of a neurosurgeon (Fritz Weaver), willed his brain and one eye to science after his death. With the eye and brain immersed alive but helpless in a "basin" for ever more, it became the victim of retribution at the hands of the once frustrated wife (Mildred Dunnock). If that wasn't wild enough for tv, there was always the fantastic rhetoric of the author.

That it was not entirely successful was due largely to the earlier scenes by Weaver. In trying to convince the dying autocrat to leave his living brain to science in a "basin . . . with every modern convenience," he sounded like Herr Mad Doktor at the height of a 1935 horror movie. Were he a little more subdued, the eerie humor of Dahl might have made its point sooner. But make its point it did, especially when the delightful Miss Dunnock was caught doing all the things her late husband denied her during their marriage—smoking, music, fancy clothes. She was a gas, and, before her big scenes, Jones was the star; his autocrat was distinctive and funny.

They talk about original tv. This certainly was, but whether it can last for 13 weeks is another matter. After all, not everybody has a humor as unique as Dahl's. This gaunt, writer, who has an English accent, will continue as host for the series.

LIE DETECTOR
With Ralph Andrews, others
Producers: Andrews, Harry Spears

PARTICIPATING
KTTV, H'wood

Ralph Andrews and Harry Spears have a good gimmick going for them and with a few showmanly touches could whip it into network shape. The bones are there, now but need some meat on them. The three subjects on Wednesday night's "trial balloon" were not too meaty, and perhaps it would have been better to use pros to get the show off the ground. It could have been lightened with one humorous panel, such as an errant husband sitting up with a sick friend or so he told his wife, who asked for a polygraph corroboration.

With William Schmidt, a detector expert to operate the machine, Andrews interviewed the subjects and at the conclusion of the tests told whether the detector affirmed or negated the narrated versions of the incidents involved.

First up was a guy who tangled with a cop, who claimed he first struck by the officer. He served 90 days but the detector upheld him. A woman told of seeing a blue flame but nobody would believe her. The polygraph did. Third was an agent, Danny Lastfogel, who denied making improper advances to his clients and misappropriating money given him. The detector said he lied.

Both before and after the show the viewers were asked to mail in their reactions, a device used before with pilots. While it was announced that this was a "one time only" feature, Andrews said he would be back next week with three different subjects. With sponsors searching for the offbeat, this could arouse their curious interest.

ABC Radio 'Flair' In Client Buildup

After five months on the air ABC Radio's afternoon strip, "Flair," reached a point in March where, if taken on a month to month basis, it was breaking even, according to the web. Gross was just about $75,000 for the month, building from October openers of about $15,000 in billings.

One of the big struts in maintaining the daily 55-minute program is the 80 to 85% affiliate clearance. The show started with a high of 240 stations cleared, and has even improved on that level, with March counting 268 stations airing the potpourri of news, views and comedies for the "young housewives." All but 28 stations take "Flair" in the solid 55-minute block, stripping it, according to web orders, anywhere between 1 and 5 p.m. Other 28, which include five of ABC's six owned & operated stations, break up "Flair" into shorter segs and spread them throughout the afternoon hours.

Plan, instituted by network boss Bob Pauley, is being pitched specifically at the young hausfrau audience, and on that basis, Accent, Ladies Home Journal, Pepsi-Cola, Planters Peanuts (with ideas for cocktail parties) and Dr. Pepper have bought in at one point or another. Accent's buy begins in May. Each spot begins at $1,400 and the end rate (for the full lineup) comes down to $1,000.

NAB's FM Study

Washington, April 4.

National Assn. of Broadcasters for the first time will garner financial data from independently-operated FM stations for its annual economic survey this year.

NAB economics manager James H. Hulbert said the program is being undertaken as result of growing interest in FM financial operations. NAB will not try to collect data on FM outlets operated in conjunction with AM stations because revenue, expense and profit figures are seldom calculated separately by station management, he added.

Bridgeport—Tony Brunton upped to news director of WICC, succeeding Bill Whalen, who leaves for new post at WNAC, Boston.

TV Followup Comment

(28) night's hourlong edition of "Close-Up!" on ABC-TV. It had merits and faults, but the overriding generalization to its credit is that the viewer gained an added insight of Kennedy, the man, and how he functions as President.

The hour outing, sponsored by Bell & Howell, was another vehicle produced by Drew Associates and Time, Inc., in conjunction with ABC News. It had the technique which now is becoming a trademark of exec producer Robert Drew, a technique which needs revision for the long pull. That over-the-shoulder view on the tv screen, with the backs of the principals in the foreground, gets tiresome after awhile. The rambling footage—so unlike the "March of Time" technique—tends to blur the story. The use of scenes never fully explained, nor explored, is another detriment.

What it did have on the credit side of the ledger was a sense of intimacy and despite the catch-as-catch-can footage, a total impression of the awesome job as Chief Executive was rendered.

Some of the footage, such as that of the Wisconsin primaries, was quite familiar to tv buffs. Other footage, Kennedy catching the news on tv, meeting with Government officials, chatting with his family, etc., had a freshness and an interest of no small dimensions.

Recital Hall

The Ben Grauer-hosted "Recital Hall" longhair stanza moved into the choice Saturday night 10-11 p.m. slot on WNBC-TV last week (2) as a change of pace from the "Nation's Future" documentations. It's hardly calculated to woo over "Gunsmoke" fans from CBS or fight fans from ABC, but within its orbit of relaxation for the discriminating clef dwellers, serves its purpose. Solo guest for the moveover into the more desirable period was pianist Augustin Anievas, one of the Julliard prides with an enviable record in European concertizing and his recitals of Schumann, Chopin, Ravel, Menotti, Mozart and Liszt left no doubts as to his skill and virtuosity.

However, for a full hour showcase, the solo flight had a static quality, both in the Grauer background commentaries and in the one-man artist display. Certainly a program of such length, no matter what the degree of artistry displayed, warrants embellishment and diversified entertainment, at least to the extent of a duo presentation. And for a sharps & flats gabber of such eminent status over the years, there was a monotony about Grauer's contribs. Since a pianist is a pianist, the burden must fall on Grauer to provide a flair and color to erase the drabness and static quality of the presentation. It could have been an off night.

Weist, Blair to WNBC

Dwight Weist and Frank Blair, two veterans, are joining the ranks of WNBC Radio's local N.Y. newscasters this week. Weist and Blair will be taking some of the morning news slots over which Ken Banghart some weeks ago quit the NBC flagship.

Weist will be heard five times a day, at 6, 6:30, 7:05, 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. Blair will do four five-minute newscasts a day, at 10:30 and 11:30 a.m. and at 12:30 and 1:30 p.m.

Banghart, after years of afternoon and nighttime work, felt that he didn't want to have to work an early morning four of duty at WNBC Radio. After he quit, he joined rival WCBS.

Dick Walsh's Prognosis As To Pay-See: Few Productions Will Go Out 'Live'

By WILLIAM ORNSTEIN

Hollywood, April 4.

Tollvision will help film studios and their employes in every phase of production rather than plummet industry into drastic economic state, prez Richard F. Walsh of International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes observed during five day stay here. At same time he struck an upbeat octave for features and telepix as well as exhibition.

First of all, IA chief doesn't believe there will be too many live presentations on pay-see.

"I believe that whatever pay process is adopted will require a lot more film than what is now being produced. Just how much celluloid will be used is theoretical at this time. But one thing I do know. That is pay telefilms will improve the lot of all production workers. If the plan creates more films to be made, union employes will benefit all down the line, in my opinion."

In other words, Walsh felt, if more barrels of oil and bags of sugar are produced they will need more people to handle them.

"I wish I could estimate when pay teevee will become a reality. A lot of people here and in the east have been guessing. I don't want to do that because no one really knows. If I actually knew I would become a rich man."

He doesn't believe it will happen in four years. In his estimation it will require more time than that to install the systems, whatever they may be, in homes throughout the nation.

Production at studios here, he added, is now near capacity for IA holders. He also noted that the 43,100 employed during February is a good figure but not maximum. (Studios have had to call on outsiders not holding union cards to fill certain types of jobs because IA and basics couldn't provide craftsmen.)

If feevee should come into its own soon and take on assurance of a bonanza in four years, international union has right to reopen recently concluded negotiations on four-year pact with AMPP and TV Alliance. This applies to new wage benefits for workers, meaning pay tilts, Walsh said.

50th State Will Get Tollvision

Honolulu, April 4.

Definite assurance of pay-tv for this island metropolis was given by a group of industrialists, who disclosed that arrangements for cable transmission have already been set. Edward Dukoff, former manager of Danny Kaye, spokesman for the group, said they have had discussions with Louis Novins for an association with Telemeter, tollvision wing of Paramount.

Dukoff described Honolulu's "home theatre" as auxiliary entertainment and in "no way competitive to the present free tv." Plan is to present new films in both English and Japanese and stage features "at a price equivalent to one theatre admission."

Group for which Dukoff is spokesman comprises Francis Brown, financier; Richard Smart, part-time actor and owner of Parker ranch in the large island of Hawaii; Robert J. Young, associated with Smart and Laurence Rockefeller in the projected 30,000-acre resort city on the Parker ranch, second largest in the world; Kenneth Brown, architect and businessman, and Carl Hansen, proxy of First National Bank of Hawaii. Dukoff said he would reveal in two weeks the name of one of the largest chain theatre operators in the U.S., which will be associated with the project. Actual operation is still a year away, Dukoff admitted.

Rockingham Park Shows Closed Circuit in Fans

Salem, N.H., April 4.

Closed-circuit television is providing another "first" for patrons of the Rockingham Park racetrack here, it has been announced by Lou Smith, general manager of the establishment.

All close-finish pictures are now flashed within one minute on more than 20 27-inch television screens placed at strategic levels throughout the clubhouse, mezzanine and grandstand. This gives the racing fans a view of the photo finish almost as soon as the judges get it.

Drive-In Wins Food Okay

Tyler, Tex., April 4.

A successful appearence before the city plan commission was made by Robert A. and Victor E. Fry, operators of the Rose Garden Drive-In Theatre. They sought a change in the zoning of their property.

The change was necessary in order to build a large food service building within the drive-in.

ACTORS ASK STATE GET OVERDUE WAGES

Los Angeles, April 4.

California Division of Labor Law Enforcement, Dept. of Industrial Relations, filed $20,818 judgment in Superior Court against Cape Canaveral Monsters Inc. and C.C.M. Prod. Inc., for services performed by 11 Screen Actors Guilds members who appeared in film without permission of Guild.

Pic titled "Cape Canaveral Monsters" was reportedly made at Telepix Studios in close to 10 days, and money is owed performers more than a year. Corporate defendants have no money and Sterling World Distributors, handling pic, has not yet turned any cash for distribution to producers or Phil Tucker, prexy.

Performers and claims are Scott Peters, $4,200; William Vess, $1,200; Florence Johnson, $100; Jason Johnson, $2,400; Katharine Victor, $3,000; Frank Smith, $1,050; Thelaine Williams, $600; Bryan F. Woods, $2,868; Billy M. Greene, $3,000; Joe Chester, $1,200; and Max Shiffman, $1,200.

'Variety' Rep Covers Carol Channing With Subscriber Family in Etobicoke

By ROBERT A. McSTAY

Toronto, April 4.

Nagged by the New York office of VARIETY to "be sure to catch the Carol Channing tollvision program in a home under normal reception conditions" this outpost sentry managed to do just that, though it wasn't easy on Easter night with so many of the well-heeled residents of Etobicoke out-of-town for the holiday weekend. But anything for Alma Mater!

The point about catching the program on a home set is an echo of VARIETY's longtime aversion to catching radio or television programs in studios. In the instance of the Easter week special Telemeter was adding another "historic" event to comic Bob Newhart and Gian-Carlo Menotti's "The Consul": this time it was a full intimate revue picked up live from its Broadway playhouse. Repeat performances in Toronto will be off the tape.)

Although they have seen only two movies in theatres during the past six months, the family of M. W. (Mack) Mercer, engineering consultant for General Electric, sees Trans-Canada Telemeter twice in midweek, plus Saturdays and Sundays. "Audience" consisted of wife, husband, their 16-year-old daughter and a girl friend, a visiting 22-year-old daughter and her husband, latter currently attending the U of Toronto.

One of the earlier Telemeter subscribers, the Mercer family had its coin box and Bell Telephone adjustments installed three days before the Telemeter tieoff on Feb. 19, 1960.

The Mercers, particularly the father, is fascinated by the fact that there are no tv commercials—and that the family and friends can get into comfortable clothing and are at home for the program. Their set is installed in an opulent basement playroom, surrounded by original paintings on the walls, bookcases, an open fireplace, lots of easygoing furniture. This once-inveterate film-going family has not been out of the house in the evenings except twice for "lost Generation" attendance in the past six months at even a suburban movie house of which there are two in Etobicoke.

Besides relaxing in home surrounding and going to bed when they feel like it, sans traffic problems, parking and the return home, the Mercers and friends also have the opportunity of seeing downtown first-run features within a fortnight on their home set.

The family, of course, does not charge the guests. Interestingly, coins come out of Mrs. Mercer's household budget. Whether or not the charge is a buck for the choice of two Telemeter channels — or $1.50 for special Telemeter broadcasts—plus matinees on Saturdays and Sundays.

The Mercers, with their guests, turn on the same Telemeter features at least thrice-weekly. The money from the coin box is collected every two months and they are not given a receipt; hence they do not know the amount spent annually—but they have friends in for two or three evening shows a week at a buck or $1.50 a throw.

One interesting facet is that they have never had to replace even a tube since Telemeter was added to their tv set over a year ago.

"Show Girl" was furnished live from the O'Neill studios. It opened with shots of the Times Square scene, with Faye Emerson's greeting of Sunday night celebrities in the lobby, long angle shots of the theatre's interior and the orchestral overture; then "Show Girl."

The prelims started at 8:15, curtain went up at 8:30. Miss Channing spoke first in special greeting to Toronto, introduced the Paramount and Telemeter nabobs, then began to entertain.

Technically the pickup was fine, a nice alternation of longshots and closeups. A lively sense of presence was achieved. It was obviously pretty much the show as given nightly in the theatre, not cut or pared for television screening.

For what it signifies, the Mercers liked the show so much they will pay again and see it again during the week.

Exhib Inconsistency Re Toll

Show business people who claim to be non-partisan in the pro-con hassle over home toll television this week pointed to a "peculiarity" (as one source termed it) in the position of certain exhibitors.

The observations go along these lines—

(1) Exhibitors profess to be against the entire concept of subscription tv;

(2) International Telemeter has about 150 applications for franchises and many of these are from exhibitors, including prominent ones who are aligned with the Joint Committee Against Toll TV;

(3) How does home toll differ very much from closed-circuit tv in theatres wherein the public is called upon to pay for tv programming?

This third item is regarded as particularly interesting for the reason that many bigtime exhibitors, who are party to the Committee Against-Toll TV, have been pioneers in the field of closed circuit and in which the customer has been called upon to pay up to $11 per ticket for a televised prize fight.

Boston Pledges Anti-Toll Funds; Speakers Call Pay-See Poison

Boston, April 4.

Independent Exhibitors of New England pledged to raise funds to fight toll television at a special meeting at the Hotel Bradford Tuesday (28). Ed Lider, president, set April 15 as the target date for the sending of the money raised to the Joint Committee, blasting toll tv as "The only thing I know of that can wipe you out overnight."

Emanuel Frisch, treasurer, Randforce Circuit, Brooklyn, N. Y. and Chairman, American Congress of Exhibitors, came to Boston to address the gathering of exhibitors. He told the group.: "Some theatremen take short range view that people will tire of it, but the fallacy, is you won't have pictures to show in your theatres." He said, "there's just so much of the entertainment dollar and with a coin box in the house there'll be nothing left for the movies."

He said the Joint Committee will oppose any kind of pay television. The next fight, he pointed out comes in Arkansas with Telemeter. The Committee is now working to get a vote through Congress and the strategy is to keep litigation in the works. Such litigation may discourage big interests backing toll tv, he said. Robert Sternburg, president of Allied Theatres of New England, spoke briefly from the floor. Both Allied and IENE are designating committees to join in the toll tv fight. Frisch urged the contacting of senators and congressmen as the biggest aid to the Joint Committee that the New England exhibitors could perform at present.

"The threat of toll tv is imminent and ominous," he said. "You are aware that permission for a three-year experiment of over-the-air Pay tv in Hartford has been granted by the Federal Communications Commission. I would like to make two brief factual statements. 1. There is no Pay tv operating in the United States today because of the efforts of our Joint Committee. 2. If Pay tv ever succeeds, it will absolutely, positively and unquestionably put all but a handful of you out of business.

"I say this not to scare you—though you should be frightened by this menace—but to stress that Pay tv is the most deadly-serious, outside element threatening our existence today. Pay tv seeks not only to compete with you for your patronage, which is bad enough, but, it also intends to bid against you for your life-blood—namely product.

"When Thomas F. O'Neil, president of Phonevision, testified before the FCC hearing last October in connection with the application for an experimental license, he distinctly said he would need 156 first run movies a year to operate his station, and that he intended to bid against existing motion picture theatres for this product. I need not remind you that last year's total output was only 266 films, with every indication that this year will be even less.

"We can fight and meet competition, you have done it before and we're still in business. But, if we lose our product to the Pay tv station, we are literally dead. In short my friends, this is why we, as theatremen, are fighting so hard against Pay tv, and why you, as exhibitors, must join in this fight. Reduced to its simplest elements, the issue is—who gets the first run picture—your theatre or the slot machines in the homes of your customers? If first run product should go to Pay tv, so that two, three, five or more persons would see each show in their homes they would completely saturate your area.

"Thus, the first run theatres would be forced to close for lack of product, and the second and subsequent run theatres would have no audience left for pictures that might eventually become available. We had two recourses—to ask the FCC to review the decision or to go to the Courts. In the interest of expediting the case, we have decided to appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Our appeal has just recently been filed. Through it, we hope to obtain a ruling from the Court that the FCC does not have jurisdiction to authorize the Hartford test or any other such test, and that Pay tv is not in the public interest. This appeal should have the effect of postponing the start of the experiment in Hartford. We are determined to carry our case right up to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

"In the interim, Telemeter has announced that it has enfranchised the Midwest Video Company to introduce its cable system in Little Rock, Arkansas. Big money-oil, stock and utility money, is behind this venture.

"This will not be the last effort for tests. If Pay tv ever gets mass circulation, it could pay off tremendously for its sponsors. The stakes are high, and that is why, literally, millions of dollars have already been spent in an effort to establish toll television. When we fight one brush fire, we never know where the next one will break out. We shall continue to fight Pay tv in every locality in which it attempts to obtain a foothold. We will fight it in Connecticut and in Washington where, as I have stated previously, our case is on file. We will oppose any application for the FCC to grant further permission to Phonevision. We will fight in Arkansas, where the latest Telemeter test looms on the horizon. Fundamentally, however, our broader hope and goal is Congressional action.

"In last year's 86th Congress, 22 separate bills were introduced to outlaw Pay tv. Two such bills have already been introduced in the new 87th Congress—one by Rep. Cleveland Bailey of West Virginia, and one by Congressman Emanuel Celler of New York. Each of these bills would make it illegal to collect a fee for a televised program in the home. Before many more weeks pass, similar bills will be introduced in both the Senate as well as in the House. Let us not have any illusions, however, last year all 22 bills stayed in Committee. The same thing will happen again this year unless we exhibitors and I mean everyone here today and every exhibitor in this exchange area and every other exchange area throughout the country, will do something specific about it."

Redd Evans Lights ASCAP Meet Fuse Over Board Control, Special Expenses

Redd Evans, writer, publisher and veteran critic of ASCAP's administration, touched off a hot crossfire of argument at last week's general membership meeting of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers. In his speech from the floor which transformed a peaceful assemblage into warring and whooping factions, Evans made two charges: (1), that the new consent decree (see separate story) has not materially changed the power of a so-called small group of publishers and their satellite writers on the board to control ASCAP affairs for their own profit; and (2) that ASCAP was spending extraordinary amounts of money for special counsels and various legislative representatives in Washington.

Evans, who was cautioned by ASCAP prexy Stanley Adams to avoid attacking personalities, was nonetheless vigorous in his complaint that the top ASCAP publishers were stifling younger publishers. He asked how come that not one single new young publisher, with the exception of the special case of Frank Loesser, has come up from ASCAP's ranks in the last 20 years. Evans warned that ASCAP was being weakened by BMI's dominance of the hit lists in its upcoming negotiations for new radio-tv licensing pacts.

Evans sharply rapped ASCAP for spending coin so freely on special counsel like former Judge Simon H. Rifkind and Arthur Dean and Capital representatives, such as former Rep. Charles Brown, who has taken over the late Paul Cunningham's slot as ASCAP's legislative liaison man, and former Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, who has been retained by ASCAP to work in behalf of the jukebox amendment to the Copyright Act.

Evans was countered by Adams, who denied that he was a satellite of any publisher of the board; by

Capitol Holds Back LP Release Sked for April; Continues Discount Plan

Capitol Records is declaring a moratorium on its April LP release schedule. Diskery is continuing its March merchandise discount plan for another month and is cancelling the planned April releases of all Capitol and Angel albums, with two exceptions, a special educational LP and a comedy album. Other albums scheduled for April release on both labels will be incorporated into subsequent releases.

The educational LP will be "Symphonic Movements From The Masters" and "2,000 Years With Carl Reiner and Mel Brooks," which was recently purchased by Cap from World Pacific Records.

The Cap program gives qualified dealers a 1% discount on orders. To be eligible for the Cap plan, retailers need buy 100 Cap albums. After qualifying, they receive one album free for every three purchased. Qualifying order for the Angel program is 50 LPs, with the same benefits applying afterward.

Golden Records to Slice Kiddie Show Cast LP

"Young Abe Lincoln," the musical for children which opened Monday (3) at the York Playhouse, N.Y., for a limited engagement, will get the original cast album treatment by the Little Golden Records, kiddie label headed by Arthur Shimkin. Show is first of a series to be mounted by the Little Golden Theatre, production outfit headed by Shimkin.

Score for the play includes nine songs by Victor Ziskin (music) and Joan Javits (lyrics). Book is by Richard N. Bernstein and John Allen with additional dialog and lyrics by Arnold Sundgaard.

ASCAP Pushes Proposal To Ease Bylaw Changes

ASCAP has launched an allout attempt to revise its by-laws to reduce the dead weight of non-voting members. Under the current voting setup, each amendment must get two-thirds of all potential votes in the Society, thus giving every non-vote the effect of a negative ballot. The proposed amendment will enable amendments to be passed if they get two-thirds of those who actually vote.

Originally advocated by Pinky Herman, the amendment has now received an unusual endorsement from all 24 board members in a drive to get out the vote so that this proposition can pass.

Blaine Acquires Monarch Setup

Cosnat Record Distributing Corp., N.Y. distributors, has acquired the stock and assets of Monarch Records, L.A. manufacturer. The deal was set between Jerry Blaine, Cosnat prez, and Nathan Duroff and Nathan Rothstein, prez and veepee respectively of Monarch.

The acquisition includes Monarch's affiliates, Monarch Enterprises and Etan Products, producers of plastics. The Monarch assets include land, buildings and equipment. Terms of the acquisition provide for retention of the Monarch management.

In the fiscal year 1960, Monarch and its subsidiaries had sales of $2,123,799 and a net income after taxes of $142,954. In the four months ended Jan. 31, '61, Monarch's sales totaled $1,000,000 upon which a net profit of $83,000 after taxes was recorded.

Blaine pointed to the acquisition as significant that his firm now has record and plastic manufacturing facilities. Cosnat has nine wholesale distributing centers located in the following cities: N.Y., Philadelphia, Newark, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, L.A., and Chicago.

CAPITOL MOVES INTO EDUC'L DISK MARKET

Capitol Records is stepping into the educational field. The diskery has prepared a series of educational recordings designed for use in school and college music courses.

The album, "Symphonic Movements From The Masters," was prepared Cap's educational department with the cooperation of William C. Hartshorn, music educator and supervisor of music education for the Los Angeles high school system. Included in the LP are eight complete movements from eight symphonies. The works were culled from the Cap and Angel catalogs by Hartshorn.

The recording is packaged in a deluxe double jacket containing an introduction by Hartshorn, plus his suggestions for grouping of the movements for optimum instructional values. Also included are program notes on the eight works and their composers. In addition, the album contains a removable photographic wall-chart, illustrating the seating arrangement of a symphony orchestra.

Driscoll Promotes Smash

Chicago, April 4.

Dan Driscoll has joined Mercury Records as national field promotion manager for its new subsidiary label, Smash Records.

Driscoll was formerly with Warwick Records.

INSTRUMENT SALES AT PEAK

The dollar market represented by amateur musicians is zooming to an alltime high of over $600,000,000 this year, representing sales of musical instruments, sheet music and musical accessories. Last year's gross in this field was $590,000,000, representing a 7.3% increase over the preceding year and over 200% greater than the 1950 take of $235,000,000.

Currently, there are over 32,000,000 amateur musicians in the U. S., compared with 19,000,000 in 1950. According to figures compiled by the American Music Conference, an outfit dedicated to promoting amateur musical activities, the piano is still the top instrument with 21,150,000 persons playing. Other instruments and number of persons playing them are organ, 2,500,000; violin, cello, etc., 3,200,000; guitar, 4,750,000; accordion, 1,320,000; harmonica, 650,000; ukulele, 1,000,000; recorder, 550,000; brass instruments, 2,700,000; woodwinds, 2,800,000; drum, 375,000; flute, 1,275,000; others, 500,000. Total is more than the number of instruments since some persons play more than one instrument.

According to 1950 estimates, one person in every eight was playing some musical instrument regularly. Now slightly more than one person in six is tooting away. Whereas 20 years ago, the dollar volume of the musical instrument business was declining, currently it is on a sharp rise.

The market for sheet music is thus rapidly growing in the standard and educational field. Arrangements for bands, for instance, now have a market of 48,000 school bands in the U. S. plus 25,000 orchestras. In addition, there are 1,200 community symphony orchs composed of amateur musicians. Also there are about 1,600 combos, bands, orchestras, and symphonies supported or sponsored by industrial firms.

FTC Dismisses Col Payola Rap

The Federal Trade Commission has moved to dismiss its "payola" complaint against Columbia Records Sales Corp. which was filed last June. Harold A. Kennedy and Arthur Wolter Jr. made the motion for the Government to the FTC.

This marks one of the few times that the FTC has withdrawn a complaint although such labels as Capitol and Dot have asked that complaints against them be withdrawn.

The motion to dismiss the complaint notes that since the complaint was issued, Sec. 317 of the Communications Act has been amended so that diskeries can send cuffo platters to radio and tv stations. Harvey Schein, Col legalite, pointed out that the reason for the complaint against Columbia was for sending free disks to the stations and that it has never been involved in payola.

IDA COX SINGS AGAIN FOR RIVERSIDE LABEL

Ida Cox, veteran blues singer now in her 70s, is getting back into disk activity via a recording session for the Riverside jazz label this month. A contemporary of Bessie Smith, Miss Cox is now living in Knoxville, Tenn.

She fell out of sight since 1939 when she last appeared in a Carnegie Hall, N. Y. jazz concert under John Hammond's auspices. An appeal by Hammond last year in VARIETY to locate Miss Cox so that he could pay her some disk royalties was instrumental in the finding the whereabouts of the songstress.

Supreme Ct. to Decide Members' Rights To Intervene in ASCAP Consent Decree

Washington, April 4.

The arguments completed, U. S. Supreme Court ponders the legalistic braintwisters posed by the Sam Fox Music challenge to the 1960 consent decree signed by the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers.

The court's decision, which could come anytime before adjournment next summer, could in effect affirm the decree—or throw it open to modifications along lines proposed by Sam Fox Publishing Co., et al.

Two hours of oral arguments on the case last week centered on the basic issue of whether the Fox company (joined by Pleasant Music Corp. and Jefferson Music) were entitled to intervene in the proceedings leading to the latest decree.

Justice Dept., fighting the Fox challenge with ASCAP, put forward the argument that private parties don't have the right to step into consent decree proceedings and, in effect, say the Department is not doing its job in representing the public interest.

Dept. attorney Daniel Friedman told the court such a procedure could upset the whole consent decree system, and further cited the danger that ASCAP might pull out of the decree if Fox and the smaller fry contingent were permitted to intervene. Justices Felix Frankfurter, and Hugo Black, as well as Chief Justice Earl Warren questioned Friedman pointedly on this score.

Frankfurter commented skeptically: "Your position is that the Government represents everyone's interests and therefore no one can protect their own position."

Same Situation

Charles Horsky, of the Washington law firm of Covington & Burling, contended on behalf of the Fox challengers that the consent decree left the situation in ASCAP largely as it was before, i.e. the oldtime entrenched members were still in control.

Secondly, he maintained that if

Mills Releasing Folio Of Civil War Songs

Mills Music has climbed on the centennial commemoration of the Civil War with a new folio of songs titled "Echoes of the Civil War." It includes the 25 most popular tunes in the north and south during the war years, 1861-65.

The songs were arranged by Georges Bermont for piano, organ, guitar and accordion. Mills has arranged for a display of the folio at the Civil War Centennial Commission meeting in Charleston April 11-12.

UA Wraps Up 4 O'seas Deals

Art Talmadge, United Artists Records v.p. and general manager, wrapped up four foreign affiliate deals during his recent trip abroad. In each case, the foreign affiliates have agreed to retain the UA Records trademark on all disks in their respective companies.

The new affiliate in England will be EMI (Electric & Musical Industries). It'll be the first time in about five years that EMI will make this type of firm identification with a U.S. label. Deals were also completed with Barclay Records for France; CGD for Italy; and Hed Arzi for Israel. The affiliates were signed after meeting UA's guarantee requirements. The new pacts, which are on a longterm basis, go into effect April 15.

Talmadge made his two-week trip through Europe with Sidney Shemel, the label's director of foreign operations. Shemel is remaining in Europe where in the next couple of weeks he'll complete similar contractual arrangements covering Switzerland, the Scandinavian countries, Holland, Australia and New Zealand. In each case, Talmadge said the company will insist on its own logo identification.

Talmadge reported that the potency of the UA parent film company in Europe, plus the recent series of click singles and albums on the UA label, gave the diskery an important bargaining edge in discussions with the foreign companies seeking affiliation.

SOL GREENBERG UPPED TO MGM SALES CHIEF

Sol Greenberg has been upped at MGM Records to the post of national sales manager succeeding Leon Schachere. Greenberg, who had been diskery's single sales manager for the past two years, will be assisted by Harry Hostler, who had recently covered the midwest for MGM and Verve as a field rep.

Sidney Brandt, veepee in charge of operations, pointed out that these moves are in keeping with the company's policy of promoting from within the ranks wherever possible. Greenberg has been in the disk business since 1947 and Hostler operated an indie distributorship immediately prior to joining MGM/Verve.

This new move does not effect Bernie Silverman, former Verve sales chief, who will continue to direct sales activity for MGM and Verve in the 11 western states from his L. A. h.q.

Presley Raises $52.000 In Honolulu Benefit For U.S.S. Arizona Memorial

Honolulu, April 4.

One-night benefit for the U.S.S. Arizona war memorial fund grossed $52,000, thanks in part to a last-minute cash contribution of $5,000 by Elvis Presley, star of the show, and his manager, Col. Tom Parker.

Show was staged at Bloch Arena, Pearl Harbor, with about 5,500 persons in attendance. Presley's performance earned an overwhelming reception. One-nighter was staged Saturday night (25), with singer-actor now busy filming "Blue Hawaii" exteriors here for Hal Wallis Productions and Paramount release.

About 3,000 fans were at the airport to see Presley arrive.

Heidi Bruehl Snags German Gold Platter

Berlin, April 4.

Heidi Bruehl, 19-year-old German screen and recording star, received her first golden disk for her Philips platter, "Wir wollen niemals auseinandergehn" (We'll Never Part). Miss Bruehl, the fastest rising young German recording artist within the past years, has already waxed her first song in English, latter, "Ring of Gold Forever More," is on Epic in the U.S.

Miss Bruehl has also climbed in the film field. She's been filming ever since 1954 and is currently making her 23rd film, "One Prettier Than the Other," a Melodie production, which Axel von Ambesser is directing for Ufa Film Hansa.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By HERM SCHOENFELD

Jack Jones (Kapp): "BIG TIME" (Peter Maurice*) is a strong piece of material effectively delivered in a talk-sing rendition due for lotsa spins. "SHE'S MY DARLING, SHE'S MY HEART" (Garland*) is a pleasing ballad with an oldfashioned flavor.

The K-Nines (Vista): "101 DALMATIANS" (Wonderland†), title song of the Disney film, is a cute, moppet-angled number handled nicely by this choral group. "CRUELLA DE VIL" (Disney*), from the same pic, is a smoothly swinging rhythm ballad.

Don Lang & Frantic Five (King): "TIME MACHINE" (Nevins-Kirshner), a rocking number with a clever lyric, is belted in solid blues style by this singer and combo. "DON'T OPEN THAT DOOR" (J. Fields) is another side with commercial impact.

Jimmy Bowen (Capehart): "TEENAGE DREAMWORLD" (American†), a solid teen-angled ballad is handled in winning style by this young singer. "IT'S AGAINST THE LAW" (American†) is good rocking material.

Petti Ferguson (Valiant): "HEARTACHES OF YESTERDAY" (Sherman-DeVorzon), a slow ballad, is delivered in a very winning teenage groove by this songstress. "MR. GUITAR" (Sherman-DeVorzon) is an okay entry with the same kind of juve torch quality.

The Playboys (Chancellor): "BOSTON HOPP" (Rambed) is a swinging instrumental that'll get the kids hooting around the jukes. "WHAT'D I SAY" (Progressive) is a frantic rocker delivered by a combo known as The Cousins.

Aretha Franklin (Columbia): "ARE YOU SURE" (Frank-Rimmer), from the "Molly Brown" score, gets a potent workover from this fine songstress. "MAYBE I'M A FOOL" (Omelio) is another side delivered stylishly in a blues groove.

Johnny Burnette (Liberty): "BALLAD OF THE ONE-EYED JACKS" (Famous*), adapted from the Marlon Brando starrer, is an interesting folk saga projected effectively by this singer and chorus. "BIG BIG WORLD" (Studio†) is a pleasing country-flavored entry.

Andy Griffith (Capitol): "NEW RIVER TRAIN" (Andick†), a traditional folk number, is handled in flavorsome style by this performer. "THE ANDY GRIFFITH THEME" (Larrabee†), theme of Griffith's tv show, shapes up as a snappy instrumental executed by the Earle Hagen orch.

Bob Conrad (Darner Bros.): "I WANT YOU" (Monorco*) is a routine rocking ballad delivered in a standard vocal by this performer. "BALLIN' THE JACK" (MARS†) gets an okay workover.

The Fleetwoods (Dolton): "TRAGEDY" (Bluff City†), a slow ballad with a pretentious lyric, gets an arresting treatment by this vocal combo. "LITTLE MISS SAD ONE" (Camarillo†) is another pleasing ballad entry with chances.

Amanda Thigpen (Dot): "AFTER MY LAUGHTER CAME TEARS" (Cromwell, Shapiro-Bernstein*), an oldie, makes a strong bid for the current pop market in this blues-fashioned vocal by this newcomer. "MY BABY LOVES HIS GUITAR BETTER THAN ME" (Roosevelt) is a cute teen-angled idea for spins.

Cindy & Lindy (Coral): "HAVE SOME POPCORN" (Reis) is a teenage dialog set against a beat that may draw juve interest. "MATELOT" (Chappell*) is from Noel Coward's catalog making it too sophisticated for the teeners' taste.

Charlie Partee (Cub): "HOW COME" (Shalimar†) slides along with a catchy beat that will grab some teener approval. "PUT YOURSELF IN MY PLACE" (Shalimar†) has the zingy beat that usually pulls coins into the boxes.

Johnny Zee (Amy): "REBECCA, REMEMBER" (Music Hall Songs*) brings another femme name into the pop fold in a big ballad dressing that's good for some spinning shots. "WORLD'S APART" (Famous*) spins along pleasing ballad lines that's okay for an occasional jockey ride.

Bobby Freeman (Josie): "THE MESS AROUND" (Benell-Ed-Dar†), has the swinging rocking feel that the kids understand and usually build into a profitable spinning item. "SO MUCH TO DO" (Benell†) makes a lot of rocking noise but it does play up the sound the kids like.

Al Kasha (Brunswick): "WHERE THERE'S A WILL THERE'S A WAY" (Merrimac†) swings with a breezy beat that could attract the juke crowd. "MY ARMS, MY LIPS, MY HEART" (Merrimac†) has an interesting ballad form but its commercial possibilities are doubtful.

*ASCAP, BMI.

DON ELLIS TRIO
Village Vanguard, N.Y.

Young trumpeter Don Ellis, who preemed last week at the Village Vanguard, is an ultra-modernist who could develop into the most important brass soloist since Miles Davis came on the jazz scene.

Combining a rich and original tone quality with an equally rich creative flair for the modern structuring, Ellis gets an enthusiastic return from the audience segment that likes the cerebral.

Some of his stuff is out of innovator Ornette Coleman's book, and the rendering of same would come over more effectively with strong-er backing. It's too much for bass and piano accomp (solid drums would give a handle in the far-out reaches). But in the ballads and bop instrumentals, there's a genuine freshness.

Paul Bley on piano and Steve Swallow on bass are a fine compliment to the front man. Bill.

Album Reviews

Brenda Lee: "Emotions" (Decca). Brenda Lee, who has been riding a flock of single hits, gives another album showcasing to her countrified rocking style. In this collection, the young songstress mixes up ballads and rhythm numbers, revealing a broadening vocal talent. Standout are workovers of "Will You Love Me Tomorrow," "Georgia On My Mind," "Crazy Talk" and the album title song.

"1961 Italian Song Hits" (London). The top entries in the recent San Remo song contest have been gathered into a highly interesting portraits of the current state of the Italian pop market. Except for the lingo, it sounds very much like the U. S. scene. The prize-winning entry, "Al Di La'" is a rocking ballad while many of the others seem to be juve-slanted, although there are a couple traditional melodic entries scattered around. Each of the entries is delivered by a different singer.

Louis Armstrong: "A Rare Batch of Satch" (RCA Victor). Out of Victor's archives comes more classic jazz. Culled from Louis Armstrong's recordings in the 1930s, this set contains several choice Satchmo vocals and trumpet solos, including "I Gotta Right to Sing the Blues," "When You're Smiling," "I'll Be Glad When You're Dead You Rascal" and "Laughin' Louie," a standout piece of highjinks and musicianship.

Pat Harrington Jr.: "Some Like It Hip" (United Artists). Recorded during his stand at the Blue Angel, N. Y., this set adds Pat Harrington Jr.'s act to the swelling catalog of comedy on wax. Harrington skillfully projects his dialectics and comedy sketches, drawing several sharp characters in a routines that ranges from politics to Newport jazz, including a stopover at Tanganyika. One sample of tasteless language, which may be shocker on a nitery floor, adds absolutely nothing to the comedy impact.

Spectacular Sound of Harry James" (MGM). If the big bands are ever to come back, the Harry James sound should play a big role in the revival. In this package, James offers a sheaf of fresh material, including one long "Blues Ballet," "The Jazz Connoisseur," "Sweet's Tooth," the standard "Lover Man" and "Connectin' the Bones." It swings all the way.

Stanley Holloway: "Join in the Chorus" (Vanguard). This is a group of songs evoking the tradition of the old British music hall. Perhaps corny by present standards, these are historic pieces delivered in flavorsome style by veteran British performer Stanley Holloway with a choral assist. Included are such items as "Lily of Laguna," "While Strolling in the Park," "If You Were the Only Girl in the World," "The Galloping Major" and others of a similar genre.

"Wild Stereo Drums" (Capitol). Joining the big boom of percussion albums, this is an attractive set spotlighting a variety of orchestral groups in a tympany mood, tailored, of course, for stereo impacts. Included are numbers by Les Baxter, Pepe Dominguin, Dick Harrell, Felix Slatkin and Billy May's orch, each one packed with striking drum effects for the audiophile trade.

"Hank Snow's Souvenirs" (RCA Victor). This is a fine example of the current sound in the country & western idiom. One of the most consistent hit makers, Hank Snow has blended a pop approach to a backwoods simplicity on such tunes as "Rhumba Boogie," "A Fool Such As I," "I Don't Hurt Anymore," "With This Ring I Thee Wed," "These Hands," and others. This set marks Snow's 25th year with Victor.

Oscar Brand: "Songs for The Madcap Airman" (Elektra). This group of songs keyed to the air age has some amusing ideas, but it's a lot of material for a relatively narrow peg. Oscar Brand, a folksinger with an unpretentious style, delivers brightly and infectiously numbers like "Teterboro Tower," "When I First Set Out To Fly," "The Roving Flyer and "Passenger's Lament."

Tony Martin: "His Greatest Hits" (Dot). The power-packed romantic piping style that's identified Tony Martin over the years, is neatly recapped in this package. Some of the songs, like "I Get Ideas," "For Every Man There's a Woman" and "There's No Tomorrow," have become Martin trademarks and his fans will dig it all again.

"Aretha Franklin with the Ray Bryant Trio" (Columbia): This young Negro thrush is being developed nicely by the Columbia people. After stirring up some noise in the pop singles market, she's now out with her first LP which should widen her sales scope. "Won't Be Long" and "Today I Sing The Blues," with which she dented the singles market, are recapped here but there's also such substantial stuff as "Over The Rainbow" and "It Ain't Necessarily So" which she handles with impact. The Ray Bryant Trio supplies excellent support.

"Percussive Jazz—Vol. 2" (Audio Fidelity). Sid Cooper is a hipster who knows what sound is all about. He's supplied arrangements here that let's an all-star group blow its way through a flock of material that will please the jazz-audio buff. The sidemen on the date are all topnotch and the repertoire which includes such tunes as "Fever," "Everything's Coming Up Roses," "The Lady Is A Tramp," "Baubles, Bangles and Beads" and "Lullaby of Birdland" is hard to beat.

Sammy Kaye Orch: "Sing and Sway With Sammy Kaye" (Decca). Sammy kaye is going after some of that sing-along loot. By adapting the sing-along beat to his rhythmic swaying style, Kaye has come up with an LP that could go all the way. His repertoire, made up of familiar oldies, adds up to frolicsome listening and participating.

Julius Rudel Gets New Jobs at N.Y. City Center

Julius Rudel, general director and one of the conductors of the N.Y. City Opera, has been given expanded duties at the 55th Street house. Hereafter, he'll serve as musical director also of the light opera cycle, which this spring offers "Show Boat," "South Pacific," "Porgy and Bess" and "Pal Joey." He'll personally baton the first two, opening April 12 and April 26, respectively.

Rudel actually will be a three-phase official for City Center, since he has separately initiated a Gilbert & Sullivan cycle, which is to be a permanent fixture and, it is hoped, a raiser of profits to apply to the grand opera.

Pic Tunes Clicking Big Overseas Before & After Films Get Released

Zurich, March 28.

In view of a recent string of pop disk hits from just released or upcoming films, Swiss disk circles are once again asking themselves whether pre-release pushing of a potential hit song or theme can help to "make" a picture at the wickets or whether it's the other way around, i.e. a hit film automatically making a hit song. Actual experience of late has only served to confuse the issue once more since, in practice, it's actualy working both ways, according to the individual case.

The question has been cropping up due to the big hit registered in Switzerland with "Never On Sunday," the Greek-American release. Four different disk versions of the title tune are piling up solid grosses here, namely the original soundtrack version in Greek by pic's star, Melina Mercouri, on Barclay; a French version by Dalida on the same label; plus two German-language etchings by Caterina Valente (Decca-London) and Lale Anderson (Electrola). While the tune had already made an imprint here prior to the film's release, it's gone skyhigh once the picture had proven its b.o. potential, at least in some Swiss key cities.

Other film-disk hits have been following a similar trail since then, notably the Ferrante & Teicher recording, on London, of the "Theme from The Apartment." Here, the hit single has gone more or less parallel with the film, while the "Alamo" theme, "Green Leaves of Summer," on Col in the U.S., but released on Philips over here) has clearly preceded release of the John Wayne epic, currently at the Apollo Zurich. A French version of the "Alamo" theme, sung by France's Les Barclay vocal group on the Barclay label, is also among the hit singles here. It's a clear case as to "Pepe," title tune from the George Sidney production for Col. Although the pic is skedded for Swiss release in April only at the Scala Zurich, three different on-wax versions of the "Pepe" tune are already hot sellers here, namely the original soundtrack Shirley Jones recording on Colpix; Caterina Valente's German version (Decca-London); and Barclay etching by Italo-French singstress Dalida. It is hoped that the tune's disk success may serve as a potent trailer for the film. On the subject of film-disk potential, an interesting phenomenon, and one which further clouds the issue of promotion value in the disk biz here, is the case of Elvis Presley. According to reports from RCA's Swiss rep, Musikvertrieb A.G. Zurich headed by Maurice Rosengarten, every Presley record released in Switzerland so far has emerged as suretire hit. On the other hand, every Presley picture so far has flopped in this country. Latest example is "Wooden Heart," a top seller here, while the film "G.I. Blues" (Par) from which the tune is derived, has shared the fate of its predecessors. Explanation is probably the fact that the majority of Presley disk fans, same as all over the world, is in the teenage-or-under group, whilst in most Swiss cantons admission age for most pictures, including Presley's, is 18.

Fabian Graduates

Philadelphia, April 4.

Fabian had returned home briefly for his private graduation exercises at South Philadelphia High School. The 18-year-old rock 'n' roller had been turned down at the Jan. 19 graduation, when pressure of film and recording work prevented him from making several grades.

The youth won't be around for the June ceremonies. He told school principal Joseph J. Rossi that his appearance "might detract from the other graduates on their big day." Fabian completed his English courses at the studio schools of 20th Century-Fox and Paramount and made up his trigonometry by tutoring. Rossi described him as a B-plus student.

Monaural sales at the factory fell from 118,400 January, 1960, to only 80,366 last January. During the same period, retail sales of monaural sets dropped from 150,688 to 105,753.

London, April 4.

Composer Lionel Bart scored a double triumph in the 1960 Ivor Novello Awards. Score of his hit musical "Oliver!" was voted the year's outstanding musical contribution to stage play, film tv or radio production. And the show's standout number "As Long As He Needs Me," which remained in the charts for six months, was picked as 1960's bestselling, most performed work.

The ditty was also runnerup in the Outstanding Song category, bringing another mention of Bart's name in the Awards in which it has figured 10 times in the last four years.

Winners of the Outstanding Song award were Cyril Ornadel and EMI recording manager Norman Newell for their "Portrait of My Love." Jerry Lordan's "Apache" was voted "outstanding composition in the beat idiom" and a special award went to Dave Lee and Herbert Kretzmer for the Sophia Loren-Peter Sellers hit "Goodness Gracious Me." Eric Maschwitz, head of BBC Light TV Entertainment, also won an Ivor for "outstanding personal service to British pop music." And another Award went to Bob Farnon's "Seashore" in the light orchestral section.

Awards are organized by the Songwriters' Guild of Great Britain. Statuettes for the winners and certificates for the runners-up will be presented at a BBC-TV show on May 22.

Bad Disk Timing Hurts Air Spins

Mobile, April 4.

Record manufacturers have been hit with a ban on many of their new releases by their failure to time them properly. Dick Price, one of the leading disk jockeys at station WKRG here, said that station policy will be to toss aside all records where "playing time' is not accurate.

Average time for playing a record now is "2:20" or two minutes and 20 seconds of playing time. When accurate, a d.j. can tape up a full hour session with announcements in between. But when a record labelled "2:20" runs two and 40 seconds or two minutes and 55 seconds, a whole hour or three-hour period can be fouled up. Hence issuance of such a warning to all record makers.

Chicago, April 4.

A non-appearance by Fabian created a riot at a rock 'n' roll dance in outlying Tinley Park here last week. Promoter Jim Lounsbury had promised the personal appearance at a similar dance in neighboring Joliet the night before.

A half dozen Fabian fan clubbers, readily identifiable by gray streaks powdered throughout their hair, became the focal point for the donnybrook, which involved 500 teensters and state, county and local police.

Chi papers accepted the promoter's assertion that Fabian cancelled because the teenagers rioted. However, Police Chief Harold C. Moore, explained: "The crowd was orderly until the word got around that Fabian was not going to show. Then, away they went."

AFM Boom Falls On Jingle Outfit

Following through on its pledge to tighten up its policing activities in the recording field, the American Federation of Musicians has put The Jingle Mill, N.Y. commercial recording outfit, on its "unfair" list. Union musicians who allegedly provided services for The Jingle Mill will be required to answer charges of working for a recording company that has no pact with the AFM governing their pay and working conditions.

Herman Kenin, AFM prexy, said there was a chain of "cut-rate mass production lines operating in the U.S. and Canada. We are determined to establish uniformity of practice among our some 1,400 contract signatories in the U.S. and Canada. Rooting out the sweatshop operators and denying them music services will get our prior and vigorous attention."

Mexico City, April 4.

The U.S., Costa Rica and Mexico are vying for the honor of being the site of an inter-American assembly of musicians. Meeting being convened for the purpose of establishing the bases for an Inter-American Federation of Musicians.

According to a spokesman of the Mexican National Union of Musical Workers, a preliminary meeting of Mexican and American elements agreed that further talks will have to be held to set up the big convention. However, the matter of site is an open question still.

Mexican union officials feel site should be this capital since idea of the Latin American Federation of Musicians originated in the republic, and invites were sent to musician representatives in Central and South America.

Recently, however, American musicians have shown interest in the idea, want to be included in the Federation. Therefore original plan of a Latin federation has been shelved in favor of a continental one.

While nothing definite has been decided, delegates of the National Union last week approved unanimously a proposal to ask that the meetings be held in Mexico the first year. Then future conventions would be on a rotating basis, in various nations joining the organization.

Walter Ward Asks 100G In Suit Vs. Coast Label

Ward asks the court to declare him free to record for anyone, as of May 2, 1960, claiming defendants allegedly failed to follow formula permitting him to select material. He also alleges no royalty payments on "Dance by the Light of the Moon" record in Olympics album have been made, and said defendants put in other "dramatic and singing groups in same album without his consent."

Pettiford Widow in Row With Fund Administrators

Copenhagen, April 4.

The six administrators of the Oscar Pettiford Memory Fund here and the bassist's widow, Jacqueline, are in a hassle over funds. The administrators claim that she should get a job to help support her three children while she is beefing over the way they are managing the trust.

There is now about a 34,000 kroner ($4,913) balance in the trust which was set up last September for the care and education of the Pettiford children. Since mid-January, the widow has been getting 100 kroner ($14.45) a week from the fund. The administrators say that if she doesn't go to work the fund's capital will be exhausted in about four years. Pettiford died last September.

Inside Stuff—Music

Bert Kelly, veteran jazz bandleader who claims to be the first to have used the term "jazz," has authored an historical jazz book, "I Created Jazz," to be published by Vantage Press in July. According to Kelly, the word "jazz" was a racy slang localism in San Francisco from 1899 to 1914, commonly used a verb until a San Francisco sportswriter used it as an adjective to describe the condition of the city's baseball team. Kelly claims to have carried the word to Chicago at the College Inn where he organized a new type of dance band, using "jazz" as a noun to describe his type of music. VARIETY, covering the music scene as of Oct. 27, 1916, carried the following comment: "Chicago has added another innovation to its list of discoveries in the so-called Jazz Bands. The Jazz Band is composed of three or more instruments and seldom plays regulated music. The College Inn and practically all other high-class places of entertainment has a Jazz Band featured."

When the State Dept. and its administrative agent, American National Theatre & Academy, ruled recently that Europe would be overcrowded this summer with American talent, it was sad news for Henry Lewis, of Los Angeles. It had been set for Lewis and a group to play Vienna and other European dates, which would have been an important prestige break for the Negro conductor. Lewis was coming up fast after successfully subbing for the indisposed Igor Markevitch in Los Angeles, and getting rave notices, including the N. Y. Times and Time mag. But the European trip went kaput when ANTA vetoed the $10,000 travel subsidy, which previously seemed assured.

The Country Music Assn. is planning to spread its gospel with an educational program in the public schools. In this connection, Mrs. Marguerite Yelton, of South Bend, Ind., has been researching in Nashville all of the past week and laying the foundation for an educational series on country music which she proposes to present in the form of lectures, slides, tapes, etc. For some years, Mrs. Yelton has been presenting a similar-styled educational series on wild life. She has already interested many school officials in the country music program.

The American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers has reprinted an article by its general counsel, Herman Finkelstein, that originally appeared in VARIETY's 55th anni edition on Jan. 4 of this year. Titled "How Shall The Period of Copyright Be Extended," it proposed that the present 56-year copyright term, divided into two equal terms, be extended. One suggestion is adoption of the European convention of having copyrights run for the life of the author plus 50 years.

Lou Brecker, founder and exec director of Roseland Dance City, is marking his 44th anni as ballroom impresario this month. Brecker started in the ballroom biz in Philadelphia in 1917, moving to New York in 1919 when he opened the original Roseland on Broadway, latter moving to the current West 52d St. site after the former spot was torn down for a new building development.

"Culture of the Baroque," book by Theresa Schuessel, just published in Austria by Stiasny Verlag, Graz, Styria, contains the history of the "first opera." This time it is "Il Pomo d'Oro" (Apple of Gold) by Marc Antonio Cesti, written in 1666, text by Francesco Sbarra. Opera had five acts in 67 scenes. Lots of controversy going on.

The Record Industry Assn. of America has published technical standards for the manufacture of the new 7-inch 33⅓rpm record. Known as bulletin "E 4," the standards have already been circulated among RIAA members. They are also available, on request, to any interested party in the industry.

"The Green Leaves of Summer," the Dimitri Tiomkin-Paul Francis Webster tune from "The Alamo" which recently won an Academy Award nomination, is getting an international spread. The song is rolling in Japan, Spain and Italy and has been covered with over 40 disks in France.

The Big 3 (Robbins, Feist & Miller) is prepping a drive on Harry Tobias' catalog to celebrate his 50th year as a songwriter. The firm is currently pushing the Tobias Golden Anniversary with the disk jockeys.

his clients were allowed to intervene, the decree wouldn't have to be tossed out the window. Federal Judge Sylvester Ryan, who thumbed down the Fox appellants as intervenors, could merely hold a hearing on proposed modifications, Horsky said.

Finally, Horsky took the position that Justice Dept. would do well to get the benefits of his clients' expertise in a matter so complex as the inner workings of ASCAP. He said the Fox firm has been an ASCAP member for 40 years, while the other two companies have belonged for two decades.

The referendum by which the decree changes were okayed by ASCAP members might have had a different result if Fox and the other dissidents had been able to put forward their arguments in a court proceeding.

"We think it would be a monstrous doctrine to give it conclusive effect unless members had all the facts," Horsky averred.

Dominant ASCAP Group

The power of the dominant ASCAP group, he argued, is little reduced by the revision. Horsky hit particularly at what he termed an "obvious conflict of interest situation" whereby the staff under direction of the ASCAP board determines what data should go into the survey used to split the royalty pie.

ASCAP attorney John Dooling Jr. asked the court to dismiss the Fox appeal outright for lack of jurisdiction. Justice Dept. took this position last year, but prior to the arguments withdrew it.)

His main point was that, contrary to what the Fox challengers insisted, individual members of the Society aren't bound by the terms of the decree and therefore aren't forestalled from going to court later after the decree is finally effective. Frankfurter commented that he had trouble understanding the fine points raised in connection with the rights of ASCAP as a whole versus the rights of its individual members.

The Justice raised the question of whether—assuming an individual member successfully sued the Society in the future— the effect would be the same as if the Fox dissidents were allowed to intervene, i.e. the decree would be torpedoed.

Friedman, the Justice Dept. attorney, repeatedly conceded that the decree could have gone further on certain points. But he insisted that give-and-take is necessary in a consent decree negotiation and the 1960 revision, in the eyes of the department, was the best that could be extracted from ASCAP.

Mexico's Tooter Hassle Ends in Uneasy Truce With New Union Setup

Mexico City, April 4.

Venus Rey, who has been fighting to establish his own musician's union for the past 18 months, has finally won out. His Union Sindical de Musicos (Syndical Musicians Union) has been legally acknowledged by the Department of Labor's Conciliation & Arbitration Board last week.

Tirso Rivera, head of the established Mexican Musicians Union, and who has been feuding with Rey in matter of collective work contracts in recent months, said that the Board's decision was "the best for everybody" and that now there will be an end to internal bickering in ranks of musicians.

But Rivera warned that only as long as new union does not invade jurisdiction of his own organization, will there be peace. If Rey attempts to snatch labor contracts away from Rivera's union, there will be a new flare up of inter-union strife, latter asserted.

That the peace within ranks of musicians is an uneasy one is seen in latest Rey move. He has asked authorities to nullify collective work contracts in theatres, clubs, restaurants, etc., and to assign negotiation rights to his union. His argument being that majority of musicians in these spots belong to his union.

BENNY WITH CASALS FOR PUERTO RICO SYMPH

San Juan, P.R., April 4.

Plans are being formulated for Jack Benny to give a benefit violin concert with the Puerto Rico Symphony Orchestra "if Pablo Casals agrees to conduct."

In an impromptu appearance at the Condado Beach Hotel's Fiesta Room recently, Benny said the idea was discussed during his visit with Casals at the maestro's Isla Verde (a suburb) home.

Benny said he presented his first concert at Carnegie Hall for the benefit of the Musician's Retirement Fund four years ago. Shortly thereafter requests were received from orchestras all over the country inviting him to appear. Benny said that he has given about 24 such concerts.

The Casals-Benny meeting was arranged, Benny said, through his "close friend, Isaac Stern." Also present at the informal meeting was conductor-violinist Alexander Schneider, a resident of Puerto Rico.

Benny described his visit with Casals as one of the most memorable events of his career. He said he was intrigued with the intellect as well as the talents and simplicity of Don Pablo.

Benny's two-week Caribbean vacation, with Chicago hotel magnate Morris DeWoskin, began in Aruba, Netherlands, West Indies. Two men arrived in San Juan last week.

The firm, which up to now has specialized in freelance disk production work, is planning to expand into the premium record field working with ad agencies and manufacturers.

Taubman Raps TV's Tooter Brush

Sez Television Spends More on Trucking Than on Musicians

Fewer than 200 musicians out of 38,000 enrolled in Local 802, N. Y. branch of the American Federation of Musicians, are now employed in the tv field, Paul Taubman, who compiled the figures, says that tv has broadened the horizons of practically every creative talent except the musical one.

Taubman, an orchestra leader member of 802 and a member of the board of governors of the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, added that it looks as if music in tv is pulled out of tape libraries haphazardly by a clerk.

He pointed out that the tv industry spends far more money on trucking, stagehands, mimeographing services, and other such secondary elements than on musicians: "It is typical of tv today," he said, "that a producer spends upward of $100,000 on a one-hour dramatic show and then tries desperately to save the minimum $1,000 needed for live music by using old, and many times worn-out recorded bridges and softmood tapes from the library. As an example, Taubman mention a recently presented one-and-a-half hour dramatic show budgeted at $126,000. The cost for music was $81.75.

"A long time ago, the radio industry," he added, "developed a number of great orchestras and discovered great musical talents but today tv producers are buying musical backgrounds taped in Germany, France and Italy where the musicians perform for half the price." Taubman says he's now planning to wage a crusade for more live music on tv shows.

Moe Preskell Joins Kapp for Promotion

Moe Preskell has joined Kapp Records as director of promotion. Preskell, who'll work with deejays, tv as well as handle special dealer liaison, activated the Walt Disney and Wonderland Music companies and also was affiliated with Simon & Schuster's Golden Records.

In another appointment at Kapp, Chris Saner has been upped to the post as assistant national sales manager. He'll assist national sales manager Joe Cerami in the supervision of national sales and branch operations. Saner started with Kapp about a year ago as N.Y. branch manager.

Brit. Disk Sales 20% Over 1960; Exports Slide

London, April 4.

Disk sales in U.K. continue on the upbeat. In January platters totalled $4,600,400—20% up on January last year and 30% above the previous highest January figure in 1958.

But the spin of home sales is offset by a slowdown in export sales which, according to Board of Trade figures, were 6% less tan in January, 1960.

The U.S. recession is blamed for this scratchy note behind the big boom-boom noises being made by British diskeries. Last year nearly a third of their exports went to the U.S., the largest single market. This year the percentage has dropped to a quarter.

But, manufacturers expect 1961's retail sales to top 1960's peak $84,000,000. Prelim indications are that the February and March figures are also up on last year.

Since 1956 the big leap in British disk sales has been in extended play which have spun from under 7,000,000 to over 51,000,000 last year. But standard 78 rpm disks have tumbled from 47,500,000 to under 4,000,000.

board member Arthur Schwartz, who denied that he or any other writer on the board were satellites or "mercenaries"; and by former Judge Ferdinand Pecora, of Schwartz & Frolich, ASCAP attorneys, who defended the hiring of the best men in Washington to support music biz legislation.

In an unusual appearance in a discussion, Herman Starr, head of the Warner Bros. music combine, the top publishing company in ASCAP, lashed out at Evans for attacking ASCAP's leadership as being selfish. Starr said that Evans was either "diabolical and cunning" or was "plain stupid" in making such an attack. Adams was compelled to caution Starr about making personal attacks. Louis Bernstein, of Shapiro-Bernstein, also rose to protest against the direction of Evans attack.

Other speakers from the floor including Hans Lengsfelder, Pinky Herman and Louis Bellin. Ned Washington delivered the report for ASCAP's exec committee and Frank Conner made the treasurer's report.

At the present time, ASCAP now has on its roster 5,329 writers and 1,740 publishers.

Schaeffers' 20th Anni

Berlin, April 4.

Peter Schaeffers Produktion, Berlin, one of Germany's top music publishing houses, observes its 20th anni this month.

House has published round 5,000 songs, including "Auf Wiedersehn," "Bon Soir," "Tina-Marie," "Chico, Chico, Charly," "Banjo Boy" and the current "Pepe." Latter reportedly has been waxed by more than 60 diskeries so far.

'RAGTIME' VIDEO SHOW IN PLAGIARISM SUIT

Rudi Blesh and Harriet Janis have filed suit in N.Y Federal Court against NBC, the Purex Co. and Edward H. Weiss Co., Hoagy Carmichael and others, complaining there was an alleged infringement on their book called "They All Played Ragtime, the True Story of an American Music" by "Those Ragtime Years," an NBC-TV show last November.

The plaintiffs wrote "They All Played Ragtime" prior to 1959 and assigned the rights to Alfred Knopf Inc., which published it. In July, 1959, Knopf reassigned the rights to the plaintiffs who revised the original and added new material and then in 1960 filed copyrights with the revised edition.

The defendants allegedly infringed when they brodcast, sponsored, produced, performed and packaged "Those Ragtime Years."

be the foreign ones. That is, the Israeli audience will see the trial via London or New York, a few weeks late, with foreign narration.

There are negotiations under way to avoid this absurd situation. For the time being, a local documentary is running in film houses showing the courtroom where Eichmann will stand trial and telling the audiences that "this is the trial you will not see."

If situation does not change, Israelis will only listen to the proceedings, on the Kol Israel radio. And a closed circuit tv will be set up for the first time in the country, leading from the courtroom to a nearby hall with 700 seats, no admission fee.

Another problem that is worrying the film houses in connection with the Eichmann trial is the fate of German speaking pix. For many years Jewish resentment to anything German was so strong that nobody would have dared to sound a German voice in his movie. But in recent years Swiss and Austrian made—or at least labeled—pix have infiltrated the Israel market. German-made pix are still forbidden officially. Many an editorial was written against the German speaking Austrian and Swiss pictures, even demonstrations were held against some movies. By former inmates of Nazi concentration camps, but the pix kept coming.

Early Inking Causes Gregory to Lose Loot in Mpls. Nitery Despite SRO Biz

Minneapolis, April 4.

Fast-rising comic Dick Gregory figures his first appearance in this city was a money-losing proposition for him even though Freddie's nightclub where he closes Wednesday (5) has been packing 'em in during Gregory's nine-day stint. "My salary here these two weeks won't even pay the hotel bills for the three of us—my press agent, my secretary and me," Gregory told Minneapolis Tribune columnist Will Jones.

Gregory noted that his contract with Freddie's for $450 a week and signed shortly before the entertainer rocketed to national prominence through stories in Time and Newsweek and a guest spot on the Jack Paar show, is costing him $6,000 a week. He's now asking and getting $6,500 weekly for cafe dates next fall.

Negro comedian asked his agent to buy up his contract with Freddie's but was told, "If it looked good to you at $450, p'ay it." Adding option insult to financial injury, Freddie's has options with Gregory for subsequent appearances at $750 and $1,000 weekly. Comic isn't too distressed with these financial breaks of the game, however, pointing out that he expects his income to be up from $1,500 last year to $800,000 in 1961.

Signing of Gregory at rock-bottom prices represents another coup for Freddie's owner Pete Karalis. With a gift for latching on to stellar performers just before they reach the top, he inked Bob Newhart for two appearances last year at fractional figures, shortly before Newhart attained stardom.

SIEBRAND CARNIVAL LOSES NEW MEXICO

Albuquerque, April 4.

The newly-named State Fair Commission, in its first session last week, earmarked a total of $65,000 to be spent for entertainment for the 11-day 1961 New Mexico State Fair Sept. 14-24. At the same time, the board authorized Manager Tex Barron and chairman Jack Dillon to negotiate for the talent.

Entertainment budget is an increase of $15,000 over the 1960 show. Last year, Barron was authorized to spend up to $50,000 for talent for the show, and got by with a bill for $26,500.

Barron is expected to go to the Coast in the next couple of weeks to o.o. talent and talk to agents.

After 10 years on the midway for the New Mexico exposition, Siebrand Bros. Carnival of Phoenix this year won't be on the line-up. The show was unseated by Craft Shows of North Hollywood for the 1961 contract.

Beutler Bros., Elk City, Okla., rodeo stock suppliers and long a part of the State Fair here, had their contract renewed to supply stock for the show, the price to be determined by the number of performances planned—an item yet to be worked out, since there will be some change in shows, due to extension of the fair from 9 to 11 days this time around.

Chairman Dillon from Albuquerque is a motel and restaurant operator. Other new members on the board are: Kenneth Black, Arrey; Tom Slaughter, Roswell, and T. D. Neal, Eagle Nest.

L.A. Theatreman Sells Holdings, Turns Producer

Los Angeles, April 4.

Herman Miller, partnered with Fred Stein for past five years in theatre operations, has sold his 50% interest in three corporations to Stein and will swing over to production of rhytnm and blues shows in Southern California theatres.

Properties included the Mirea Corp., owner of Center Theatre and Snack Bar; G.&G., Inc., operator of Golden Gate Theatre; and P.&M. Corp., operator of Boulevard Theatre, all located in East Los Angeles.

First of Miller's new shows will be staged at Manchester Theatre April 16, with second to be at Lyric, Monrovia, April 23. He previously produced such exploitation shows at three theatres which he disposed to Stein.

N.Y. State Fails to Raise Legal Drinking Age to 21

Albany, April 4.

The legal drinking age in New York State will remain at 18 for another year. Bills raising it to 21 were killed in the Senate and Assembly Excise committees last week. The highly controversial issue, which has brought pressure from neighboring states with a 21-year age minimum, was referred to the Joint Legislative Committee on Intoxicating Liquor for study.

Agitation in the legislature for lifting the quaffing age to 21 has been going on since 1953. Latest measure was jointly sponsored by Assemblyman Lucio F. Russo, a Staten Island Republican, and Senator Dutton S. Peterson, an upstate Republican.

Russo believed this year's bill would have passed by an overwhelming vote, if one had been taken. "Part of the vote," he said, "would have come from members actually for the legislation; the rest from members influenced by sentiment back home."

Hilton Expansion Policy Puts Revue Into Denver Hotel

The Hilton chain is expanding vaude operations. Already the largest hotel loop talent user, it is now inaugurating shows in the Denver Hilton. Signed to start the policy is a Barry Ashton Revue which will go in May 1 for 12 weeks.

The 12-week booking indicates that the Denver inn will give the talent try a longterm trial. It'll be a non-name production policy for the time being, but it's always possible to add names as they become available.

In most Hilton hotel situations, the matter of booking acts is generally up to individual inn managers with, of course, approval by the regional or national office. Of late, more hotelmen are looking into the feasibility of shows because of the heavy accent on the convention trade. Shows, as well as other entertainment, are deemed essential to nabbing conventions.

Ashton, who will inaugurate the product on policy in Denver, is also the producer at the New Frontier, Las Vegas, and the 365 Club, San Francisco.

Can. Sportsman's Show Gate Dips to 80,000

Ottawa, April 4.

An estimated 80,000 attendance for the eight-day Central Canada Sportsman's Show, which shuttered Saturday (1) in the Coliseum here, was down slightly from the 1960 figure. Cold, wet and snow on the final Sat. is believed responsible for counteracting the expected upped date for the Easter holiday weekend.

Pompoff Thedy Family billtopped the arena show which also had Barbara Morris and seals, Billy Roe dogs, Anne Clark archery, a Canadian Indian family in powwow terp, others. Billy Long emceed. Exhibit section had two Canadian Television names, Peter Whittal of "Mr. Fix-It" and King Whyte who has his own tv web sports stint. James Ledgerwood was general manager. Al Saunders batoned the pit band.

New Steel Pier Ad-Pub Chief

Atlantic City, April 4.

Jack Goldman, of Philadelphia, has been named advertising manager and publicity director of Steel Pier George A. Hamid Sr., operator of the showplace.

Goldman formerly was a manager in the Warner Bros. theatre chain in Philadelphia and was a press agent for Allied Artists and Universal-International picture companies.

Edmonton, Alta., Aud Hikes Rental Fees 11%

Edmonton, Alta., April 4.

Edmonton's Jubilee Auditorium will boost its rental fees an average of 11% on July 1 in an effort to bring revenue closer to expenditure. E. R. Hughes, chairman of the auditorium management committee, said the old rates were, in some cases, "not enough to cover the cost of turning on the lights."

In the fiscal year ending March 31, 1960, the cost of operating the auditorium was $285,000 and revenue from all sources was only $95,000. Hughes said the rates were established in 1957 at a level that would encourage the use of the auditorium.

He estimated the new rates will only cut the deficit by five per cent. The commercial rate for a single performance in the main theatre will be $600 after July 1, compared with $500 at present. Additional performances on the same day will cost $450 instead of the present $250.

Vegas Dunes To Ax Nude Policy?

Las Vegas, April 4.

The future of Harold Minsky as entertainment director of the Dunes Hotel here is up in the air. Major Riddle, hotel's operator, is mulling a name policy to succeed the Minsky format in which nude production motifs predominate.

Riddle is reportedly anxious to bring in as many names as is possible, and he feels that he will be unable to do so as long as bare-bosomed babes are featured. Riddle is said to have been shopping for name talent as well as imported novelties.

The Minsky policy is generally given credit for putting the Dunes in the black. Hotel had been a white elephant until Minsky was installed by Bill Miller, who was in charge of entertainment before Riddle became operator. The nude policy was so phenomenally successful that many inns along Route 91 followed suit immediately.

Vegasites Do a Reverse Horace Greeley: Go East For Broadway Ganders

There's a temporary trek east of Las Vegasites. Abe Schiller, the city's goodwill ambassador who is with the Flamingo Hotel, was in New York briefly last week before taking off for Europe, where he'll spread the Vegas gospel and scout talent for the hotel. He'll be gone several weeks.

Also expected in New York within a fortnight is Ben Goffstein, president of the Riviera Hotel. Goffstein, who has the final say on talent buying, will gander the current Broadway crop of shows in an effort to find a successor to "La Plume de ma Tante."

He's especially interested in "Gypsy," the David Merrick production which is on tour. Most of the legit enterprises at the Riviera were initially produced by Merrick.

Others in and out of New York are Jack Entratter, Sands Hotel prexy, who was recently in the city and is expected in town again soon, and Stan Irwin, the entertainment director of the Sahara Hotel.

From Reno, Bill Miller of the Riverside Hotel gandered the crop of Gotham cafe shows before planing back about 10 days ago.

TENNESSEE ERNIE TO STAR IN CCE '61 SHOW

Ottawa, April 4.

Central Canada Exhibition's grandstand show for its 1961 season will be produced by Stuart McClelland for MCA. Star will be Tennessee Ernie Ford, with Anita Bryant and June Taylor Dancers also pacted. Johnny Matson will emcee and Teddy Phillips will baton the pit band.

CCE office expects to announce other names within the next two weeks. Exhibition runs Aug. 18 to 26 sans Sunday (20), with Ford et al. appearing Aug. 21 and 26. It will replace its annual gate-booster raffle of a house and lot with a $25,000 silver dollar giveaway.

Catskill Resorts Holding Line On Need for Talent, Charlie Rapp Opines

The Catskill mountain hotels will use at least as much entertainment this summer as in previous years, according to Charlie Rapp, the largest booker of talent in that area. Adverse economic tides won't hurt the use of acts in the mountains, he feels, inasmuch as all inns must now go after conventions. Once the hotels book organization business they must use the best acts available.

Most hotels must book talent over the weekend, Rapp said, to insure entertainment for the regular guests. However, with increasing solicitation for banquets and palavers, the amount of talent must be ample to meet the evening entertainment requirements.

The mere fact that hotels must go after the mass business, Rapp points out, makes the increased use of entertainment mandatory. The number of spots that will be booking acts cannot be estimated at this point. However, the key date for the seasonal preem is the Memorial Day weekend, when every hotel puts on a major act splurge.

The current Passover holidays are also important entertainment barometers in the area. But most of the hotels theme their divertissement along religioso lines, with bookings of cantors as the major headliners.

Rapp's territory, as last year, will encompass the Sullivan County spots, some hotels in the Pennsylvania Poconos as well as several New Jersey inns. He remains the largest Catskill booker by far, supplying most of the hotels with talent.

As in former years, many acts will be doubling and tripling on weekends. The Catskill route is the most important area for the small performer based in New York, since many of them live throughout the year on what is earned in the mountains during the summer.

Ravazza Bows Room At Pitt's Beverly Hills

Pittsburgh, April 4.

The Beverly Hills Hotel, a plush nitery in the North Hills section here, has expanded its facilities to seat 400 and will open its new room Thursday (6) with Carl Ravazza at its first headliner.

The hotel housed the area's first intimery 10 years ago when it was owned by Max Deaktor, but it went under when he booked shows that were so expensive he couldn't make the nut even with capacity crowds. Diosa Costella and Ciro Rimac and his revue opened the room that could only seat a little over 50 people.

Connie Costa took it over three years ago and she attempted names again and while she did business, her lack of capacity prevented her from showing a profit. During the past two years she has built up a banquet business and has been using local shows on weekends. Local agent, George Claire, is booking.

Talent May Find Fresh Market In L.I. Beach Clubs

The Long Island beach clubs, most of which have major league entertainment on weekends, may be in for a talent revolution now that the Malibu Shore Club, Long Beach, L.I., is trying for a consistent schedule of names throughout the week.

Sol Liestner, Malibu's operator, is negotiating for Pearl Bailey to go in June 30 for seven days to be followed by Louis Armstrong July 7 and Xavier Cugat & Abbe Lane to start July 14. Deals are being finalized for these acts.

According to Liestner there is still no decision as to whether the turns will work in the 750-seater for members only or whether non-members will be admitted. Indications are that non-members will be let in during weekdays. Roster of members of the beach club now runs around 5,000.

Full week name entertainment may force other beach club operators in the New York area to follow suit and expand entertainment budgets. With the lure of name entertainment free to guests, there is likely to be a strong incentive to get on clubs' membership rosters.

Boston's Bradford Roof Bows 'Theatre in Round'

Boston, April 4.

The Bradford Roof initiated its new wrinkle of theatre in the round with "Where's Charley?" in its 450-seat nitery layout atop the Bradford Hotel tonight, Tuesday (4). The two-hour musical, starring Will Able, is offered with a full course dinner starting at $4.95; Saturdays, $5.95; followed by dancing.

Billed as "Boston's first music theatre in the round restaurant," the spot has set "Can-Can" for April 25-May 14; and "The Boy Friend," May 16-June 11.

Judy in Dallas Repeat

Dallas, April 4.

Mrs. J. David Nichols, head of the Dallas Theatre Guild, has set Judy Garland for a return one-nighter here in May. Miss Garland is also slated for a return engagement in Houston on May 10. Miss Garland's initial engagement here Feb. 21, was one of the most spectacular shows ever presented at the Music Hall.

The Dallas Theatre Guild has submitted an offer, through Associated Booking Corporation's local office, for the Eleanor Powell revue which recently closed at the Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas.

AGMA SLATES FIRST 'SHOWCASE' AUDITIONS

The American Guild of Musical Artists will hold the first AGMA "Showcase" auditions tomorrow (Thurs.) and Friday for productions to be staged by the union designed to develop new musical talent. AGMA is slated to produce "Der Freischutz," the Von Weber opera to be presented in the fall. It's to be followed by Verdi's "Falstaff" to be conducted by Enrico Leide at the Brooklyn Museum. Both will be broadcast by WNYC, N.Y.

Other events on the fall season program include an evening of dance and a concert of AGMA instrumental and vocal soloists.

According to Faine, AGMA executive secretary, the group in charge of auditions will be a 10-member executive planning committee to comprise Robert Ackart, Adele Addison, Suzanne Ames, Ann Ayars, Frances Bible, Frank Kanan, Tilda Morse, Thomas Pyle, Regina Resnik and Betty Stone. Richard Stuart Flusser will be director of this project.

Ray Charles Racking Up Solid Grosses on Tour

The first two dates of the Ray Charles tour has hit bonanza proportions. Promoter Hal Zeiger says that two performances Saturday (1) at the Music Hall, Kansas City, and the Kiel Auditorium, St. Louis, the following day scored $30,038.

Gross in Kansas City resulted in $11,618, while the St. Louis take came to $18,420. Charles hits Carnegie Hall, N.Y., April 30.

A.C.'s 'Gay 90s' Room Bows at Ritz-Carlton

Atlantic City, April 4.

Ritz-Carlton hotel, on the boardwalk at the lower end of the hostel belt, opened its Gay Nineties room Saturday night (1) featuring Rose Gallo and her piano. Room, located off the boardwalk, will use some talent during season.

Ritz, now operating under a management of local residents, plans many renovations as the season approaches.

Ringling Show

Uncle Sam bedecked in red-white-blue hue. Each effort is knowingly cornball for the mass eye, and dazzling with a what's-gonna-happen-next? impact.

Sock Second Half

By convention, the post-intermission segment packs most of the hi-powered dramatics, which may account for the impression of lags in the forepart. Top thriller exotic is high-wire exponent Harold Alzana, a Ringling staple. His net-less 40 feet up is strong stuff, not withstanding the portable net below, and the plaudits are deservedly loud. As in the past, the cannonshoot of the two Zacchini sisters is the showstopper, and a bang in both meanings.

There's sufficiency to spare in the trapeze and kindred performing. Standard but slick stints are turned in by the Comets, the Rockets, and the Flying Gibsons. Distaffers represented include Aneta, Miss Arlina, the three Weaver Sisters, Galla Shawn, doing a click headstand routine), Pat Kirby and Evelyn Fritsch.

Another solid trapeze standout is Gerard Soules, who reprises his knack of falling forward and hooking the bar by his heels. A share of the tight-wire honors goes to Stantos, who works closer to terra firma in a display of intricate footwork.

Slayman Ali and the Toozoonin troupes, from Araby, oblige with the multi-formation and rat-a-tat rumbling. Ditto the Moroccans, while the Voladors use a springboard for distance leaps, including a skein where they soar over some massed elephants.

The teeterboard allez-oops are handled smoothly by the Great Bokaras; while the Binders, who also make use of the teeter, add some ace head-to-head and hands-to-hands balancing. Also click in the equilibristic art are the Yong Bros.

The Del Morals nail fine focus with a ground man balancing the others on a swaying pole. The Bisbinis know their juggling in several variations. And the unicycling plus juggling contingent includes Kolmedy, the three Morles, and Blue & Yvette, each with familiar but sock slants. Also in the balancing category: the Rigettis and the Rodos. Gutis centres a good novelty acrobatic routine with the aid of some Ringling clowns.

Inevitably, the animals corral strong appreciation. Ironically, Stephenson's dogs, least exotic species on the premises, seem to furnish the most fun with their familiar scampering. Klauser's Bears are a charming trio of behemoths who go through their paces amusingly and with amazing docility.

Prof. Keller's cats (lions, tigers and leopards) make a properly sullen and snarling menagerie in evidencing their training, and Jack Joyce's camels put the dromedary smartly in the mix. Tonto the lion and his Bengal tiger cronies respond smartly to Trevor Bale's whipcracking.

There's no neglect of equines. Charles Moroski and Gana Lipowska have a stable of graceful liberty horses to work with, and the latter perform like the horsey nobility they are. As for the mounted brigade, the Diana Sisters and Parent and Stephenson roam their respective rings artfully.

There's good humor, albeit cut short by time limitations, as ditto most of the other displays, in the capers of Kasten's Animals, another repeater, comprising a chimp, goose, fox, cat and, reportedly, some smaller animals undiscerned.

And, of course, Hugo Schmitt's brood of elephants, if not as lightfooted as the Radio City Rockettes, manage a unison performance that's quite a marvel of its own. The pachyderms, of course, would be a hit in any event.

Back in command of the band this year is Merle Evans, who'd been absent from the troupe for four years. His downbeat is an unobtrusive plus, both on production melodies, and for underlining suspense and farce elements in motion.

The clowns, natch, comprise a vital element with their on-off-on-off slapstickery. And this year's contingent includes some additional midget members for lubricating the risibilities. Fellows not only work hard, but — the important thing — achieve their purpose throughout.

Per usual, the pre-show show is downstairs, the warmup for payees that ranges freak displays, the array of animal cages, and sundry hawking and related flavor-cummidway. It's an established but still potent filip.

Incidentally, if the firstnight timing is par, show this year has shaved some time. Including a 10-minute intermission, layout ran to about two and a half hours (contrasted to last year's closer to three), meaning the arena empties on weeknights (with a 7:30 kickoff) shortly after 10 o'clock.

John Ringling North production, staged and directed by Richard Barstow. Executive producer, Arthur M. Concello; general director, Pat Valdo; choreography and aerial display, Margaret Smith; performance director, Robert Dover; designed by Eret Jose de Zamora; production numbers, Valdo, Max Weldy; costumes & floats, Weldy; supervising designer, Crayon; equestrian director, Trevor Bale; musical direction, Merle Evans; lighting, Dean McMurray; general manager, Harold Genders; announcer-vocalist, Harold Ronk. At Madison Sq. Garden, N. Y., March 29-May 14; $6.50 top.

Fort Lee, N.J., April 4.

With Easter Sunday coming 15 days earlier than last year, brisk winds and near-freezing temperatures tended to hold down holiday attendance here at Palisades Amusement Park. The Rosenthal Bros.' fun emporium, as per custom, opened for the season the previous day. Rain dampened the preem festivities.

Park officials, however, take the weather in their stride. They feel that although the elements may temporarily discourage attendance, rain, snow, etc., in the long run builds a "want-to-see" potential that develops a better payoff at the boxoffice.

Despite the inflationary trend in the national economy, the park will "hold the price line" accoruing to manager Mrs. Anna Cook. She points out that the 30c admission tap (which includes free parking) has been in effect for the last five years.

A previous booking prevented a day-and-date opening of both the park and the Clyde Beatty-Cole Bros. Combined 3-Ring Circus. Policy in the past was to preem both simultaneously. However, the big top moves in April 15 for a stand through May 21. Reserved seats will be scaled to $2.80 top for adults and $1.90 for children.

Top billing in the circus, of course, goes to animal trainer Beatty. Guest star is clown Emmett Kelly while among other acts are the Great Wallendas, trapeze artist La Norma and Gallaso, who stands on his forefinger. The company will work in a heated, fireproof tent.

Meantime, Bert Nevins Inc., the park's publicists, has done lotsa tub thumping to whet the public's interest Tieups have been made with most of New York's major tv and radio stations. Emphasis naturally has been placed on tv stars with moppet followings.

For example, WPIX's Chuck McCann who stars on the station's "Laurel and Hardy and Chuck" show, was on hand for Saturday's inaugural to mingle with his juve fans and sign autographs. Similarly, Tom Gregory of WNEW-TV's "Cartoon Playtime," appeared yesterday (Tues.) as did WABC-TV's Tommy Seven.

Now in its 64th year, the park has some 150 rides distributed over eight midways. Among the new rides is the Calypso, a huge revolving platter with multi-colored gondolas. Other fresh attractions include a German-made carousel, the Double Loop-O-Plane, Whip Lash, the Star Flyer, the Giant Sky Wheel and the Flying Coaster. Gilb.

Fair Fare

Las Vegas, April 4.

Lita Roza, songstress who was voted top vocalist in England for seven years straight, opened in the Flamingo lounge Thursday (30). Miss Roza took a taxi from the hotel to downtown on her first day here, and the cabbie got a ticket for running a red light.

The sympathetic singer asked the driver what his fine would be—he said $10, so she gave him a $10 tip.

'True Name' Card In Massachusetts Now Costs $2

Boston, April 4.

Performers appearing in theatres, niteries and other amusement spots must pony up $2 when they file their "true name" statements with the commissioner of public safety. A bill requiring the fee was inked into law Wednesday (29). True name law has been on the books since 1948, but no fee was charged previously. New fee, the fee-grabby bureaucracy explains, will help defray cost of administering the act, and the receipt issued for filing will also serve as an identification card for the entertainer.

Some 2,100 performers have filed true name statements in Massachusetts since 1948.

Edmonton Fair's Free Show Sans Price Hike

Edmonton, Alta., April 4.

Edmonton's week-long exhibition in July will be the first major Canadian fair to offer a free grandstand show without upping the 50c main gate tab for adults. Only change is the elimination of the 25c charge for children six to 14. Everyone over six will pay 50c and kids under six will be free. Passes will be virtually eliminated.

Grandstand capacity is 8,700, with room for expansion. The stageshow, produced by MCA, Chicago, will play five weeks on the Western Canadian Class A fairs circuit.

Deft Circus Saga

"I Love You Honey, But the Season's Over" by Connie Clausen (Holt, Rinehart & Winston; $3.95) is an attractive, frothy book of circus recollections, timed to arrive with the annual bow of the Big Show in New York. Author was a Wisconsin farm girl whose parents moved to Sarasota, Fla., in 1941. Family apartment house was filled with winter-quartering Ringling people. This led to an offer for Connie from John Ringling North. He thought she looked like the perfect "Alice in Wonderland" for his tanbark spec. Connie remained two years with the circus; and she relates her joyous experience with humor and authentic flavor—not omitting aspects of her romance with Paraito Cristiani, of the famous equestrian clan.

The love story and Connie's circus days concluded when she accepted an offer of a free ride to Hollywood, where, eventually, she became head of promotion for MGM. Later, she moved to N.Y., studied acting, and married a tv exec, Alvin Hollander Jr. Tome is sprightly addition to contemporary Big Top lore, and possible source for a gladhearted film. Rodo.

PAN-HILTON BOOKS U.S.TALENT

The Panama-Hilton, Panama City, is branching out with bookings of talent from the U.S. Booked there for a stand is singer Vi Velasco, who goes in April 17 for a week.

Bookings in that inn are by manager Roberto Lugo, who normally spots Latin talent from various Spanish speaking countries.

Crash Kills Impersonator, Injures 5 Others In N. Y.

Robert Mikla, 29, a female impersonator, was killed March 29 on the N.Y. State Thruway, near Rochester, when the station wagon in which he was riding overturned after a blowout. Five other entertainers were injured in the crash. They were on their way from Binghamton to Buffalo to fill a nitery engagement.

Stanley Schiff, 22, is in critical condition; Thomas Dorsey, 27, is reported in fair condition, while those whose conditions are good are Raymond Gumiemey, 28; James Gilman, 32, and James Hamilton, 23.

Tax Stands on Cabaret Checks While Internal Revenue Fights Bush Case

Internal Revenue Service served notice Monday (3) it will fight a court decision limiting application of the cabaret tax. It will not abide by a ruling by U.S. Court Of Appeals for the seventh circuit which held: (1) services and refreshments furnished to patrons after the show is over are not subject to the cabaret bite; and (2) services and refreshments furnished before the entertainment are properly taxed only if paid for during or after the show.

Tax will continue under old rule, namely that any amounts paid by a cabaret patron who's present for any portion of the entertainment is subject to the tax, regardless of moment when he paid his tab.

The court ruling was in the case of Bush's Inc. vs. U.S. Revenue said instead of appealing this specific case, however, it would appeal a decision of the U.S. District Court for Western Missouri which was based on the Bush precedent.

TO FELLOW CLUB OWNERS, and any one else who buys talent:

Since this announcement is costing me $310.00 (Variety ad rates), you can easily make up your minds as to whether or not I mean what I am about to say.

If Dick Curtis, who has just completed his eighth appearance here (another record-breaker, I might add) isn't one of our top show business comedy talents—and I'm not eliminating for the purpose of comparison any big name you'd care to mention—then I want to sell my Dallas King's Club, and business is great!

Ed Sullivan or Garry Moore will probably grab him because of his fresh new material, Dinah Shore because of his great timing with a line or a situation, and any Broadway producer for his versatility and obvious musical comedy talents. Actually, someone on the west coast will probably put him in a television series (he's one heck of an actor, too) and then we'll all be out off luck—which brings me to my final words.

Dick, don't forget the fellow who gave you eight of your early breaks. Shortly, I won't be able to afford you, but I hope and trust you'll come back anyway.

Chris Elson
and the KING'S CLUB Staff
ADOLFHUS HOTEL, Dallas

P.S.: Dick's agency is MCA. His personal manager is Stan Greeson. And, by the way, Dick himself ought to be plenty surprised when he sees this ad!

Hotel St. Regis, N.Y.

Patachou with Joe Basile; Milt Shaw Orch and Walter Kay Trio; $2 and $3 cover.

Not since George M. Cohan glorified "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and acrobatic acts in yesteryear vaudeville used to "pull an American flag finish" for what the trade used to call "kind applause" (how could you refuse to hurrah the Red, White & Blue?) has there been such rampant chauvinism as has been the pop song propaganda for Paris, its charms, its femmes, its environs, its Seine, its Sacre Coeur, its Notre Dame, its metro, its bistros, its mademoiselles, its La Tour d'Eiffel, its [illegible] and it's right there in not-so-free verse. Whatever is the French road company of the Brill Bldg., it cooperates pretty well with French tourism and the French Chamber of Commerce. And thus has come about, for decades, the observation that a good French chanson or chansonniere or diseuse can sell her his wares like French post cards.

None has eclipsed Patachou, Genevieve, Piaf, Boyer (and that goes for Charles as well as Lucienne), Chevalier, Montel—and any others you can think of—in glorifying the appeal of Parisian s.a. and b.o. True, most often one hears it thousands of miles away from Paris, and there could be some cynics who might even ponder then how come all this nostalgia and lyrical flight unless, perhaps, said coantootsies find that Yanqui dollars ease the pain when they ultimately return to the Butte, the elysian fields of the Champs, the Rive Gauche or even such more mundane rues as la Paix, Royale, de Rivoli, Clichy or the sundry pares from the Tuilleries to Boulogne.

There's no gainsaying it—the French guys and dolls who have charmed the ears and eyes and hearts of those unfortunate not to have been born in the radius of the Cafe de la Paix certainly are the best trailers for French tourism, couture, allure and, of course, toujours l'amour.

Patachou is not lacking in that brand of most appealing propaganda but she is also not lacking in enterprise when it comes to giving her vocal script a neat fillip or two. She has done, for some years, a satire on the American brand of hot love as she dissects "Wonderful Guy," ribbing the "corny Kansas" and "blueberry pie" lyrics as seemingly lacking in the poetic flights of the Gallic gal-meets-boy wordage that one encounters, for example, in her discourses of "Mon Menage" and the like.

Piece-de-resistance of the "new" but ever-socko Patachou is a parody on "My Fair Lady" which is more "Irma La Douce" than "Pygmalion." Arthur Lesser, husband-manager of the chanteuse, fashioned this broad lampoon of the Lerner & Lowe classic and the lyrical salute to "Lisa" (Doolittle) comes out "on the street where you work," etc., in a not too subtle paraphrase of the original. It makes for much humor and is a refreshing change of pace.

Patachou preemed last Thursday in midst of the Holy Week b.o. downbeat to big biz, and the Maisonette, to quote maestro Milt Shaw, maitre d'hotel George and his staff, is "at last back to its traditional form." Patachou, still in her trademarked blue skirt and white blouse (by Dior), is backed by her own French accordionist Joe Basile (with whom she records) and her songalog is a delightful hour to all Francophiles, of which the Yanks are a dominant rooting section, especially when it comes to bistro entertainment. Miss Patachou makes each lyric count for plenty of mileage and her own brand of physical (with the expressive hands) as well as vocal interpretation is a click with the customers. Abel.

Deauville, Miami Bch

Miami Beach, April 1.

McGuire Sisters (with Kaye Sisters), Dave Barry, Les Rhode Orch; $5-$6.50 minimum.

The McGuire sisters are the last of the lineup of top names booked through the 650-seat Casanova Room of this big inn. They make a fitting closing attraction.

The attractive trio played this room two years ago. Going on their impact then and on audiences at current stand, they're one of the more solid big-dough acts. Opening night they garnered heavy reception with every number. It's a canny book of standards and specials they have had arranged for them. Eschewing too much of the "and then we recorded" bit, they purvey a showmanly set that has them limning, in a clever piece, their showbiz career. It's smartly staged, to allow for display of comedic bents, with the gal-in-the-middle, Phyllis, show-stopping via her artful carbonings of Judy Garland, Louis Armstrong among others. Kudo to Godfrey, their "discoverer" is of course, the topper. Entrance of the Kane sisters, the 12-year-old triplets, leads-in to a wham segment of six-part counter-harmony and then dancing to wind them into more auditor-clamor.

Dave Barry opens the proceedings cold, but soon has the warm-up aura on high with a slew of new and highly topical one-liners. He's played these precincts before but never to better laugh-effect, peaking the rundown of routines on family, vocal-effects and his by now classic drunk. Latter's a howl-filled closer that sets the we-want-more reaction. Barry's a solid staple among comedians who play this tough cafe circuit.

Les Rhode and orch back superbly. Due for a four-week run next week (opener date not yet set) is Barry Ashton revue, "Playmates of Paris." Lary.

Sahara, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 28.

Steve Lawrence & Eydie Gorme, Moro-Landis Dancers, Louis Basil Orch (17); produced by Stan Irwin, stage direction by Sy Lein; $4 minimum.

Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme (Mrs. L.) hit the Congo Room with a refreshing splash, endorsing previous reports that America has a spectacular new singing team which is a potent entry in any situation, nitery or othewise.

Both artists have worked in Vegas individually, but this debut as a family act tops all previous efforts, and got deserved cheers from first-nighters. The smooth, well-balanced turn also registers in the yock department, with some very funny ad-libs being tossed into the planned repartee.

Lawrence is a savvy song-seller as he delivers "The Song Is You," "Portrait of My Love," "Don't Take Your Love From Me," and "Lazy River." With a sparkling personality, the tastefully gowned Miss Gorme socks "Just One of Those Things," "Who's Sorry Now?" "Funny Valentine," and "Bill Bailey."

They pleasantly duet such standards as "I've Heard That Song Before," "Bi Mir Bist Du Schoen" and "Besame Mucho." The well-staged festivities give Miss Gorme opportunity for costume changes. Solid assistance is provided by Joe Guercio, guiding the Louis Basil orch (17).

The Stan Irwin production is in for four weeks, to be followed by Cisele MacKenzie and The Mills Bros. April 25. Duke.

Neve, San Francisco

San Francisco, March 31.

Carmen McRae, Bill Rubenstine Trio, Dick Kerr, Gene Bardoli Orch (6); $2.50 admission.

In her first Frisco apeparance in several years, Carmen McRae shows as one of the very best singers to hit this circuit in years, a fine, sensitive, remarkably sure performer with a manner of song delivery, phrasing and emotional projection without parallel today.

In the first place, Miss McRae is a songwriter's dream. She has articulation, phrasing and an ability to swing. But more than that, she obviously studies a lyric and makes each song into a miniature theatrical performance.

On the sad ballads, such as "I Love You, Porgy," or "Baby, Baby, All the Time" she is essentially a tragedienne, an American Edith Piaf singing for every hard luck chick in life the story of every heartbreak.

Although she has been around the jazz circuit for some time, she has not before risen to this pinnacle of the performer's art. She is a natural, if properly staged, in the cafe society clubs. She's solidly based in jazz but her appeal is to the whole gamut of audience that digs showtunes and good singing.

Bill Rubenstine's Trio handles the accompaniment expertly; Dick Kerr (see New Acts) offers a comic interlude and Gene Bardoli plays for dancing. Rafe.

Talk of Town, London

London, March 28.

Lena Horne, Lennie Hayton, Steve Arlen, Pat Ferris, Josephine Blake, Page & Bray, Georges Campo, Girls About Town (24), Boys About Town (5), Sydney Simone Orch; $5.95 minimum.

Lena Horne played the Savoy 18 months ago and those who missed her during her last West End stint are determined not to be guilty again of such a social gaffe. That's the simple reason why Miss Horne, on a percentage at this large late night restaurant, is clearly a good financial thing during her seven-weeks stand. As usual she is garnering a rave press and standing the patrons on their ears.

The sinuous chanteuse slithers provocatively on to the stage and is sophisticatedly cool in her professionalism, warm in her impact. Immaculately backed by Sydney Simone's outfit, with husband Lennie Hayton in charge, the star goes into her act at 11:30 p.m. and does about an hour of topline trilling.

"Ooh!" is followed by a rendering of "The Man I Love" and a neat comedy number, called "Get Rid Of Monday." Then comes a Jules Stein Medley, "Rainbow," "Never-Never Land" and a cutely derisive version of "I Said 'No'." Miss Horne's tremendously spirited carolling of "Surrey With The Fringe On Top" has the audience really bravoing. She follows with another medley, this time the work of E. Y. Harburg. "New Fangled Tango," "Don't Commit The Crime" and "It's Alright With Me" officially finalizes her act. But certainly not on the opening night. The audience demanded more and got it in the shape of "It's The Right Time," "Bewitched, Bothered And Bewildered" and "Evil," before Miss Horne bowed out on an audience still shouting encore.

The sheer fastidious perfectionism of the Horne act makes her one of the best London has seen in years.

At 10 p.m. Robert Nesbitt's "10 O'Clock Follies" acts as a gaily colored hors d'oeuvres to the main act. It's a slick enough floor show with pretty girls, lavish costumes and decor (R. St. John Roper and Tod Kingman responsible respectively) and Billy Petch's light-hearted choreograph. There's an Arabian Rhapsody, night scenes in New York, Rome and Paris and a "Holiday In Tahiti" scene. Ferri.

Riverside, Reno

Reno, March 23.

Billy Williams Revue (15), Ford & Reynolds, Arthur Walsh & Rounders (3); no cover or minimum.

It's a top calibre lineup that Bill Miller has booked for current lineup at the Riverside and on it's one that'll pay off in firstrate fashion. With Billy Williams fronting a talented group of musicians and instrumentalists, with the comedic efforts of Ford & Reynolds, with the unpredictable Arthur Walsh—the variety is there to catch all tastes.

Williams, on the local boards for the first time in several years, has augmented his one-time quartet into an impressive variety show. The headliner's smooth vocalling, the impessive backing of Horace Henderson Combo, a tap artist, and the nice blending of the Four Dukes' voices make for a solid hour of good entertainment. Turn is varied, allowing much upstaging of crew members, and it's a 60 full minutes with no lulls. Included are the ballads, the standards, up-tempos and some classic trumpet work by a femme horn blower.

Williams wins top response with such as "The Very Though of You," "Autumn Leaves," and "I Believe." Projection is effortless and commanding, and the stage savvy is obvious.

Tight staging results in little waste of time for title intros, and crew is obviously well rehearsed. Rating mention for solo work is Tommy Butler on "Behind the Green Doors" and Skip Cunningham for impressive tap work. Clora Bryant is an artist on trumpet and the Four Dukes reap good reaction with "Side by Side," among others.

Ford & Reynolds, no strangers to the Riverside stage, repeat with some of the routines essayed on the last time around but have added new material. Reynolds for the most part plays it straight with Ford setting the pace, be it either in the story-telling or on their sax and drums work. On show caught, two were trying new material, with some editing and closer stage discipline needed to evoke full worth of the new routines.

Arthur Walsh, despite his many talents for both comedy and dramatics, relies heavily on props and gimmicks for his appeal. His offering reflects his "Hellzapopin'" schooling, with the same fast pace in delivery. Hats, telephones, etc., fill the act for effects, and giveaways and aud participation are stressed. He makes full use of facial contortions and suiting to match his characters.

Backing Walsh are the Rounders and Tabby Calvin, a red-tressed thrush who's a real belter. She sings "The Lady Is A Tramp" and "All Of Me" with savvy.

Show is booked until April 19. Long.

Vieux-Colombier, Paris

Paris, March 20.

J. De Beckers presents a sketch revue, "Ad Libitum," in 24 scenes with Veronique Silver, Renee Toledano, Jean Valmence, Nono Zammit, Henri Labussiere, Henri Virlojeux, Christian Donnadieu, Nestor Campos Trio, Olga Da Silva; staged by Henri Labussiere; music, Michel Emer; $3.50 minumum.

Cellar boite used to be a jazz dance spot in the existentialist days of the early '50s and then became an ordinary cha-cha dancery. J. De Beckers has now refurbished it, given it a small stage and turned it into an intimate revue spot.

However, there's still a deference to dancing in the solid Latino rhythms of the Nestor Campos Trio and the carioca terping and chirping of sinewy Olga Da Silva. The club shapes mainly for locals since a good smattering of French is needed for the show.

Veronique Silver, Renee Toledano, Jean Valmence, Henri Labussiere, Nono Zammit and Henri Virlojeux go through a series of sketches and recitations gleaned from the work of poets, authors and noted sketch writers and comedians of the chansonnier circuits. They are ably accomped on the piano by Christian Donnadieu.

Director Labussiere has provided movement and built up a good progression in these sketches which, if having no topicality, display a gently anarchistic air. They also have enough wit and efficacy in delivery to garner yocks as well as an occasional poetic shaft.

Though not up to the heyday of the intellectual boites of yore, Club Vieux-Colombier may catch on with locals wanting more gray matter than undraped chassis in their nocturnal recreation. Price is right and boite well decorated, but it is small and gets hot when a crowd is packed in. Air conditioning would help.

It looms of touristic interest but an interpreter would be an asset. This may be the first in a return to the more literate nitery revues. Michel Emer's background music is also an aid. Mosk.

The Impulse, Rochester

Rochester, N. Y., March 29.

Donald Byrd-Pepper Adams Jazz Quintet; $1.50 admission weekdays; $2.50 weekends.

After smash first week in which Lambert, Hendricks & Ross with the Ike Iassics instrumental trio, the Donald Byrd-Pepper Adams quintet moved into this boozeless bistro.

Byrd, formerly a member of the Art Blakey and Max Roach combos, is moving along in the world of modern jazz since cutting his professional teeth in 1955. This is a windup job of a two-month tour which took Byrd-Adams combo through eastern Canada and midwest cities. For Adams, Rochester native, the Impulse engagement was a homecoming.

After this run, combo will spend two weeks recording for Blue Note. Then Byrd plans a big orchestra.

Combo's appearance here has Byrd on trumpet, Adams on baritone sax, Layman Jackson on bass, Herb Hancock on piano, Teddy Robinson on drums.

The Byrd-Adams team is at its best in numbers like "Portrait of Jennie, combining best qualities of trumpet and baritone sax and working with effective blue spotlight for the number. "Great Guy," their own composition, also came in for some brisk mitting from a sparse late ayem crowd.

Dick Warner and Neil Sawyer, Impulse co-impresarios, report first week's turnout exceeded their hopes. Dave.

Waldorf-Astoria, N.Y.

Gordon & Sheila MacRae with David Carter, Jim Daugherty, Howard Krieger, Charles Magruder, Norman Leyden; Emil Coleman & Theo Fanidi Orchs; $3, $4 covers.

Gordon & Shelia MacRae are vets on the hotel circuits with an expertise in this field. They are well acquainted with class protocol and reach an easy rapport with the affluent section of our society. This time around the Empire Room, the MacRaes have come in with a new act, over which writers Lyn Duddy & Jerry Bresler have labored arduously in their behalf. The results seem well worth the investment of time and effort.

The act is still new to this couple. There are sections which need a mite more work and there are spots which seem to be overarranged and overdone. A few performances will probably bring the turn to its proper veneer.

Primarily, this is a duo of fine talents. Both sing well, both have a flair for light comedy and both know how to pace themselves for maximum effect.

The writers have arranged their act in sections so that they can reach heights in a particular field. Thus, there's a section in which they do impressions. MacRae gets himself a lot of plaudits with his rips of Ed Sullivan, Dean Martin, Ed Murrow, Perry Como, among others, while she jackpots with impressions of Keely Smith, Carol Channing and Zsa Zsa. The pair sing tandem and in solo and do well in both parts. Mrs. MacRae has one of the more imaginative bits with her delineation of Gladys Green, a girl in the big city. Four lads that they have acquired for this engagement toss her about with careful abandon, while she warbles.

MacRae similarly has his moments. He sings the Rodgers & Hammerstein tunes with which he's been associated with vitality, and they exit to a pairing of "Accustomed to her Face" and "I Remember It Well," both with liberties to the original lyrics. It's an act that comes off exceedingly well in this spot.

There are a lot of credits to this turn. Aside from the contributions by Duddy & Bresler, Shirley Henry & Harry Crane provided additional comedy material, and Norman Leyden conducted the Emil Coleman orch with authority. The assisting lads in the act are David Carter, Jim Daugherty, Howard Krieger and Charles Magruder. The relief is by Theo Fanidi orch while the elegant atmosphere of the room is maintained by the excellent staff helmed by Louis at the tape. Jose.

Beverly Hills, Cincy

Cincinnati, March 24.

Chordettes (4), Guy Marks, Moro-Landis Dancers (9) with Bill Raymond, Gardner Benedict Orch (10), Jimmy Wilber Trio, Larry Vincent; $3-$4 minimum, $1-$1.50 cover.

There's a happy Easter tang to the current double framer. The Chordettes contribute a gay songalog. Guy Marks, co-headlining comic, adds to the laurels of his bow here 16 months ago. The Moro-Landis ensemble opens and closes the 75-minute floorshow in style.

Spring finery is evident in the near completion of a facelifting of the BH Trianon Room. 700-seat theatre restaurant. It has been a midwest plushery since the unveiling in 1937. New color scheme is red and pink. Lighting, bar, kitchen and interior units have been modernized. Carpets and chairs are new.

The four Chordettes, in pink spangled gowns and white gloves, are long on barber shop harmony, stage savvy and mike technique dating back to their Godfrey days. Biggest returns at preemig were on "Summer Place," "Blues," barber shop solos, "Lollipop" and a record medley including their golden "Sandman" waxing for Cadence.

For a standup comic, Marks is young, personable and smooth working. His talent embrace mimicry and satire. Opens with his surefire fancies of his first love, an ostrich, and communes with animals. Warms up with impressions of Bill Hart in silent films, three-way conversation of Gary Cooper, Humphrey Bogart and an Indian chief, current western stars, singers with radio bands, tv commercials and his latest clincher, a JFK takeoff. Koll.

Fontainebleau, Miami

Miami Beach, April 2.

Paul Anka, Henny Youngman, DeMarlos (2) Len Dawson Orch; $5-$7.50 minimum.

This is the closing package of the season for the LaRonde Room, to climax an in-and-out season riddled by the vagaries of act-cancellations and or dates shiftings. Prexy-booker Ben Novack, for his final offering, showed smart showmanship in setting Paul Anka for the Easter-holiday school crowds and then adding Henny Youngman and the suave terp team of the DeMarlo's for the adults who pay the tabs.

Anka played here at the rival Eden Roc to open the season for that swankery last Christmas. He looked and sounded very pro then; there's been no change in his manner or delivery since—rather, it's improved. The dark, young lad has a big book of his own originals to draw from, and does so aptly. His penchant for rewriting or updating a lyric by another cleffer stands him in good stead to provide the special material twist that takes him out of the rock 'n' roll clan. He inserts his recording hits in an inventively arranged vocal-rundown of budding career; adds those specials, tosses in the basic big-beats the junior set dig and winds a winner with every type of customer in the house. Only fault, and one easily remedied, is having the mike-sound decibels pitched to point where the din sometimes mounts in enough volume to fill a convention hall. He doesn't need it.

Youngman, showing the click at the Hotel Plaza, N.Y., influence, comes on in white tie and tails, with an incongruous turban to start giggles. The fast-talking one-liner vet essays a set of all-new waggery that starts slowly then quickly hits the laugh-rise. Canny showman that he is, Youngman cued his material to the risibilities of the younger patrons, end results being a well earned fill for his laugh-bag. Per always, he tops with his "violining," and observations on random subjects. He's played most every other swank room on the Beach, but this is his first time at the Font and probably, won't be his last.

The DeMarlos, a handsome pair, come up with some unusual ideas in ballroomology; the eye-absorbing femme is a lithe and graceful terper whose sinuous approach heightens the sultry overall effect. This routine in which she dances atop the Steinway, is a standout. They're class all the way. Len Dawson and his crew, per usual, are adept showbackers, even with add of a big string section for Anka. Novack is mulling a revue idea to come in for late spring and summer. Until this jells, La Ronde shutters endweek (18). Lary.

Chicago, March 27.

Dorothy Loudon, Smothers Bros. (2), Marx-Frigo Trio; $2.50 cover.

There's surprising balance to this bill considering that both halves of it deal, for the most part, in song satire. Smothers Bros. work exclusively in the folksong idiom, while Dorothy Loudon spoofs the more traditional cabaret styles, from the red-hot mama to the vocally acrobatic jazz chirper. Neither really steals the other's thunder, and the effect of the parlay is complementary. One thing is wanting, however, that either act could fulfill, and that is a straight rendition of a single good tune. After a while, there's just a little too much kidding around.

Miss Loudon continually threatens to break into serious song—and certainly has the pipes to do it with—but she never quite obliges. It's the nature of her act, of course, and well that is under normal circumstances, but when the preceding turn teases similarly she's in a position to cash in for large returns with a straight airing of almost anything. The bill needs just that little change of pace, and hers is such a potentially exciting vocal talent that there'd be nothing lost.

This apart, and taken purely on her own terms, Miss Loudon is as right for the room as any comedienne who's ever played here. She's chi-chi without being tony, witty without being too "inside," and broad-humored without defeminizing herself as many femme fun-makers are prone to do. She punctures both songs and singers, as for instance in an uproarious recitation of the lyric to "Mobile, Ala.," and a no-names-please cartoon of the contemporary jazz thrush. Withal, a delightful turn.

Debuting in Chi, the Smothers Bros. too are immensely satisfying, playing it ingenuously as a pair of diffident egghead folksingers. In the respect of their verbal byplay they're a sort of collegiate answer to Homer & Jethro but differ, of course, in the routines and musical genres.

Mostly, it's a matter of songs gone wrong, or never getting started, and it pays off in a constant round of chuckles. The boys are gifted singers, as they indicate a few bars at a time, and the chief spokesman (Dick) a promising monologist.

Marx-Frigo Trio backstops with customary adeptness and gives out nifty jazz between sets.

Next up are Helen O'Connell and Barbara Gilbert, April 17 for three weeks. Les.

Fairmont Hotel, Frisco

San Fancisco, March 31.

Della Reese; Ernie Hecksher Orch (11); cover $2.50 weekdays, $3.50 weekends.

Della Reese made the jump from the bottom to the top of Nob Hill in a little over a year. Her last engagement locally was at Fack's II (now the Neve) and this is her first hotel booking here.

Opening night show was something less than a full house, though sympathetic in the main to her chirping. The singer did a 40-minute stanza (no encores) of a baker's dozen tunes and chatter. Mercer Ellington conducts the Hecksher orch for her stint and she has her own drummer (Floyd Williams) who gets a solo spot, and her own pianist (John Cotter) who also does some of her arranging.

The band, though cutting the arrangements neatly, overblew the singer throughout much of the show. By actual count there were three numbers in which the lyrics were impossible to distinguish although the sound of the voice was to be heard.

Miss Reese is in the Ethel Merman class when it comes to decibel value. Three-quarters of her show is belted out in what is certainly the loudest voice to hit Frisco night spots since Anna Marie Alberghetti some years ago. The sheer volume, coupled with her exaggerated mannerisms such as the extra added syllable at every possible point leaves the Fairmont audience a little bewildered, though willing to be pleased.

When the singer throws away the Vegas brass, however, and sang "His Eye is On the Sparrow" she brings down the house with a moving performance that is so good one wonders why she doesn't do more of this and less of the regular. Her intros to songs, spoken in sing song, throw-away style are effective and she is certainly a looker whose mere appearance onstage sets up a favorable atmosphere. The whole act, though, could use a soft pedal to good advantage. Rafe.

Trade Winds, Chi

Chicago, March 30.

Gene Baylos, Linda Merrill, Joe Parnello Trio; $2.50 cover.

Gene Baylos was called in, virtually at the last minute, to substitute for Lenny Bruce who is sick — with hepatitis. The late change made for a light opening night house, but Baylos welded the scattered tablers into an audience and worked them over with his artful monology for repeated yocks.

Baylos sweetened adversity by using the customers as a focal point for a nearly 10-minute opening routine that scored heavily with the out-of-towners. His act, including the pop-eyed "I just drove in from Florida—all night" running gag, is pure Baylos—sure-footed, fast and yock-loaded. He finished to a mitt tribute that attested to his total audience command.

Linda Merrill's uptempo thrushing of a standard songalog fits in well with the Trade Winds' tone and clientele. Her singing is embellished by some rock impreshes, topped by a swinging cameo of Roberta Sherwood, replete with glasses, sweater and cymbal that garnered a brisk reception from the auditors.

Joe Parnello Trio backs the show with their usual deft musicalizing. Baylos is followed in by Jackie Miles. Mor.

New Frontier, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 30.

"Holiday in Rio," with Marya Linero, Arren & Broderick, Ron Urban, Elisa Jayne, Evy & Everto, Martha & Adolfo, Maria Caruso Val Damon, Roberto Navarro, Jerry Jackson, The Ashton Dancers (16), The Maldonado Dancers (8), Dick Rice Orch (11); produced & staged by Barry Ashton; associate producer, Wolf R. Kochmann; assistant to Ashton, Lorenzo Maldonado; costumes, Lloyd Lambert; original music & lyrics, Val Grund, scenery, Doris West, masks & special effects by Roschu; lighting, Hugo Grgueta; flying effects, Peter Foy; Lew Kane, company manager; $4 minimum.

Barry Ashton has a resounding hit in "Holiday in Rio," which is sure to join the hard-to-get-a-table category as soon as the word gets around about the splendid new explosion of entertainment in the Venus Room. The fast-moving revue is well-balanced and smoothly staged. It's also solidly stocked with top-drawer dancing, singing, comedy, novelty, and beautiful girls—including the latest in Vegas exotica: flying nudes.

The trapezed bra-less beauties appear in a brilliantly colorful "Birds of Paradise" number, which features the exciting torso undulation of Marya Linero, who also tosses her provocative terping into other production numbers. Special lighting effects on a voodoo ritual brought cheers from first-nighters.

The novel contributions of a chill-thrill knife-throwing act billed as Martha & Adolfo, the highly-skilled unicycle artistry of Evy & Everto, and the "impossible" feats of magician Ron Urban who seemingly grabs doves of different colors from nowhere, are pleasantly sandwiched between the spectacular choreoed splashes.

The yock department is repped by Elisa Jayne, a pert, shapely brunette who does very funny carbons of such performers as Bette Davis, Ed Sullivan, Brigitte Bardot and Marilyn Monroe; and rambunctious singing and 88ing by the vet vaude team of Arren & Broderick which brings both laughs and applause.

Ashton created, staged, and did the choreography for the show, with an assist from Wolf R. Kochmann and Lorenzo Maldonado. A special bow goes to Lloyd Lambert for designing the costumes, to Val Grund for clicking the original music and lyrics, and Hugo Granata for the dramatic lighting. Dick Rice's orch (11) does a superb job of cutting the festivities.

"Holiday in Rio" is in for an indefinite run. Duke.

International, N.Y.

Micki Marlo with Bob May & Jack Mann; Billy Falbo, Mello Kings (5), Mike Durso & Artles Orchs; $6 minimum.

Jack Silverman, following the phenomenally successful run of the Ritz Bros., has retired into a modestly priced show for the Holy Week holidays. Nonetheless, it's a good card entertainmentwise with Micki Marlo in a new turn with two boys, and the local bow of Billy Falbo, who has been making good impressions in a variety of situations.

Miss Marlo, a few years back, appeared to be one of the more promising singers in the field. However, rock 'n' roll came in simultaneously, and singers of skill seemed a secondary consideration. She continues to be a knowing chirper, and a better with positive projection. Her tunes are varied, rhythmic and easily absorbed. She also provides occasional flashes of musical wit to round out her turn.

The boys integrated with Miss Marlo in the act are Bob May & Jack Mann, who are a pair of expert tapsters. They are, of course, strong enough to hold up on their own, but association with Miss Marlo gives them a wider horizon.

Their cleat work is sharp and clean. They show a lively style with their taps atop a platform. It's a spirited act that not only permits Miss Marlo breathing space, but allows for change of pace to the show. They also work briefly with Miss Marlo to provide a potent exit.

Falbo, who has been working many scenes around the country, is a likeable comic. His style is rather basic and at times reminiscent of the oldtimers. As a matter of fact, his opener, "Twenty Years from Now," materialwise seems to have been intended for use in 1959. The material needs updating. Otherwise, his conception of a poker game, a sculptor and impressions of some of the show biz toppers are firstrate. He winds up strong.

The opening turn is by the Mello Kings, four boys and a guitarist, who seem to be trying to expand rock 'n' roll into acceptance by more mature groups. The throwaway choreography in most of these groups contains some steps that require skill. And some of their tunes and arrangements seem modified for the square spenders.

It wasn't the Mello Kings' night, particularly since bus parties from Philadelphia were the mainstay of the audience. Group seems to be transitionists, a link between the teensters and the non-diggers. It's a difficult role for the youngsters and they cannot be chided for making the attempt here.

The Boots McKenna line has oldtimey but punchy routines for this round. Mike Durso, per usual, provides good orchestral background. Jose.

Barclay Hotel, Toronto

Toronto, March 29.

The Hi Lites (3), Hank Garret, Bob Arlen Dancers (6), Bobby Rose, Percy Curtis Orch (8); $1.50 cover.

Since scoring harmony honors at the Canadian National Exhibition's 24,000-seat grandstand show last summer, The Hi-Lites have played niteries from Dallas, Tex., to Springfield, Ill., with side excursions to "The Jack Kane Hour" and the "Joan Fairfax Show" on tv.

With Jimmie Nolan as lead singer, Larry Sturon as bass and Harry Harding tenor, harmony trio had no difficulty in selling their smooth and vivacious singing to the Barclay Hotel customers.

From their bouncy opening of "Getting to Know You," The Hi-Lites instantly were across, with their "Till the End of Time" the only ballad number offered, when caught. Their comedy and novelty songs are a highlight, however, particularly their "When Vaudeville Was King," in which they do impressions and singing styles of yesteryear greats.

Their "Hands" number, a medley of spirituals done in belting style, is outstanding, ditto their "Around the World" which brings in dialect singing. Youthful trio is okay for urban rooms. They stayed on 30 minutes when caught and had to begoff.

Hank Garret, ex-football tackle of U. of South Carolina, proves himself a monologist of first-rate calibre. He scores with his dialect stories, his advice to married women and his uncanny impressions of film stars. He is a personable comedian and does a well-paced segment.

Bob Arlen Dancers round out in two production numbers, with Bobby Rose as singing emcee. Percy Curtis orchestra does lusty backgrounding of all acts and plays the dance sessions. Twice-a-night floor show runs 60 minutes, with acts in till April 8. McStay.

Harold's Club, Reno

(FOLLOW-UP)

Reno, April 1.

The Characters in this reprise (joining holdover headliner Rusty Draper) again prove their talents in a variety of areas—on comedy, vocals and instrumental work. But the offering this time around shows a bit of de-accent on the comedics, although the turn is far from lacking in the fun stuff.

Carmen Baccari, ace guitarist, retains the anchor spot holding the presentation together, with Johnny Ricco doing a commendable job on vocals, Freddy Baccari scoring on the fun bits, and Jimmy (Blackie) Hunt, a redhead, doubling on comedy and impressive accordion work. And as per usual, Jack Kent rates for his expert backing on drums.

Ricco takes the opening vocal spot on "Ridin' High" and show keeps the same level for full 30 minutes of sense and nonsense. For this playback, echo chamber is used for the Ricco vocaling—and to good effect in this intimery. Other titles include "You'll Never Walk Alone" and "If I Loved You."

Baccari also makes with the pipes on "Mama" but scores best with mouthed remarks to others in the group and to stage-siders. He's also effective on his limp-wrist impreshes. Hunt rates good mention for his top-league accordioning. All are good musicians with a talent for comedy. As in past dates, they reap hefty response—and earn it.

Current lineup billed through mid-April. Long.

Sands, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 29.

Dean Martin, Eber Lobato Dancers (9), Garr Nelson, Copa Girls (12), Antonio Morelli Orch (22); produced by Jack Entratter; stage direction, Harold Dobrow; choreography, Renne Stuart; $4 minimum.

Dean Martin has sauntered back into the Copa Room with his effortless approach to one-liners and vocals, and as usual delivers for boss Jack Entratter a blockbuster performance. Initialing with special Vegas lyrics by Sammy Cahn) to "From This Moment On" and "It's All Right With Me," Martin eases into some of the songs he's done here before, but this time there's a difference—he finishes many of them.

He uses some first-time gags ("I'm the only singer around who has 10% of four gangsters"; "I'm a teetotaler—I totally hate tea"; "Remember the great words of Montezuma: 'Tell those Marines to stop singing in the halls!'"), which are sure-fire yock triggers. Ken Lane at the 88, fronting the Antonio Morelli orch (22) keeps the relaxed romp on an even keel.

The robust, operatic voice of baritone Garr Nelson is featured in a brand new, colorful background to the song, "Put on a Happy Face," a lively production number woven by choreographer Renne Stuart, which is populated by the 12 stunning Copa Girls.

The Eber Lobato Dancers (9) spotlighting the exciting Nelida are held over for this one, with a new array of torrid terps which conclude with one of the most frantic finishes ever seen in Vegas. It's the sort of blackout that brings gasps from the audience.

Martin, originally skedded to close April 18, exits two days early for a tv rehearsal, so Jerry Lewis has agreed to open on the 17th instead of the 19th as a favor to his ex-partner. Duke.

Eddys', K.C.

Kansas City, March 31.

Guy Mitchell with Scotty Turnbull, Billy Williams Orch (6); $1.50-$2 cover.

It's been five years since Guy Mitchell played Eddys', and then it was just songs. This time around he's added ace guitarist Scotty Turnbull, and is also inserting a wee bit of comedy and terp. The combination adds up to a well-paced and nicely moving turn. But it's a bit short at 30 minutes as the solo entry at the club.

Singer swings away on a bevy of tunes that have kept him on the hit parade. They range from "Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania" to his all-timer, "Singing the Blues." All are backed by Scotty Turnbull, clicking a slick guitar, and all faves with the house.

Mitchell varies the pace with a couple of quick impressions, plus a bit of tapology, then turns the stage over to Turnbull who raps out a couple of guitar nifties to big hand.

Mitchell is back with "T for Texas" and "Hang Me Down," ending the proceedings with the customers wanting more. Pair have much to offer and keep it tight, making for a good show, albeit a bit brief. They stay through April 13. Quinn.

Il Pappagallo, Rochester

Rochester, N.Y., March 29.

Matt Scherzi Trio; no cover, no minimum.

Matt Scherzi Trio, all Rochester musicians, has caught on big with local commercial jazz buffs.

Bob Fafone, owner of this downtown nitery, booked Sherzi Trio for a two-week engagement early in 1960 and it has been there since except for some time out for record cutting and Florida in February. Recordings for the Upbeat label are scheduled for April. Present recordings by the combo include "Take The A Train" from the Ellington book, "Paul's Palace," "Imagination" and "Lillette." The last two are vocals done with the Jerry Scherzi orch of New York.

Matt Scherzi's piano styling carbons Red Garland. Other members of trio are Bill Porter on drums and Pete Deramo on bass and vocals. On the night reviewed, Scherzi group had this dancing and listening spot rocking with Andre Previn's "Like Young" and "Angel Eyes." Dave.

Musicians Pay

now develops, VARIETY is reliably informed, that tricky bookkeeping will be employed to keep the facts from ever being known.

The official statement from party headquarters today is that the Gala netted about $1,000,000 and that published reports that the gross ran as high as $1,500,000 were exaggerated. But the party won't give a gross figure. To do so would give away the expenses. And they obviously ran high. Frank Sinatra & Co. had a whole floor of the Statler-Hilton Hotel here during Inaugural week, and as one party official commented: "I visited the hotel, and I would say they were living in style."

Latest development was the disclosure that the American Federation of Musicians is pressing the Democrats for about $20,000 owed to 50 Washington and 20 Los Angeles musicians, plus expenses, for playing the Gala. Salary runs about $300 each for about 25 hours of rehearsal and performance time.

"It is true," said a partly official, "that we haven't been able to pay the musicians. If they will be patient, they will be paid. There were more pressing debts resulting from the (Presidential) campaign which had to be paid first with Gala receipts."

The party, he said, is today about $2,000,000 in the red. [This was the amount intended to be erased by the Sinatra-Lawford bash.]

House Review

Apollo, N.Y.

Jocko's Rocketship Revue with Clyde McPhatter, Jackie (Moms) Mabley, Bluenotes, Baby Washington, Shep and Limelights, Bobby Freeman, the Larks, Doc Bagby Bond (11); "Four Fast Guns" (U).

Sound and fury of the Big Beat rents the Harlem vaudery this stanza, and it makes for satisfying showcasing of some nouveau disclicks lined up by WADO (N.Y.) deejay Jocko. The musical displays could have been too much of a good thing were it not for some comedy leavening — and thoughtfully slotted, at that, just ahead of headliner Clyde McPhatter.

McPhatter has something like a princely status in this idiom. On this occasion, he asserted his talents ably enough, but it was almost anti-climactic in the peculiar monotony of r&r.

Jackie (Moms) Mabley is an easy click with her drawl-'em-out funnies and ditties. She displays a social awareness with some of her stuff, but most of it is in the broad and gamey category for mass appreciation.

On the musical side, a standout session is supplied by the five Bluenotes, both harmonically and via firstrate acro-footwork. Their polish generates beaucoup excitement. Baby Washington gives the show some "form" in a glamorized toreador outfit that suits the kittenish lyrics of such items as "Too Late" and "Nobody Cares."

Shep and the Limelights (3) deliver a routine stint competently, and Bobby Freeman draws nice plaudits for his shout-and-sway offerings. The Larks, five fellows and a femme, are another routine unit, indistinguishable from the field. Doc Bagby's tooters showback capably, and Jocko's conferencier ing is properly ebullient. Pit.

HANSHAW FORMS AGENCY

Frank Hanshaw, who recently resigned from General Artists Corp., has opened his own talent agency. He'll represent Frank Sennes, Coast booker in the east, as well as handle his own talent rost.

New Acts

DEAN JONES
Folk Songs
17 Mins.
Blue Angel, New York

Dean Jones is a personable and intense "leading man"-type, doubling from the concurrent "Yum Yum Tree," at the Henry Miller Theatre on Broadway. He has also appeared in almost a dozen films and guested on tv.

It is admirable that the versatile thesp should want to extend his scope and the aim for authenticity with folk songs which undoubtedly date back to his youth in the south, but the similarity of the half-dozen numbers he sings makes only for sameness. This feeling is heightened by the more or less similar hard-driving vocal technique ranging from "Gallows Tree," the opener, to the closing ballad, "I Know My Love." In between are folk songs titled "10,000 Miles," "Old Joe Clark" (a Blue Grass item), "Dear Companion" and "Song of the Ox Driver" (Mississippi origin), all unquestionably from authentic native sources.

To suggest that Jones, an attractive he-man juve, essay some items more "popular" (from the operetta and musicomedy ballads) might perhaps suggest he dilute his programming concept. Nonetheless, whether in the sophisticated Blue Angel orbit or otherwise, that would appear to be a necessary common denominator.

Folk songalogs have been commercial, from Belafonte to The Weavers and in between, but somehow Dean Jones could further his saloon impact by broadening the repertoire base by changing pace.

Since reviewed, Jones reportedly has varied some of his routine.

A well-established leading man personality, he is professional in this, his nitery debut. He has two special rhythm accompanists on guitar and string bass. His Thursday night preem was seemingly importantly regarded judging by the sizeable William Morris agency turnout from Abe Lastfogel down. Abel.

DICK KERR
Comedy
30 Mins.
Neve, San Francisco

Kerr is athletic-looking stand-up comic with a slightly cornball accent (a la George Gobel) and the need to do a lot of work on his act.

When caught, he was leaning mainly on impersonations and Irish dialect jokes with an occasional real bluesmoker thrown in for shock effect.

The impersonations stem from Kerr's ability to sing. This lets him get off on a list of singers including Billy Daniels, Johnnie Ray, Dean Martin, Perry Como, Elvis Presley, Morton Downey (!) and Frankie Laine. None of them are really firstrate, though any would make good padding for a stronger act.

With Johnnie Ray, the comic takes off his coat and lays on the floor, pounding his fists on the planks for a closer. With Presley he muffles the mike and jumps around a la the stereotype of EP.

The Irish dialect, with a bit on a golfing priest who is taken by a pro, material is okay but like the impersonations, is not sharp enough to stand on its own. And this is the critique of the whole act. It is fundamentally a collection of material that almost, but not quite, makes it. Kerr would do well to revise the whole act, tighten it (even in a short 30 min. spread, it was loose and flabby), leave out the smokers and reduce the impersonations to a passable minimum. A little goes a long way with those, since there are a number of comics who do them better.

On the night caught, comic was having the panics working to a slim and unresponsive house. Raje.

THREE YOUNG MEN
Songs
25 Mins.
Downstairs at the Upstairs, N.Y.

Ever since the Kingston Trio hit it big, there has been no dearth of male trios on the circuits. The newest to make its try for bigcity acceptance is the Three Gentlemen, imports from Montana, who happily eschew the sounds of the Kingstons and derivative outfits, and go in for an effect reminiscent of vocal groups which used to make the rounds of theatres year in and out and accented entertainment.

The Three Young Men give the effect of getting their jollies out of singing. They have a happy mien, infuse their work with a great deal of spirit, and provide a well-rounded and joyful session. The Young Men are not columbusing any new harmonic effects; those now known seem to suffice. Their tunes comprise old-world ballads, excerpts from musicals and novelties and oldies that provide a rounded picture. Their work still needs some additional touches, but what they now have is sufficient for exhibit in most situations. Dick Riddle, at the piano, paces his colleagues, Bob Ruby and Pat Fox, for excellent results in this chichi hospice. Jose.

PAT COLLINS
Hypnotism, Comedy
60 Mins.
Gay Nineties, Minneapolis

Though she's been experimenting with a hypnosis act for more than a year, Pat Collins is just getting started on the regular nightclub circuit. A ringer in both looks and form for Sophia Loren, Miss Collins adds plenty of glamor to a predominantly male field in which platinum blond locks, youth and a curvy figure were never considered to be prerequisites.

Charmer has no trouble in enticing tablesitters to undergo hypnosis. After a reassuring explanation of the art, they flock to the stage at Miss Collins' invitation and she proceeds to entrance 'em on a mass production basis. Results are amazing, to say nothing of being, frequently, hilarious. Miss Collins tells her spellbound subjects they're Jose Greco, Crosby, Marilyn Monroe, Presley and other show biz stars and encourages them to perform. The takeoffs are sidesplitters. Another choice bit has subjects rooting for their pet nags at a horse race. It's all done in good taste, and there's a minimum of embarrassment on the part of either audience or subjects.

Performer also builds immeasurable goodwill by circulating in the audience when she's offstage, offering to help patrons who were hypnotized during the show to overcome heavy smoking or nail biting or to lose weight. On the basis of her first stay here, extended from two weeks to four months, she really gets results.

Act would be better suited, perhaps, to an intimate club where there would be less noise and fewer distractions. However, Miss Collins' command of her audience in this generally boisterous nitery indicates her showmanship and her complete mastery of the medium. Rees.

MARY LYNN SHEPHERD
Songs
30 Mins.
Walker Hotel, Toronto

Direct from her singing-secretary success in the "Planet Ice" tv spectacle, plus fronting for the Denny Vaughan Orch and singing on the "Tommy Hunter Show" for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp.'s cross-country tv treatment, Mary Lynn Shepherd opened at the posh Franz Josef Room of the Walker Hotel and had to beg off when caught. All her arrangements are by Earl Parnes.

Her invasion of intimate niteries stamps the tall blonde with an eye-appealing chassis and, as a singer, with an exceptional voice that was brought along by four years study at the Royal Conservatory of Music, U. of Toronto, plus her personality projection and salesmanship in her previous chores.

She bouncily opens with "Good Night for Singing," then a French medley, a switch in power-style to "Climb Every Mountain" and such standards as "Night and Day" and "Bye, Bye Blackbird." Nothing outstanding in her repertory but she encored to a rousing auditor response with a sprightly medley from "King and I."

Clad in green sheath gown with sequined bodice, blond songstress graduated with honors to the nitery biz and, via her tv work, exhibits an unusually musical set of pipes. Sleekly gowned and coiffed, Miss Shepherd appeals both visually and vocally; has, in addition, that 22-year-old look of freshness in voice and personality. Her professional showmanship should click solidly in her new pursuit. McStay.

TIP Ousts McDonald as V.P.-Treas.; Company Has $266,481 Net Capital

Theatrical Interests Plan, a legit investment-producing corporation, is having internal problems. Dennis McDonald has been ousted as vice-president and treasurer of the firm in what TIP president Ted Ritter says was a move by the board of directors to cut costs.

A statement by McDonald's attorney, Max Kaufman, implies the discharge stemmed from accusations made by his client in relation to the operation of the corporation. Kaufman asserted that McDonald, in a memorandum to the board of governors, charged that there had been "acts of omission" by TIP officials who "have not functioned properly."

A board subcommittee, consisting of Kenneth Banghart and Albert Selden, has been appointed to investigate McDonald's allegations. McDonald, who's under contract to TIP until September, continues as an employee and a board member until then. His vecpee-treasurer duties have been shifted by John Gerstad, who's also a v.p. and secretary McDonald is scheduled to meet with the subcommittee tomorrow morning (Thurs.).

TIP, which was formed during the 1957-58 season, had a deficit of $106.392 on a total capitalization of $372,873, leaving a net capital balance of $266,481 as of its last fiscal accounting for the year ending June 30, 1960. During the period covered in that audit, gross income was $89.863 and total expenses and losses was $139,194.

Busy Holidays

Although actress Barbara Berjer is employed, it apparently takes a vacation to put her to work. Either her own vacation or someone's else.

As understudy for the two principal femme roles in "The Best Man," at the Morosco Theatre, N.Y., Miss. Berjer subbed for Leora Dana while the latter vacationed the week of March 13. The ensuing week, during her own vacation, Miss Berjer played the title role in an Equity Library Theatre revival of "The Country Girl," at the Lenox Hill Playhouse, N.Y.

Returning to her understudy assignment, the actress subbed last week for the vacationing Kathleen Maguire as second femme lead in "The Best Man."

3-Theatre Center For Performing Arts in L.A., Not Music Hall Alone

Los Angeles, April 4.

A Southern California center of the performing arts is to be established here on the site originally designated for the erection of building housing only a Music Center. The project, still to be called the Music Center, will encompass three houses, the originally-planned 3,200-seater, another seating 1,800 and the third 800.

The three theatres will occupy the seven-acre Civic Center site bounded by First, Hope, Temple and Grand Streets. The largest of the playhouses will be tagged Memorial Pavilion, the smallest the Forum and the other the Center Theatre. The buildings will be planned, designed and engineered by the architectural firm of Welton Becket & Associate.

The undertaking is to be financed by private subscription, with the Music Center Building Fund Committee responsible for raising the estimated $5,000,000 cost of construction the of two smaller houses. The committee had previously pledged itself to raising $6,000,000 toward the Music Center project making its total commitment $11,000,000. Los Angeles county has agreed to guarantee $9,000 toward the construction cost of the Pavilion as well as providing the site for the Center.

Ground-breaking for the Center is planned for this summer and the Pavilion is scheduled to open in December, 1962. Construction of the Forum and Center is expected to be completed by the spring and fall, respectively, of 1963. The Forum will house intimate drama, recitals, chamber music concerts, lectures and civic-cultural meeting. The Center will be the berth for other dramas, musicals, intimate opera, some light opera and certain other musical and theatrical events, not requiring the elaborate facilities of the Pavilion.

The entire project will be operated by the non-profit Music Center Operating Corp. The development is to include underground parking facilities for 2,000 cars.

Texas Little Theatre Is Converting Film House

Lufkin, Tex., April 4.

The old Lynn Theatre, a film house, will be remodeled for use by the local Community Theatre. Lee Butler, prez of the newly organized group, says the renovation will include the construction of a stage, painting and re-upholstering.

The work will be done with member-contributed labor and donated supplies.

Bendix in Summer 'Take Me' Reprise

William Bendix, who succeeded Jackie Gleason in the Broadway production of "Take Me Along," will repeat the part played by him in the musical next July 3-30 at the Chicago Melody Top, Hillside, Ill. Following its four-week tent stand, the presentation may embark on a brief first class road tour of major midwest cities.

The musical adaptation of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness" did not tour following the termination last Dec. 17 of its 57-week Broadway run under the production auspices of David Merrick. Bendix, in what marked his return to Broadway after nearly 20 years as a film, radio and television star, took over the Gleason assignment eight weeks before the presentation closed.

"Take Me" and five other musicals will make up the season at the Melody Top, which had a successful getaway semester last year. The offerings are presented by Bill Rach, in association with Charles A. Comiskey and Joseph R. Vaughn. Functioning as year-round New York representative for the venture is Henri W. Gine. Director for the upcoming season is Jay Harnick, while Fred Werner is musical director, Larry Stevens, choreographer, and Al Millman, stage and production manager.

The 1961 session will begin May 29 with a three-week run of "Show Boat," starring Lisa Kirk. A two-week run of "South Pacific," starring Howard Keel will follow June 19-July 2. The four-week "Take Me" stand is next and then two weeks of "Anything Goes," costarring Phil Ford and Mimi Hines. Gordon and Sheila MacRae follow as "Bloomer Girl" headliners the Aug. 14-27 fortnight. The closing entry for two weeks Aug. 28-Sept. 10 will be "Student Prince," with the star as yet undesignated.

The spot, which seats about 2,200, will institute a two-performance Saturday night schedule this summer, one at 6 p.m. and the other at 9:30 p.m.

Dallas State Fair Sets 6-Musical Summer List

Dallas, April 4.

The State Fair Musicals, under new managing director Tom Hughes, has set its 20th season at State Fair Music Hall. Six shows, each in for two weeks, will run from June 12-Sept. 3. The first five musicals will be produced locally. Hughes' staff includes Gus Schirmer Jr., stage director; James Leon, musical director; Toni Beck, dance director and Peter Wolf, technical director.

The schedule includes "Song of Norway," June 12-25; "Destry Rides Again," June 26-July 9; Brigadoon," July 10-23; "Take Me Along," July 24-Aug. 6; "Bell on Dollar Baby," Aug. 7-20, and the touring company of "Bye, Bye Birdie," Aug. 21-Sept. 3, to close the season.

Tom Roland to Direct

Warsaw, Ind., April 4.

Tom Roland, head of the Manchester (Ind.) College Theatre Department, will direct the local Wagonwheel Playhouse this summer.

Herbert Petrie, owner-producer, says a new theatre of steel, with a permanent roof, open around the sides to give an open-air feeling, is being built to replace the former tent playhouse.

'Choice' Still 36% In the Red, With 200G Pic Sale

"Critic's Choice" is figured to have recouped about 64% thus far on its $150,000 investment. That's an on-paper estimate, taking into consideration revenue due from the sale of the film rights to 20th-Fox, reportedly for $200,000. Since the production gets 40%, less 10% commissions of the picture income, its share of the film coin will be at least $72,000.

As of last March 4, the Otto Preminger presentation had a deficit of $125,966. Since there's figured to have been little change in the show's financial status since March 4, the deficit, on the basis of the anticipated film income, is now estimated at around $54,000. The Ira Levin comedy, starring Henry Fonda, cost $93,024 to produce. An overall $24,791 tryout loss brought the cost of opening the play on Broadway to $117,815.

Besides having some losing weeks at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre, N.Y., where it's now in its 17th stanza, the presentation had to pay $7,500 in settlement of a contract with Gena Rowlands, who was replaced by Georgann Johnson during the out-of-town tryout. For the five weeks ended March 4, the play cleared $8,349, with the operating profit ranging from $550 on a $27,569 gross to $2,331 on a $29,379 gross.

On $25,575, its lowest gross during the five-week period, the show earned an operating profit of $1,599. Contributing to that, however, was a waiver of one-fourth the royalties due the author and Preminger as director. Anent the film sale, Bob Hope is to star in the picture, which is not to be released until after January, 1962.

Show Biz Luncheon For New Dramatists' Drive

A luncheon for several hundred individuals active in legit and "allied" fields is scheduled for April 14 in connection with the New Dramatists Committee's $40,000 fund-raising drive. According to New Dramatists president Mary K. Frank, the campaign is predicated on the belief that everyone in the theatre benefits from greater playwriting activity and hence all should "share the load" in terms of discovering and aiding new playwriting talent.

The luncheon, to be held at Sardi's restaurant, N.Y., will be cohosted by Ralph Bellamy, president of Actors Equity; Howard Lindsay, playwright-actor-producer and one of the founders of the New Dramatists in 1949; Solly Pernick, chairman of the Fact-Finding Committee of the entertainment unions and an IATSE officer, and John Shubert, producer and theatre owner. Broadway producer Kermit Bloomgarden is overall chairman of the fund drive.

Some Fun, Hey?

Knowing that all theatre treasurers loathe twofers, several people connected with the production of "Under the Yum Yum Tree" cooked up a scheme to plague the boxoffice crew of Henry Miller's Theatre, N. Y., where the show is playing its last two weeks on cutrates.

They had about a dozen bogus twofers printed for the film, "La Dolce Vita," which is booked for the house to follow "Yum Yum." A deadpan stooge was recruited to approach the Miller ticket window, demand twofer seats for the picture and become irate when refused.

Seasonal Slow-Down Seen Cutting Road List to 7 Shows, All Tuners

By JESSE GROSS

The seasonal slowdown in road activity the next few months is expected to reduce the summer touring list to seven shows—all musicals. As usual, the bulk of the warm-weather playing time will be confined to Los Angeles and San Francisco, but not limited to Clive Light Opera sponsorship there.

Coast dates have been lined up for five of the shows, of which one will play part of the summer in Chicago and another the northwest. A sixth will play Washington in June and into September and the seventh will possibly spend most of the summer in Philadelphia, which hasn't had a hot-weather booking of a regular touring show in some years.

During the next seven months, Los Angeles will get seven musicals and Frisco six and possibly seven. The regular touring entries set to play both cities include "Bye Bye Birdie," "Fiorello," "Gypsy," "My Fair Lady" and "Sound of Music." "Birdie" and "Sound" will be on CLOA subscription in Los Angeles, along with local productions of "Merry Widow" and "Guys and Dolls."

"Gypsy," which will play Los Angeles, but not under CLOA subscription, will be presented by the association in Frisco. The subscription series there will also include "Birdie," "Sound" and "Widow," with the possibility of "Guys" being added as an "optional" fifth show. In Los Angeles the CLOA entries are presented at the Philharmonic Auditorium, owned by the Baptist Church, which prompted CLOA managing director Ed Lester to sidestep

Vive La Difference

It was worth a news note several months ago when Colleen Dewhurst, who plays the pregnant mother in "All the Way Home," at the Belasco, N. Y., became pregnant. Since time, tide and nature wait for no actress, it's become necessary to revise the show's dialog slightly.

Only one line has been changed, the mother-in-law now looking intently at the "expecting" woman and now saying, "Baby don't show much yet, do it?"—the "much" being inserted.

Miss Dewhurst is the wife of actor George C. Scott.

'Calamity Janes': Betsy, Edie, Carol

Betsy Palmer, Edie Adams and Carol Burnett are some of the stars who'll play the title role this summer in various stock productions of the legit version of the 1953 western filmusical, "Calamity Jane." It's believed Miss Palmer's appearance in the property will mark her debut in a legit musical.

The actress is scheduled to headline the John Kenley presentation at the Packard Music Hall, Warren, O., and possibly the Veterans Memorial Auditorium, Columbus. Miss Adams is slated to appear in a St. Louis Municipal Opera production the fortnight starting June 12, and Miss Burnett is also skedded for a two-week stand in the musical at the Starlight Theatre, Kansas City, beginning July 17.

In the picture, the title role is played by Doris Day, who costars with Howard Keel. Legit and television rights to the property were acquired by the Tams-Witmark Music Library, established New York licensor of musical performance rights for the stock and amateur markets. The firm, banking on the possibility of a Broadway production of the musical next season and or a television presentation, is not leasing the property for production within a 250-mile radius of New York.

The initial production of the legit adaptation of the Warner Bros. film will take place in Ft. Worth, where the musical is to open May 27 at the Casa Manana for a three-week run. It's not been disclosed yet who'll play the title role there, but the male lead will be essayed by Danny Scholl. The book for the legit edition was adapted by Charles K. Freeman from the screenplay by James O'Hanlon. Sammy Fain and Paul Francis Webster, respective composer and lyricist for the film, have revised the original songs, in addition to providing several new numbers.

Mex Production Group Does 'Bullring' Comedy

Mexico City, April 4.

A new production unit called Central de Espectaculos 'Show Center' has started activities with a comedy, "They Want to Be Toreros," by new Mexican playwright Jaime Rojas Palacios.

The piece is located around a bullring and involves toreadores, apprentices and hangers-on. The atmosphere is believable and the characters are strong. German Robles, who staged and plays the lead, is a better actor than director. Guillermina Tellez Giron is uneven, but Guillermo Zetina and Sergio Jurado turn in credible performances.

Fernando Lujan has his best scenes in the first act in the role of the sportswriter. And minor parts are played by fledgling actors including Mario Vera, Justo Solis, Antonio Corona, Jaime Jimenez Pons and Mario Chavez.

The comedy is not of particular importance but, because of its background and theme, is understandable to Mexican audiences. It has better pace and more laughs than some of the imported works that suffer in translation.

English Actors Bitter At Scrapping of Plan For National Theatre

London, April 4

The Government has indefinitely tabled long-proposed plans for the construction of a National Theatre on London's South Bank. Chancellor of the Exchequer Selwyn Lloyd has told the House of Commons that the cost, estimated at more than $5,600,000, would be excessive.

However, the Government will increase its grants to the Old Vic and to the Royal Shakespeare Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon, as well as to provincial stock companies, spending, in all, up to $1,200,000 a year. The national theatre scheme, which was to have included a company of 150 actors to play repertory in London, at Stratford and on tour, has been talked about for nearly 50 years.

Queen Elizabeth, now the Queen Mother, laid the foundation stone for the Thameside building in 1951, and many English actors are angry that the whole project has come to nothing. Michael Redgrave declared, "We hoped against hope not to see, at this moment, on this vital issue the Government turn the lights out and plunge us into darkness."

Donald Wolfit commented, "A national theatre is needed more in this country today than ever it was. We are the only great nation without one."

Peter Hall, director of the Royal Shakespeare Theatre, added, "Very disappointing. But the promise of financial assistance means we can go some way towards paying artists fairly."

British Stratford Now The Royal Shakespeare

London, April 4

The Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon, which opens its new season tonight (Tues.), is now known as the Royal Shakespeare Theatre, by command of Queen Elizabeth. The new title is figured likely to please most people connected with theatre, for the word "Memorial" has been criticized as being morbid. As Anthony Quayle, then the theatre's director, wrote 12 years ago, "What a funereal air hangs about that word 'Memorial.'"

The building was opened by the Prince of Wales in 1932. In 1926 the previous building was destroyed by fire.

Shows Abroad

You in Your Small Corner

London, March 22.

Arts Theatre presentation (in association with Michael Codron) of a two-act (six scenes) drama by Barry Reckord. Staged by John Bird; decor, Motley. Opened March 21, '61, at the Arts Theatre, London; $2.15 top.

Mrs. Jordan ..... Pearl Nunez
Jim ..... Gordon Woolford
Dave Jordan ..... Neville Munro
Terry Jamieson ..... Jeanne Hepple
Mrs. Jamieson ..... Margery Withers
Georgie Jamieson ..... Allan Mitchell
Jill Kendrick ..... Rachel Herbert

Barry Reckord, a West Indian actor-author, proves himself to be a playwright of some promise with this play, though he has not quite succeeded in handling the interesting situation he has conceived. "You in Your Small Corner" would need skilful doctoring before it could be considered a sound entry for commercial presentation.

Reckor has juggled two themes somewhat unsteadily. One is the familar problem of a romance between a colored youth and a white girl. The other concerns the difficulties of communication between an intelligent, perceptive young man and an wkward, not-yet-awakened girl.

This is not the usual business of the whites looking down on the Negroes. The switch is that the young man's mother will have no truck with her son's future being cluttered up by his association with the white girl. Reckord's conclusion appears to be that snobbishness and prejudice are not the prerogative of any one class or race.

Pearl Nunez plays a Jamaican woman who has earned a living as a scrubwoman in London and precariously built up a small colored club before sending for her son who is due to go to Cambridge University to study English and law. He is a quiet, intelligent chap and she sees her plans likely to be ruined when he falls in love with a local white girl from a poor Cockney family. The lovers are united at curtain fall, but it is an unconvincing ending, for regardless of color prejudice, it is difficult to see how there could be a permaneat relationship between them.

The playwright marshals his ideas uncertainly, but he writes vigorously and has created interesting characters. Neville Munroe, as the colored student, hasn't the rance to handle this central role, but Jeanne Hepple as the awkward little Cookney girl has many moments that suggest a bright future. Pearl Nunez as his mother, has the most incisive role and, though the performance is largely on one note, it is intelligently drawn.

Margery Withers as the girl's mother and Allen Mitchell, playing her cocky, foul-mouthed brother, produce most of the down-to-earth and often crude comedy. In addition, since they have not the slightest worry about the girl mixing with a colored man, these characters help to underline Reckord's point. Rachel Herbert and Gordon Woolford round off an adequate but not inspired cast.

John Bird's direction suffers largely because he fails to tighten up the frequent awkward passages that come from the playwright's inexperience. Motley has contributed one of the now fashionable open sets where it is difficult sometimes to know in exactly which room the characters are operating and, on the small Arts Theatre stage, it is uncomfortably cramped. Rich.

Jacques

London, March 24.

English Stage Society presentation (in association with Oscar Lewenstein) of comedy in two parts by Eugene Ionesco, translated by Donald Watson. Staged by R. D. Smith; decor, Michael Young. Opened March 22, '61, at the Royal Court Theatre, London; $2.15 top.

Jacques ..... Denys Hawthorne
Jacqueline ..... Zoe Caldwell
Jacques' Father ..... John Moffatt
Jacques' Mother ..... Selma Vaz Dias
Vacques' Grandfather ..... Peter Duguid
Jacques' Grandmother ..... Madge Brindley
Roberta ..... Valerie Hanson
Roberta's Father ..... George Merritt
Roberta's Mother ..... Mollie Maureen

Not even smart thesping and direction salvage this evening of puerile nonsense which may just about survive its scheduled three-week run. Though it has somewhat the same offbeat approach as the same author's "The Rhinoceros," this Eugene Ionesco effort defies intelligibility.

The work is virtually two separate plays involving the same characters, and Ionesco's use of malapropisms and verbal surrealism wears so thin that by halfway most of the first night audience seemed either numb or still valiantly trying to dope out the author's meaning.

Part One, tagged "Obedience," has the title hero resisting his family's attempts to break his will. Eventually he gives in and announces that he loves potatoes in their jackets, which seems small audience reward for such a long vigil.

He then refuses to marry a girl because she only has two noses, but is prepared for nuptials with her sister who not only has three noses but also nine fingers on her left hand. The two discover they have a mutual love of animals and have a lengthy, sexy conversation involving a stallion.

In the second part, labelled "The Future's in Eggs," the couple have been locked in an embrace for three years, and the family are concerned that there has been no production. The hero, who by now has got green hair, clucks moodily on a divan and the heroine delivers baskets full of eggs which are brought onstage.

Sympathy must be extended to performers who find themselves saddled with such pointless nonsense. Denys Hawthorne as Jacques, and John Moffatt, Peter Duguid and George Merritt all give very sound performances. Valerie Hanson, playing both the girl with two noses and her sister with three, is firstclass, though she maybe understandably puzzled out the character (characters?)

R. D. Smith has staged the play skillfully by turning the events into a parody of Victorian melodrama. But though there is style in the production, satire is blunted and the whole evening is unbearably monotonous. Michael Young's decor is the sanest part of a nightmare experience. Rich.

Une Sainte And Le Tricycle

Paris, March 18.

Arlette Reinberg & Mel Howard presentation of two one act plays: "Une Sainte," by Julia Chamore; staged by Roland Dubillard; set and costumes, Adrienne Latour; features Arlette Reinberg, Andree Tainsy, Catherine De Seyne; and "Le Tricycle," by Fernando Arrabal; staged by Olivier Hussenot; sets and costumes, Georges Richar; features Georges Adet, Amedee, Noelle Hussenot, Bernard Stephane. Opened March 6, '61, at the Theatre De Poche Montparnasse, Paris; $3 top.

UNE SAINTE

Sister Marie ..... Catherine De Seyne
Sister Agathe ..... Marie Mergey
Mother Pelagie ..... Mona Dol
Sister Camille ..... Denise Peron
Sister Felicie ..... Odette Piquet
Sister Fernande ..... Arlette Reinberg

LE TRICYCLE

LeVieux ..... Georges Adet
Abel ..... Amedee
Mita ..... Noelle Hussenot
Climondo ..... Bernard Stephane

Each of these one-acters runs 75 minutes. "Une Sainte" concerns a hunger fast in a nunnery and "Le Tricycle" is about a group of picturesque tramps living under a Paris bridge.

The first is somewhat too mannered and loses its points, while the second has an offbeat comedy flavor that may herald a new writing talent in its rather special field. Only "Le Tricycle" appears to be a prospect for export, and it only as off-Broadway material.

"Sainte" involves a nun who refuses to eat after being made ill by a dish served to her. However, she takes sugar on the sly. The other nuns hover around the protesting sister until she dies. The drama lacks clear viewpoint, but is well mounted and played.

"Le Tricycle" concerns four tramps who end up killing a stranger who has offered money to a feminine member of their group. The strange nether world is well presented in the non-conformist characters who have their own codes. The piece also seems to touch on the prevalent theme of non-communication.

The acting, directing and physical production are competent, but the whole double-bill seems good for only a limited run. Mosk.

Les Nuits Blanches

(The White Nights)

Paris, March 26.

Lucie Germain presentation of two-act drama by Gil Semiller, adapted from a novelet by Fyodor Dostoyevsky. Staged by Nicole Kessel; set and costumes, Andre Acquart. Features Nicole Kessel, Jean Martin. Opened March 22, '61, at the Theatre Lutece, Paris; $3 top.

Girl ..... Nicole Kessel
Boy ..... Jean Martin

Fyodor Dostoyevsky's novelet, "White Nights," which served as the basis of an updated Italo film of Luchino Visconti three years ago and a more recent Russian period screen version, now emerges a two-character, one-set play here.

As a legiter it is flimsy, verbose and lacking directorial or visual qualities for dramatic interest. The show appears a fast flop, with little export value.

The story involves a timid, romantic lonely young man who meets a girl on a bridge one night in 19th century St. Petersburg. They confide in each other and he finally loses her. That is all. The dreary set, a series of catwalks backed by white sheets, and the lack of depth and projection by the two actors combine to make this a tiresome evening. Mosk.

Bird With a Medal

Melbourne, March 17.

Little Theatre Guild Ltd. presentation of three-act drama by Ru Pullan. Staged by Peter Finnell and James Inglis; setting, John Truscott; lighting, Alec Brown. Opened March 16, '61, at Melbourne Little Theatre.

Biddie Oakleaf ..... Marjorie Archibald
Fred Oakleaf ..... Kevin Colebrook
Jenn Foster ..... Lyndell Rowe
Col. Hogan ..... Eric Colladetti
Mr. Voss ..... George Whaley
Marylyn Murphy ..... Lorna Bollman
Georgie Thompson ..... Peter Oyston
Mr. Foster ..... Norman Smith

Adolescent delinquency is theme of this new Aussie play. Such youngsters are called bodgies and widgies here.

Set in a Sydney suburban apartment house owned by kindly middle-aged couple, the drama concerns the development of an apparently nice average girl into a gum-chewing, rock 'n' rolling, callous widgie. The pivot of this transformation is a ruthless quick-talking, swaggering bodgie. The melodramatic ending doesn't solve the problems posed.

Ru Pullan, the play's author, has written some 14 novels, 40 radio serials, short stories, radio plays and adaptations. He has not mastered stage technique, however. His movement of characters on and off stage is frequently contrived, there are awkward moments of padding and sometimes, as if afraid of calling a spade a spade, the author merely hints, and the result is a clumsy confusion.

There is a vagueness about the characters and their backgrounds. Moreover they are not entirely believable. The staging by Peter Randall and James Inglis is devoted and careful, and most of the performances are good, with a moving portrayal of the motherly landlady by Marjorie Archibald, a frighteningly authentic representations by Eric Colladetti as the bodgie and Lyndell Rowe as the tragic girl. Stan.

GENEVIEVE BACK TO BARNS IN 'CAN-CAN'

French comedienne-singer Genevieve will be back on the summer theatre circuit again this year. She's slated to headline a package presentation of "Can-Can," in which she played stock dates the summers of 1958 and 1959. She toured last summer in "Silk Stockings."

Plans for a tour this spring of a new revue, "From Paris With Love," with Genevieve as star, have apparently been dropped. The show was to have been produced by Roger L. Stevens, Gilbert Miller and Ted Mills, the star's husband.

Protocol a La Susskind

A television-unoriented observer of the tv-taping of the "Open End" show to be vidcast next Sunday night (9) was amused at what seemed to be the caste system used in the arrangement of guest participants. As moderator (and producer), David Susskind occupied the upstage-center spot. Flanking him on either side were the apparent prestige guests, Kenneth Tynan, drama critic of the London Observer, and Walter Kerr, aisle-sitter of the N. Y. Herald Tribune.

Next in order of Susskind's rating of importance were actor-author Peter Ustinov and Thomas Quinn Curtiss, legit-film reviewer for the Paris edition of the Herald Trib. Downstage (nearest the camera) were the out-of-town legit critics, Elliot Norton, of the Boston Record, and Nathan Cohen, of the Toronto Star.

Ustinov, a professional performer with long experience at handling upstaging and with the bonus assets of being articulate and witty, reportedly dominates (at least as observed in the studio version) discussion of the topic, "Dramatic Criticism."

Musical numbers: "Cheers for the Hero," "The Glory That Is Greece," "The Happiest Girl in the World," "The Greek Marina," "Shall We Say Farewell," "Never Be-Devil the Devil," "Whatever That May Be," "Eureka," "Diana's Arrival in Athens," "The Oath," "Diana's Transformation," "Vive la Virtue," "Adrift on a Star," "That'll Be the Day," "How Soon, Oh Moon?" "Love-Sick Serenade," "Five Minutes of Spring," "Never Trust a Virgin," "Entrance of the Courtesans," "The Pied Piper's Can-Can."

It's based on "Lysistrata" and is titled "The Happiest Girl in the World," but it might as well be called "The Cyril Ritchard Show." It opened Monday night (3) at the Martin Beck Theatre and by any name it won't do.

Take Aristophanes and Bullfinch as authors and Offenbach as composer and there's theoretically the basis for a dandy musical comedy. As it works out in this story credited to E. Y. Harburg, with book by Fred Saidy and Henry Myers, it's a long evening of single entendre archness, with an unevenly melodic score. Harburg's fancy-pantsy clever lyrics and Ritchard having himself a time as uninhibited star and self-indulgent director.

The book takes the basic "Lysistrata" plot about the Athenian women's marital strike against their soldier husbands in order to force a peace in the war with Sparta. It borrows a few Greek gods from Thomas Bullfinch mythology, concentrating on Pluto and Diana as the chief rivals in the struggle for peace or war.

The show retains the ancient Athens locale, with an added scene on Mount Olympus to introduce Jupiter, Juno, Bacchus, Aphrodite, Mercury, Apollo, Neptune, Diana and Pluto. There are the inevitable male chorus numbers, in one case in a communal bath, with the sex-starved men draped in towels and shouting a patter number, and in another the agonized wives wailing around the citadel.

Offenbach's score provides a number of pleasing melodies, including some that a musical square may find surprisingly familiar. The standard "Barcarole," from "The Tales of Hoffman," becomes a love song called "Adrift on a Star," with somewhat sticky lyrics. The tune that every schoolboy knows as the "Marine Hymn" becomes "The Greek Marine," still a rousing marching song, repeated several times. Also familiar, among others, are the title song and "Shall We Say Farewell."

There are the expected topical references, such as summit conferences, preventative retaliation, co-existence Arabian oil and, inescapably, an obnoxious person being described as "sick." There is also the basic "Lysistrata" scene in which the scheming heroine teases and persistently thwarts her amorous husband.

Ritchard plays Pluto, at times assuming the guise of the Athenian Chief of State, the Pied Piper, a playwright and various other irrelevant low-comedy identities. In every case, the characterization is a sort of whimsically fay Capt. Hook. As one nearby first-nighter observed, he looks startlingly like a dimpled Beatrice Lillie, with a touch of caricature David Wayne.

Prancing about, winking, grimacing and picking up easy laughs from the well-wishing audience, Ritchard's onstage much of the evening, which should be requisite for the solo star of a show. He talks his song numbers effectively and does several simple dances passably. He's a skillful farceur with real star authority, but not the best judge of his own instincts for personal showmanship.

Janice Rule, a good looker whose previous Broadway appearances have been in straight plays, has the dancing role of the goddess Diana, who adopts human form for the purpose of sampling mortal love. Having originally trained as a dancer, she reveals respectable ability at it. Her singing voice is weak, however.

Dran Seitz is an attractive Lysistrata, with an unsuspectedly rich singing voice. As Kinesias, her demanding spouse, Bruce Yarnell is properly virile looking and has a satisfactorily resonant voice. Among the notable supporting performers are Rita Metzger, John Napier, Michael Kermoyan, Alton Ruff, Ron Stratton and Joy Claussen.

Dania Krupska's choreography is distinctive and frequently amusing, particularly as the most important numbers have had to be built around performers who aren't regular dancers. The settings by William and Jean Eckart are handsome and witty, and the Robert Fletcher costumes are in the revealing Grecian style, with more male than female epidermis visible. Considering the spotty way the Offenbach music has been employed, the Robert Russell Bennett and Hershy Kay orchestrations seem expert.

As a whole, though, "The Happiest Girl" is bigger, more lavish and better looking than it is entertaining. Hobe.

What's New About No-Quotes?

Why all the fuss about producer Leo Kerz using no critical quotes in the advertising of "Rhinoceros," at the Longacre Theatre, N.Y.? It's unusual, but not unprecedented. The late Maxwell Anderson adopted such a policy for his own plays and, without any public fanfare about it, stuck to the rule for a number of years.

Incensed over the critical roasting and flop of his "Truckline Cafe," the playwright took a public rap at the New York reviewers, calling them, among other things, the "Jukes family of journalism," a reference to a moronic family noted in psychiatry and a picturesque term still cherished by critic-baiters and by a number of critics themselves.

More to the present point, Anderson vowed not to use critical quotes in the ads for any of his plays thereafter, and followed the rule for his next show, the enthusiastically reviewed and highly successful "Joan of Lorraine." In that case, Ingrid Bergman drew personal raves for her performance, but unlike the leads in the current "Rhinoceros," willingly agreed to abide by the no-quote policy.

Anderson continued the rule for his subsequent shows for a number of years, but at the urging of fellow-members of the Playwrights Co., he finally relented for "The Bad Seed," and allowed the use of quote ads. In the meanwhile, however, he had become enraged over the unfavorable reception of his "Barefoot in Athens," centering his anger chiefly on Brooks Atkinson of the N. Y. Times.

The playwright wrote Atkinson a note of denunciation, vowing never to allow another of his scripts to be produced on Broadway as long as the critic held that position with the Times. Word of the missive got out, but although he was supposed to have written a conciliatory reply, Atkinson would not reveal the contents of Anderson's letter or even discuss it, so the matter was not publicly reported.

In any case, Anderson preceded Kerz by many years in a no-quotes policy. Moreover, he did not use the policy as an exploitation gimmick, made no public issue of it and simply followed his convictions. His Playwrights Co. associates, while continuing to use quotes in the ads for their own plays, respected his decision in regard to his shows, as did the various actors and others involved.

'Kicks' Telecast Brings 200G

But Investors Must Sign Partnership Agreements—Only Room for $40,000 Backing

Wires, letters and phone calls, pledging a combined total of over $200,000 towards the financing of "Kicks & Co.," were sent directly to the producers of the Broadway-targeted musical following its audition on Dave Garroway's NBC-TV "Today" show the morning of March 28. The entire two-hour network program, exclusive of news segments and commercials, was devoted to a preview of the show.

The musical, planned for presentation next October by Robert Barron Nemiroff and Dr. Burton Charles D'Lugoff, was written by Oscar Brown Jr., with Nemiroff functioning as his editorial associate on the book. Besides disclosing the above figure, a representative of the proposed Broadway venture reports that during the 24 hours following the telecast NBC received 25 wires pledging backing in amounts of $500 to $20,000, plus letters and phone calls.

Of the letters, 25 were sent by individuals interested in investing in the projected Broadway production. However, at the time of the program, the producers claimed that they had already raised $360,000 of the $400,000 capitalization needed for the project. Thus, obviously not all of those who've pledged coin will be able to get in on the production since only $40,000 was apparently needed at the time to the telecast.

Those whose pledges are accepted will have to sign the limited partnership agreement before the coin can be considered actual capital for the production. The tv audition also resulted in letters from viewers wanting to purchase tickets to the production, which does not have a theatre booked, nor a star, director or choreographer signed.

Both Nemiroff and D'Lugoff are connected with show business, although the musical marks their initial stab at legit production. Nemiroff, husband of Lorraine Hansberry, author of "Raisin in the Sun," is a music publishing executive. He co-authored the lyrics for the song, "Cindy, Oh Cindy," with D'Lugoff, who's a research physician at John Hopkins Hospital, N. Y. D'Lugoff has also been involved in artist management and concert production in association with his brother. Art D'Lugoff, with whom he also co-owns the Village Gate, a cabaret theatre in Greenwich Village, N.Y.

Besides his writing activity, Brown is also a singer, having recently made an album titled "Sin & Soul" for Columbia Records. The deal for the Broadway production calls for Brown and Nemiroff, as editorial assistant, to share 6% of the gross. D'Lugoff and Nemiroff, as producers, are to get a management fee of 1% of the gross until the production pays off. Incidentally, on the Garroway show Brown portrayed all the male roles and Zabethe Wilde all the female parts.

Investors in the production include a number of performers, among them Hazel Scott, Sammy Davis Jr., Sidney Poitier, Ruby Dee, Ossie Davis, Nina Simone and members of the cast of "Raisin in the Sun." Critic Gilbert Seldes, now Dean of the Annenberg School of Communications at the Univ. of Pennsylvania, is also a backer.

SEEKS APPROVAL FOR BALTO LEGIT CENTER

Baltimore, April 4.

Morris A. Mechanic, owner-operator of Ford's Theatre, Baltimore's only legit house, is seeking City Renewal Commission approval for the construction of a multi-million dollar theatre in Charles Center, municipal face-lifting project now underway.

He wants priority on a site on the south side of Baltimore Street between Charles and Hanover Streets, and proposes to build a legit house with adjacent airlines terminal, restaurants, stores and office space.

As the only theatre owner whose property (excluding Ford's) is being demolished for the Center, he argues that he should have first claim on priority. He recently sold the city nine properties, including the Century Theatre for $1,400,000. The Commission deferred action on the request until April 14, but it's assumed that the bid will be okayed.

According to Mechanic, the new house would replace Ford's which would probably then be sold for use as part of a commercial development. The new theatre would seat 1,600, about same at Ford's.

Musical Stock Season Set for San Diego

A new musical stock showcase will be unveiled this year in San Diego. The operation, tagged the San Diego Melody Theatre, Inc., is scheduled to launch a 12-week season June 13 with film-tv actress-dancer Juliet Prowse in "Silk Stockings."

Offerings at the spot, which is under the production reins of Alan Light, will each run two weeks.

'Fairy Tales' Author Due For Production Confabs

London, April 4.

J. P. Donleavy, author of "Fairy Tales of New York," currently at the Comedy Theatre, sails for New York tomorrow (Wed.) on the Franconia to set up a Broadway production of the show. He's due in Manhattan next Monday (10).

"Fairy Tales," a satirical four-part show, moved into the Comedy in January following a tryout at the Pembroke Theatre-in-the-Round.

Whose Brainchild Was 'Okla' Exclamation Point? 'Mine,' Says Joseph Heidt

As a correcting footnote to the history of the imperishable musical, "Oklahoma!" pressagent Joseph Heidt comments on a recent Harper's Magazine article by Helene Hanff. The article dealt with the change of title of the show, originally "Away We Go," during the tryout tour, notably the use of an exclamation point, and credited the switch to Theatre Guild co-directors Lawrence Langner and the late Theresa Helburn. Miss Hanff, a television writer, was at that time assistant to Heidt, then pressagent for the Guild and now in a similar capacity for the Cass Theatre, Detroit.

"In case anyone cares," writes Heidt, "I was most emphatically unimpressed, almost terrified, when I was called by Langner from Boston, where the show was trying out, and told of the title change from 'Away We Go' to 'Oklahoma.' Here we were coming to Broadway with a seemingly light, breezy new musical with no names in the cast, lyricist Oscar Hammerstein 2d without a hit in a number of years, composer Richard Rodgers working for the first time with a new collaborator, and director Rouben Mamoulian all but forgotten—and Langner had to select 'Oklahoma' for a title.

"I was all for a gay, lively title, something to fit the summer tourist appetite (the production was opening in the spring). None of us had liked 'Away We Go' as a title, but I had asked the Guild to let me have it for the tryouts in New Haven and Boston, thinking that by the time we were ready for New York someone would have thought of an exiting title.

"'Oklahoma.' I believed it to be the dullest, most innocuous title ever given a musical—or a play. It looked awful in the first ad proofs, too. Then I hit the idea of the exclamation point. There's something about an exclamation point that always impressed me. It sounds big, important, truthful, brave.

"When I mentioned it to Lawrence and Terry, they were skeptical. They thought it a good idea, but that it might be taken as a challenge to the critics. How dare we add an exclamation point to 'Oklahoma' before the opening night? The critics would think we were calling it a hit before they decided for themselves. But I finally convinced Lawrence and Terry that it was all or nothin' anyway, and would have no effect on the critics' final reaction.

"We got busy with new publicity releases, new ads, painted in the exclamation point on the house boards of the St. James Theatre and then held our respective breaths. That, as I remember it, is the true story of the birth of the most famous exclamation point in theatrical history."

'Sound' SRO 300G Advance At the O'Keefe, Toronto

Toronto, April 4.

With two dark weeks before the O'Keefe Centre reopens for its summer season of six weeks of musical productions, "The Sound of Music" has a sellout advance sale of $300,000, including Theatre Guild-American Theatre subscription, for its three-week engagement starting tonight (Tues.).

The O'Keefe has "Flower Drum Song" for June 5-17, following the annual visit of the Metropolitan Opera, which formerly played the Maple Leaf Gardens. In the meanwhile, the house will have "Becket," April 24-29; the N.Y. Philharmonic, with Leonard Bernstein conducting, May 12-13, and "Gypsy," with Ethel Merman, May 15-27.

'Show Girl' Cast Got Week's Salary Or AFTRA Scale for Pay-TV Stint

The minimum performer salary for the International Telemeter pay-tv pickup last Sunday night (2) of the Broadway production of "Show Girl" was $480. Actors Equity claims jurisdiction over the cast, but a standard American Federation of Television & Radio Artists contract was used for the performance. Equity has not formulated its own pay-tv contract. AFTRA, which has jurisdiction of both live and filmed tv, claims representation of pay-tv as well.

The arrangement for the Sunday telecast required that each performer be paid at least a week's contractual salary for the one-day chore or the AFTRA minimum of $480, whichever was higher. Carol Channing, the show's star, presumably got considerably more than her regular salary, but the amount hasn't been disclosed. The Equity contract was not with Telemeter, but with the management of the revue. The performers are also to share in residual income, if any.

The Telemeter pickup of the show, direct from its berth at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre, N. Y., where it's now in its 13th week, was relayed to 5,800 pay-tv subscribers in Etobicoke, a suburb of Toronto. The subscription cost was $1.50 per set, while the box-office scale at the O'Neill runs to a top of $6.90 weeknights and $7.50 weekend eves.

The Sunday performance, carried live by Telemeter, was tapped for eight repeats this week in Etobicoke. Thus, the potential gross, on the basis of each subscriber putting up $1.50, would be $8,700 for nine performances. The potential capacity weekly take at the 1,076-seat O'Neill for the Carol Channing-starrer is $45,052. (The top Telemeter boxscore in the Toronto suburb has been 40%.)

A clause in the Equity contract with the League of N. Y. Theatres, the organization of Broadway producers and theatre owners, states, "the manager agrees there will be no closed circuit or pay television of any production without prior negotiations and agreement with Equity as to the payments and working conditions for said televising." Equity asserts it has no intention of questioning AFTRA's jurisdiction in tv, but it does claim jurisdiction over actors performing in a show playing under Equity jurisdiction.

Besides the performers, the creative writing talent and the production also share in residual revenue. The amount paid the production for the actual telecast hasn't been divulged. It's understood the stagehands received a week's salary for working on the pay-tv offering, plus an hourly rate for the time actually put in on the assignment.

The b.o. treasurers, company manager, pressagent and wardrobe personnel are understood to have received a week's salary, while the payment to ushers, porters, cleaners, engineers and some others is believed to have covered one performance at the Sunday rate. The musicians are understood to have a separate contract under which they were paid directly by Telemeter. The theatre got a flat rental fee for the special Sunday night presentation.

"Show Girl," presented by Oliver Smith, James A. Doolittle and Charles Lowe, has music, lyrics and sketches by Charles Gaynor and additional sketches by Ernest Chambers. The revue, currently in its 13th week, has been on twofers and folds on Broadway this Sat. (8).

Langham Due This Week At Stratford (Ont.) Fest

Stratford, Ont., April 4.

Michael Langham is due from England next weekend to begin rehearsals of the local Shakespeare Festival productions of "Coriolanus" and "Love's Labour's Lost."

He's been directing "Much Ado About Nothing" for its opening tonight (Tues.) at the Royal Shakespearean Theatre, Stratford-Upon-Avon, with Christopher Plummer and Dorothy Tutin costarred.

Equity Circular Rebuts Bellamy

A group opposing the stand taken by Actors' Equity president Ralph Bellamy in connection with the union's upcoming election has sent out its own privately-financed mailing to the Equity membership. The circular supports the Equity nominating committee ticket in its entirety, particularly emphasizing eight candidates.

The eight include the six bypassed by Bellamy in his prior, privately-financed campaign mailing endorsed by 20 prominent members of the union. The six are Tom Bosley, Carl Harms, George Ives, Bill Ross, Madeleine Sherwood and Shelley Winters. Also singled out for support with them are Leon Janney and Michael Tolan, both of whom were endorsed by Bellamy.

The list of supporters in the new circular endorsing the nominating committee's slate and specifically those named above include Anne Bancroft, Fred Clark, Howard Da Silva, Brian Davies, Ossie Davis, John Drew Devereaux, Nathaniel Frey, Joe Anthony, Jack Gilford, Ronnie Graham, Ellen Hanley, Sam Jaffee, Michael Kane, Michael Kermoyan, Zero Mostel, Sidney Poitier, John Randolph, Anne Revere, Arthur Rubin, Pat Stanley, Sada Thompson and Dick Van Dyke.

NEW GROUP ACQUIRES PABST, IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, April 4.

The Pabst Theatre here will be operated next season by Sydney Plotkin and Ray Mitchell, both Milwaukeeans, and Harry Lashinsky, head of National Attractions, Inc., a New York outfit. They've taken a two-year lease on the house, with a one-year renewal option.

Pact provides for monthly rental of $800, against 15% of the gross. The trio has posted a $15,000 bond to insure the first year's rent and guaranteed 18 concert dates a season for the Milwaukee and Chicago symphony orchestras. Their lease becomes effective next June 1 and they have a three-month rent-free period in which to refurbish the theatre for a September opening. They're planning on spending $20,000-$50,000 on the renovation.

In bidding for the Pabst lease, the trio beat out competing offers by Clair Richardson, operator of the Skylight Theatre here, and T. J. Bartalotta, who headed a group which presented "Kismet" at the theatre last year. The theatre lease was awarded Plotkin, Mitchell and Lashinsky by the common council, which decided not to demolish the house until the new Music Hall is erected, probably in three-four years. The theatre is under lease to the Pabst Foundation until the end of May.

Plotkin, who claims 10 years experience as a producer, actor and director in N.Y., will manage the house. Myra Peache, who's held that position the last 18 years, retires May 31. Mitchell is a local theatrical booking agent and ticket agency operator. Lashinsky will handle the bookings for the house, with "My Fair Lady" tentatively skedded for next September. The trio hope to keep the Pabst lit 180 days their first season of operation.

Meanwhile, Mitchell and Plotkin have booked "Flower Drum Song" for a May 8-13 stand at the Wisconsin Theatre here.

Charlie Meeker Given Texas Cultural Award

Dallas, April 4.

Charles R. Meeker Jr., former vice-president and managing director of the State Fair Musicals, has been awarded the "1961 Cultural Award" of the Dallas-Fort Worth Art Directors Club. The citation goes to "the person, who, in the opinion of the Dallas-Fort Worth Art Directors Club, has contributed most to the advancement of the cultural arts in the Dallas-Fort Worth area."

stage." The Pulitzer awards will be announced May 1.

Although not specifically stated, musicals are also eligible for Pulitzer recognition with the same American angle proviso. The big-money bettors aren't ruling out the prospect of a Pulitzer citation even though not one of the plays or musicals produced on Broadway thus far this season has drawn unanimous critical endorsement. The only two entries supported by favorable reviews from all seven of the N. Y. daily reviewers are the two-character revue, "An Evening with Mike Nichols and Elaine May" and Michael MacLiammoir's one-man show, "The Importance of Being Oscar."

Despite the lack of an overwhelming reception for any one show, there's always the possibility of a dark horse winner, as was the case last year when the Pulitzer nod went to "Fiorello." Although the daily critics were unanimously enthusiastic about the musical, it wasn't generally regarded in the trade as a Pulitzer prospect.

Only three of the plays unveiled this season are considered Pulitzer possibilities and two of those are already identified with the award, being based on Pulitzer Prize novels. The two are "Advise and Consent," adapted by Loring Mandel from Allen Drury's novel of the same title, and "All the Way Home," adapted by Tad Mosel from James Agee's novel, "A Death in the Family." The other play is Hugh Wheeler's "Big Fish, Little Fish."

Musicals eligible for Pulitzer consideration include "Do Re Mi," Garson Kanin's adaptation of his short story of the same title, with music by Jule Styne and lyrics by Betty Comden and Adolph Green; "Tenderloin," a musical adaptation of the Samuel Hopkins Adams novel, with book by George Abbott and Jerome Weidman, music by Jerry Bock and lyrics by Sheldon Harnick; "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," with music and lyrics by Meredith Willson and book by Richard Morris, and "Wildcat," with book by N. Richard Nash, lyrics by Carolyn Leigh and music by Cy Coleman.

Play and musical nominations for the American Theatre Wing's Antoinette Perry (Tony) Awards, have been announced. The awards are to be presented April 16 at the Wing's 15th annual Tony Awards Dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, N. Y. Play nominees are "All the Way Home," "Becket," Lucienne Hill's translation of Jean Anouilh's play, "Devil's Advocate," Dore Schary's adaptation of Morris L. West's novel; "Hostage," by Brendan Behan, and "Taste of Honey," by Shelagh Delaney.

Musical Nominees

Musical nominees are "Bye Bye Birdie," with book by Mike Stewart, lyrics by Charles Strouse and music by Lee Adams; "Do Re Mi" and "Irma La Douce," which has music by Marguerite Monnot and English book and lyrics by Julian Moore, David Heneker and Monty Norman. The original book and lyrics for "Irma" were written by Alexandre Breffort. "Birdie," which opened late last season, is included among the nominees since it preemed after the Wing's deadline for Tony nominations last year.

Voting this year for the Tony awards, which encompass numerous other categories, will be by the entire Wing membership of about 300. Previously, the voting was by the 50-member Wing board of governors. The change in the balloting setup was spurred by criticism of the prior procedure. In another change, the names of the winners will be withheld until actual presentation. The Tony awards are given for "distinguished achievement in theatre."

The N. Y. Drama Critics Circle will make its awards April 18 for the best American play, musical and foreign play. Likely to be involved in the straight play competition are "The Wall," Millard Lampell's adaptation of John Hersey's novel, "Advise and Consent," "All the Way Home," Jean Kerr's "Mary, Mary," "Devil's Advocate," "Big Fish, Little Fish" and possibly "Far Country," the Henry Denker drama which opened on Broadway last night (Tues.).

In the musical field, top prospects for the Circle citation include "Irma La Douce," "Do Re Mi" and possibly "Carnival," the legituner version of the film, "Lili," with music and lyrics by Bob Merrill and book by Michael Stewart, based on material by Helen Deutsch. "Carnival" opens April 13 at the Imperial Theatre, N. Y., just under the wire for the critics' balloting.

Among the foreign entries, critics circle contenders are figured to include "Hostage," "Taste of Honey," "Becket" and "Rhinoceros," the latter adapted by Derek Prouse from Eugene Ionesco's play.

'West Side'

ing and choreography of Jerome Robbins.

Publicist Georges Cravenne had the neat idea of sending leading scribes to London to see another version of the show before this company came in from its first stop in Israel. It allowed for articles in the press stressing the meaning of the musical and the fact that even tragedy could be expressed in this format.

Usually the reaction at and word-of-month from the first night aud indicates the general fate of a show here. So "Story" looks in for big at this 2,400-seater house. Reviews are just coming out and look extremely favorable.

"Porgy and Bess," about five years ago, did well in Paris, but had too heavy a nut. However, this was still in a more classic opera-like mode without the blast and bounce of "Story." "Oklahoma" came in during a drama fest six years ago but did make much impact.

"Story" is the first outstanding modern Yank musical to be brought over intact by knowing producers. Kameron also struck a blow for American culture and private enterprise. Without any State Dept. backing this show has done more for Yank prestige than any other one since the war. As one of the members of the American Colony here remarked after the show, "Tonight, tonight, I was proud to be an American." The new American Ambassador to France, James Gavin, also made it first show night since his arrival.

First Reviews Rave

Paris, April 4.

The first reviews to come out on "West Side Story," here were all raves. And all underlined the fact that here was something new and dynamic. Everything was lauded and one newspaper opined that the cast of the show had Paris in the palm of their hands.

Le Monde said this was the best introduction that France could have to the new modes in musical comedy. It was communicable and universal in treatment and movement, and the theme of delinquency was something applicable to the whole world, besides the Romeo and Juliet thematic aspects.

Paris-Presse critic wrote that here was an astonishing show, something new for the French, actual, overwhelming, moving, and advised his readers to go see it at once. He found that dance and song clearly showed the drama, irony and tragedy and summed up, "C'est magnifique."

France-Soir had both its drama and music critics cover the show. For the legit aisle-sitter it was a masterpiece, possessing an irresistible force that was the tempo of youth today, full of vitality and sometimes dashing to death.

The music appraiser thought the jazz mood embedded in a classical orchestration was just right for the tempo of the show and felt it was worthy of Stravinsky. The love segments were pegged melodious and right, and the sets, direction, choreography all blended with the music and lyrics to completely renew the conception of the lyric theatre as it is known here.

Wallingford (Conn.) Tent Opening Season June 5; Plan Recreation Center

Wallingford, Conn., April 4.

The Ben Segal-Bob Hall will open their eighth season June 5 at the Oakdale Musical Theatre here. The initial bill is still tentative.

Thereafter, the schedule calls for "Show Girl," with Carol Channing, the week of June 12; "Guys and Dolls," with Tony Martin and Alan King, June 19; "Flower Drum Sang," June 26; "Take Me Along," with Dan Dailey, July 3; "Where is Charley?" with Shelley Berman, July 10; "Merry Widow," with Kathryn Grayson, July 17; "Kismet," with Howard Keel, July 24; "Oklahoma," with John Raitt, July 31; "The King and I," with Giselle McKenzie, Aug. 7; open week, Aug. 14; "Song of Norway," with Margrette Piazza, Aug. 21, and "Destry Rides Again" with Hugh O'Brian, Aug. 28.

Segal is currently awaiting a zoning regulation change to launch plans for a multi-million dollar cultural-business-recration center, including four theatres (a 2,500-seat musical arena, a 750-seat roadshow film house, a 2,000-seat legit for pre-Broadway tryouts and touring shows, and a 4,000-seat concert hall). Plans call for the permanent arena building to replace the present tent at the expiration of the current lease in 1963.

Road Slow-Down

booking "Gypsy" there because of its burlesque story line.

The Coast bookings of "Fiorello" and "Lady" will also be sans CLOA subscription. It'll be the third Los Angeles-San Francisco stand for "Lady," which was a CLOA entry on its previous visits. "Lady" is scheduled for a June 20-Aug. 5 stay at the Biltmore, Los Angeles. From there it's slated to move to Frisco for several weeks at an undesignated theatre. "Fiorello" will play the Geary, San Francisco, from June 27 through Aug. 5, and then the Biltmore from Aug. 7-Sept. 23.

A Los Angeles house hasn't been set for "Gypsy," which will probably open in that city Oct. 2. The CLOA season at the Philharmonic is scheduled to begin April 17 with "Widow." In Frisco, where the association will launch its season April 24 with "Birdie," the shows, except for "Sound," will play the the Curran Theatre. "Sound" is slated for a June 19-July 22 stand at the Opera House in that town.

The "Gypsy" engagement on the Coast, which begins Aug. 8 at the Curran, will be preceded by a May 29-Aug. 5 booking at the Shubert Theatre, Chicago. The Washington summer entry will be "Music Man," which is skedded for the National Theatre there from June 12-Sept. 2. The Philly probability is "Flower Drum Song," which is expected to move into the city in July.

Of the regular touring productions already mentioned, all are currently on the road except "Birdie," which opens in Frisco. Of the other shows now touring, "Andersonville Trial" and "J.B." are scheduled to end their bus-and-truck hikes April 15. Another motorized company, "Once Upon a Mattress," will apply the brakes May 27 in Washington.

"Hostage," now in Chicago, moves to the Coast where it's booked through May 13. It's unlikely to continue beyond that date. "Majority of One" will end its travels June 24 in Frisco and although closing dates on "Five Finger Exercise" and "Raisin in the Sun" aren't definite, the shows aren't figured to go through the summer.

"Becket," which began a post-Broadway tour last Thursday night (30) in Boston, will only be out for a short period with the windup scheduled for May 6 in Philly. Besides the regular touring productions, there's the current pre-Broadway tryout of "Carnival," which completes its out-of-town run April 8 in Philly. Two other tryouts are scheduled for the balance of the semester. They're "Donnybrook," which plays hinterland dates from April 17-May 13, and "Kuprin," due for a May 8-20 stand in Philly.

Asides and Ad-Libs

"Tenderloin" is slated to fold May 13 at the 46th Street theatre, N.Y., but a possible Las Vegas summer date is being dickered. A new song and dance show, "Donnybrook," is due May 18 at the 46th Street . . . With the tryout flop of "Impulse," which was to have occupied the house, "Rhinoceros" is now set to transfer to the Royale, N. Y., from the Longacre.

Caskie Stinnett, writing in Speaking of Holiday, promotion leaflet for Holiday mag, quotes Rona Jaffe, author of the novels, "The Best of Everything" and "Away from Home," as saying that she's writing a musical comedy (presumably that means the book for same) . . . Theodore Apstein, the playwright-tv-scripter; William Talbott, of the Samuel French play agency, and Hobe Morrison, legit editor of VARIETY, will be the guest observers tomorrow (Thurs.) and Friday (7) at a series of studios performances and panel discussions of scripts by graduate students of the Department of Speech & Dramatic Arts at the State Univ. of Iowa, at Iowa City.

Even for David Merrick, last week was crowded (though not unprecedentedly so). Monday (27) he was in Philadelphia for the tryout opening of his "Carnival." Tuesday (28) he was in New York to handle various matters involving his Broadway productions of "Do Re Mi," "Irma La Douce" and "Taste of Honey," plus his several prospective ventures for next season. Wednesday (29) he attended the tour-opening performance of "Gypsy" in Rochester. Thursday (30) he was in Boston for the tour-launching of "Becket." Friday (31) he was in Philly for another look at the Broadway-bound "Carnival."

The title of last night's (Tues.) opening at the Music Box Theatre, N. Y., 's "A Far Country," having been changed during the tryout tour from "The Far Country." With the indefinite article, the production gets lead-off position in alphabetical ad listings . . . Because Mike Linz, who's partnered with Stan Fuchs in the ownership, hates ordinary-quality salted peanuts, they now serve the most expensive grade of mixed nuts at the bar of the Lobster Restaurant, N. Y. "It's crazy," he admits. "Not only are these nuts prohibitively costly, but now I'm always eating them myself and getting fat."

Lucille Ball, star of "Wildcat," at the Alvin Theatre, N. Y., is now giving audiences a little bonus solo act at the curtain calls. She makes an informal thank-you speech, does a few bumps to comedy sound effects by the drummer, dances a little and then calls for another chorus of the show's top tune, "Hey Look Me Over." The customers lap it up. Miss Ball is a real pro who deserves good material next time . . . The performance edge of "A Taste of Honey," at the Booth Theatre, N. Y., holds up astonishingly, particularly on the part of Joan Plowright as the unhappy, indomitable heroine and Andrew Ray as her devoted homosexual friend. Angela Lansbury plays the mother for broad laughs and gets 'em, but it might be interesting to see the part played for its underlying pathos.

"The Sound of Music," one of the most under-rated musicals in years, has seemingly taken on added emotional dimension since the death of Oscar Hammerstein 2d. Did the lyricist know he was approaching the end when he was working on it, and write those affecting words for "Climb Every Mountain" as his valedictory? If so, he could hardly have created a more touching and inspiring memorial. The show retains a fine performance quality and deserves its sellout trade after 16 months' run at the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre, N. Y.

Perhaps anyone attending an off-Broadway show should approach it with a modified attitude. "Hedda Gabler," now in its fifth month at the Fourth Street Theatre, N. Y., apparently hasn't deteriorated much, at least in the performances of its several leading roles, although there are moments when the actors give the impression of playing for audience reaction rather than simply the meaning of the lines. It's as though they didn't trust the intelligence of the audience and were reading the lines so as to say in effect: "Get it?" In the title part Anne Meacham is giving one of her characteristically taut portrayals, but by Broadway standards the whole show seems slightly semi-pro.

"I think the secret of life is to try to think of everybody as beautiful. It is only the attitude of mind that matters. If you think of someone as beautiful, you find something beautiful in him, no matter what others may see."—Actress Julie Harris, as quoted by Margaret McManus in the N.Y. World-Telegram.

"Unless you're a man like Bernard Shaw, who knew what he was doing at all times, you get yourself in trouble trying to talk about the way you write. It makes for self-consciousness. I'd like to preserve an innocence, so that what I do can surprise me. I've been forced lately to articulate what's been happening to me, and that makes you self-conscious about trying to remain unself-conscious."—Edward Albee, author of the off-Broadway dramas, "The Zoo Story," "The American Dream" and "The Death of Bessie Smith," as quoted in the Talk of the Town section of the New Yorker.

"What a Killing," is a bad musical that seems to be searching for charm and nostalgia and winds up with tired situations and corny gags. In spite of the old pro, Paul Hartman, and the young one, Judy Lynn, the show makes Chicago in the 1920s seem dull and tiresome.

Not that a good musical couldn't be written about the Chicago of the gangster legends, with the bathtub gin and vice and violence. But trying to combine "Pal Joey," "Guys and Dolls," and a boy-wants-girl-but-can't-get-her plot doesn't work.

Except for one song, "Lennie," a mock-sentimental ballad about a dead gangster, the lyrics are uninspired, and the music sounds reminiscent. The sets are just as unimaginative. It's hard to say much about the staging, since the plot keeps getting in the way.

There are a few assets, such as the ease and wispy voice of Hartman, pleasant singing of tired songs by Miss Lynn and John Carter, and a humorless but uninhibited strip by a blond named Chanin Hale. There's also a little gem of a performance by a graceful dancer, Don Potter, who has style and sense of self-parody.

Gives Mag Article Fee To Guthrie Theatre Fund

Minneapolis, April 4.

The Tyrone Guthrie Repertory Theatre foundation is $2,000 richer, thanks to an unsolicited contribution from Dr. Walter W. Heller, chairman of President Kennedy's council of economic advisers.

Heller was to have received $2,000 from Life magazine for writing an article on U. S. economic condition. As a member of the Kennedy administration, however, he is forbidden to accept fees for articles or speeches. A former professor at Minnesota Univ., Heller instructed Life to turn the check over to the Guthrie foundation, which has raised more than $1,000,000 of its $1,900,000 goal for the construction of the theatre here.

'Sound' $97,752 in 5th Det. Week, 'Gypsy' $52,133 for 5, Rochester, 'Becket' $28,825 for 4 in Boston

With few exceptions, the road was good last week. "Sound of Music," again the leading grosser, continued to climb in its fifth and final frame in Detroit. The pre-Broadway touring "Carnival" was sellout in the first week of its Philadelphia stand, with the take reduced by subscription and press list.

"Majority of One" played to sturdy business its first week in Washington and both "Becket" and "Gypsy" began their post-Broadway tours smartly.

Estimates for Last Week

Also, prices on touring shows include 10% Federal Tax and local tax, if any, but as on Broadway grosses are net: i.e., exclusive of taxes. Engagements are for single week unless otherwise noted.

Business fluctuated on Broadway last week, with drops for most shows and increases for a few others. Among the entries hit by declining attendance activity were several borderline grossers.

Of the 28 offerings last week, four were capacity. "Camelot," "Do Re Mi," "Mary, Mary" and "Sound of Music." The "Mary, Mary" gross was cut by theatre party commissions and the "Camelot" figure represents the take after refunds to patrons unable to attend performances recently because of a snowstorm.

Another sellout last week was the Phoenix Theatre's presentation of "Hamlet," with the gross there reduced by student discount tickets. There were nine shows with cut-rate tickets in circulation.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Robert F. Six, ex-husband of "Gypsy" star Ethel Merman, informs VARIETY that he "voluntarily relinquished" his 15% profit-sharing interest in the musical "back to Miss Merman last April 21." He further reveals that he has "at no time since the inception" of the musical "drawn any of the profits." The production began a post-Broadway tour last week.

VARIETY reported last week that Six got 15% of the profits on "Gypsy" as a running expense, in accordance with the terms of the original fiscal setup. The arrangement referred to stipulated that Six get 15% for agreeing "to assist in securing financing for the production." He was Miss Merman's husband at that time. In a VARIETY breakdown Aug. 5, 1959, of the financial structure of the David Merrick-Hayward presentation, it was stated, "The deal with Six is figured to be a roundabout way of cutting Miss Merman in on the profits."

It was also noted in the story that the star is understood to be getting a 6% cut of the gross. The musical preemed May 21, 1959, at the Broadway Theatre, N. Y.

The recent decision by Broadway producer Kermit Bloomgarden to drop plans for the presentation of "The Nose of Jerry Pepper" next season is understood to have been based on the financial setup of the project. The Arnold Schulman play reportedly calls for an elaborate production and a large cast. In addition, the proposed arrangement calls for the author to get a share of the profits on top of his gross royalties, and for Milton Berle to get a sizable percentage of the gross and a slice of the profits as star.

According to associates, Bloomgarden figured that the venture would require a large investment and, because of the high operating nut and the proposed sharing terms, the prospective return seemed inadequate. The producer is currently vacationing in the West Indies. The script is being offered to other managements, reportedly on the same terms.

'Carnival' Puppets Are Nashville's Loss

Marionette's 'Papa,' Tom Tischner, Used to Give Saturday Kid Shows at Local Public Library

By LIZ CARPENTER

Washington, April 4.

Four of the most applauded members of the "Carnival" cast are puppets: a walrus named Horrible Henry, and Marguerite, Carrot Top and a fox. Whether their success will pave the way for more puppet usage in legit is problematical, says Tom Tischner, their proud "papa." If it does, there are plenty of puppeteers handy, he reports. He auditioned against a large array when he won the "Carnival" parts for his "children."

Broadway's gain will be Nashville's loss, for Tischner has been a Saturday afternoon tradition for children for 14 years at the local Public Library. A phone call from a Nashville friend, Roselyn Newport, now an actress in New York, prompted him to pack up his puppets in a wicker basket and head for New York. "It's a dream come true," said Tischner.

The son of a Nashville seamstress, Tischner had an edge on an important part of puppetry, namely, sewing. He has made more than 500 marionettes and puppets for the 28 plays in his repertory of Library shows, but he created the four "Carnival" puppets for the show.

The success of the puppets is due also, Tischner says, to the ability of Jerry Orbach and Pierre Olaf to manipulate them well. Tischner trained them and of Anna Maria Alberghetti to believe in them.

Boston SOMC Supports 'Seesaw,' 'Becket' in Hub

Boston, April 4.

More local productions will be undertaken by Jerome Rosenfeld president of Show of the Month Club. The theatre club head says that the group's membership has bought $30,000 worth of tickets for his production, in association with Frank Sugrue, of "Two for the Seesaw," with Jeffrey Lynn and Lee Grant. The William Gibson comedy opened at the Wilbur Theatre last night (Mon.) for a three-week run.

"Support of this kind makes it possible to package a show for local consumption," Rosenfeld asserted. He revealed that the mail order advance was around $10,000. With $40,000 in the till prior to the window sale, the outlook for the show, which never played Boston before, is good.

Rosenfeld also reported that Show of the Month Club patronage for the first four performances of "Becket," which opened last Thursday (30) at the Colonial, was $19,000, despite the fact that the period covered Holy Thursday, Good Friday and Passover. The Jean Anouilh play, he noted, has a religious theme of particular interest to churchgoers.

Approve 10G Allocation For 'Lost Colony' Repair

Greensboro, N. C., April 4.

The North Carolina legislature's Joint Appropriations Committee has come to the aid of "The Lost Colony."

It has approved a bill allocating $10,000 from the contingency and emergency fund to help repair the hurricane-damaged Waterside Theatre, at Manteo, where the pageant has been presented annually for nearly a quarter-century.

DOUGLAS HAYES' NOVEL ON SORDID TROUPERS

England's angry young men include novelists as well as playwrights. Douglas Hayes, an actor-turned-author, presents what seems to be a sordid view of the British theatre in his first novel, "The Comedy Man," published this week by Abelard-Schuman ($4). He would undoubtedly argue that the London theatre, rather than his view of it, is sordid. It's anyone's opinion.

Scratch an angry young author and you find a secret romantic. In the case of Hayes, he takes most of the book to relate the degrading existence of have-not actors in the English theatre, dwelling on the poverty and filthy living conditions, and taking considerable space to describe the revolting personal habits of most of the characters. There's little reference to homosexuality, but frequent mention of promiscuity and occasional suggestion of nymphomania.

After emphasizing the sleazy side of the stage world through a great portion of "The Comedy Man," however, the author reveals that it's love—good old romantic love, of a worldly, disillusioned man for a clear-eyed, straight-talking ingenue, a maiden who's all for seducing the suddenly diffident hero—that's the answer to all problems. With this strong-willed young charmer at his side, the actor's protagonist's tangled life, professional as well as personal, is quickly straightened out.

The capsule biography on the book's jacket, presumably using data supplied by the author—says he's not married and, it adds succinctly, never will be. So maybe the story's thesis of romance as the cure-all is only kidding. Or perhaps Hayes, if he sticks to his resolve, can keep his bachelor illusions.

"The Comedy Man" is best when it accents plot movement, with a number of interesting passages for theatrical professionals in the bits about rehearsals, theories of acting, etc. (the author is no Method enthusiast), and tough going in some of the involved portions about low-life parties and vermin agents. As another backstage novel, it doesn't offer much for non-theatrical readers. Hobe.

Brendan Behan To Be in Hospital Another Week

Toronto, April 4.

Brendan Behan is a patient in Sunnyside Private Hospital, an institute for the treatment of alcoholism. Police say they do not intend to execute a warrant for his arrest until he is well enough to be released.

The failure of the Irish playwright-novelist to appear in magistrates court last week on a charge of disorderly conduct and assaulting a house detective at the Royal York Hotel brought the issuance of a bench warrant for his arrest and the forfeiting of his $500 bail. The bond was posted by Alexander H. Cohen, producer of "Impulse," a musical revue in which Behan was m.c. and which folded during a tryout at the O'Keefe Center here.

A letter was produced by Dr. D. W. Pratt stating that Behan had been admitted to the hospital and would remain there at least a fortnight. It also revealed that the author is suffering from diabetes and has been warned not to drink.

Behan and his wife, Beatrice, have not checked out of their Royal York Hotel suite here, but Mrs. Behan is staying with her husband at the hospital.

Medicos reported told the writer that another binge could be fatal and counseled total abstinence or else.

'BOUND FOR KENTUCKY' THIS SUMMER, L'VILLE

Louisville, April 4.

"Bound For Kentucky," a historical musical drama by Kermit Hunter, will be presented at the Iroquois Amphitheatre here next summer to celebrate the founding of Louisville. The opening is tentatively set for July, with a six-week run contemplated.

The play deals with James Patton and his family, and several early pioneers who came down the Ohio River from Pennsylvania in 1778 to find new homes in the Kentucky wilderness.

"Bound For Kentucky" will be financed by the city of Louisville, the State of Kentucky, the Louisville Park Theatrical Assn., and a number of civic organizations and firms. Mrs. Catherine O'Conner, who is promoting the play, also hopes to have the backing of some 50 firms in Louisville.

The project grew out of Mayor Hoblitzell's concern when the Amphitheatre was dark last summer. Mrs. O'Conner was the individual most responsible in developing "The Stephen Foster Story" at Bardstown, Ky., and "The Book of Job," an alfresco play staged in Pineville, Ky.

Dr. Jack Kilpatrick, a member of the faculty of Southern Methodist Univ. is composing the musical score for "Bound For Kentucky."

Papp's Bard Fest Plays Schools; Teener Audience Reaction Is Spotty

Highschool students in the New York metropolitan area are being given a chance to see a full-scale, professional production of "Romeo and Juliet" via the N.Y. Shakespeare Festival, in cooperation with the City of New York. Produced and directed by Joseph Papp, the drama will play a 16-week tour, with an audience of an estimated 100,000 students from approximately 80 secondary schools. It will end its run May 5, at the Franklin K. Lane High School, Brooklyn. The tour started in January.

Financed by a $50,000 allocation from the city's Board of Estimate to the Board of Education, the show is scheduled to play in 18 local auditoriums. All bookings are arranged by the Board of Education and at each stop, students of neighboring schools are also given a chance to attend. As a result, the performers are often called upon to play more than one performance a day of the two-and-three-quarter-hour presentation.

In addition to the bookings arranged and financed by the City, the Festival performs "Romeo" at community centers and colleges in the tri-state area. Arrangements for these dates are made independently of the school tour and are set up by the Festival and the particular organization involved. The bookings are generally made on a flat-rate basis, with the respective center or college seeing to the ticket distribution and other details.

As caught recently at the N.Y. High School of Fashion Industries, the production is swift, colorful and well-mounted. Although the students appear most interested in the swordplay, drinking scenes and kissing sequences, Papp's direction is not organized around these aspects. "Romeo" is given an adult and literal interpretation, both technically and in performance.

Due in part to the mature treatment and the captive aspect of teeners being confined in an auditorium until almost five o'clock, the audience reaction ranged from eager involvement to open discourtesy. Curtain calls rated loud approval, however, and many students tried unsuccessfully throughout the performance to quiet the rowdier elements.

The cast, particularly in the principal roles, is considerably changed from the one that began the tour. The title roles are well-played by Ann Fielding, who brings an engaging simplicity and development in both appearance and performance to Juliet, and R. A. Jordan, a credible, if a bit too gangly and occasionally boyish, Romeo.

Roy R. Scheider is a well-defined Mercutio, Paul Barry a fiery Tybalt, and Walter Moulder a sometimes overplayed Benvolio. The Capulet household is effectively headed by Gordon Oas-Heini and Jeanette Clift, and the House of Montague is credibly manned by Tom Klunes and Judy Ebert. Osceola Archer is fine as the nurse, as is John Hetherington as Friar Lawrence and Don Wesley's Paris seems shallow. Don Gunderson is a strong Prince and Clebert Ford and James Earl Jones are comic soldiers.

Like Papp's direction, Claude Mark's settings are simple, while creating the feeling of expansiveness. Martin Aronstein has designed dramatically effective lighting, David Amram's music is lusty and sharp and Theoni Addredge's colorful costumes are helpful. The swordplay and fights by Paul Barry are realistic and eye-catching.

This is the first such tour for the N.Y. Shakespeare Festival, which also presents free Bard performances in Central Park each summer. The group hopes to continue the program annually, with a different production each year.

Aim 'Fig Leaf' Off-B'way, And Move to Main Stem; Set 20G Initial Budget

A Broadway-targeted production of Jesse Torn's "A Fig Leaf in Her Bonnet" is to be tried out off-Broadway. That's the plan of H. Clay Blaney and A. J. Pocock, who are currently soliciting capitalization for an off-Broadway production of the play under an agreement which allows for a subsequent Main Stem presentation.

The play, based on the George Bernard Shaw-Mrs. Patrick Campbell relationship, is budgeted at $20,000 for its contemplated off-Broadway presentation. A condition of the venture is that after an off-Broadway run, the producers have the right to raise additional capital and form a new limited partnership for the transfer of the play to Broadway.

If such a move is made, the coin invested in the off-Broadway presentation would be shifted to the new company. The off-Broadway backers would also be permitted to increase their investment in the Broadway production prior to the admittance of new backers. According to the Blaney-Pocock solicitation, those investing in the off-Broadway production will get their money back if all the coin required to produce the play hasn't been raised by next April 18.

The producers also assert that they have a contract with the author whereby the off-Broadway production is entitled to share in all subsidiary rights of the property after the opening off-Broadway performance.

Shaw and Mrs. Campbell were the subject of last season's Broadway production of "Dear Liar," a dramatic reading adapted by Jerome Kilty from the lengthy correspondence between the playwright and the British actress. Katharine Cornell and Brian Aherne costarred in the presentation, which toured extensively prior to playing N. Y. Another "Liar" tour is scheduled for the U. S. next season by S. Hurok with Kilty and his wife, Cavada Humphrey, repeating the roles they recently essayed in London.

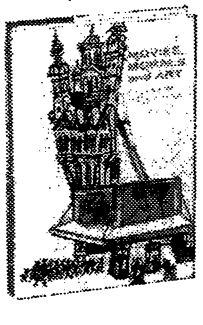
MOVIES, MORALS, AND ART

by FR. HAROLD C. GARDINER, S.J.

and FRANK GETLEIN



FOR the first time, two top-flight critics combine "style, balanced statement and depth of penetration," says *Variety, in an "intellectually arresting" and frank appraisal of the deepening crisis in the American motion picture industry.

According to FRED ZINNEMANN ". . . it contains an enormous amount of food for thought (and) makes a valid comment on many basic issues, such as the film maker's moral responsibility, on the movies' appeal to sentimentality and on false values. Above everything else, it offers a constructive view towards a new creative approach. I hope it will be read by a great many people in the motion picture industry."

PAUL V. BECKLEY of the Herald Tribune says of MOVIES, MORALS and ART: "It comes closer than either moralists or esthetes would expect toward establishing a common meeting ground between them. I cannot recall being so pleased at any dissertation on morals and movies."

N.Y. Times' Earnings

The New York Times Co. and its subsidiaries report record revenues of $112,149,302 in 1960 but consolidated net income fell sharply to $1,652,392. While circulation and advertising volume reached new peaks last year, increased expenses cut net profit in comparison with 1959 when gross income was $103,269,682 and net earnings were $3,001,460.

Net income from newspaper operations, board chairman and publisher Arthur Hays Sulzberger revealed, dropped from $1,867,869 in 1959 to $348,051 in 1960. In contrast to that decline, the company's holdings in Spruce Falls Power & Paper Co., Ltd. produced income of $1,304,341 compared with $1,133,591 in the previous year. Spruce Falls, a Canadian firm, manufactures newsprint for The Times and other papers.

After provision for preferred dividends, the 1960 earnings were equivalent to $12.70 per common share. Figure compares with the thumping $29.02 racked up the previous year. Taking note of the smaller profit from newspaper operations, Sulzberger said this reflects "a serious situation which confronts many publications. The costs of our necessary operations have risen so rapidly that they have nullified our substantial gains in gross revenue."

The Times was never in a stronger position both in circulation and advertising, Sulzberger emphasized. "Advertising rates," he added, "are based largely on expected circulation. But we apparently put our sights too low. The effect of meeting the demand of added readers for The Times in 1960 was, therefore, a major factor in the decline of profits."

Other highlights of the earnings statement showed that The Times came up with the largest circulation gains in 1960, both weekdays and Sundays, of any New York newspaper. Net paid sale was 679,222 weekdays, a 34,341 gain over 1959, and 1,346,080 Sundays, up 42,480. Advertisers bought more than $96,000,000 worth of space in 1960. It meant a new record of 61,922,811 lines, the largest volume ever published by The Times.

Especially contributing to the 1960 profit nosedive, Sulzberger declared, were the high costs of gathering news due to the Presidential election, last September's United Nations session and the Congo coverage in Africa. Moreover, the Paris international edition is operating at a loss in its second year as anticipated.

Morehouse's Safari

Vet drama critic and reporter Ward Morehouse is off on a dual assignment from his two syndicates, the Newhouse papers and NANA, on a "See America First!" series, traveling by car and covering about 40 states of the union. He will file five pieces weekly in his 7-8 week jaunt. Turner Catledge of the N.Y. Times has also expressed interest in some Morehouse pieces and that paper probably also will publish supplementary reportage by him.

This marks Morehouse's 24th transcontinental see-America-in-closeup motor jaunt, sometimes done chiefly for show biz angles but, in this instance, on a generally broader perspective.

Bernard Asbell's OK Book

Bernard Asbell, erstwhile music trade reporter who turned freelance writer and folk singer, has poignantly recreated the shock felt round the world in 1945 in his first book, "When FDR Died" (Holt, Rinehart & Winston; $4, to be published April 10. There's the blueprint here, if not the actual script, for a potent tv or motion picture documentary.

Asbell reconstructs, with a novelist's skill, President Roosevelt's dying day and the effect of the news on such persons as Mrs. Roosevelt, Harry Truman, Winston Churchill, the wire service reporters and even on the Army bugler who was later to blow taps at the funeral. No mere reportorial job, although the research is downright scholarly, Asbell's book reads with the fascination of fiction through a sense of you-are-there immediacy. Over a span of 207 pages he sustains the momentousness of the single incident, and the characters—even FDR, briefly though he's seen—come palpably to life.

Of particular show biz interest are the recreations of David Brinkley and John Daly receiving the news flash at NBC (New York) and CBS, respectively; and of Arthur Godfrey weeping on the air as he describes the funeral procession. Asbell, in his affection for minute details, even notes the network shows that were interrupted for the bulletin, "Wilderness Road" on CBS, "Front Page Farrell" on NBC, "Capt'n Midnight" on ABC, and "Tom Mix" on Mutual.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Palm Springs, April 4.

Even in the free world not many will work for free anymore, but actors are still among the dying race, glad to perform if some part of the gate goes to a charitable cause and they can get some publicity out of it.

Boxoffice figures are thrown around rather loosely these days but if there were not a million dollar talent in the 12th Annual Palm Springs Police Show, try to get Danny Thomas, Dorothy Provine, Frankie Avalon, Jim Garner, Desi Arnaz, Phil Harris, Allan Jones, Kirk Douglas, Harpo Marx, Alice Faye, Jayne Mansfield, Jimmy Van Heusen & Sammy Cahn, Vic Damone, Kay Starr, Ann B. Davis, Pat Suzuki or even Marie MacDonald's dress for less. Backed, this time, by Jerry Gray and his Band of Today instead of Les Brown and his Band of Renown, such a bill would bring back million dollar vaudeville.

Of course all were not performers, but for spontaneous and in most cases unrehearsed entertainment, they held the crown of 3,000 which packed the High School quadrangle on a cold night and were warmed in turn by the applause and the laughs. And the cops' charities grossed $18,000 for the night.

To paraphrase an early Kennedyism, performers should never entertain a cop through fear, but never fear to entertain a cop. But these are unusual cops. An instance of how police work here as different from elsewhere might be cited. When kids go off in buses to a neighboring town to a football game and come home late at night the buses pull up in front of the police station and all the kids are invited to telephone their parents to pick them up there. That way they're protected from wandering around town after curfew hours.

So the town is grateful to Gus Kettman and his peace officers and talent which owns pretty valuable property in the village is only too glad to give up a night for the cops' benefit.

Lost Their Love to Avalon

Stealing the show as if it were a new Ty Cobb stealing a base was Frankie Avalon. By no means newly discovered he proved once again that those who did discover him had unearthed a pearl of great price. His arrangement and singing of "Ol' Man River" made even that semi-classic reach new heights in public approval.

Running him a close second, though put on the bill at the end of three hours, was Danny Thomas. The emcees, Desi Arnaz, Phil Harris and Johnny Grant, had been introducing "the greatest guy in show business" for every act all evening so one hardly expected they would actually deliver such a product.

Thomas acted as if he were really peeved at having to hang around for three hours to go and told how about having to listen most of that time to a nut playing a guitar in the men's room. The nut happened to be Desi Arnaz. Then he blessed the audience, "making them all Jews." By then it was cold enough to tell a snow story and he told one. About an old couple snowed in above Peeksville. The townspeople checked every day to see if smoke were coming from their chimney.

"One day," Danny said, "no smoke. So they sent a Red Cross rescue team who with the aid of bulldozers got to the cottage. There they found the 80-year-old couple huddled in the corner, freezing to death."

"We're from the Red Cross," the rescuers said.

The old man said, "But we gave already!"

He also told with all his pantomime the story about the Italians objecting to ABC about "The Untouchables"—planting bombs and all—his story ended, "Cut that out or you'll have a bomb in your house."

There was another Italian gag about honoring the race for Galileo, Columbus and other adventurers. The Pope was to drop a feather and the guy catching it would be picked as the first astronaut. But the feather never reached the ground—15,000 Italians kept blowing it skyward.

Behind Thomas and finishing neck-and-neck, to treat the subject delicately, though it indicates a poor judge of distance, were Dorothy Provine of the Roaring Twenties and Marie MacDonald's dress (?). Both girls sang amazingly well, but Miss MacDonald's long ballerina dress, low cut, with spangles seemed to give her an edge on the applause-meter. Of course, the bodice of Jayne Mansfield's frock wasn't wasting yardage either, but she had no vocal material to go with it.

What, No Powder Rooms?

The emcees seemed destitute of material too. As the night wore on and their shots of anti-pneumonia vaccine became more obvious their dialog headed toward the lockerroom as well. They seemed to delight in telling what was going on in the men's room. This gave the impression of two classes of people, an audience without kidneys, performers with. After three hours in the cold outdoors some of the audience began to act human too and left.

Alian Jones opened the show with a brace of songs and then asked if he could bring a lady onstage to whom he had been singing for so long. He brought up Sara, led by a big Indian (Mickey Finn actually) in a red poncho. Sara was the donkey to whom Jones sang "The Donkey Serenade." Afterwards Sara became quite an act herself poking around, making friends with the musicians.

Arnaz dressed in white trousers, medium blue jacket, red tie and socks, then introduced Pat Suzuki who was starring at the Chi Chi and had run over for the cops' benefit between shows. She sang "I'm In Heaven" and scooted back to her job.

Jayne Mansfield introduced by Johnny Grant who left her onstage without a line. She explained she had to get back to town because her children had a burro and if it wasn't fed by 6 in the morning it would wake up the neighborhood. Exit Jayne Mansfield. Ken Scott then stepped in as an emcee and Grant so mangled the intro that Scott said: "If you got paid for commercials you wouldn't mispronounce them."

Back stepped Arnaz to introduce Avalon who was supported by a drummer, with one arm in a plaster cast, and a guitar player who seemed all in one piece. He was the musical director. Avalon stole the show. From "Dinah" in rock 'n' roll to his own version of "Ol' Man River" he swept everything before him. He gave way to Phil Harris who introduced Eddie Howard a fixture at El Mirado. Howard came on with two of his band who backed him up while he sang his own numbers.

Harpo Marx was brought in protesting his honesty and every time he was touched silver fell from his clothes. Then they patted the back of the cop who brought Harpo in and silverware fell from him, whereupon Harpo made a citizen's arrest.

Garner was asked what his advice would be for young fry who wanted to play cards and shoot their way out of Westerns. Garner said: "Cheat."

Douglas admitted he was no singer, but he had a song written especially for the occasion by Cahn & Van Heusen. He half sang, half declaimed, and was well received. Douglas then introduced a girl he had never heard sing, though he had known her since she was a little girl of 16—Marie MacDonald. She sang and with great variety. It seemed she wasn't mad about Harry, she was mad about shoes. She was the only one who received a bouquet of flowers.

Then the Los Angeles new American League baseball team was introduced but by that time it was cold enough to play ice hockey and late enough for the late-late show. That's when they brought on Thomas who warmed the place up again, for he obviously is currently a hot property and one of the most loved personalities in show biz. He was worth waiting for.

Sid Howard, 75, hoop juggler, died March 15 in London. He started his career as a limeboy at the London Coliseum.

Colin Ross, 52, vaude and pantomime comedian, died March 27 in Birmingham, Eng. He was the partner of Terry Bartlett.

Father of Pat Rainey, night club singer, died March 30 in Boston.

Blacklist

panies have substantially the same problems."

But even if the companies had combined to shut out the alleged "blacklistees," Rogers declared, any policy against hiring Communists "was eminently reasonable and proper under the circumstances."

Rogers said the problem of Communist infiltration has bothered the picture industry for years, and this concern has been rooted partially in economic considerations (e.g., fear of patron boycotts) as well as "moral and psychological" reasons. Quoting the brief:

"The influence of motion pictures on public attitudes, conduct and mores is incalculable. A producer of motion pictures cannot ignore the possibility that a picture designed as entertainment may be converted, subtly or otherwise, into a medium of subversive propaganda, nor can he ignore the further fact that a great many people and organizations in the U. S. are extremely sensitive to the danger.

Sensitivity

"Leaders in the industry have stated over and over again that no subversive propaganda has crept into motion picture and, as far as we know, no evidence to the contrary has been adduced. Yet sensitivity on this score, both on the part of the public and the producers themselves, remains. The employment of known Communists, whose advocacy of subversive ideologies is well known would thus be inconsistent with the responsibility which the public demands of the producers and which the producers themselves must assume."

As for the economic risks entailed in hiring someone in public disfavor, the brief stated as "an economic fact" that "the producer or distributor must be extremely careful to avoid doing anything that will drive patronage away."

Contending that a drop of as little as five or ten per cent can spell the difference between profit and loss on a pic, Rogers asserted:

"Church, civic, veterans, racial, sectional and other organizations watch the movies carefully and any activity which results in widespread public disapproval will have a serious effect on the economic success of a picture, or succeeding pictures."

The industry is "acutely sensitive" to public opinion, Rogers continued. "This sensitivity is both affirmative, in that it is alert for that which will attract patronage, and defensive or negative, in that it must equally alert with respect to that which will keep potential customers away."

The brief took heads on some of the individual plaintiffs. It described Lawson's conduct before the House Un-American Activities Committee as a "disgraceful exhibition."

Noting that four of those filing suit belonged to the so-called "Hollywood Ten," Rogers said the others have been identified as or, upon reasonable ground, strongly suspected of being, a Communist."

The brief was supported by affidavits from Eric Johnston, MPAA prexy; Arthur B. Krim, United Artists; Jack L. Warner, Warner Bros.; Y. Frank Freedman, Paramount; Edward Muhl, Universal; Gordon Stulberg, Columbia; Steve Broidy, Allied Artists; Bernard R. Goodman, Warner Bros; Arthur Israel Jr., Paramount; John J. O'Connor, Universal; Marvin H. Schenck, MGM. Milton Beecher, MGM; Alexis Corfino, MGM; Reece Halsey, Writer's Agent; Ray Heindorf, formerly of Warner Bros.; Victor Aller, formerly of Warners; Charles Boren, Assn. of Motion Picture Producers; Frank H. Ferguson, Fox; and L.A. attorney Irving M. Walker.

Johnston assailed conduct of the Hollywood Ten as "reprehensible" and "disgraceful" and said it raised fears of federal regulation and patron boycotts. But he flatly denied that there was any "blacklist" to which MPAA was a party.

Next step in the court process presumably will be a hearing on the request for a preliminary injunction.

'Brotherhood' Play

kieh Garden, with the oldest company, the Egyptian Dramatic Art, has a new play by Yehia Hakki, "Andil Om Hachem" (The Lamp of Mother Hachem). Its theme tackles problem of a section of Cairo comparable to New York's Harlem.

The Egyptian National Troupe, founded in 1929, is offering "We Have a Man at Home" at the Theatre Mohamed, named after an old time political bigwig. This is a hit by Ihsan Abdel Kaddous.

A company with the odd-ball title, Saa Li Albak (One Hour For Your Heart), was established in 1950 by radio actors and is now a radio-TV troupe. They have a comedy hit at the Theatre Metropole, "Women Are Angels" starring a tv comedic actor, Fouad El Mohendis and the Theatre Rida houses a troupe recently returned from a successful tour. Aly Rida & Co. offers a variety of "popular tableaux," plus the revue, "Ahmid and Hamida." There's a musical at the Republic Theatre, the Lyric Choral Theatre, which has Ibrahim Hamanda and Hairria Hassan starring in the "Operette Yom El Keyama."

Agnes Moorehead's Stint

The added attractions for the grand finale of the winter season are Agnes Moorehead; the traditional Festival at the old Cairo Azahar; and an Italian Opera Co. at the Cairo Opera House.

Miss Moorehead is making a personal appearance with the players of the American Girls College and the American University of Cairo. She also delivers some lectures. The appearance of an American star is causing quite a ripple. When she finishes her stint she will journey to Taormina, Sicily, for filming of the Jean Negulesco picture, "Apple Pie Bed."

The traditional Festival of Ramadan at the old Cairo Azahar (Moslem University) is presented a la Greek Theatre in the amphitheatre near the Mosque of Hussein ben Ali, and performed by the students. Like the teams of a non-proselyting college, it's as good as the material registered. This year's performers are supposed to be inferior to last year's, but they are plenty good. It's a religious spectacle, mostly music, and draws big audiences from all over Araby.

The Cairo Opera House, in presenting its Italian lyric season with the Italian Opera Co., rotates nine popular Italian operas with one new one. "The Bells of War." Opera buffs give them the good boxoffice stamp of approval. Incidentally, the three baton wielders, Rigacci, Morelli and Ferari, are billed over the cast.

The Niteries

The night spots are all topped by the Grand Casino Mokattam, on Mokattam Mountain, which has a show, several diningrooms, cocktail lounges and a magnificent view of the Nile Valley, Cairo and the Pyramids. However, it's off limits for citizens of the UAR because the big lure is gambling — for foreigners only. A half-inch ad in the Egyptian Gazette reads "Grand Casino Mokattam: Roulette—Baccara — Chemin de Fer — Passports or identity cards must be shown for admittance." No mention of show or food. How's business? They're building an addition as large as the original goodsized building.

The rest of the night spots run mostly to cabarets, many of which feature dining and dancing from 8 p.m. and the shows anywhere from 11 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. The dance combos are Spanish and Italian, with the latter dominating 3-1. The top spots are the Sahara City Casino, near the Pyramids, featuring Arabic and African performers; the Auberge des Pyramides, also close by the Pyramids, which has a two-hour revue, "Night and Day," starring a hipheaver tagged Atouta; the Rainbow features Mike & The Skyrockets, a performing dance combo, very hot on tv; the Continental presents an all-Mediterancan revue of Greek, Spanish, Italian and Arabic performers. The Nile Hilton's Belvedere Roois stars Arthur Duncan, American dancer, and features Yasmine, another Oriental dancer; the music is Zufolli's band from Italy. The Casino Granada is really a music hall. The bill notes that the director and proprietor is Sophie Helmy and the performers are the Sophie Helmy Troupe. It's a variety show, loaded with dance acts, titled "Zaroni Marra" (Visit Me Once) and features a sketch titled "American Marriage" and Moh Rachdi, billed as a "charm singer." Sophie Helmy is also the director and proprietor of a cabaret operating as the Casino Cuba-Cabana.

The cinema is having a big year with foreign films, particularly American, the big craze. The scuttlebutt is that the government, specifically the Ministry of Culture & Guidance, would love to upgrade the local product and is looking to Hollywood for experts. There are 537 houses in Cairo handling 100,000,000 ducats per year government figures). Some are sold for as little as 9 milieres approx. 1½c). The local cinema industry is 32 years old and has produced about 1,600 pictures. The thinking seems to be that while the product isn't bad, it just isn't good and they would like to correct that situation.

Jamaica Sell-Out

luxurious Regal Theatre with the hope of starting a third chain in Jamaica.

Film companies whose product are distributed by the Palace Company in Jamaica include Buena Vista, Columbia, Paramount, United Artists, Universal-International, the Rank Organization.

Graham represents MGM, 20th Century-Fox and a few independents. Amalgamated Cinemas distributes Allied Artists, American International and Warner Bros.

John Dalton, long-time Rank man who came to Jamaica last year from Singapore to take over management of the Palace Co, stated in a press interview that the reason why the Rank Organization had bought an interest in the territory in 1947 was that that was the only way they could get British films exhibited in Jamaica, but now that British films were being universally accepted on a parity with American films, and as an outlet for Rank and other British films in Jamaica was now assured, they had no longer any reason to retain their financial control in the territory.

It is believed that prolonged labour union troubles and repeated pay-rises over recent years, with its adverse effect on the profits of the company, may also have influenced the decision.

Dalton returns to England on April 22, at which time Russell Graham's 25-year-old son, Douglas Graham, will take over as managing director of the Palace Amusement Co. With Graham's acquisition of 120,000 shares in company, it's now entirely Jamaican-owned.

one of the few femme producers in France.

Miss Gouze-Renal produced BB's "The Light Across The Way," which preceded BB's international blockbuster (made by Levy), "And God Created Woman." Miss Gouze-Renal also has signed with Metro for BB's next film, "Private Lives," which Louis Malle will direct.

In the course of a recent U.S. trip, Levy suggested that too much publicity has detracted from the "mystery" of Bardot and that her boxoffice draw has diminished. Miss Gouze-Renal thinks this must be sour grapes on Levy's part, since he has renounced making any more films with her even though his last BB production, "The Truth," is a blockbuster here.

Femme producer says that during a recent U.S. trip, she found all Yank majors ready to sign for investments in a Bardot pic, and also that most of the Yanks were under the mistaken impression that Miss Bardot was under exclusive contract to Levy. BB has made films for various others, however, including Francis Cosne in addition to Miss Gouze-Renal.

NIGHT CLUBS' 'BLUE WAVE' BINGE

What Price Nat'l Cultural Center? D.C. Project Appears Talked to K.O.

Washington, April 11.

Unless the trustees stop arguing among themselves and sanctioning delays after delays, there's not going to be any National Cultural Center.

Half the five years the trustees were given for raising the money to build the national showplace for the performing arts has passed in a plethora of words about what a great idea it would be to have a National Cultural Center but with virtually nothing being done to collect the cash required to bring it into being.

The executive director of the project, Robert Humphreys, has resigned, presumably in disgust. Despite the talk, dating back two and a half years about a fundraising effort in all 50 states (we want this cultural centre to be truly national), there is still no estimate of when it will begin.

Congress, in donating the Potomac River site for it, authorized the President to appoint trustees to raise the money for the construction privately during a five-year period, beginning with passage of the legislation in late 1958. There was at that time some skepticism among members of Congress that the money could be raised.

But the talk then was that the Center would cost somewhere in between $10,000,000 and $25,000,000. Now, with design of the architectural wonder conceived by Edward Durell Stone completed, the price tag is up to $75,000,000.

And this has ignited the latest dispute. The issue is whether it

Hazards of Legit

Apart from the growing carelessness about those smokers—usually femmes—in legit theatre lobbies — threatening burns and other accidents—another new "menace" in theatres are those kingsize "transformations" some of the gals now sport.

It not only gives them Eiffel Tower size but also width that all but blacks-out the vision of anybody unfortunate to be sitting in back of 'em.

O'Neill Among The 'Classic' Authors Rating Tax-Free

Paris, April 11.

Classics played in theatres here win the producer and theatre a special detaxation. Andre Malraux, the Minister of Culture, has just decreed a list of French and foreign playwrights as henceforth being "classical." This is besides the authors who have been dead for over 50 years. The deceased authors named had only one American name among them, Eugene O'Neill, besides Ferenc Molnar who spent his last years in the States.

The works of the following authors now come in for detaxation and their works will probably get more revivals. Among them are Georges Bernanos, Paul Claudel, Albert Camus, Jean Giraudoux, Gabriel D'Annunzio, Federico Garcia - Lorca, Karel Capek, Maiakovsky, Maxim Gorkl, Charles Morgan, Pirandello, James Joyce, August Strindberg, Artur Schnitzler, Wedekind, W. B. Yeats and Synge.

Indians Bite Dust And Reds Cry, 'We Toldya So'; Gang Films Also Hurt U.S.

Boston, April 11.

The United States is being damaged by export of gangster films, Dr. Brock Chisholm of Victoria, B. C., former director general of the World Health Organization stated at a confab at Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Centennial Celebration. Underdeveloped nations would like the U. S. better if we stopped glorifying ancestors who killed Indians and exporting films glorifying today's gangsters, he said. "Gangster films are used in other parts of the world by enemy propagandists as examples of the American way of life," he declared.

"In Czechoslovakia, they say one American gangster film is worth a division of troops. In southeast Asia and Africa they say these films are better propaganda against us than anything they can produce themselves." He scored the practice of setting up as heroes "for our children people who were famed for killing Indians."

NO NUDES BAD NEWS TO BOOK LOVERS (?)

London, April 11.

W. H. Allen's, publishers of Maurice Zolotow's book on Marilyn Monroe, was puzzled by the number of people returning copies of the book, claiming that they were imperfect and yelling for the return of their $3.50.

In each case, it was found that two near-nude photographs of M.M. had been removed from the center of the book.

Jeffrey Simmonds, the company's editorial boss, ruefully admitted: "Putting the pictures in the center of the book admittedly made it easy. But who expected people to buy a book for $3.50 just to get two photographs?"

CAFES' PAY 'DIRT' MAY BOOMERANG

The responsible—meaning the major—segment of show business is concerned with a "Blue Wave." It stems from the livest remnant of contemporary "live" entertainment—the niteries—and from the "party" records.

Some of the bistros around the U.S. are flirting with a fast buck and inevitable difficulties. Even if the local gendarmerie were to overlook the smut, there are too many vigorous enforcement agencies which could put the joints out of business. But fast. Most vital are the sundry state alcohol beverage control boards. And a nitery without booze just ain't. This threat is as vital and vivid as tax enforcement vis-a-vis the hoodlums; they couldn't get Capone for murder but they sure did when he got careless with the mathematics.

There is unquestionably a threatening albeit not yet a full-blown "Blue Wave" as some alarmists think. However, it is a fact that the "party" recordings have had a motivating influence, so much so that, based on the curious b.o. success of a Belle Barth, for example, some niteries are eyeing kindred single-entendre "entertainment." Vivid illustration of Miss Barth's cult is evidence at her Roundtable (N.Y.) premiere where the customers had her LPs in their hot little fists, waving them like adult delinquents as some sort of passport to the togetherness of the indigo clan.

The niteries, ever since the Pro-

'Harpo Speaks' But Not on TV

While "Harpo Speaks!" in a kingsize $5.95 book which Bernard Geis is publishing, the comedian will remain traditionally — and professionally — sphinx-like, even when he makes his tv and radio personals. One of them is at a reported $7,500 fee for Ed Sullivan and there, as on the Jack Paar, Garry Moore and Dave Garroway shows, he will retain his third-of-a-century muteness and only perform in pantomime.

Also, on the radio interviews—par for the literati course when plugging a book—Harpo will remain mum. His wife, Susan, who did the illustrations for the book, will be his "voice."

Only at the cocktailery that Geis and McCall's mag (which is serializing the book) is cohosting at the Hotel Algonquin will the "Silent Cal" of the Marx Bros. speak up. There will be reunited, for the occasion, many of the original Round Table to give the Algonq literary "pour" it's proper cache.

Brave Young Director Faces Bardot Playing Herself in Her Own Biog

The prospect of directing Brigitte Bardot in a motion picture in which she would attempt to portray Brigitte Bardot, the private woman and the public personality, might faze almost anybody else but Louis Malle.

In the course of a short visit to New York last week, Malle reported that his friends had warned him against his upcoming project, presently called "La Vie Privee" (Private Lives) but bearing no relation to the Noel Coward bonbon. The picture, using Simone de Beauvoir's study of BB as a jumping off point, will be produced by Christine Couze-Renal and financed by Metro as part of its deal with French exec producer Jacques Bar.

So far, so good, said Malle, whose U.S. rep is based principally on his controversial paean to love (romantic and physical), "The Lovers," as well as on his contributions as a writer, director and cameraman to Jacques Cousteau's "The Silent World." One of the youngest (28 years old) and one of the most successful of France's "new wave" directors, Malle said he had been told by friends that producer Couze-Renal would be interfering with his side of the project, but that until now, anyway, she had given him free rein and he anticipated no problems. BB too, he said, has been a doll, but she was not yet completely convinced that they should go so far in "La Vie Privee" as to use her real name.

The question most frequently asked of Malle is why he, a highly Loft Studio Demise?

Dance, vocal and art studios in New York are threatened with being priced out of existence so far as lofts are concerned as result of Fire Dept. demand for installation of sprinklers. Resultantly a mass meeting will be held tonight (Wed.) in Judson Memorial Church at Washington Square to have the law distinguish between industrial and arts useage of loft space.

"We'll be driven out of Manhattan," is the cry. "Sprinklers cost up to $20,000 to install in lofts renting around $100 per unit."

WB's 'Camelot' Buy: $1,500,000 Plus 25% of Net

Warner Bros.' acquisition of "Camelot" for 1964 film production at a $1,500,000 down payment for the rights could run up to a $2,000,000 payment to Alan Jay Lerner, Frederick Loewe and Moss Hart, coproducers of the current Broadway hit musical. Deal was set by Irving P. Lazar, for the authors, with William T. Orr, Benjamin Kalmenson and Harry Mayer in New York. Jack L. Warner also supervised the finalization.

Deal is unique in that there are preferred production overhead and distribution charges so that Lerner & Loewe's authoring and L&L-Hart's production share of the net profit is given minimum handicap. They have a 25% equity in the net profits.

Lazar, who also agented the "Sound Of Music" film sale to 20th Century-Fox, on behalf of Rodgers & Hammerstein and Lindsay & Crouse (coauthors) and R&H (as producers), set a 1964 shooting date for this as well.

"Music," like "Camelot," calls for a 10-year spread of the authors' income, so as not to bunch the take into any one abnormally heavy tax year. Incidentally, 20th-Fox is ne-

EWELL TO CONCERTIZE ON AMERICAN HUMOR

Interpolate 'Bilbao Song' Into 'Threepenny Opera' To Cash in on Pop Push

"The Bilbao Song," the Kurt Weill-Bertolt Brecht song of the 1930s which is currently being revived, is being used as a come-on for the off-Broadway production of "The Threepenny Opera." Unusual wrinkle in the "Bilbao" lure is that the song is not from the "Threepenny Opera" score, but was recently interpolated because of the new push.

Ads for the "Threepenny Opera" now follow the pattern used when "Mack the Knife" was a pop hit. They now read "The Bilbao Song Is From The Threepenny Opera." The "Bilbao Song" was written by Weill and Brecht several years after "Threepenny" for the musical "Happy End."

The current "Bilbao" drive by Harms, of the Warner Bros. music publishing group, has lined up two instrumental versions, Percy Faith on Columbia and LeRoy Holmes on MGM, and an English lyric version recorded by Andy William for Cadence. Johnny Mercer did the English lyric.

Beirut's Dual Billing: The Hong Kong (Also Monte Carlo) of The Mid-East

By ROGER BOWER

Beirut, Aug. 11.

Beirut's billing is "the Hong-Kong of the Mid-East." It aspires to another—"the Monte Carlo of the Mid-East." To its night life recently was added the very plush Casino du Liban, situated on a promontory overlooking the Mediterranean a short drive out of town. It's spacious and lavish, in modern decor, with bars, terraces and a dining-room. Salle des Ambassadeurs, seating 650 for the show. The current "La Super-Revue Tentation" features Vendryes, a class magician who works with doves as Cardini does with cigarets; The Morlidors, good contortionist act; Janik & Arnaut in the dance: "La Femme Serpent" (They get a full page in the program and display three VARIETY notices along with reviews of the act in Reno and Las Vegas). Two orchestras, Orfeu Negro and Gallarzo's band, work show and play for dancing, and "le celebres" Doriss Girls get some competition from the filles out front. They meet this with

6,000,000 Tourists Went To France Last Year, Forecast More in '61

Paris, April 4.

Jean Sainteny, head of the French Bureau of Tourism, says 6,000,000 foreign tourists hit France last year and more than 4,000 came to Paris. He feels that many more will come this year and is taking steps to try to ameliorate hotel and general conditions here to amply handle these hoards of visitors who constitute one of the leading businesses here. Show biz facets like boites, music halls and cinemas are also girding for this onslaught.

Sainteny admits that some hotels here are not up to date after looking-seeing Yank installations. The government will help hotel owners refurbish by extending the terms of its loans to owners and lifting controls on the prices of places that install modernization.

Sainteny also says that a model hotel is being planned on the site of the present D'Orsay Station, but the railroad people are asking too much for the site.

Paris will also try to keep the city interesting during the summer months when most natives flee the city, and there is not too much cultural activity. He cites the Theatre of Nations season running from April through July, many open air salons and shows, and special nationalized theatre showings. Many films will be shown with English subtitles, and boites are trying for Yank names as well as more jazz.

Rockwell Arouses Doubt

Washington, April 11.

A group describing itself as a "National Conservative Youth Organization" last Monday petitioned Congress to probe George Lincoln Rockwell's American Nazi Party, which has been active in picketing films, most recently United Artists "Exodus" opening.

Petition ask Congress to find out whether Rockwell's group is "dedicated to the overthrow of the U.S., such as the international Communist conspiracy."

'Apartment' Wins 3 British Awards

London, April 11.

The British Film Academy annual plaques were handed out at a dinner at the Dorchester Hotel on Thursday (6), over which producer Peter de Sarigney presided.

"The Apartment" (UA) copped three awards as the best film from any source and also providing the best foreign actor and actress in Jack Lemmon and Shirley MacLaine, respectively.

"Saturday Night and Sunday Morning" also provided three "bests." It was tagged the best British film. Two of its stars were voted the best British film actress Rachel Roberts) and the most promising newcomer to leading film roles (Albert Finney).

Bryan Forbes won the award for the best-British screenplay for "Angry Silence." Peter Finch won the best British actor award for his work in "Trials of Oscar Wilde."

The other "tops" were: "High Journey," a French pic made for N.A.T.O. (best short film); Canada's "Universe" (best animated film; Britain's "Dispute" (best specialized film) and "Hiroshima" (Indie), voted the United Nations Award.

WIDOW SUBSIDIZES BALLET DE CUEVAS

Paris, April 11.

Margaret Strong, the widow of the Marquis George De Cuevas, states that his International Ballet will be kept going. Marquise, a granddaughter of the first John D. Rockefeller, had at first decided to disband the big company but will now continue its career in homage to the memory of her husband.

The recent hit, "The Sleeping Beauty," will be kept intact. Dates are pending for U.S., Britain, West Germany and Austria.

Coin In, Musicals, Linguals, Opera Set In San Juan

By AL DINHOFER

San Juan, P.R., April 11.

Barry Yellen's Theater Development Corp., hanging in the balance since January because its stock was not sold, became a reality this weekend. Commitments for $30,000 in the common stock which was outstanding, has been made. "We have received the last few thousand dollars," Yellen said.

This means Puerto Rico will have a Musical Comedy "Festival," an opera season, a series of Spanish dramas, and a series of Zarzuelas during 1961.

The Musical Comedy Festival will be presented at the 2,000-seat University of Puerto Rico Theatre, July 17-Aug. 12. Four Broadway hits will be staged Mondays through Saturdays, with Saturday matinees.

The shows will be "the people's choice," according to Yellen. Ballot boxes will be distributed in hotels, restaurants and supermarkets, so that San Juan citizens (and tourists) may vote for three of the four shows in this year's series.

The choices of musicals to be offered on the ballots are: "Carousel," "Damn Yankees," "Guys and Dolls," "Oklahoma," "West Side Story," and "Where's Charlie?"

One choice will be left to festival directors so they may take advantage of a good show that might become available for presentation in Puerto Rico at a latter date.

Yellen expects to leave for New York, April 15, to contract for rights and prepare the season of operas scheduled for the University Theatre, Sept. 11-23.

ANOTHER SHOWMANSHIP PITCH FOR WORLD'S FAIR

Teaneck, N. J.

Editor, VARIETY:

Glad VARIETY has gone to the front in regard to amusements at the forthcoming 1964 World's Fair. Grandpa Moses could be too concise in screen the exhibits, etc., and wake up too late to correct the errors of a slump at the turnstiles.

Though far removed from activities of the present day, it would seem to me here is a most wonderful opportunity for showmanship, not the old time midway necessarily, but an entirely new manner of presenting entertainment where combined efforts could give the Fair new enblazoned originalities.

Let us not be unmindful of the efforts of the late Mike Todd, the beauty of Hassard Short, among others of 1939-1940. Regardless, let there be entertainment in 1964, it gives employment.

I did the shows at the French Colonial Exposition 1930-31, in Paris. Fair grounds were laid out in Vincennes Park, about three miles east of the city. There was quite a stir created at the time because I was selected by the Com-

Nephew Raps 'Theatrical License' Excuse of Denker —Makes Plea for Truth in Historic Drama

By EDWARD L. BERNAYS

Some months ago the press agent of "The Far Country," by Henry Denker, telephoned me. He asked me whether I would care to cooperate with the management to further public interest in the play since it was about my uncle, Sigmund Freud, and the discovery of psychoanalysis. (Freud was the older brother of my mother, Anna Freud, and he married my father's sister, Martha Bernays.)

I told him that before I would commit myself he should send me a copy of the script. This he told me he would do. I never received the script.

The matter passed from my attention. Then a friend asked me to read a copy of the script. I did so because of natural curiosity as to how my close relatives were to be presented on the stage, and because I thought I might be able to check the script for accuracy, and that corrections of errors would be gladly received. I thereupon telephoned Mr. Denker and, in view of what I noted in the script, asked him whether he had

Atlanta Recalls Its Ogre: Sherman

Atlanta, April 11.

A two hour musical drama, commemorating role people of Atlanta played in Civil War, will be staged under auspices of City of Atlanta at municipally owned Chastain Memorial Park Amphitheatre July 3 and 4.

Mayor William B. Hartsfield and Board of Aldermen, putting stamp of approval on pageant, said it would be Atlanta's contribution to centennial.

Albert Coleman, of Atlanta Pops Concert Orchestra, will direct and produce pageant. Scenario by Elmo Ellis, program manager WSB Radio, is tentatively titled "The Poenix." (Of bitter memory hereabouts is the fact that Atlanta, like the fabled bird, the Phoenix, had to rise from the ashes of destruction after Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman's "visit").

Pittman Corry, originator of the Southern Ballet of Atlanta, will provide choreography.

OPERA SINGER ROBS COLLEAGUES BACKSTAGE

Berlin, April 11.

Peter Prohaska, 26, one of Germany's young opera singers, is not allowed to call himself Prohaska any longer. The name of the young singer is actually Klaus-Peter Heinze, but yet opera singer, Professor Jaro Prohaska, whose favorite pupil Heinze was, permitted him to take Prohaska as his artistic name. Reason why the old Prohaska now withdrew his permission: Young Peter Prohaska, alias Klause-Peter Heinze, has been caught as a thief.

What's worst about it, the young man stole from his own colleagues. He sneaked into latter's dressing-rooms at the Nuremberg Opera House and pocketed money and all that seemed to him attractive.

Suspense Temperature & Popcorn Consumption; Melodrama Helps Sale

Detroit, April 11.

If the popcorn man were the judge, "Journey to the Center of the Earth" would get the Academy Award for "best movie," Jerry Lewis would be selected as "best actor" and Debbie Reynolds would get the nod as "best actress."

Those are the selections of Burt Levy, of L & L Theatre Concessions, which fills the popcorn machines in 92 Detroit area movie houses. Levy listed his choices in a Detroit Free Press story by Jimmy Pooler.

Levy said of movie fans: "The more excited they get, the faster they chaw." He told Pooler he keeps careful statistics on the pulling power of pictures and stars to make sure enough popcorn will be on hand. He said 20 tons of pop-"Oscars" here's how the films line corn are consumed each year in the 92 theatres.

On the basis of the popcorn up: "Journey to the Center of the Earth," "North to Alaska," "Psycho," "Goliath and the Barbarians," "Toby Tyler," "Sink the Bismark," "Operation Petticoat," "The Time Machine," "Dinosaurus," and "Solomon and Sheba."

Levy listed the stars in this order: Jerry Lewis, John Wayne, Kirk Douglas, Pat Boone, Steve Reeves, Debbie Reynolds, Fabian, Doris Day, Jack Lemmon and Tony Curtis.

'SICK SEX': BOXOFFICE MYTH?

Films Contradict Own Credo?

Seattle, April 11.

Louis R. Guzzo, amusement editor of the Seattle Times, presumes to perceive a gap in the thinking powers of the American film industry, or a conspicuous case of talking out of both sides of the same mouth. To let Guzza speak for himself, quote:

"WILL SOMEBODY EXPLAIN?

When it is suggested that films sometimes are a decisive influence on children and may give them ideas that lead to crime, the movie industry insists its products have little effect on viewers.

"But when the industry went to court last week to defend itself against a charge that it had blacklisted Communists, its attorney said in a brief:

"The influence of motion pictures on public attitudes, conduct and mores is incalculable. A producer of motion pictures cannot ignore the possibility that a picture designed as entertainment may be converted, subtly or otherwise, into a medium of subversive propaganda, nor can he ignore the further fact that a great many people and organizations in the United States are extremely sensitive to the danger.

"Come on, fellows, make up your minds. If political films can exert that much influence on adults, imagine the impact of concentrated movie violence, crime and sex on Junior."

Skouras' Arrival in London Sparks Extensive British Pix Prod. Program

London, April 11.

The arrival in London last weekend of Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox's prexy, accompanied by Robert Goldstein, studio topper in Hollywood, sparked off an extensive British production program.

Advance guard of producers are already at work in London on the new program. Mark Robson has four pictures lined up, first of which will be "The Inspector," based on the Jan de Hartog novel, with Natalie Wood in the lead role. He is also negotiating with director and cast for "Greatest Raid of All," based on C. E. Lucas-Phillips story about the St. Nazaire raid in 1942.

Frank McCarthy passed through a week ago to set up production plans on the Continent while Leo McCarey is set to produce and direct "China Story," starring William Holden. This is skedded to start production May 21 and the screenplay, based on the Pearl Buck original, has been written by McCarey in junction with Claude Binyon.

William Holden is also being paged to star in "The Visit," which Nunnally Johnson will produce and direct from his own screen play of Friedrich Durrenmatt's successful play. It is likely that Ingrid Bergman will play the role created on the stage by Lynn Fontanne.

U.S. Competing At Moscow Fest

Washington, April 11.

The United States will enter one feature and one short competitively at this year's Moscow Film Festival, July 9-23. Turner Shelton of USIA will work with U. S. industry in selection of product after Soviet printed rules are received.

U. S. showed "Diary of Anne Frank" at previous 1959 Moscow Fest, but out of competion.

Now Christ As a Lad

Hollywood, April 11.

Samuel Bischoff and David Diamond undertake a change of pace in their next production, to follow "Operation Eichmann," upcoming Allied Artists release.

Pair will do "The Carpenter's Son," feature on the life of Christ as a boy, and have registered title with MPAA. While listed under Allied Artists, no release deal has yet been set although pic is expected to go on producers' late '61 slate.

Legion's Little Praises Little

By ALBERT SCHARPER

Hollywood, April 11.

Msgr. Thomas F. Little, executive secretary of the National Legion of Decency, here last week on his triennial rounds of the studios and for parleys with MPAA Production Code chief Geoffrey Shurlock, bestowed what he termed "an accolade" on Walt Disney for the "quality" of his three most recent releases, "Pollyanna," "Swiss Family Robinson" and "Absent-Minded Professor."

Little said: "Amid the present discussion over the content of much of Hollywood's product, one fact stands out like a warm and welcome beacon. It is that those pictures turned out by you and your studio are wholly acceptable for and have proven highly entertaining to all members of every family in the land."

As yet on his Hollywood rounds, L. of D. visitor has bestowed no other such accolade. He visited 20th-Fox, Paramount, Disney, Warners, MGM and will endeavor to drop in at Columbia before he heads east.

Possibly his most intensive talks have been with Shurlock, but he would not disclose their nature. "Ask Mr. Shurlock," he said. Shurlock would not comment, either.

Cleric, when asked how he personally felt, as Legion of Decency chief, on the industry output following "spirit and letter" of the Production Code, countered with: "Do you think it does?"

He refrained, however, from any direct criticism with the observation, "Last November, in the annual report of the Bishops' Council regarding Legion of Decency views, some rather harsh statements were made regarding films. At this time I could only make an interim report, which I do not feel I could do. Let's wait until November when the annual, and full, report will come out."

BIG ONLY WITH TAYLOR AS STAR

The current furor about films of "sick sex" seems a little silly considering that, with the exception of a couple of films starring Elizabeth Taylor, none of the so-called sick sex pix has been an outstanding money-earner. Thus, it would seem, the controversial films are reaching a comparatively small part of the mass audience, and their detrimental effect (if, indeed any can be proven) would be slight.

This observation was made in New York last week by a distribution exec who preferred to remain anonymous. He didn't want to be put in the position of knocking the boxoffice power of one of his own pix, as well as those of several of his competitors.

Exec prefaced his remarks with a wry observation that, in his estimation anyway, prostitution should not be regarded as "sick sex" ("It's as old as the world and an integral part of the social scene"). Therefore the exec would not regard the phenomenal b.o. success of "The World of Suzie Wong" and "Never on Sunday" as exceptions to his rule that sick sex doesn't pay.

If It's Liz—

The only exceptions to which he would admit are "Butterfield 8," "Suddenly Last Summer" and "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof," all of which starred Miss Taylor who, in the exec's words, is "the one true boxoffice star today." That is, he would bet that almost any pic—sick or healthy—starring Miss Taylor would be a click in today's market.

To make his point, the exec pointed to the estimated $6,000,000 domestic rental on "Suddenly" in comparison to the estimated $2,000,000 for "The Fugitive Kind," another Tennessee Williams drama. "Fugitive" is in many ways a much better film than "Suddenly," the exec opined, and the two are certainly "equally sick," but the one with Miss Taylor was a standout, while the other has had a comparatively uphill battle despite a cast headed by Marlon Brando, Anna Magnani and Joanne Woodward.

If sick sex were really insurance for stout returns in the U. S. market, "Jack The Ripper," should have been a smash, he said. It was, in fact, something of a disappointment, considering the razzle-dazzle campaign it was given by Joe Levine. The public also stayed away in droves from last year's two full length studies of a homosexual: "Oscar Wilde" and "The Green Carnation."

And, at the present time, exec said that Allied Artists' study of voyeurism, "Look in Any Window," isn't breaking any records, even with teenage idol Paul Anka cast as a peeping Tom. If the do-gooders and noters-with-alarm were correct, said the exec, the combination of Anka and voyeurism should be proving irresistable.

Asked whether Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho," one of Paramount's biggest moneymakers were not an example of a "sick sex" pic paying off handsomely, even without Miss Taylor, exec replied that the transvestitism of "Psycho" was about as sick as that in "Charley's Aunt." The Hitchcock film, he said, was neither an exploration nor a glorification of unhealthy sex. Rather it was a simple but violent gag and a sensational exercise in film horror.

See Leonard Davis Gaining Seat On NT&T Board; No Proxy Decision

Hollywood, April 11.

No definite decision regarding outcome of the proxy fight against management of National Theatres & Television will be announced until Friday (14) or Monday (17), it was disclosed today (Tues.) at the annual meeting here, but from a preliminary count of the proxy votes it appears that Leonard Davis, leader of the fight, will win at least one seat on the board.

Management claimed 1,860,000 votes, representing 11,000 of the total 16,000 stockholders, while Davis faction claimed roughly 600,000 votes, sufficient, if it is correct, to give them two seats.

Eugene Klein, NT&T prexy, declared: "It is within the realm of possibility that the Davis faction will be represented by at least one person on the board despite the larger number of votes culled by management."

Klein said that management will get more than 75% of the votes cast, as indication of the stockholders support of management.

Fireworks were started early in the session at the Fox Wilshire Theatre with holders demanding from the floor that B. Gerald Cantor, board chairman, resign from the board, which he declined. A number of holders also asserted that Cantor was running the company for his own interests, and he was asked to explain, but this too he declined to do, saying that he would answer all questions when an eastern lawsuit against him comes to trial.

M.F. Fund's 80 Beds

Hollywood, April 11.

Motion Picture Relief Fund dedicated its new 80-bed pavilion Sunday (9) at the Motion Picture County House, with several hundred filmites attending.

Project, under construction for past two years, will enable Fund to take care of patients who formerly had to be placed in private rest homes, and is fourth major structure to be erected on Fund's 55-acre site since its inception in 1942.

All facilities offered by the MPRF are made possible via donations by industry workers.

Trans-Lux Volume At $3,401,409

Revenues from Trans-Lux Corp.'s entertainment activities rose to $3,401,409 in 1960 from $2,873,576 for 1959, according to the company's annual report to stockholders. Entertainment activities include theatrical exhibition, distribution of theatrical films, and production and distribution of tv films.

Trans-Lux's net after taxes last year rose almost 51%, to $502,217, from $332,288 in 1959. The 1960 figure is equal to 90c a share, on 554,900 shares of common, against 60c a share the year before. The gross revenues for 1960 were $6,516,091, compared with $5,672,134 in 1959. Profit before taxes last year was $1,040,109, and in 1959 was $744,786.

Company's communications division—stock and news ticker projection equipment, closed circuit tv to brokerage office, etc—also registered "further progress" in the year, according to the report. Revenues from these activities rose to $3,114,682 in 1960 from $2,798,558 in 1959. Company is said also to be seeking to enter the area of closed circuit tv systems for other commercial uses, including airlines, schools, hospitals, industrial establishments.

Company's annual meeting is scheduled to be held in New York April 27, with principal business being the election of 12 incumbent directors and approval of a restricted stock option plan by which 25,000 shares of common will be made available for options to officers and other employees.

Option Plan

According to the proxy statement accompanying the annual report, it's contemplated that those eligible for the stock option plan will include Purcival E. Furber, Aquila Giles, Richard Brandt, Raymond G. Pugh and Edison Rice, all of whom are either officers or directors of the parent corporation, plus seven others who are officers or directors of subsidiaries, and three other "key employees."

Proxy statement also reveals that Harry Brandt, exec officer of the corporations which run the Brandt theatres, is largest single stockholder, owning 32.68% of the outstanding Trans-Lux Corp. stock, followed by Jacob Starr, chairman of the Artkraft Strauss Sign Co. with 10.06% of the outsanding shares.

6 Roll Globally For United Artists

Indie producers, working on locations around the world, will have a total of six films before the cameras this month for United Artists release.

Properties include Frank Capra's "Pocketful of Miracles," starring Glenn Ford and Bette Davis, which starts April 20; "The Valiant," a B.H.P. Films production, starring John Mills, which gets underway April 17 in Italy; "Geronimo," a Bedford production, starring Chuck Connors, now shooting in Mexico; "X-15," an Essex production which starts April 17.

Harvard Films will also start two: "Beauty and The Beast," starring Mark Damon, and "The Flight That Disappeared."

BARTLETT-VALE UNITE FOR 'GLOBAL AFFAIR'

Hollywood, April 11.

New indie firm has been formed by producer-director Hall Bartlett and writer Eugene Vale for production of a feature program, to be started with "A Global Affair." Vale script deals with a newly-born infant found on grounds of United Nations Bldg. in N.Y., where filming will take place.

Plans call for top actors from Europe, South America and Asia to be cast in pic which rolls early next year. No release has yet been set.

Nullify Nudist Nab

Charlotte, N.C., April 11.

Projectionist for a drive-in was cleared of charges of showing an "indecent" film by a Superior Court jury which heard his appeal from the county recorder's court.

Carson Paul Jenkins of Charlotte was convicted two weeks ago along with the drive-in theatre owner, William Lemmond Jr., on charges of showing a so-called indecent and immoral film. The two were arrested March 1 when a nudist picture, "Sun Lovers' Holiday," played at the drive-in near here.

Public Warning, But Up to Pop

Milwaukee, April 11.

Commenting on "not recommended for children" tag on ads classified as such by Milwaukee's City Motion Picture Commission, Valentine Wells, executive secretary of the commission, indicated that this does not signify that tickets cannot be sold to children. This notice in advertisements of motion pictures playing local theatres, is a warning to parents. The parents have to make their own decision. About 23% of films exhibited in Milwaukee County, get the "not recommended for children" classification, with less than 1% stuck with the "adults only" tag.

'Classification' Debate Somewhat Hazy

The great film industry debate on the pros and cons of self-classification is rapidly becoming academic. Self-classification is already here, at least in some important sections of the country and on individual films being nationally released by major companies.

Ironic is the fact that the majors who have so classified their pix are all members of the Motion Picture Assn. of America which remains officially adamant against any such procedure.

Situation was highlighted again last week with the Legion of Decency declaration that the Roman Catholic reviewing org had given a B (Objectionable in part for all) rating to Metro's "Two Women," a Joe Levine import from Italy. Announcement noted importantly that the pic is to be advertised by Metro as "recommended for adults only."

This is the third time in less than a year that a major company has agreed to the use of such a tag line — similar procedures were followed by United Artists with "Elmer Gantry" and Warners with "Girl of the Night." While major company execs don't like to talk about the reasons, it seems apparent that they agree of "self impose" this classification in order to get a B rating for a film which might otherwise have been condemned by the Legion, perhaps the most financially fearsome of the industry's watchdogs.

Divided Counsel

In addition, while Marshall Fine, prexy of Allied States, goes on the record as being completely opposed to any kind of "classification," and while Theatre Owners of America tries to figure out a way to inform exhibs about the content of upcoming films (whatever that really means), individual exhibitors are quietly going about classifying their films as they see fit.

Latest circuit to adopt this policy is the 65-theatre Central States Theatre Corp., which operates in Iowa and Nebraska. The circuit has put in use in its film ads a set of three symbols to indicate the type of audience—for general patronage, adults and adolescents, or adults only—for which the specific picture is suited.

Like the exhibitors in Memphis, who went to a similar plan about a year ago, Central States is basing its ratings on those published in the Green Sheet, prepared by the Film Estimate Board of National Organizations (and distributed through MPAA facilities). Also classifying its product is Blumenfeld Theatres in California. Texas COMPO has, in fact, established its own rating service which it makes available to its members at a nominal charge.

Thus, unless the anti-classification forces hurry up and prove that self-classification won't work, they may be in a position to prove it won't work after it's already established — and functioning—in important areas all around the country.

Handle Israeli Pic

George Schwartz and Arthur Sachson, indie distributors, have acquired "They Were Ten," an Israeli feature, for release in the United States.

Produced and directed by Baruch Dienar, the film has dialog in Hebrew, with English subtitles.

BROTHER KEEPS HIM OUT

'Kapo' Director Denied Visa — Sibling Went Soviet

Rome, April 11.

Gillo Pontecorvo, director of "Kapo" (Italy's nominee for this year's foreign Oscar) and brother Bruno Pontecorvo, atomic scientist who defected to Russia 10 years ago, has been denied a visa to visit the U. S. to attend Oscar ceremonies this month.

U. S. consulate here confirmed director was denied, but gave no reason.

Paese Sera, pro-Communist newspaper, says Pontecorvo was told he had been barred U. S. for having confessed sympathy for Communist Party.

Roger Lewis As Indie Producer

With Roger H. Lewis having formally resigned as veepee in charge of United Artists' advertising and publicity, Fred Goldberg is slated to take over that department under Max E. Youngstein's general supervisory direction. Latter, of course, will concern himself with overall management but, during the transition period, he will assist Goldberg in his new responsibilities.

Lewis, meantime, is mulling a number of independent production offers, one of which may keep him within the UA family as his principal could be distributing through his alma mammy. However, there are two other indie production bids also.

Lewis, whose formal resignation takes place June 1, has been with UA a little over nine years. Prior to that he was veep and creative director for Monroe Greenthal agency. Exec entered the industry in 1939 as an office boy at Warners, and after the war joined 20th-Fox.

Desegration-Themed 'Crisis in South' Looms As Possible Hard-Ducat

The Samuel Bischoff-David Diamond partnership plans its roadshow baptism with its next entry, "Crisis in the South," documenting the Dixie integration strife. Decision to go hard-ticket, according to Diamond, is because the touchy theme has major distribs backing off.

Diamond figures he could press the issue with Allied Artists, which has been releasing for the partners (including their current "Operation Eichmann"), but as of now the producers plan their own sales effort.

If pic actually does go two-a-day and upped scale, venture will rate more than ordinary trade notice, since according to Diamond it will have none of the exploitable production values usually associated with roadshow product. "Crisis" may roll this summer.

As 20th All-Big, Lippert Helms Its Budget Features

Hollywood, April 11.

That long-talked new deal for Robert L. Lippert to continue producing low-budgeted films for 20th-Fox haes been formally signed. Pact, spanning seven years, is longest Lippert has had, provides for not fewer than 12 films a year, not more than 16. Budgets will be tilted from what they have been. Lippert, as in past, will arrange bank financing in L. A.

As all 20th's own upcoming product will be in "blockbuster" category hereafter save Lippert's program, Lippert will absorb some commitments previously set by studio, covering directors, writers, actors, etc. To this end, property "White Terror in the North Atlantic," previously on several different producers' slates, now has been transferred to Lippert. Once, 20th planned to make pic in England it's an iceberg yarn, later in title locale. Lippert will shoot it in Bering Strait off Alaska.

Lippert airs east this weekend for talks with Skouras. He'll take east prints of "The Big Show," co-starring Esther Williams, Cliff Robertson. Filmed almost entirely by director James B. Clark in Munich, film is most expensive Lippert ever made, costing $820,000. He'll also take print of Audie Murphy-starrer, "Battle of Bloody Beach," shot at Malibu. Heavy seas wrecked set there on beach, swamped only navy destroyer escort rented as chief prop. These untoward events kited budget $130,000 over $500,000 originally blueprinted.

DOMENICO MECCOLI, OF VENICE, O.O.'S OSCAR

Washington, April 11.

Domenico Meccoli, new director of the Venice Film Festival, was the guest of honor here Friday (7) at a luncheon given by Eric Johnston, prexy of the Motion Picture Assn. of America. Meccoli is in the U.S. to attend the Academy Awards ceremonies in Hollywood April 17.

In course of the lunch, guest presented Johnston with the Venice film festival medal in honor of the host's 15th anniversary in the film industry.

Marv Schenck Retires

Marvin H. Schenck, longtime studio exec at Metro, will resign shortly. He sails on the Liberte April 21 for four or five weeks abroad, all vacation, and upon return will bow out officially.

Schenck, 64, is a Loew's-Metro old guardsman. The studio v.p. started with the Marcus Loew Booking Agency, worked with the Loew's chain and then M-G, all the time dealing with talent. He's a nephew of Nick and Joe Schenck.

2 Different Pix Shot at Same Time

But Andre Cayatte's New French Film Project Will Use Same Players, Sets

Paris, April 11.

A new wrinkle here is Andre Cayatte's new film project which will entail two different pix being shot at the same time in the same sets with the same characters. Overall monicker will be "La Vie Conjugale". Conjugal Life:, but one will be called "Francoise" and and the other "Jean-Marc."

They show the life of a married couple through the eyes of the wife and the vision of the husband. Cayatte wants two different crews also, but one will probably suffice if producer Raymond Borderie has his way.

Due to roll in May, it will probably star Marie-Jose Nat and Jacques Charrier as the couple. In one, the wife will be courageous and trying to help the husband while in the other she will be an opportunists. The huhband portrayed both as a rigorous, moral young man and a weakling, depending on whose point of view. Cayatte claims the pix will play in different theatres and be separate and complete films.

Cayatte states each pic will have a varying style. Whether this might start a trend remains to be seen. Actually, a story made by a "new Waver" called "Games of Love" has been made by another "Waver" in a different style and called "A Woman Is a Woman." The first one treated the story of a girl wanting marriage and children from a flighty lover as a gay comedy while the second was more serious and dramatic.

WOMETCO'S EARNINGS

1960 Improved Earnings of $1.01 Per Share Vs. 79c In '59

Wometco Enterprises, umbrella for sundry activities including film exhibition and television stations, reported improved profits for 1960 with net earnings at $1,013,429, equal to $1.01 a share. Previous year's net was $707,350, for 79c per share.

Company dropped one theatre in Miami, but added another in the same city adjacent to a large shopping centre.

GLOBE HAS LOTS ON ITS AGENDA

By DALE OLSON

Hollywood, April 11.

Organization of a new production-distribution company which plans diversification into all entertainment fields came to light yesterday when Alvin Schoncite told VARIETY that Fidelity Mining Corp., of which he is secretary-treasurer and executive operations head, has purchased the defunct Kenmore Studios, Hollywood Sound Service and Globe Releasing Corp. and has plans to develop what he termed "A major film studio operation on a small level."

Organized last May 16, the firm's bow will come on April 15 with release of the first of a slate of ten low-budget, exploitation-type features. Two reps, Harry Gaffney, sales v-p, and Harry Barling, have been in the field for 2½ weeks and so far have cemented contracts from 15 independent exchange territories, among them, according to Schoncite, a deal involving 300 houses. He declined to name any until an expected 15 more are set.

To be sold in either package or single units, the slate includes a full-length feature cartoon, "Panda and the Magic Serpent," bought from Toy Films of Japan, with exchanges also offered options on eight pix the company plans to produce themselves in 1961-62, and a varied assortment of old films suitable for re-run or TV play.

Fidelity, parent of the organization, was a small mining leasor in Nevada when Schoncite and Theodore J. Ticktin, who holds post of president, acquired a controlling interest and switched its activities entirely toward entertainment. Schoncite previously had rented production space at Hal Roach, but projects there fell through when that studio went out of business.

First features to go will be (1) "Buffalo Gun," written and produced by A. R. Milton and directed by Albert C. Gannaway, with Marty Robbins, Carl Smith, Webb Pierce, Wayne Morris, Mary Ellen Kay and Don "Red" Barry starred; (2) "Seeds of Desire," a dubbed foreign import starring Erika Remberg, and (3) "The Embezzler," Spain-filmed entry produced by Robert Tatur, who heads their dubbing dept., and directed by Hugo Fregonese.

"Embezzler" bears Ticktin and Schoncite's names as producers, as do 4) "Regina Lenz Criminal," directed by Fritz Umgelter and starring Barbara Rutting, and (5) "Contraband," a dubbed Mexican film directed by Xavier Seto. Others set are (6) "Boy on the Run," Alexander Grasshoff prod.-dir.; (7) "The Choppers," produced by Arch Hall and directed by Leigh Jason with Arch Hall jr., Marianne Gaba and Robert Paget; (8) "Hell Breed," John Carr, prod.-dir., and (9) "The Fanatics," a French horror film. All go out under the Globe banner.

On their own production slate, geared to start within a month, according to Schoncite, are (10) John Carr's "The Talisman" and "Rape," (11) Arch Hall's "And the Giants Walked," (12) Wray Davis' "The Damned Don't Die," and (13) "The Lavender Lie" and (14) "The Moon Creature," both productions by Schoncite and Ben Pivar, latter head of production for the co. He also joins Schoncite on (15) "Werewolf" and (16) "The Mummy Walks at Midnight."

Skelton Up for 'Jumbo'

Hollywood, April 11.

Deal is on for Red Skelton to return to screen in the "Jumbo" role of Jimmy Durante in Billy Rose's 1935 arena production at the former Hippodrome in N.Y.

Joe Pasternak, who already has set Doris Day for femme lead and Chuck Walters to direct, has been in negotiation with Skelton for past 10 days to costar in Metro musical.

'Wind' Again Topnotch Of B.O. Champs in Alltime Sweepstakes; 5th (Current) Reissue $8,000,000

Movielab's 10c Divvy

Movielab Film Laboratories has declared a dividend of 10c a share on the class A common, payable May 1 to stock or record April 25.

This is the fourth dividend since the stock was publicly offered last June.

Wall St. Stance On Allied Artists

Albeit Albert Zugsmith has been padding his Allied Artists stock portfolio, the Wall St.-show biz grapevine has some other thoughts on the film company's perky performance—and futures probability—on the "little board."

Optimism, it seems, was tipped by the company itself when it gave producer Samuel Bronston an option on 25,000 common shares at nearly two points over the ticker price when the option was granted March 15. AA's rosy self-outlook, of course, is contingent on how well Bronston's "El Cid" performs when the company roadshows it domestically next fall. A fast breakaway would excite the market bulls and confirm the confidence of Steve Broidy & Co.

As for Zugsmith, his recent buys appear to stem as much from the option terms as from any independent desire, fore or aft, to strengthen himself with his distributor.

Bronston has a two-year period from March 15 in which to exercise his option at $8 a share. Closing price on the stock when it was granted him was $6.12½, and at the close of market last Friday (7) was $7.62½.

Option for 2,000 shares at the same price also was granted picture attorney Herbert T. Silverberg, who repped Bronston's negotiations with Allied for western hemisphere rights to "El Cid."

U.S. preem of the pic is figured for late October, but world bow is likely now for Madrid in mid-October, with attendant European-American press junket being mapped by vet publicist Robert Taplinger.

ACADEMY CERTIFICATES

Added To Scientific and Technical Categories

Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences this year is presenting one Class II Award plaque and three Class III certificates for scientific or technical awards in 1961 Oscar sweepstakes, out of a total of 16 which were considered. Again, as in the past two years, no Class I plaque is being given. Kudos will be passed out at Academy Awards presentations next Monday (17).

Class II nod goes to Ampex Professional Products Co., for the production of a well-engineered multipurpose sound system combining high standards of quality with convenience of control, dependable operation and simplified emergency provisions.

Class III certificates go to following:

Arthur Holcomb, Petro Vlahos and the Columbia Pictures Studios Camera Dept. for a camera flicker indicating device.

Anthony Paglia and 20th-Fox Studios Mechanical Effects Dept. for the design and construction of a miniature flak gun and ammunition.

Carl Hauge, Robert Grubel and Edward Reichard of Consolidated Film Indutries for development of an automatic developer replenisher system.

David O. Selznick's 1939 production of "Gone With the Wind" once again is the king of the hill in terms of boxoffice gross. This Metro release, which had been deposed by the late Cecil B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments" as holder of the crown, has captured top honors anew via the current and fifth reissue.

On the basis of the past couple of hundred dates for "Gone" in its most recent market go-around, the Selznick picture ought to take in at least $8,000,000 in domestic revenue. This would make it the most successful of all re-runs and brings the total of domestic rentals to $41,500,000.

Average of the previous reissues was $6,400,000. Added income this time is attributable to the expanded new generation plus the fact that want-to-see pictures are not in abundance anymore. Further, "Gone" is being marketed at regular prices, whereas "Ben-Hur," "Exodus," et al., are at roadshow.

VARIETY's anniversary issue of the past Jan 4 had Paramount's release of "Commandments" on top, with domestic (United States and Canada) rentals of $34,200,000. This figure remains the same, with "Gone" soaring to the $41,500,000 level by way of the new marketing.

Ironic note is that Selznick has long since ceased to own any part of his own production. These are the days of "participation" but it must be recalled that the producer sold out his interests in the feature to M-G many years ago. There are no participators at all; M-G owns the picture outright.

"Commandments" obviously has a chance of re-copping the throne but this couldn't be for some time. Biblical epic is more or less shelved, with a reissue not due for some time.

Another key feature in the sweepstakes is "Ben-Hur," which for the time being at least must remain at $33,000,000. Thus, the big three: "Gone With the Wind," at $41,500,000; "Ten Commandments," $34,200,000, and "Ben-Hur," $33,000,000.

BUENA VISTA FOREIGN DEPT. TO CALIFORNIA

Buena Vista's foreign distrib department is due to be moved from New York to the Walt Disney Studio in Burbank within the next few weeks. Move will be finalized when dept head Ned Clarke returns from Europe where he's been on an extended tour.

Harry Archinal, who's been with Disney a number of years, has been appointed assistant foreign sales manager, succeeding Mel Rydell, who resigned to join Metro International.

Herb Fletcher, sales rep for South America, who's been operating out of Caracas, also has moved to Burbank studio.

WALD, HYMAN, STARK

Talks Range From Rights To Possible Merger

Hollywood, April 11

Jerry Wald has been holding "serious" discussions with Eliot Hyman over possibility of merger with Hyman's Seven Arts Co. together with stock swaps between companies. Wald said such talks were with both Hyman and Ray Stark, new exec production chief for Seven Arts.

One deal already concluded between Wald and Hyman is for former's acquisition of Somerset Maughan's "Of Human Bondage" from Seven Arts, which Wald will film this year.

Wald reported proposed merger, going on for some time, "could be finalized within very short time." Also implied that although merger may not be finalized there would be additional acquisitions and dealings with Seven Arts.

Greengage Summer
(BRITISH—COLOR)

Leisurely, romantic drama which should score with femme audiences. Persuasive performances by Kenneth More and a bright newcomer, Susannah York, are set attractively in French champagne country.

London, April 4.

Columbia release of a Victor Saville-Edward Small production. Stars Kenneth More, Danielle Darrieux, Susannah York, Claude Nollier. Directed by Lewis Gilbert. Screenplay, Howard Koch, from Rumer Godden's novel; camera, Frederick A. Young; editor, Peter Hunt; music, Richard Adinsell. At Odeon, Leicester Square, London. Running time, 100 MINS.

Eliot	Kenneth More
Mme. Zizi	Danielle Darrieux
Joss	Susannah York
Mdme. Cerbet	Claude Nollier
Hester	Jane Asher
Vicky	Elizabeth Dear
Milhouse	Richard Williams
Paul	David Saire
Renard	Raymond Gerome
Mr. Bullock	Maurice Denham
Monsieur Dufour	Andre Maranne
Monsieur Prudeaux	Harold Kasket
Monsieur Joubert	Jacques Brunius
Mrs. Grey	Joy Shelton

Here's a stylish, warm romantic drama which gets away to a flying start in that it's set in the leisurely champagne country of France. Cameraman Frederick A. Young has taken full advantage of this fact, with some enchanting color lensing. Pic is always a delight to the eye apart from its other qualities. This should readily appeal to femme audiences, particularly, and it's a worthwhile booking for most houses.

Kenneth More is a big attraction for home audiences. Danielle Darrieux and the location will help to take care of Continental appeal, but its marquee value in the U. S. is more doubtful. However, it virtually introduces a new young British actress who, on this showing, looks to have a bright future. The name's Susannah York, previously seen in a smaller role in "Tunes of Glory."

Howard Koch's screenplay, based on Rumer Godden's novel, works up to a holding emotional pitch. Lewis Gilbert has directed with an obviously affectionate care. Story concerns four English schoolchildren, the oldest Susannah York being just over 16. They are enroute to a holiday in France's champagne-and-green-fire country when their mother is taken ill and is whisked off to hospital.

Alone and dispirited they arrive at the hotel which is run by Danielle Darrieux and managed by Claude Nollier, a Frenchwoman, despite the Christian monicker. The children get a frigid reception from Mlles. Darrieux and Nollier. But Kenneth More, a debonair, charming, mysterious Englishman insists that they stay. He's having an affaire with Miss Darrieux and she cannot resist his whims.

During the long summer the atmosphere thickens. He annoys his mistress by taking the children under his wing. The teenager blossoms, and he begins to look at her in a less than patronly light. There is open antagonism between the girl and the older woman. The film builds up to a series of romantic developments during which it becomes clear that More is a notorious jewel thief.

The awakening teenager falls for his quite sincere charm. But when she thinks he has humiliated her, she unwittingly leads to his capture by the police. For him it means prison, for Miss Darrieux the end of love and for young Miss York it means hurt and disillusionment.

This could have turned out overly melodramatic and contrived, but it's mainly handled with delicacy and good taste. Even the dramatic scenes never jar. The early part of the film, when the relationship between More and the children in developing, is particularly charming and pleasantly staged. Miss York 20 progresses delightfully from the resentful, gawky schoolgirl to the young woman eager to live. She handles some tricky scenes as when she gets drunk with champagne and when she is assaulted by an amorous scullery boy with an assurance beyond her thespian experience. She has a fresh, wideeyed adolescent beauty which is most appealing.

More's friendly charm and light humor have never been more persuasive than in this film. His scenes with the moppets are great as are his rather more astringent skirmishes with Mlle. Darrieux. She plays the jealous, fading mistress on rather too much of one note, but with keen insight. And there is a subtly drawn relationship of hinted lesbianism between her and Mlle Nollier.

The three younger children are engagingly player, particularly by a red-haired, wise youngster named Jane Asher. David Saire has some overdrawn scenes as the scullery-boy but he, Raymond Gerome, Andre Maranne and Jacques Brunius all contribute useful support.

Dialog is largely unforced and this, with the smooth acting, helps director Gilbert to build up a sustained plausable atmosphere from the outset. He deserves plenty bouquet for his tactful drawing out of adolescent awakening. With sound allround technical okays, from the art work to Richard Addinsel's dainty, evocative music, "Greengage Summer" is a human production that, from time to time, will be remembered with affection for quite a number of sequences. Rich.

Carry On Regardless
(BRITISH)

Latest in this Midas-touch slapstick series, which defies serious criticism. No coherent plot, but yocks galore; looks a sturdy b.o. prospect.

London, April 4.

Anglo-Amalgamated release of Peter Rogers production. Stars Sidney James, Kenneth Connor, Charles Hawtrey, Joan Sims, Kenneth Williams, Bill Owen, Liz Fraser, Terence Longdon. Directed by Gerald Thomas. Screenplay, Norman Hudis; camera, Alan Hume; editor, John Shirley; music, Bruce Montgomery. At Odeon, Marble Arch, London. Running time, 90 MINS.

Bert Handy	Sidney James
Sam Twist	Kenneth Connor
Gabriel Dimple	Charles Hawtrey
Lily Dupree	Joan Sims
Francis Courtenay	Kenneth Williams
Mike Weston	Bill Owen
Delia King	Liz Fraser
Montgomery Infield	Terence Longdon
Frosty-Faced Sister	Hattie Jacques
Stanley Unwin	Stanley Unwin
Miss Cooling	Esma Cannon
Matron	Joan Hickson
Club Manager	Sydney Tafler
Mata Hari	Betty Marsden
Trudi Trelawney	Julia Arnall
Penny Panting	Fenella Fielding
Trevor Trelawney	Terence Alexander
Wine Connoisseur	David Lodge
Martin Faull	Jerry Desmonde
Sinister Man	Eric Pohlmann
First Sister	June Jago
Mr. Delling	Jimmy Thompson
Mrs. Delling	Carole Shelley

Any serious criticism of "Carry On Regardless" is futile. Anglo-Amalgamated, through Peter Rogers and Gerald Thomas, have found a goldmine in this slapstick series. Shrewdly, they're going to continue turning them out until the whole formula falls on its face but this could be quite a long time off. Every exhib who has clicked with any of the previous "Carry On" films will be standing in line for this one. It's a solid b.o. prospect.

The story, such as is, has Sidney James running "Helping Hand Ltd.," an agency prepared to take on any sort of job any time. On his staff are most of the trained imbeciles of previous "Carry On" films. Kenneth Williams, Joan Sims, Charles Hawtrey, Bill Owen, Terence Longdon, Liz Fraser and Kenneth Connor. Disaster winds up every job. Typical of these are scenes which involve Kenneth Williams in taking a chimp for a walk through London, Kenneth Connor baby-sitting the baby turns out to be a married woman, and Charles Hawtrey deputizing for a pugilist with this weedy comedian getting the job of a nightclub bouncer. Joan Sims has to demonstrate a bubble bath, Liz Fraser finds herself modelling underwear. The good slapstick climax has the whole gang cleaning out a filthy, antiquated house.

Ingenuity of scriptwriter Norman Hudis is sometimes a bit strained, but he has come up with some sound comedy situations.

Hudis' dialog is also lively, relying a great deal on double meanings, saucy vulgarity and the various personalities of the lengthy cast. Even down to the smallest one, the roles are played by actors well experienced in jumping through the comedy hoops that director Gerald Thomas tosses deftly in the air.

Of the principals, Kenneth Connor and Kenneth Williams get the most chances, but Sidney James, Joan Sims and Liz Fraser pull their weight. Esma Cannon has a high old time as James' assistant and Hattie Jacques, Fenella Fielding, Julia Arnall, Nicholas Parsons, David Lodge, Betty Marsden, Sydney Tafler, David Lodge and a dozen others all make a mark in brief cameos. Film also introduces Stanley Unwin, a tv and radio man who specializes in double talk. Technical credits are all okay. Rich.

Factual Films Awards

"Primary," filmed account of the 1960 Wisconsin presidential primary between President John F. Kennedy and Senator Hubert Humphrey, was awarded City College's 12th annual Robert J. Flaherty award for "outstanding creative achievement" in films of a factual nature. Award was presented at ceremonies in New York last Wednesday (29).

Honorable mention citations went to "Sit-In," an NBC documentary, and "Pow-Wow," a record of a rehearsal in the rain by the U. of Minnesota Marching Band. "Primary" was produced by Robert Drew for Time-Life, Inc., and made by Richard Leacock, Don Pennebaker and Al Maysles.

Blast of Silence

Clinical downbeat study of a rubout that doesn't quite convince. Okay prospects, however, with canny handling.

Universal release of an Alfred Crown-Dan Enright production. Features Allen Baron, Molly McCarthy, Larry Tucker. Produced by Merrill Brody. Written and directed by Allen Baron; editor, Peggy Lawson; sound, John Strauss; camera, Erich Kollmar; music, Meyer Kupferman. Reviewed at Universal homeoffice, April 6, '61. Running time, 77 MINS.

Frank Bono	Allen Baron
Lorrie	Molly McCarthy
Big Ralph	Larry Tucker
Troigno	Peter Clume
Petey	Danny Meehan
Troiano's Girl	Milda Memonas
Nightclub Singer	Dean Sheldon
Contact Man	Charles Creesap
Gangster	Joe Bubbico
Sailor	Bill DePrato
Bellhop	Erich Kollmar
Building Sup.	Ruth Kaner
Gangster	Gil Rogers
Gangster	Jerry Douglas
Lorrie's Boyfriend	Don Saroyan
Waiter	Jeri Soganen
Drummer	Mel Spender
Troiano's Wife	Betty Kovar
Gangster	Bob Taylor
Gangster	Ernest Jackson

With shrewd sell, Universal may have either a possible art house or lower berth conventional entry with this shoestring effort. Starkly grey, "Blast of Silence" is a quasi-analytical study of a contemporary hired gun, and is done in the neo-realist minor key of such films as "Savage Eye" and "Shadows."

Under the thin avant-garde veneer, however, it is a fairly conventional tale that doesn't quite come off. Fault basically is that it relies too much on over-emphatic narration and not enough on artful plot and characterization. As a consequence, the soundtrack not only works too hard, but is a hindrance in the film's cumulative effect.

An Alfred Crown-Dan Enright presentation, "Blast" was conceived and executed entirely in Manhattan by its producer, Merrill Brody, and director-scenarist Allen Baron, with latter also playing the hired gun. All but two members of the cast are reputed tyro thesps, but some surprisingly effective performances result notwithstanding.

Yarn follows a hood imported to kill a prominent mobster. Along the way, he's reunited with a hometown sweetheart who rejects him, and is forced to strangle a bizarre fat man who has arranged for the murder weapon. When he has finally knocked off the mobster, the gunman goes for his payoff on a deserted strip of beach, where syndicate thugs kill him in an ambush.

In development, the story wavers uncertainly between psychologizing (chiefly via the narration) and being reportorially taut. In seeking to meld the two approaches, "Blast" never really does. Despite this crucial flaw, though, film manages a fair amount of interest as the camera pounds the Gotham pavements.

Baron, as the hired killer, turns in an acceptable maiden stint, but without ever really exposing the thug's conflicting drives. Molly McCarthy as his onetime girl friend delivers her lines in flat fashion. She's one of two pros in the picture, other being Danny Meehan, who satisfactory limns her brother in a brief and familiar role.

Of the others, Larry Tucker, a former songwriters' agent, shows considerable promise as the corpulent, bearded and greedy lowlifer who arranges for the murder gun; and Peter Clune is seen but scarcely heard in the archly-conceived part of the marked mobster.

An echo of black list days is the no-credit for Lionel Stander's crisp-gravel narration, written in pulpish manner by Mel Davenport. Stander's reading is nicely pitched if to small avail.

Though it gets flamboyant in spots, Meyer Kupferman's score shapes as a plus, being a lucid, full-bodied jazz complement. Other technical credits, including Erich Kollmar's camera and Peggy Lawson's editing, are good. Pit.

Taste Of Fear
(BRITISH)

Far-fetched but holding drama, which, despite many holes in the plot, builds up a chilly atmosphere and has a couple of socko twists. Good U. K. prospect, but Susan Strasberg's stellar value is the U. S. test.

London, April 4.

Columbia release of a Hammer (Jimmy Sangster) production. Stars Susan Strasberg, Ronald Lewis, Ann Todd. Features Christopher Lee. Directed by Seth Holt. Screenplay, Jimmy Sangster; camera, Douglas Slocombe; music, Clifton Parker; editor, Eric Boyd Perkins. At Warner Theatre, London. Running time, 82 MINS.

Penny Appleby	Susan Strasberg
Bob	Ronald Lewis
Jane Appleby	Ann Todd
Dr. Gerrard	Christopher Lee
Spratt	Leonard Sachs
Marie	Anne Blake
Inspector Legrand	John Serret

Screenplay writer Jimmy Sangster takes his first stab at production with "Taste of Fear," and has done the script himself. The script can be shot to pieces for contrived implausibility but the overall effect, which is to keep audiences on edge, is well achieved. This looks to be a safe booking for Britain. Apart from Susan Strasberg, probably, and Ann Todd, possibly, there's no marquee kick for the States.

Columbia is peddling this one on a shrewd exploitation gimmick, that of asking patrons to see this from the start.

Plot is that one about a young woman who is being robbed of her sanity and her inheritance by some fairly odd malarkey. It's been done before, but this one drops in a couple of ace plot twists towards the end which may surprise even students of this type picture.

The girl in the case this time is Susan Strasberg, pinned to a wheelchair, who, at the request of her father who she has not seen for 10 years, returns to his Riviera villa and meets, for the first time her stepmother Ann Todd. But Dad is apparently away on a business trip. However, on the first night she wheels her way into a summer house and there sees her father sitting, dead, in a chair. Or did she? Next day, she has the same uncomfortable experience in the hall. Is she right or is she merely having hallucinations?

Her stepmother and the family doctor assure her that she is in the hallucination market. But she is not sure and neither is Ronald Lewis, her father's handsome young chauffeur. He comforts her and they search for her father's corpse, looking in several unlikely places including the deep freeze until they discover him floating in the swimming pool.

But, before they can tell the police, things happen fast. It turns out that Miss Strasberg is really the dead daughter's companion and that she is working in league with the doctor to expose the villains of the piece. These, who else?, are the stepmother and the chauffeur. Only cynics will spot early that the chauffeur is not all he makes himself out to be. The denouement, while predictable, is crisply and excitingly put over.

It is easy to pick a dozen logical objections to this plot. Film succeeds because suspense is skillfully built up, and Douglas Slocombe's lensing helps a great deal. Seth Holt's direction of the Sangster screenplay is always confident, never overdoing the creaking door angle.

Miss Strasberg, who is obviously hampered by being tied largely to her wheelchair, gives a useful performance of bewilderment fear and near craziness. Ann Todd, stunning as the stepmother, provides enough charm to make people wonder for awhile whether or not she is the villainess of the piece. Ronald Lewis, the chauffeur, has got his first Hollywood break as a result of this film. He's a handsome, virile actor. Christopher Lee, usually associated with villainous roles, is obviously brought in as the reddest of red herrings as the doctor. He plays this straight role convincingly.

Leonard Sachs, Anne Blake, John Serret and Fred Johnson complete the cast effectively. The pre-credit titles sequence sets the atmosphere remarkably well and it is a feature of this that Clifton Parker's music is used sparingly, and hence with greater impact. Rich.

Mr. Topaze
(BRITISH—COLOR)

Slow moving, patchy but fascinating adaptation of Marcel Pagnol's play. Peter Sellers both stars and directs, which is an error. However, his name should insure useful b.o. support.

London, April 4.

20th-Fox release of a Dimitri De Grunwald production. Stars Peter Sellers; features Nadia Gray, Herbert Lom, Leo McKern. Written and produced by Pierre Rouve, from Marcel Pagnol's play. Directed by Peter Sellers. Camera, John Wilcox; editor, Geoffrey Foot; music, Georges Van Parys. At Carlton, London. Running time, 95 MINS.

Topaze	Peter Sellers
Suzy	Nadia Gray
Castel Benac	Herbert Lom
Muche	Leo McKern
Baroness	Martita Hunt
Roger	John Neville
Ernestine	Billie Whitelaw
Tamise	Michael Gough
Colette	Joan Sims
Blackmailer	John Le Mesurier
Lilette	Pauline Shepherd
Gaston	Michael Sellers

Peter Sellers, a significant comedy actor in British pix, often expressed a yen to have a go at direction. But he was perhaps unwise to essay the tricky task of directing himself in "Mr. Topaze." There have been few standout examples of this two-hat approach coming off successfully and, though "Mr. Topaze" emerges as a stylish picture which, with the Sellers name should be a neat b.o. proposition, it's likely that his personal performance has suffered some. Judgment on his directing powers must be reserved until he can handle a subject without the extra headache of acting.

Sellers plays a kindly, dedicated and very poor schoolmaster in a little French town. His integrity is such that when he refuses to compromise over a pupil's report to satisfy the child's rich, influential grandmother he is fired by the arrogant headmaster. The gullible Sellers is soft-talked into becoming the front for a swindling business man, finds that he has been a pawn but by then has discovered the wicked ways of the world. He decides to settle for becoming an even bigger "respectable" crook than his employer.

The film falls into sharply contrasting moods. The early stages, with Sellers as the gentle, honest schoolmaster is crammed with sly humor. The schoolroom scenes are well handled by director Sellers. His wooing of the pedagogue's daughter is also delightful, thanks to the completeness with which Sellers absorbs himself in the role.

When the scene switches to the big business sequences there are patchy moments when it seems that the players have embarked on an entirely different film. However, Sellers' acute observation carries him through almost till the end. Then something misfires and the audience is left feeling that it's been tricked. What has started out to be a quiet comedy has suddenly become an uncomfortably brittle, snide drama. Fortunately, that does not happen until near the fadeout.

Without ever being Sellers' most astute performance, it adds another to his fast-growing gallery of versatile characterizations. As a director he has brought out some slick performances from his colleagues. Leo McKern tends to overplay the headmaster. Yet his scenes with Sellers are lively exchanges, Billie Whitelaw, as the daughter, who Sellers shyly woos, has limited opportunities but does well with them. The other leading performances are those of Michael Gough, Nadia Gray and Herbert Lom. Gough is splendid as a seedy schoolmaster who is devoted to Sellers. Lom plays the con man flashily and effectively. Nadia Gray, as Lom's musicomedy mistress, brings a flamboyant touch of glamor to this role. Two other cameos that stand out are John Le Mesurier's furtive blackmailer and Martita Hunt's characteristic study of a rich, acid-tongued martinet.

Film is handsomely mounted and John Wilson's camera work is nice. Music by Georges Van Parys catches the right French mood. George Martin and Herbert Kretzner, who lately wrote the Sellers-Loren hit song, "Goodness, Gracious Me," have not come up with a similar winner with "I Like Money," a trite number put over tepidly by Miss Gray. Perhaps Pierre Rouve's script has kept too closely to the original play. This is by no means the Best of Sellers, but it's still an entertaining picture. Rich.

IMPORTANCE OF SALES PLANS

Inside Stuff—Pictures

L. A. Times advertising acceptance dept. appeared somewhat confused as to (1) what constitutes good taste according to its standards; (2) whether thigh of Nancy Kwan should be exposed in "World of Suzie Wong." In two-column, two-inch ad placed by Pacific Drive-In Theatres, Suzie's bare leg, from toes to hip, was revealed via split Chinese skirt. However, on adjoining page, in same-sized ad placed by Paramount, pic's distrib, split in Suzie's skirt was filled in so her leg was covered above knee. Pouring salt on Par's wound, Pacific ad page also featured illustrated ad copy for two other films showing (1) figure of nude girl taking bubblebath in straw hat being ogled by leering face; (2) figure of girl bare to buttocks.

Fuss over cut of Suzie's skirt, which Times informed Paramount was too high, boiled when Herb Steinberg, studio pub-ad chief, cancelled out of the Times a 77-inch ad to herald the pic's local general release. Steinberg has asked Duke Wales of the Assn. of Motion Picture Producers to press protest with paper. Steinberg's contention is that ad copy approved by industry's advertising code should not be subjected to further approval by newspapers or magazines. Pointing up inconsistency of Times' policy is fact it didn't seek to alter Suzie's skirt until the last two weeks of the film's first-run engagement at the Chinese. Moreover, Times-owned afternoon, Mirror, ran big display ad which its parent frowned on.

Sol A. Schwartz is accelerating his move into the Hollywood reins at Columbia Pictures studio at suggestion both of incumbent production head, Sam Briskin, and homeoffice president Abe Schneider. Former RKO Theatres prez, who resigned to become veep of Col and to move into the production end, heads for the Coast this weekend for a two-month stay, and coincidentally to acquire a house. His wife, Marian, meantime will be disposing of their longtime Central Park West (Manhattan) apartment.

Theory of the acceleration is geared to the peculiarities of the Hollywood scene which, because of one outgoing and one incoming production topper, seems stalled on the proposition as to whom to approach on making deals and the like. In actuality, both can make deals although eventually Schwartz will assume complete charge and Briskin will continue as a Col veepee on a consultancy basis. As is generally known, the veteran producer (Briskin) has long been ailing and desirous of unloading the studio responsibility.

Universal's Quarterly Dip to $1.09

Helps That Shearson, Hammill Newsletter Forecasts Bullish 1961 on Eve of Owners' Meeting

Universal's fiscal first quarter dip (to $1.09 a share versus the year-ago $2.03 quarterly payoff shouldn't lull anyone into a false sense of pessimism, current Shearson, Hammill & Co. newsletter advises. The broker sees U in an early return to its hotsy '59-'60 form, and figures that "with any luck" parent Decca Records' 1961 earnings could duplicate or top last year's peak $4.29 a share.

The film company couldn't be happier, since the forecast was potent ammo for management at yesterday's (Tues.) stockholders' meeting.

The analysis (dated April 4) makes a particularly salient point when it notes that U's price-earnings ratio favors investors more than other film stocks. U and Decca shares go for around ten times current earnings, whereas other picture issues are selling at multiples of at least 12 times current profits.

Dismissing U's first quarter retreat, the securities firm finds that "the market does not yet fully reflect the dramatic transformation that has taken place in the company's affairs in the past two years and that the stock therefore still appears to have considerable capital gains possibilities."

(At close of trading last Friday (7), U was 54⅞, Decca 43. Last Wednesday (12), it was U 52⅞, Decca 43⅛. On March 30: U 46½, Decca 37⅝.)

Vaulties Figure

A hard look at U's release schedule for this and next year is enough to convince Shearson, but sweetening the outlook is the expectation of post-'48 sell-offs. U has 327 never-on-tv pix in the vault, and Shearson figures they could fetch as much as $30,000,000, equivalent to $19 a share. Further point is that while U peddled its pre-'48s to tele via Screen Gems, company plans to dispose of the newer merchandise for homescreen via its own apparatus, making for a tidy middle-man saving.

Surveying U's '61 release slate, Shearson looks for "Grass Is Greener" and "Great Impostor" to bag hefty returns, and is keen on "Secret Ways," "Romanoff and Juliet," "Last Sunset," "Tammy Tell Me True," "Come September" and the "Back Street" remake. Shearson figures "at least three of these pictures have the ingredients to become" big boxoffice—but it doesn't specify which three.

Part of U's first quarter stumble owed to the "Spartacus" disappointment, but the anlysis is still bullish on the Bryna hard-ticketer. It's seen not contributing to U earnings until 1963, and while not up to pre-release expectations so far, Shearson still rates it "a very successful picture" that could be as important to U eventually as "Ten Commandments" was to Par.

Shearson seems pleased that U's accounting treatment of "Spartacus" is the "conservative cost-recovery method"—application of income after distribution to the cost of the film itself until complete recoup of investment. This, of course, explains why "Spartacus" won't figure in U earnings until '63 at the earliest.

In assessing U's '61-'62 slate, and finding it lush with potential big moneymakers, Shearson points out that U's fancy performance last year was accomplished principally on the strength of but three h.o. clicks—"Pillow Talk," "Operation Petticoat" and "Portrait in Black." Hence, on paper, the '61-'62 collections from more than twice the number of powerhouse pix figures to launch the U-Decca structure into its greatest prosperity yet. Add the post-'48 boodle, if and when—and Shearson thinks the selloff is in view—and the Wall Street optimism seems, if anything, modest.

Pro Footballer and Exhib Stautner Into Bowling

Albany, April 11.

Ernie Stautner, defensive lineman for the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Professional Football League and co-owner of the Sara-Pla Drive-In, between Saranac Lake and Lake Placid, will expand his business activities by building a 16-lane bowling establishment in that Adirondack Mountain area.

Stautner, a winter resident of suburban East Greenbush and also salesman for an Albany food broker, will have as partners in the $200,000 kegling project, Ed Hoffman (a brother-in-law) and Bob Rice. He and Hoffman have conducted the North Country automobiler for 11 seasons.

The 35-year-old Stautner, who participated in eight National Football League All-Star games and has suffered numerous injuries, first played football with Vincentian Institute in Albany.

20TH QUARTERLY BOOKINGS RISE

By VINCENT CANBY

Twentieth-Fox's sales department racked up 12,000 more domestic bookings in the first quarter of 1961 than were brought in during the comparable period last year. The 15% increase in bookings, which were accompanied by a smaller but still important percentage rise in revenues, was accomplished despite the fact the company's first quarter product this year was not of a calibre equal to that offered in the first 1960 period.

According to a 20th exec, the 1961 increase must in large measure be testimony to the effectiveness of general sales manager Glenn Norris' revamping of the company's autonomous branch system six months ago. At that time, Norris set up what he calls his "sales cabinet," to facilitate liaison between the field and the home office. Five former branch managers (Abe Dickstein, Bob Conn, Tom McCleaster, Pete Myers and Clayton Pantages) were given general geographic areas of responsibility, with a schedule that provided that they would divide their time almost equally between the field and N.Y.

Local Thinking Helps

The result, according to a 20th exec, has been an increased flow of useful information, in both to and from the homeoffice. It would also seem obvious—from the first 1961 quarter results—that the branch men are selling with vigor.

Another concrete result of the "cabinet" setup, it's said, is that now, for the first time in the company's history, the field people are directly participating in decisions pertaining to studio production.

According to the plan, branch men may be sounded, out on a potential film property, along with probable budget, cast, etc., and asked to estimate what such a property might "sanely" be expected to gross in their territories. Data is gathered by members of the sales cabinet who, in turn, pass the word onto the production people. Nobody would say that the branch managers are runing the studio by any means, but it's felt that now the guys who sell the product at least have a voice in the production councils.

Company's recent decision to return to the original "The Hustler" title for Robert Rossen's presently shooting pic, known for a while as "Sin of Angels," was described as a direct result of branch participation in h.o. affairs. Branch manager, were asked to test the two titles on their major exhibitor clients as well as to give their own opinion.

Branch managers also are going to be asked to test two more titles shortly. The first is for the recently completed Peter Sellers starrer, a film adaptation of the Marcel Pagnol play, "Topaze." Picture was called "Mr. Topaze" all during production, but now there's a move on to switch to "I Like Money."

Upcoming Debbie Reynolds starrer also will be tested. Originally called "Star of The West," pic was changed to "The Calico Sheriff," and may go to just "Calico." Also suggested is "Never Let Her Go." Presently the sales cabinet leans toward "Mr. Topaze" for the first pic and "Calico" for the second. However, before the sales cabinet passes on its recommendations, they'll get branch thinking on the matter.

NTA Enters Toll-TV Sweepstakes With New 'Cheaper' Wired System

Hollywood, April 11.

Competition for a place in the feevee sun (when and if it should warm the public's fancy) grew hotter last week with a demonstration of the see-now-pay later system developed by Home Entertainment Co. The system is the third now actively seeking a market in this country. It is tied-in with National Telefilm Associates, in which National Theatres & Television holds a 38% interest.

Home Entertainment's system is similar to Paramount-owned International Telemeter, which has been operational for more than a year in West Toronto. Both employ the principle of closed-circuit wire transmission, whereas the Phonevision System, to be tested again soon by RKO-General-Zenith in Hartford, Conn., uses over-the-air scrambled image transmission.

Press demonstration of Home Entertainment staged at the Glen Glenn Studio went off smoothly. To non-technical observers the end-result, that is the viewing of programs bought by viewers, matched earlier demonstrations here by Telemeter.

On the relative economic aspects of the rival systems, claims of advantages for Home Entertainment were made by Oliver A. Unger, president and board chairman of NTA; Martin Leeds, president of HEC, and the system's developer; H. W. Sargent, electronics engineer. Leeds, who owns 25% of the company, claimed the system costs 50% less to manufacture, 70% less to install, and 70% less to maintain than do completing methods of feevee.

NTA has contracted with Home Entertainment Co. Inc. for rights to manufacture and license the equipment for the Home system.

Meter Outside The House

Unlike Telemeter, which features a coin-in-the-slot opreation on the customers' receiver, the H. E. unit employs a telephone-jack meter outside the house which records charges on a credit billing to be collected monthly by a "meterman."

Program costs are registered when the viewer punches a button on a channel selector, which sends an impulse to the master control box that indicates what program he wishes to watch. There are two programming channels and an additional "preview" channel which appraises the customer as to what is available.

Leeds said the master control, which looks like a small hi-fi tuner, costs about $600. He stated that the nearest other system control box costs $36,000.

The subscriber's complete cost is $40 for instal'ation of both the selector and meter, which attach to existing tv antenna. The whole thing works via cable, which Leeds said would be installed by the telephone company and rented to franchisers who would bear these charges. So far as could be determined, no formal contract exists for assistance by American Telephone & Telegraph Co. or its Bell affiliates.

Program charge could vary, it was said, from about 15c a kiddie cartoon hour or women's fashion show to $1.50 for a feature.

Subscribers with more than one set could either watch the same show on all sets at no additional cost or view separates shows at their respective rates.

The two channels operate on unused channels, so there is no interfence with existing free-tv.

Average programming for a full day of pay-tv, going on the basis of the demonstration, could cost customer approximately $2.90.

There is to be a minimum service charge of $1 per month, per subscriber whether he uses it or not, but he can go as far as 128 program changes on any one channel before the selection and billing card is exhausted. On special occasions, such as the recent Patterson-Johansson fight, Leeds suggested a charge of $3, comparing this with the $6.50 ticket and $2 parking fees ($8.50 total) which many theatres had for the closed-circuit sessions.

All programming would be in color Unger asserted. He pointed out a particular advantage is the unit's ability to send color programs over the cable with the true 500 lines of resolution, which he said is a much better definition than can be secured by over-the-air transmission.

Unger admitted NTA has an investment of some kind in the new system, but said it is owned entirely by Home Entertainment. NTA's chief connection will be as sole distributor, and the company will also function in much of the programming.

Asked if there were any franchisers so far, Leeds said there were "several in negotiation" but declined to name any definite deal.

Tele's 'Show Girl' Avers Big Impact

International Telemeter tacked on four extra performances of "Show Girl" this week for its West Toronto (Etobicoke) payvee clients.

After initial "live" performance from the stage of the Eugene O'Neill Theatre, N.Y., taped reprises of the Carol Channing revue ran all last week as [illegible], at a $1.50 per set tab. A Telemeter spokesman in Manhattan said numerous phone calls praising show and urging it continue—in many cases callers said they wanted to invite friends over to see it—resulted in the extension.

Program attracted beaucoup press coverage, in N.Y., Toronto and elsewhere, and nearly all of it favorable. Telemeter execs were especially cheered because offering rated treatment from several drama critics, including Christian Science Monitor's John Beaufort, whose review was frontpaged. Drama eds Jack Gaver, UPI, and William Glover of AP, also covered.

Shipley Estate Suit; Grandnephew Says Sec'y Ought to Explain $250,000

Hollywood, April 11.

W. E. Austin, grandnephew of late Salt Lake City theatre exec William E. Shipley, has filed suit in L.A. Superior Court against Percy Peterson, former secretary to Shipley, for accounting of $250,000 in assets amassed by Shipley, who died last July 31.

Suit alleges Peterson induced Shipley to sign over his property before death. No will was left. In absence of same, Austin states in suit Mrs. De Lilla Austin, his mother, and aunt Mrs. Helen Rafferty legally are entitled to estate.

Austin also is administrator of Shipley's estate.

London, April 4.

A wet, cold Easter weekend provided a welcome fillip to West End firstruns and results for the past stanza were, in the main, well above average for time of the year. Surprisingly there were comparatively few newcomers and the strength of the deluxers was largely reflected in the stamina of the longtime holdovers.

"Ben-Hur," for example, was around $20,000 in 67th Empire week, while "South Pacific" was over $15,700 in its 155th round at the Dominion.

Trade is back to normal this canto after three successive torrid weeks. There isn't a fresh entry on hand currently as the holdovers continue to sit tight. Heftiest grossers are the hard-ticket duo, "Spartacus" in fourth round at the Mann and "Exodus" in 11th at the Academy.

"101 Dalmatians" remains socko in third session at Lyric and is also doing boff biz at the Riviera in St. Paul. Third round of "Pepe" likewise shapes tall at State. "Alamo," surrendering after a month's run at Orpheum, appears only so-so. "Cimarron" continues good in first extra stanza. "All Hands on Deck" shapes slow in third at St. Louis Park. N.Y. Boff; 'Priest' Lofty 39G, 'Exodus' New High 68G, 'Prof.' 190G, 'Impostor' $45,000, 'Sat. Night' Hits B.O. Height

Although obviously business is down somewhat at many first-run Broadway theatres in the current session as compared with the booming Easter Week, the thing that is amazing many exhibitors is the way trade has held up even starting with last Monday (10). And some theatre weeks which concluded yesterday (Tues.) actually will top the previous stanza because taking in so much of the holiday period when students were out of school.

Main impact is the Music Hall, with its annual Easter stageshow and "Absent-Minded Professor" although it is down considerably from the mammoth third round. The present session (4th) winding today looks like wham $190,000 while the third was $221,514, near the record Easter Week registered last year by "Don't Eat the Daisies." The week also will see "Exodus" heading for a new all-time mark of $68,000 at the Warner in its 17th session, under a film policy.

"Hoodlum Priest" wound its initial week last Saturday (8) with a great $38,500 at the Astor. "Great Impostor" held with a smash $45,000 in second session day-dating the Palace and arty Trans-Lux 85th Street. "Raisin in the Sun" hit a boff $41,500, also in second, day-dating the Forum and arty Trans-Lux 52d Street.

"One-Eyed Jacks" looms smash $60,000 in first holdover stanza at the Capitol. "All Hands on Deck" is heading for a fair $30,000 in second session at the Paramount.

"All in Night's Work" shapes nice $32,000 in third round day-dating the Victoria and the arty Normandie. It is topping the second week at the Vic.

"Pepe," now on continuous-run, pushed to a great $38,000 in the 16th stanza at the Criterion, ahead of the 15th week. "King and I," also now continuous, looks like fine $17,500 in current (3d) week at the Rivoli.

"Ben-Hur" still is big with $31,500 in 72d session at the State. "Spartacus," also on hard-ticket, is held with a lofty $25,000 in current (27th) round at the DeMille.

Standout new arty is "Saturday Night and Sunday Morning," which hit a new record of $19,821 in its first week at the Baronet. This beats the old mark held by "Psycho" by a few hundred dollars.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,094; 75-$2)— "Hoodlum Priest" (UA) (2d wk). Initial week ended Saturday (8) soared to great $38,500. Looks in for run.

New 'Texas Money' Production Setup; Technicians From Non-IA Source?

San Antonio, April 11.

Plans for making a feature motion picture in San Antonio and another on the San Jacinto battlefield near Houston were revealed here by Jack Vance, former Hollywood producer who heads Big Four Films.

The company has just opened an office here and has optioned 1,000 acres of land near Seguin, Tex., for studios. Vance, associated with Holbrook Todd in the firm, says the enterprise will be financed with "Texas money." It will employ a substantial part of its crews through the Television Artists and Crafts Guild, a newly organized union of which T. Mack Reynolds, local photographer, is prez.

"By making pictures in Texas instead of Hollywood we can save 25 to 30% of the cost," Vance said.

Even at this rate, the San Jacinto pic, titled "The Birth of Texas," is expected to cost $6,500,0000, Vance said. It will deal with Sam Houston's career and the Texas Revolution, up to and including the final battle. Vance said he is negotiating with several top stars to play leads in the film.

The local pic, to be started before the San Jacinto picture, will deal with problems of drug addiction, Vance said. He indicated actual work will start in May or June, using the San Antonio River as an important background element.

Vance also plans to produce short television films. In the advanced planning stage is a pilot film for a series starring Phil Medlin, Guadalupe County's singing sheriff, in the role of "Silent Smith," the officer who cleaned up Abilene, Kans., with his fists in the trail driving days.

State Park Okay, If—

Austin, Tex., April 11.

Texas State Senate gave the Board of Control authority to enter into a contract with a film company for making a motion picture at San Jacinto Battleground. It's state property.

William J. Burke, executive director of the Board of Control, said "We would have to have suitable compensation for the state, of course."

HIGH-UPPERS IN FILMS

Pentagon Okays Joe Walker and Bob White Casting

Hollywood, April 11.

Joe Walker, who broke the altitude record when his X-15 soared 32 miles above the earth into the fringes of space, has been given permission by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the U.S. Air Force to appear in Essex Productions' "X-15," which United Artists will release.

Major Bob White, Air Force pilot, also will appear in film. White was similarly recently headlined for his 2,905 m.p.h. speed record in an X-15.

Rackmil: Sale Of U Residuals When Time Ripe

When the money and time are right, Universal Pictures "will do something" about leasing its post-1948 product to television, prexy Milton R. Rackmil told the annual stockholders meeting in New York yesterday (Tues.). However, Rackmil emphasized, U has no intention of leasing to tv any films made since 1956.

The prexy also said that the company is now in process of making arrangements for leasing for the first time its pre-1948 feature library abroad. Domestic sales of the pre-1948s are handled by Screen Gems. When the post-1948s go on the market, he said, they'll be offered in the same "package" fashion as the pre-1948s were offered.

Annual meeting, a quiet and orderly affair, also saw the reelection of all incumbent directors.

Pressed by several holders as to why the company's dividends weren't higher, considering the fine earnings of the company in the last several years, Rackmil replied that U still has a big bank debt to be erased. Also, he said, the company has $38,000,000 presently tied up in inventory of unreleased product — the biggest in U's history. Prexy took this occasion to point out that in 1960 U registered the highest profit in its history, also higher than any other film company last year. (Earnings figures were announced some time ago.)

Rackmil expressed himself as being very high on boxoffice potential of the inventory, and said that its current roadshow pic, "Spartacus," "will no doubt earn a lot of money for us."

In reply to a question re U's attitude toward tollvision, prexy said simply that if any market develops which uses feature films, "we'll be a part of that market."

Another holder expressed the thought that the company's stock option plan ought to be widened to include more execs and thus encourage younger management talent to stick with the company. Rackmil answered that such a plan was being considered, but pointed out that his own stock option plan had been approved by the parent Decca Corp. Decca's anni meeting, in the afternoon, followed the morning U meet.

President told the U holders that its Rock Hudson-Gina Lollobrigida starrer, "Come September," was set to open at Radio City Music Hall Aug. 11. Holders approved appointment of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. as public auditors.

Reelected directors include Preston Davis, Albert A. Garthwaite, John J. O'Connor, Rackmil, Budd Rogers, Harold L. Thorp and Sam H. Vallance.

METRO WINS 'TARZAN' ESTATE LITIGATION

Hollywood, April 11.

Metro has won the suit filed by Edgar Rice Burroughs Inc., for $1,500,000 for alleged breach of contract involving remake of "Tarzan the Ape Man" in 1959. Action had been on Superior Court calendar since Nov. 25 last.

Burroughs Inc. charged violation of agreement with Metro dated April 15, 1931, when film rights to "Tarzan the Ape Man" were sold. Pic was first made in 1932.

Plaintiff alleged second pic changed original characterization which Metro denied. Judge Frank S. Balthis, after screening both films, sustained defendants' demurrer without leave to amend. In effect, this means no breaches in portrayal of Tarzan character were made in remake.

Harry Swertlow was counsel for Metro.

HARRIET PARSONS' RETURN

First Feature Since '54 Concerns A Psychoanalyst

Hollywood, April 11.

Harriet Parsons will return to motion picture production with "I Married a Psychiatrist," new novel by Frances Spatz Leighton detailing the life of Louise Pfister, wife of a psychoanalyst. Story, written in light comedy vein, will be treated by Miss Parsons as such in her production. She expects to have a script completed within the next 30 days.

Project marks producer's first screen work since "Susan Slept Here," which she made for RKO in 1954. She also produced "The Rake of the Belt" last year on Broadway.

Bishop Biffs Boyd's Beatniks; Episcopal Priest Exits Chaplaincy

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

News that the Episcopal Bishop of Colorado, James S. Minnis, had criticized Father Malcolm Boyd, and that the latter had resigned his college chaplaincy last week at Colorado State College in Fort Collins will be of much interest to show business, from whose ranks Mal Boyd comes. Prior to taking holy orders he had been an active and fairly high status executive for such theatrical organizations as PRB Productions (P for Mary Pickford, R for Charles (Buddy) Rogers and B for Mal Boyd).

No mousey Christian has been Boyd. He is an opinionated as Alexander Woollcott, and with some of the latter's powers of articulation. Because of this twofold talent, things to say and the skill to say them, Boyd was much in demand for interviews whenever he visited New York, as recently. He was then on nearly half a dozen radio and television programs in Manhattan.

Taking the High Church position within the Episcopal family, Boyd was a great believer in the need to re-think and preaching of the gospel in language that younger Americans would respond to. He had never hesitated to attack the sleazy "religion" presented on the screen as an excuse for stopping off at the orgy or the ladies' Turkish baths on the way to the last-reel conversion. For some years Boyd has been, by invitation of VARIETY, a contributor to the Anniversary issues.

Bishop Minnis' peeve against the enterprising and free-wheeling chaplain took the form of a generalized attack on "beatniks" whom he charged with not washing, not shaving and developing a sloppy mode of dress. He seemed to object to Boyd not minding this and going among beatniks to offer spiritual guidance in espresso coffee joints or even within sound of the jazz tom-toms. Bishop slashed at "puny minds of modern intellectuals."

Taking the bishop's chastisement of him as a vote of no-confidence, Father Boyd resigned without anger but in recognition of a fundamental difference as to the methods of Christian evangelism in the 1960s.

There was, said the priest, no question of his having heard formal confessions or granted absolution in taverns, as the Bishop charged. He readily conceded going beyond church buildings to offer counselling. Nor would he ever allow bongo drums in the sanctuary of the church itself.

The Colorado episode may well draw a battle line within the Episcopal hierarchy. Apparently the local bishop always has considerable power but so do the local parishes who divide by some mysterious chemistry of their own into High, Middle and Low liturgical practices. The Boyd case is piquant because he stands both as High Church, using the Catholic title of "Father," advocating confession, et cetra, while at the same time charged with a too-friendly attitude toward what he terms "outgroups" (and the bishop terms "beatniks") who cannot be contacted in church until first persuaded to attend church.

Boyd has been an outspoken critic of excess of status among clergymen, and of an ecclesiastical dignity that does not permit knowing people in their regular habitat. Also a strong opponent of any form of exclusion by virtue of cultural, religious or racial background, Boyd has apparently managed to upset some of his brethren in the Rocky Mountain area.

Show business will be watching his subsequent career with sympathetic interest.

RISING HUNTER BUDGETS

'Leitzel' Tops $4,000,000 of 'Flower Drum Song'

Hollywood, April 11.

Ross Hunter, currently producing "Flower Drum Song" for Universal on a $4,000,000 budget, will top this figure for "The Lillian Leitzel Story," also for U release, according to producer.

He made "Pillow Talk" for U last year for $1,600,000.

WB Outbids 20th On 'Critic's Choice' With Bob Hope

Hollywood, April 11.

Twentieth-Fox's publicity department was somewhat overanxious when it announced March 30 that the company had secured a package comprising Bob Hope, as star, and the Broadway play, "Critic's Choice," as a vehicle, for an upcoming film. Warners now has it.

When 20th made the announcement, the company was apparently close to a deal. Later, however, a hitch developed in negotiations and Warners slightly outbid and got the package. Here's the genesis:

Ingo Preminger was agenting film rights to the play. He asked Hope to eye the legit production. Hope liked it, as well as the idea of doing the critic role in the pic. So Preminger and Hope's agent, Louis Shurr, made it a package with Hope to get a percentage of the film.

Talks started at all the studios, reached a near-climax at 20th, then came the hitch. According to Preminger, he told 20th production chief Bob Goldstein last week that he had other pressing offers and got Goldstein "to give me a release from any promises that had been made."

Within a short time the Warner deal was firmed up with WB's new production chief, William T. Orr.

Warners has now assigned "Critic's Choice" to Frank P. Rosenberg to produce, as first under Rosenberg's recently inked pact at Warners. According to Preminger,

'Alamo' for Albany Fund

Albany, April 11

Premiere of "Alamo" at the Stanley Warner Strand—when the theatre relights the night of April 18, following a $300,000 modernization project—will be for the benefit of the Variety Club's Camp Thacher. All profits will go to the fund which Tent 9 annually raises to provide free vacations for needy boys at the mountain site.

Last year, the Variety Club raised $15,045 for Camp Thacher, according to Chief Barker G. Brandon Donahue.

D.C. Cultural Centre

should be a spectacularly beautiful building, a thing of splendor where the U.S. President would receive kings and queens and sultans and what-have-you, or whether it should merely be a suitable structure for music, dance, theatre, and other arts.

Stone designed a great hall, stretching in magnificance out over the Potomac River. The greats of the world, when visiting Washington, would be transported by boat from the airport up the Potomac to the Cultural Center. The American President, with millions of dollars in marble and majestic staircases surrounding him, would receive them in the Cultural Center. The hall would connect with the three main units of the Center, the symphony hall, theatre and opera house. The center, in Stone's conception, would house the Inaugural Ball and other major national events.

Including A Penthouse?

Stone has now sprung a new idea, proposing that a penthouse be created on top of the Center to house visiting foreign heads of state.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr. (D-N.J.), the man who worked hardest to get the Cultural Center through Congress and is a trustee of it now, is unimpressed with the need for such elegance.

"I had in mind," he explained, "a comparatively modest multi-purpose auditorium. The Center, under present plans, is far larger than the population of the Washington metropolitan area can reasonably or realisticaly be expected to use. Furthermore, the purpose and function of the Center, as set forth in the present plan, is no longer entirely clear."

Thompson and others are also a little curious about where that $75,000,000 is coming from. Politicians know the Federal government isn't going to put up a dime for the construction.

National Boxoffice Survey

Trade Holds Strongly; 'Exodus' Champ, '101 D's' 2d, 'Jacks' 3d, 'Priest' 4th, 'Pepe' 5th

While there is the usual post-holiday week letdown currently, some pix still are holding remarkably strong this stanza. Result is a generally satisfactory boxoffice picture in many key cities covered by VARIETY, with strong screen fare held mainly responsible.

"Exodus" (UA) for seventh successive week is finishing in No. 1 spot, considerably ahead of its nearest competitor. "101 Dalmatians" (BV) again is winding up second, as a week ago.

"One-Eyed Jacks" (Par), out this week for first time to any extent, is copping third money despite the reserved-seat, come-any-time gimmick, which seems only to have slowed the wicket pace. "Hoodlum Priest" (UA) is winding up fourth, this being the intial week to be in release extensively.

"Pepe" (Col), thriving on continuous-run, again is finishing fifth. "Gone With Wind" (M-G), just getting started, is landing sixth spot though out on reissue for the fourth or fifth times in many keys. "The Alamo" (UA) is taking seventh place.

"All in Night's Work" (Par) is capturing eighth position compared with fourth last week. "Spartacus" (U) is landing ninth money. "Ben-Hur" (M-G) will be 10th. "Cimarron," also from Metro, is finishing 11th while "Never On Sunday" (Lope) rounds out the Top 12. "Suzie Wong" (Par), "All Hands on Deck" (20th), "Sanctuary" (20th) and "League of Gentlemen" (Kings) are the runner-up pix in that order.

"Absent-Minded Professor" (BV) is just getting started on national release but wow at N. Y. Music Hall where a week ago it came near the Easter Week record. It also is giant in K. C. and smash in L. A. "Sins of Rachel Cade" (WB) is mainly fair to slow this round. "Virgin Spring" (Janus) again is collecting nice coin in some four keys after being in listings previously.

"Raisin in Sun" (Col), looms a promising newcomer, being big in N. Y. and fancy in Detroit. "Hippodrome" (Indie) looks giant in Toronto. "Carthage in Flames" (Col) is rated okay in Boston. "White Warrior" (WB), fair in K. C., shapes dull in L. A.

"Great Impostor" (U), high in weekly lists for numerous sessions, shapes socko in N. Y. in two houses and slick in Philly. "Cheaters" (Cont) is good in Washington.

"Ballad of Soldier" (Kings), oke in L. A., is hep in Chi and stout in N. Y. "Operation Eichmann" (AA) is rated okay in Chi. "Entertainer" (Cont) is good in Cincy.

- The lesson is clear: More Playoff, More Profits, Deeper Penetration. And, of course, the key-word in the situation here, there and everywhere is "International."

Theatre of Nations Season Preems With Berlin Opera Production Of 'Moses'; Over 400 in Opera-Ballet

Paris, April 11.

The 5th Theatre of Nations season kicked off Friday night (7) with a gala preem of the Berlin Opera of West Berlin, giving Arnold Schoenberg's opera, "Moses and Aaron." It played the Theatre Des Champs-Elysees that night and then transferred to the home base of the Sarah Bernhardt Theatre for two more shows. Critical welcome for this big-scale opera-ballet was big with solid attendance.

Opera treated the Jewish turning from polytheism to monotheism after the receiving of the 10 Commandments by Moses. More than 400 people participated in this immense show, with a highlight ballet orgy regulated by Dore Hover. Direction was by Gustav-Rudolf Sellner and musical direction by Hermann Scherchen.

Berlin Opera also did four one-act operas and two ballets during their stay, April 7-12. The schedule for this TON season is now complete and runs through July 9 at two theatres, the Sarah Bernhardt and the Vieux Colombier.

Italo-Arg. Film Re World Beaches

Buenos Aires, April 4.

Even Renzo Rossellini, 20-year-old son of the Italian director, is here to start work on the Italo-Argentine coproduction, "World on the Beaches" (El Mundo en las Playas), which Jaime Caboull (Guaranteed Films) and Nord Industrial are shooting. Scenes will be shot on the Mar del Plata, Argentina; Punta del Este, Uruguay; Copacabana in Rio Janeiro and on other Brazilian, Italian, Swedish, French, Japanese and U.S. beaches. This is young Rossellini's first job on a feature pic though he has worked on shorts for films and tele in France and Italy. Angel Zavalia is in charge of the Argentine-produced sequences.

Leopoldo Torre Nilsson also has been working on the Uruguayan East Coast beaches of Punta del Este, Solana del Mar and Piriapolis. He is trying to get his "Summer Skin" (Piel de Verano) completed before leaving for Europe late this month for presentation of his "Hand in the Trap" at Cannes, and to attend the release of the pic in Paris, London and Madrid.

Germany and Argentina are to collaborate on "The Beast in Chains," documenting the Eichmann case, from a script by Isaac Aisemberg. "America di Notte," D'An Fran of Argentina Ital-Carbi of Rome coproduction, will be released by Atlas. This picture is a sequel to "Europe by Night" and shows the major Argentine night spots in Eastmansolor.

Mexico has decided to back out of the Spanish-speaking coproduction and defense of mutual interests pact, agreed on at the Mar del Plata Festival between Spanish, Mexican and Argentine producers. Apparently the Mexican government was irked at not being consulted on this move. The pact was to have been signed at the forthcoming San Sebastian Fest.

A new production unit has been set up to work from Santa Fe Province, called Productora America Nuestra S.A. The first film will be "Flooded," from a story by Mateo Booz, and will be Fernando Birri's (First Foundation of Buenos Aires) featured pic effort.

Paris 1st-Runs, Nabes Operating All Summer Get Special Tax Cut

Paris, April 4.

Film theatres, both first-run and nabes, staying open during July and August, will get a special detaxation boost on grosses from the city of Paris. This was arranged by Jean-Charles Edeline, head of the Federation of French Film Exhibitors, and Alain Griottray, budget controller of Paris.

It is estimated that the reduced taxes will add about $600,000 to the exhib takes with about one-third for nabes and two-thirds for first-runs.

Exhibs are hoping for extension of this sort of tax relief and from national sources, too, to make up for their losses when they were made ineligible for Film Aid handouts. However, the gradual cutting of levies for Aid coffers over the next seven years will also swell the exhib takes.

Kaufman-Lerner End Morris Tie

Rome, April 11.

Henry Kaufman and Eugene Lerner of Kaufman-Lerner Associates, long reps on Continent for William Morris agency in addition to sundry other affiliations of their own, disclose here that their link with the Morris office is coming to an end. Kaufman-Lerner, who had previously declined an offer to sell their own agency and take charge of Morris' Continental operation, added that it planned to expand its current activity to include motion picture production and development of packages for international films and television.

K-L Associates will however handle certain matters for William Morris and number of its clients in Rome pending eventual opening of Morris Agency's new Continental offices.

Talent department of the eight-year-old Kaufman-Lerner outfit, which includes many names, continues in hands of Kaufman and associate Annalena Limentani, while Lerner will be primarily responsible for development of production and allied activities.

Talks with prexy Abe Lastfogel and other Morris execs regarding the amicable dissolution of the association began during Kaufman's last stay in the U.S in November, when the Yank talentry made its decision to open its own offices in Paris and Rome.

Four Top German Distribs Merge Into 2 Major Companies to Slash Overhead, Better Battle Vs. Tele

Berlin, April 4.

The tough business situation of the West German film industry has rarely been so evident as during these weeks. After the financial collapse of Union Film last month, Atlantic, another distrib, has gone into bankruptcy. Loewen-Film, a smaller outfit in Duesseldorf, distrib of Japanese and Republic (U.S.) pix, has announced its liquidation. Berlin producer Hans Oppenheim has withdrawn his pic, "Cellar Children," from Paul Buenger's Stella Film, a Frankfurt distrib.

Another move saw four top German distributing companies joining forces. Neue Film and Pallos, headquartered in Munich and Frankfurt respectively, will continue working on a mutual administrative basis. Prisma (Frankfurt) and Constantin (Munich) have made up a co-distribution major lineup. All efforts aim at reducing expenses and thereby making the distribution of films more profitable. The current situation in the German film industry demands such a step, the distribs say.

The recent revaluation (5%) of the D-Mark by the Federal government is another handicap for the hard-fighting German film industry. It means that the export price for German pix registers a 5% increase while the prices for imported foreign pix are 5% lower. The reason for the R-Mark revaluation was to dampen the German export upward trend and to foster imports. This measure, however, doesn't correspond with the German film's export-import situation.

The German postwar film is one of very few branches in the domestic industry which didn't benefit from the German economical recovery. While other branches flourished, especially as to export, the German film biz' situation moved practically against the general trend, namely considerably stronger import and tougher competition than ever before and a very slowly ground-gaining export.

One of the reasons for the slowly increasing export business stemmed from anti-German resentments during the first postwar years which had to be overcome. While other countries' film industries are given state subventions, the German film industry has to get along without such. Domestically, the high amusement tax is a heavy burden.

The strong tv competition is more and more felt here. Within the last three years, the German film has lost 150 million patrons. Output of feature pix fell from 110 to 95 per annum. The export gross has remained modest

Russo-Norwegian Film On Explorer Nansen

Stockholm, April 4.

The Russian film industry and the Norwegian State-owned Norsk Film are planning a two-hour feature pic about the Norwegian arctic explorer Fridtjof Nansen. Project was suggested by officials in the Russian film industry and now Norwegian writers Odd Bang-Hansen and Sigurd Evensmo have been contracted to write the script.

Planned film is to cover all the more important aspects of Nansen's life. Bang-Hansen and Evensmo have completed the first draft.

Arg. Film Season Paced by U. S. Pix

Buenos Aires, April 4.

The film season has really started here, though the weather is unusually torried for this time of the year and important releases, preceded by big prelim trade showings, succeed each other in rapid succession. Last week, United Artists presented "El Alamo" at the Gran Florida after a 6-month run of "Can-Can" (20th).

Ocean Films had a similar trade showing of "Rocco and His Brothers," the Italian film winning crix plaudits. "El Alamo" was under 14-age-classes by the local censors because of its over-violence.

"The Misfits" (UA) was released at the Gran Rex also last week. Internacional released "Mi Buenos Aires Querido" here and Mar del Plata.

"Psycho" (Par), which opened on March 14 at the Opera, is still holding well there. "Elmer Gantry" (UA) held two weeks in first-run at the Ocean before being moved over to the Renacimiento, where it has held another three weeks.

"Spartacus" (U), which opened at the Broadway on March 24, looks to hold there for many weeks. Although "Pepe" (Col) was launched with well-executed publicity, including Cantinflas' appearance at the Mar del Plata Fest, the picture has disapponted so far.

If 3d British Circuit Folds, Group Of Prods. Would Urge Upped Quota

London, April 4.

Acting on the premise that the maintenance of a third circuit is essential to the prosperity of the British film industry, the Federation of British Film Makers is continuing its investigations following reports that the national circuit may come to an end in the foreseeable future. If necessary, the government may be asked to intervene.

For the time being, however, the Federation and other industry organizations are advising the government, to continue the 30% British film quota. The Films Council will be making its recommendation to the Board of Trade prexy on this question within the next few weeks.

If, however, there is evidence that the third circuit is to become a dead letter, the British Film Makers will ask the government to step up the quota to insure the maximum outlet for native production. There has been a suggestion of a three-part quota for the major circuits with a 40% quota for the Odeon and ABC chains and a 10% quota for the third outlet, giving an average of 30% for the three groups. There is, however, considerable misgiving within the industry on a proposal of this nature because it is felt that it may jeopardize the strength and importance of a third circuit.

The industry believes very strongly that a third circuit outlet is essential to the wellbeing of British and American film makers. But it is recognized that the existing national circuit in the London area at any rate is only worth 50% in rentals of either of the circuits, though the remainder of the country runs more or less parallel with the two majors. But it seems to overlook the importance of the London release and any policy program eventually agreed on within the industry will have to take this into consideration.

For the time being, the film industry is hopeful that this may be resolved within trade circles. But if the position becomes more acute, the FBFM is prepared to take this matter to the government to press for an amendment of the existing Films Act. Any such decision would, of course, take into account the possibility of increased quota production through co-production with Europe. However, that is regarded as being of minor significance for the next year or two at any rate.

In informed industry circles, the view predominates that if the National Circuit goes by the board within the coming year, the producers, with the possible full support of the unions, will press for a substantial increase in the exhibitors screen quota.

Authoritative insiders believe that such an eventuality would lead of a demand for a minimum 45-50% quota for the year beginning in 1962. For the current year, there is an estimate of 96 first features which in reality will probably prove to yield not more than about 80, the same as in the last year or two.

New Union Pacts For Mex Pix Biz

Mexico City, April 4

A total of 16 distributors, including the seven major Hollywood distribs (United Artists, Paramount, Metro, 20th-Fox, Columbia, Warner Bros. and Universal), as well as 133 cinemas, face the prospect of upward revisions of collective work contracts this year. Section One, of the Union of Film Industry Workers, in filing advance notices of intent to strike (as required by law) if demands are not met. It is setting its sights on a 25% general wage hike, plus fringe benefits, with the latter concentrating on overtime pay, more vacations, sick leave benefits and insurance.

This is first time the union will bargain with the government, since a total of 65 houses are under government control via the newly created National Theatre Co. Others are independents.

Majority of the contracts with distributorships, including Peliculas Nacionales, as well as some smaller outfits, expire Aug. 1. However, union leaders have already begun prelim talks with Qurino Ordaz Rocha (of National Theatre Operating) and Blas Lopez Fandos, head of Peliculas Nacionales.

SCREEN ADVERTISING IN 100 ISLAND HOUSES

By AL DINHOFER

San Juan, April 11.

A new form of screen advertising will be introduced in about 100 film houses throughout Puerto Rico in the next two months. "Cine-Revista," described as a weekly moving picture "magazine," is now being produced by the newly formed Viguie-Guastella Corp.

The 10-minute filmed shorts will contain visual jokes, news-features dealing with life and events in Puerto Rico, and miniature documentaries. Technicolor advertising commercials will be interspersed with the "feature" material.

"We believe people here don't mind screen advertising if it is made interesting, or is a source of good, wholesome fun," said Juan Viguie, one of Puerto Rico's top film producers, who is initiating the screen advertising firm. The technique, he said, has proved itself highly successful in Cuba, Mexico, and large cities in South America.

An excellent example, Viguie said, is the favorable response to humorous commercials introduced in local houses recently by Bacardi Rum.

Cine-Revista shorts will be shown initially in about 100 of the islands 150 movie houses. It will be seen in the Metro and Riviera theaters, in Santurce, and in four theaters in Puerto Nuevo. The Cobian chain of 36 movie houses (including most of metropolitan San Juan's first-run houses), is not involved at this tmie because of other contractual agreements for exclusive screen advertising rights in its hard-tops and Drive-ins.

The Viguie-Guastella firm is an adjuct of Viguie Film Productions, Inc., in Hato Rey, which produces the Viguie Newsreels shown in film houses here, as well as in Spanish communities in New York.

Viguie heads the new firm with Roberto and Marino Guastella who until recently directed the Guastello Advertising Co., in Cuba. Other directors of the new firm are Salvador Tio and Manuel Navas.

Attabuoyed by 900, Johnston Cites Maturity of Pix, Sees Censors' End

It was Eric Johnston night Monday (10) at the Waldorf-Astoria, N.Y., cued by his 15th anni in the film business, and the Motion Picture Assn. of America prexy told the elite turnout of 900 that the industry has "grown up" into a "selective medium."

"Television," he said, "is now the medium of the masses. We are making better films, because we have come from the age of the mass-produced picture to the hand-produced picture. We have gone from quantity to quality—and the trip brings us closer to becoming an art form than ever before."

Outpouring of well-wishers ranged from industry nabobs to a diplomatic contingent of eight foreign ambassadors, plus a number of senators and congressmen. Dinner tribute was sponsored by the Council of Motion Picture Organizations.

Johnston received a citation from the Assn of Motion Picture Producers (topper Y. Frank Freeman officiating) hailing his "unique qualities of leadership . . . great creative ability . . . wisdom and steadfast dedication to the best interests of the public," from which has accured "invaluable benefits" to the trade.

Johnston's post-prandial response was garnished with the standard retrospectives, but he used the occasion mainly to assure the industry it was out of the woods prophesied for it with the advent of television. Hence the "selectivity" point. He assessed the industry as having been "completely transformed" in the past dozen years, "and saved from the sad fate the experts so cheerfully thought was in store for it."

He singled out for special progress the area of censorship, which he finds on the run. Fewer states and cities have it today than 15 years ago, he noted. Significantly, his remarks on same included a nod to the "many Davids" (e.g., Ed Kingsley, Joe Burstyn, Jean Goldwurm, et al) as well as the "Goliaths" of the picture business.

He referred to the recent Chicago case (the Times Films "Don Juan" setback) as "a beginning for us—not the end. I predict that [illegible] before another 15 years are gone the Supreme Court will have declared once and for all that no one has the right to censor a motion picture . . . "

Carefully middle-roading, he continued: "We do not try to excuse . . . the escapist pictures which give entertainment and satisfaction to millions of people all over the world. But at the same time we recognize the need to delve deep into the human heart, into human frailties, aspirations and frustrations. In this uncertain world, we must serve the cause of human dignity wherever and wherever it is challenged."

Speech was a high-toned, thoroughly statesmanlike affair replete with biblical allusions and a perhaps fitting amount of euphoria. Typical: "Our feet are not swift to run into mischief—rather, with deliberation do we weigh the consequences of the stories we tell. We shall continue to weigh them."

A portion of the program was an episodic recall of Johnston's life, purveyed in prose and song by Arlene Francis, Howard Keel, Connie Francis, Nancy Kelly, Gordon MacRae, Myron McCormick, Betty Madigan, Terry Saunders, Connie Stevens, Martha Scott and Ray Walston. Mort Sunshine staged it and authored the good script.

Sad note was the absence of dinner co-chairman Russell V. Downing, the Radio City Music Hall topper who's still bedded after surgery. His co-chairman, Walter Frisch, head of the American Congress of Exhibitors, subbed as conferencier for the standard obsequia pro forma and protocol acknowledgments.

J.D. Theme Previews

Hollywood, April 11.

Producer Harold Hecht has set up screenings of his upcoming United Artists release, "The Young Savages," for six civic and social groups locally, similar to sked of multiple previewing now underway in N.Y.

Burt Lancaster-Shelley Winters-Dina Merrill starrer will be shown to California Dept. of Corrections, California Youth Authority, Los Angeles Bar Assn., American Civil Liberties Union, Community Relations Conference and California Teachers Assn. All are interested and work closely to problem of juve delinquency, topic of film.

Same procedure will be followed by producer in all metropolitan cities throughout the country prior to bookings of film.

Houseman Discerns Low TV Level Vs. Widening Theatrical Film Area

John Houseman is high on theatrical filmmaking and low on television. There's new "open territory" in filmmaking, comments the producer of various fields, whereas tv has dropped such productions as "Playhouse 90" and "Seven Lively Arts" in line with "the tendency to go with staples."

Producer Houseman's observation about tv: "When they want every show to be seen by all, the level goes down."

Exec is back in the picture business after three and a half years and much tv and legit production. He said he "likes to only do things where I have fun." He had the fun with such tv'ers as "Playhouse" and "Arts" but the good times ceased as these shows were abandoned. "It is never true that good shows are greeted by eager throngs," he comments.

Houseman, who has a new six-picture deal with Metro, offers that films are getting away "from the Saturday Evening Post story structures and are breaking new ground." (Note here that Saturday Evening Post is undergoing a change in format designed to coincide with public tastes.)

Houseman feels there's a "widening concern in pictures" and suggests the strong grosses of "Ben-Hur" and others of same ilk back up the thought. Whether old stories with bigger production concept or new thematic approaches, it's all the same: films are reaching out.

Court Acquits Theatre Employee in Assault Case

Keene, N.H., April 4.

David P. Currier, 24, former employe of a local theatre, has been acquitted in Cheshire County Superior Court on a charge of assault on another member of the staff at the film house.

It had been charged that Currier hid in a darkened projection booth and assaulted Edwin Bourassa, 21, as the latter entered the booth to begin work.

Accentuate the Foreign Values, But Do 'Em in H'wood: Rackin

Hollywood, April 11.

Greater emphasis on the increasing foreign market was revealed in Paramount Pictures' upcoming plans by production head Martin Rackin, who returned last week from two weeks of European parleys. Casting films with both American and foreign boxoffice names is one aim.

Along these lines, Rackin has optioned Michele Giradon and has been talking with Gerard Blain and Hardy Kruger, European players currently appearing in Howard Hawks' "Hatari," now filming interiors on the lot after returning from African locations. He pointed, as well, to the casting of Margaret Rutherford and Wilfrid Hyde White in Shavelson & Rose's Danny Kaye starrer, "On the Double."

New talent, both on the production and performance end, is also in the future for the studio, Rackin said, revealing that he had talked with several people along these lines during his trip. While no definite commitments were made abroad, a stopover in New York brought a seven-year pact for Joe Hoover, an actor whom the topper has been watching for the past year and a half and whom he signed for an important film debut in Robert Pirosh's "Hell Is for Heroes."

He emphasized the studio's policy to sign players only when there is a definite place for them and noted the success of Stella Stevens, one of only two other players under exclusive Paramount wraps. Miss Stevens currently stars in "Too Late Blues" and "Deadlock." Elaine Devry, who is the other, is making a featured debut in the latter film too.

Instead of going to Europe to make pictures, Rackin revealed the studio's policy will be to bring European ingredients here.

"Appointment in Zahrain," Yul Brynner starrer which Britain's Ronald Neame is producing and directing, is the first example of this policy. A Middle-East story, it will be short entirely in Hollywood, with Britisher Robin Estridge scripting. Similarly, "Mistress of Mellon" and "Stepmother," both European stories, will be shot here with only second units going out for backgrounds to tie them in.

While abroad, Rackin and marketing and story conferences with studio international personnel, among them Richard L. Patterson, mgr.-dir. Paramount British Pictures Ltd.; Howard Harrison, in charge of properties in London; and Paul Flodin, gen. mgr. in Sweden.

Studio Job Analysis

Hollywood, April 11.

First comprehensive analysis of film employes and technicians has been published and released in new Section 4 of Working Rules of the Basic Minimum Agreement of the Assn. of Film Draftsmen, Local 531, Nabet. Prexy Ed Martin is considering placing section on sale because of requests from universities and industry personnel. It's a 72-page printed booklet embracing every phase of organization's conditions for members.

At same time Association has added Unit Publicist to sections of feature film and telefilm technicians covered by basic minimum agreement, similar to those employed by major studios.

Rackmil Cites Chance Of Upped Decca Divvy If Net Pace Continues

Continuation of the current pace of Decca earnings, which is anticipated, would mean a "chance" of an increase from the current 30c quarterly dividend rate, Milton R. Rackmil, president, told stockholders at the company's annual meeting in New York yesterday (Tues.). Chief exec thus held out hope for such melon enhancement, but made no promises.

Rackmil told investors that the 1960 earnings of $5,524,757 ought to be matched in the current year.

Vocal minority holder, John Gilbert, raised objections to an option of 35,000 shares for Rackmil at $31.60 per share but, as expected, the option was approved. A resolution for cumulative voting was defeated, also as expected.

Interesting tradewise quote from Rackmil came as he was asked if Decca-controlled Universal would go again for such a costly film as "Spartacus." He said the studio will tackle any picture which figures to make a profit and will "not be scared by budget." He said, incidentally, that the Decca earnings will derive in part from U's blockbusters in the second calendar half.

Anent Cuba, Rackmil stated U and Decca have no assets in Castroland and no product is being shipped to this territory which used to yield $300.000 annually.

Rackmil and other board members were reelected.

REALITY VS. FICTION

Sales Angle For UA's 'Hoodlum Priest' In Detroit

Detroit, April 11.

"The Hoodlum Priest" (UA) received rave reviews here and its co-producers got plenty of ink in telling the story of how it came to be produced and the problems that were overcome. Feature is in first week at the Michigan and seems headed for a big gross.

While the local press didn't mention it, the reason for Don Murray and Walter Wood being so insistant that the film is based on fact is that some trade papers (not VARIETY) have inferred that the story is mostly fiction.

Murray, who wrote the script, formed a company to produce it along with Wood, and then starred in the film, said scenario is a faithful account of the work done by the Rev. Father Charles Dismas Clark in St. Louis in 1959 in an effort to rehabilitate hoodlums.

Skouras Egypt Party Back

Twentieth-Fox prexy Spyros P. Skouras, veep Joseph Moskowitz and studio chief Robert Goldstein are due back in New York today (Wed.) from their flying, six-day trip to London and Cairo.

Trio left New York last Wednesday (5). Purpose for the Egyptian junket was to hold talks with government officials re possible locations for upcoming "Cleopatra" filming. As now envisioned, most of the pic will be shot in Hollywood, with location work done in Egypt.

regarded director who can pick his own projects and call his own shots, would want to risk the almost inevitable clash of personalities that comes with working on such a project as "La Vie." He calls it a "challenge," and he wants to have had the experince of working on a big budget, big star picture.

He points out, almost casually, that money has never been a principal problem with him. Like many other new wavers, he reportedly had access to considerable private means when he was just starting out. Unlike a number of new wavers, however, he has gone on to firmly establish his rep with a continuity of films, letting friends and family (beet sugar people) off the financing hook.

Principal reason for his visit last week was to screen his newest pic, "Zazie Dans Le Metro," for major company execs and indies, and to talk to Metro toppers about the upcoming BB epic. He's also interested in securing, if possible, major company backing for his next project, "The Singlehander." The latter is a satire on modern escapism, about a well-to-do N.Y. commuter who decides to sail the Atlantic alone, falls in love with a girl in the Azores and, before he hits Morocco, is again fully committed to the life from which he originally tried to escape. Pic would be shot in N.Y., the Azores and Africa, and with real ocean footage—no tank stuff.

"Zazie" is described by Malle as a sort of "modern parable," about a little eight-year-old country girl who comes to Paris on a visit and confounds family, friends and acquaintances by speaking the truth. The end result is a social and political cataclysm. Zazie, he says, is actually the fiery angel visiting Sodom. Thus, he adds, the film may suggest that he actually is a disciple of DeMille. The full import of this remark may only be detected when he subsequently announces with a certain pride that Mad Magazine is the only U.S. periodical to which he subscribes.

The picture, which had an uneven reception in Paris, has been a big hit in Germany. The director thinks that perhaps the Anglo-Saxon mind is more receptive to its mixture of slapstick and social satire than are the Latin French. He's convinced the Americans will love it.

In reference to the critics who objected to this blend of humors in "Zazie," and to split personality of "The Lovers," which started out as social comedy and wound up as an adult valentine to l'amour, Malle says crisply that he doesn't necessarily believe in "unity of style." To him this switching of gears halfway up the hill is a means of illumination of all that has preceded it.

In addition to "Zazie," which hasn't yet been sold for the U.S., Malle has another pic awaiting release here. "Elevator to the Gallows," which Times Film will release under the title of "Frantic."

Repeat Campus Showing Of 'Operation Abolition'

Durham, N. H., April 11.

Another showing of the House Un-American Committee's film, "Operation Abolition," at the U. of New Hampshire here, brought a mixed reaction from some 250 persons, mostly students, who viewed the San Francisco demonstration footage in St. Thomas More Church Hall.

The 40-minute film with soundtrack by Fulton Lewis III was both jeered and applauded. Joseph Jalbert, a Dover business man who was on hand to answer questions regarding the film, said he received worse treatment than when he played a similar role at a previous showing on the same campus.

Meanwhile, in nearby Dover the School Committee agreed to permit the film to be shown at Dover High School.

Prints are made available for New Hampshire showings by the Manchester Union Leader, largest daily newspaper in the state, published by William Loeb. It paid $100 each.

Drama Desk Hashover Of Toll

By EDDIE KALISH

"Broadway and Pay TV—Friends or Foes" was the topic under discussion at recent meeting of the Drama Desk, at the Playbill Restaurant, N. Y. On hand to answer questions of the Desk members and guests was a panel consisting of actress Carol Channing, whose Broadway vehicle "Show Girl," was recently aired via Paramount Telemeter in Etobicoke, Canada; Jean Dalrymple, producer for Telemeter; playwrights Tad Mosel and Paddy Chayefsky; actress Anne Meacham, star of the off-Broadway "Hedda" production which is to be televised; and Marshall Jamison, associate producer and director with Leland Hayward, who is consultant for Phonevision, the Zeneth (Hartford) Pay TV arm of RKO-General.

The pros and cons of pay tv presentation of legit stage shows ranged from plus financial advantages to possible artistic disadvantages. Miss Dalrymple pointed out that pay tv can offer fiscal aid to the theatre since, under the Telemeter system, half of the take on a tv airing goes to the participants of the show. Performers also have a "participation for life" in the tape. She added that "theatre will be reclaiming a lost audience through pay tv" in that the added exposure for a show could stimulate interest. By the same token, there isn't much danger of overexposure, she added, because of the high cost of instituting pay tv (an estimated $500,000,000 to cover New York properly) which is keeping its growth down.

Jamison corroborated by citing the Hartford area, where the RKO-General system is to be tested, added that although some people may stay home to see a legit show on tv, "it won't hurt that much," especially in the case of a smash. In Hartford, he figured the demand for Broadway shows was 75% over the other media and felt that pay tv could serve this situation beneficially.

Miss Meacham expressed the opinion that pay tv would stimulate interest in going to the theatre, even after a show has been seen on tv. There are "two totally different impressions" created she said and allowed that if something was received well over tv, people might want to see it on the stage. Speaking from the performer's point of view, Miss Channing felt that it is beneficial for an actor to "embrace all the media he can" and that pay tv was an aid in this direction. Miss Meacham said that she viewed the performer's role as "to reach" as many people as he can and agreed that pay tv is an asset for this.

Both playwrights Chayefsky and Mosel felt that theatre and tv were entirely different, both conceptually and in practice. Chayefsky felt that there is inherent censorship in tv in terms of "what will go," saying that a stage play "vastly differs" from a tv show. Both men considered the audience to be a big factor in bringing a stage play to tv, in terms of the number of viewers and their reactions to a show.

Miss Dalrymple expressed the hope that pay tv could create a new source for playwrights in the form of an experimental theatre. Mosel said that many of the tv writers of the early tv days were viewing pay tv hopefully for the "old excitement" of doing fresh plays often.

It was generally agreed that the theatre can never fully be duplicated on tv. All expressed the feeling that legit is the most rewarding and exciting area to work in. It was figured that, since tv techniques have to be employed to bring a stage show to the tube, changes in the original would be required to effectively exhibit the show. Miss Dalrymple viewed some of these techniques, such as the use of the closeup and the reproduction of the sound, to be advantageous.

Both "Show Girl" and "Hedda" had some tv intrusions. For the "Show Girl" taping, a tv director was employed to achieve the technical demands of recording the show "live" before a theatre audience. "Hedda" was restaged a bit for its taping in a studio.

The relative merits and demerits of the pay tv experiment are not stopping its progress apparently. Jamison pointed out that Phonevision is planning a 21-hour-a-week programming schedule for the near future and, with "Hedda," Telemeter will be presenting its third legit presentation. "Show Girl" reportedly attracted enough attention to have its run exended a week in Canada and, in another area, Jamison foresaw large-scale progress soon in the field of home receivers with larger screens, to better accommodate pay tv presentation.

Novelist Sloan Wilson Enters Film Production; Favors Writer-Director

Novelist Sloan Wilson ("Man in The Gray Flannel Suit," "Summer Place") and distrib Sig Shore have formed production partnership, Value Productions, to make Wilson's current bestseller, "A Sense of Values." Shore also is prexy of Vitalite Productions, but the new venture will be totally separate.

At a press lunch in New York Monday (10), the partners reported that they hoped to get the pic rolling shortly after the first of the year in Hollywood, and that so far they'd had no discussions anent a major distrib tieup.

Since he'd sold "Flannel" for a fancy price to 20th-Fox and had a percentage deal with Warners on "Summer" that will bring him close to a million dollars, Wilson said he wasn't entering production simply for the financial benefits. Rather, he said, he hoped to be able to supervise production to insure the most honest film adaptation possible from his work. Author said that he'd had only one letter from 20th re planning for "Flannel" and no discussions at all with producer-director Delmer Daves on "Summer," despite fact he'd been hired by Warners to do the script. Though he never talked to Daves, Wilson added that he had had one lunch with Jack Warner.

Novelist also said that there were many things about both films that he'd liked very much. "I'm not entering production with any sense of revenge," he said. Wilson won't do the screenplay, and because he thinks the writing of a film is so closely connected with what the director does, he would like to sign a writer-director to work on "Values." Wilson and Shore have some talent in mind, but they aren't giving out the names for fear that their prices would triple.

TELEVISION'S TORMENTED HOUR

A 6-Point (TV) Guide for Minow

There was no inconsiderable eyebrow raising within the industry over TV Guide's "open letter" to FCC chairman Newton N. Minow this past week in which the Walter Annenberg-owned (Triangle Publications and tv stations) weekly set forth a six-point plan of FCC action to "correct practices which are harmful to television and—more important—harmful to the viewer."

Among other things the Triangle-owned magazine suggests "television violence is making our youth callous and damaging America's image abroad. Despite network pledges to curtail violence, there still is a cumulative impression of violence for the sake of violence on television."

While such credo is concededly commendable, some industryites were quick to point out one major fallacy in Triangle's "image" projection. (Elsewhere TV Guide takes a swipe at the ratings.)

Under the same Annenberg ownership auspices there are six Triangle stations, three of them (in Philadelphia, Lebanon, Pa., and New Haven) with primary ABC affiliations, and two others (Altoona, Pa., an and Binghampton, N. Y.) with dual ABC-CBS affiliation ties. For all of TV Guide's protestations, it's pointed out, there is not a single instance on record where a Triangle station has been known to bump any installment of the high-rated "Untouchables" or other "violence categorized" shows thus sacrificing rating for image building. End of "sentence."

NBC-TV Finds Out What Everybody Knows: Information Shows Don't Pull

Discouraging note was struck at NBC-TV last week: It doesn't seem that the American viewing public wants "informational" (i.e. public affairs) programming, not in any great measure, at any rate.

Network recently compiled a list of the amount of time devoted there to pubaffairs and likewise a tally of the "viewing volume" for such programming. "The magnitude of (the) difference" between the number of programs and the kind of audience they receive, NBC felt, was "quite surprising": 23% of the weekly sked at NBC consists of informational programming, yet only gets 13% of the viewing audience for the network.

The weekly number of quarter hours (including the "Today" program) for information comes to 85 at NBC. And even if only 50% of "Today" were counted as informational, there would still be a disproportionate ratio of broadcast-to-viewing time—18% of the scheduled hours and only 10% of NBC's total viewing volume.

NBC execs take into account "what everybody knows"—that pubaffairs don't usually get a big audience—but the so-called "disproportion" has unsettled them nonetheless. Moreover, the NBC stanzas lately have been grabbing generally higher shares than those of the indies or most rival network pubaffair programming, implying that if the NBC percentages of programming to viewership are "surprisingly" low then they are even worse elsewhere.

In making its study, NBC included (besides "Today") "Continental Classroom," Huntley-Brinkley, daytime news, "Today on the Farm," "Mr. Wizard," "Chet Huntley Reporting," "Meet the Press," "Ask Washington," "Frontiers of Faith," "Nation's Future" and Tuesday specials, last two in prime time, where they don't fare too well either.

You Can't Drive an Art

Being careful about plugs (the station says), WNBC Radio kept its rgular deejay Art Ford from mentioning his second name on the air during the period last week when he did his disk jockeying from a remote booth at the N.Y. Coliseum's annual auto show.

All week long, Ford only mentioned himself by his first name. (There is no word yet whether WNBC, a N.Y. outlet, also prevented airing of any works by Fritz Kreisler.)

New Status For Bannister, Knode

Harry Bannister is relinquishing his veepee stripes at NBC under terms of a new two-year contract he's just signed with the network in which he'll become a fulltime consultant. Succeeding to Bannister's job as veepee in charge of station relations will be Tom Knode.

New designation for Bannister is quite unique since it represents the second contract he's signed since becoming eligible for retirement two years ago. He's now 67. Despite his vet status, network has persuaded him to stay on in the fulltime consultancy capacity by virtue of his intimate ties with the affiliate membership.

Knode is also a longtimer at NBC (except for a two-year hitch in the station rep biz) and for some time has been heading up the day-to-day operation.

Danzig, Gimbel, Others Exit In NBC Cutbacks

Roger Gimbel and George Newell of the NBC-TV daytime program area and Frank Fitzgerald of the NBC-TV sales staff are being released in the general personnel cutback by the network. Also, Jerry Danzig, "Today"-"Tonight" veep, was let go last week.

In addition to this, the web's toppers are mulling whether cuts will be necessary in the program development area, both in N.Y. and Hollywood. The program development area fell under the aegis of Eugene Burr, the vice president who apparently resigned independently of the general cutback that was soon to follow his ankling.

One of the reasons the web is concerned with program development at this point is based on the belief in some network quarters that NBC-TV will, of necessity, have to turn more and more toward outside product. While this wouldn't necessarily eliminate the entire program development, it does allow room for partial retrenchment.

Gimbel is the exec producer for NBC-TV daytime, and, as such, has been responsible for many of the special daytime projects undertaken. Newell is a daytime exec.

Cuts are continuing in other areas—press, clerical and secretarial staffs and in other web departments.

There also seems to be a downbeat of special program sales, the department headed by Friendly before shifting recently to vice-president of NBC-TV program administration. Two weeks ago, Jack Otter took Friendly's special program sales job, but Otter's old position as merely a salesman in that department was not filled. Additionally, Dick Stark is reportedly going, leaving two fewer men to sell entertainment specials. Besides fact that Dick McHugh is concerned basically with the sale

3-WEB STUDY IN HEADACHES, INC.

By GEORGE ROSEN

The economics of programming in full hour form has put an unbelievable strain on the program departments at the three tv networks. At going prices (for the '61-'62 season the 60 minute film entry will average out to about $120,000 per segment) the stakes are so high that nobody can afford to make a mistake. Today even a single mistake is measured in terms of millions through the simple but tormenting process of multiplying $120,000 by 26 (the absolute minimum to which the networks must commit themselves on any hour series). One blunder can send the profits dwindling.

Up until as recently as two seasons ago, when the half-hour show was still the vogue in tv (a carryover from radio) the problem was considerably less acute, in contrast penny-ante. The 30-minute show could be bought for $35,000 or $40,000. If it didn't make it in 13 weeks, the webs could yank it. But today the networks have gone hour-mad. For one thing you can tell a much better story in hour length. But the ramifications of 60-minute film making being what they are, the webs are obliged to commit for at least 26 weeks, production schedules and costs making anything less unfeasible.

And since it's now become necessary to lock in the new season's schedules months ahead of time (the three webs are just about closing up for next September's preem), the gamble is enormous. In fact to the networks it's almost frightening. Sponsor or no sponsor, the webs have no alternative but to firm up their shows—and trust they know what they're doing. It's the judgment of Dave Levy & Co. (NBC) vs. Oscar Katz & Co. (CBS) vs Tom Moore & Co. (ABC), and who's picking 'em best for '61-'62 will be known somewhere around Nov. 1.

With only a one-sixth sponsor commitment (R. J. Reynolds), NBC nonetheless took the $3,000,000 26-week gamble on "87th Precinct"; ditto (one-sixth to P. Lorillard) on "Cain's 100," with similar production coin riding on the latter. In fact ABC locked in the hour "Bus Stop" without any specific orders. And so on down the line. Good or bad, the networks have to live with them at those fancy 120G per week prices and trust that they're good enough to attract the remaining sponsorship coin.

What happens when they aren't was all too evident this season on a variety of hour fronts, as for example NBC taking the rap on such costly wrong-guesses as "Don Raven" and "Michael Shayne." The Sunday night Shirley Temple series on the same web may well tote up to one of the most costly program blunders in recent years. With a weekly production nut of well over $100,000, it never got off the ground. Yet by virtue of a

CBS-TV's Whopping $60,000,000 Sunday Billings (Day & Night) With SRO Status From 3 P.M. On

Kiss & Tape Up

Somewhat over a year ago, CBS-TV's "Person to Person" did an at-home visit with vidpix star Efrem Zimbalist Jr. and his wife. Interview was set to go on at the time, but three days after the taping Zimbalist and his wife quarreled and separated, and the segment was yanked from the "P to P" schedule and shelved.

Network this week was whipping into final form its summer schedule of 13 "Person to Person" shows—eight of them never shown and five repeats—when it got a letter from Zimbalist's pressagent on the Coast. Letter reminded the network of the taping and stated that the Zimbalists have reconciled and that he'd like a print of the segment for his private use. CBS went him one better — it immediately slapped the unshown Zimbalist show on the summer schedule.

It wasn't very long ago that Sunday afternoon was referred to as tv's "intellectual ghetto." Now, at least insofar as CBS-TV is concerned, it's neither intellectual nor a ghetto. It's just lucrative.

So lucrative, in fact, that CBS' combined daytime-nighttime billings for Sundays next fall will run to more than $60,000,000 on an annual basis. That's an alltime high for television for a single day of the week, and made possible only through the fact that the network is now SRO from 3 p.m. to 11:15 p.m. with the exception of a single alternate-week half-hour, and that in prime time.

The sole unsold piece of time is at 6:30-7, half of the "Mr. Ed" series (see separate story, and that isn't likely to remain unsold for long, having been just brought into the house. Otherwise, it's SRO straight down the line, $60,000,000 worth.

That unprecedented commercial lineup starts at 3 with pro football, already SRO via national sponsorship deals for a quarter each with Ford and Marlboro and regional renewals from virtually every previous sponsor, with a waiting line besides. When the grid season's over, "Sunday Sports Spectacular" takes over till baseball time, and that achieved SRO this year and will likely repeat next winter.

Football carries till 5. Then comes "Original Amateur Hour," which Pharmaceuticals has renewed for another year, followed at 5:30 by "College Quiz Bowl," with General Electric back for another go-round. At 6, Prudential's back with "Twentieth Century," followed at 6:30 by Studebaker-Lark and its half of "Mr. Ed." At 7, Campbell Soups returns with "Lassie"; at 8:30, Kellogg and Best Foods ditto with "Dennis the Menace."

Ed Sullivan has Revlon and Lorillard to alternate with Colgate at 8-9; GE will be back with "GE Theatre" at 9; ditto State Farm and Lever with Jack Benny at 9:30. "Candid Camera" is set with Lever and Bristol-Myers at 10, and "What's My Line?" with Kellogg and Allstate at 10:30. "Sunday News Special," with Whitehall and Carter Products, wraps it up at 11.

A couple of key moves in the past three weeks were responsible for the web's unprecedented Sabbath business. One was the Prudential renewal, after the company had walked away from both "Twentieth Century" and CBS with a

Has L & M Found The Secret That Unlocks Rating?

The more than $12,000,000 that Liggett & Myers via McCann-Erickson pulled out of ABC-TV in disagreements over the web's rescheduling for the coming season has finally been resettled at CBS-TV and NBC-TV.

More than $11,000,000 in L&M coin is going to CBS (including an alternate half-hour renewal of "Gunsmoke" through Dancer, Fitzgerald, Sample), with another $5,000,000 to NBC.

ABC pullout involved "Untouchables," "Adventures in Paradise," "Asphalt Jungle" in the web's hours and the half-hour "Rebel." L&M has additionally dropped the $1,500,000 daytime buy of ABC college football (cig firm sponsored a fourth of last fall's games).

"Untouchables" was cancelled in the wake of a threatened boycott of sponsor products by American-Italian groups. Situation has since been resolved and L&M will continue the show through its 52-week commitment, dropping renewal when the show moves from 9:30 to 10 p.m. with the new season.

L&M's new lineup on CBS includes an alternate hour of "Checkmate," which the network is moving from Saturday to Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.; an alternate half of the Friday night "Twilight Zone" and the "Gunsmoke" return.

At NBC, L&M is buying an alternate half of the new gumshoe hour, "87th Precinct," and two minutes a week in the new Thursday night entry, "Dr. Kildare," also an hour show.

In the ABC unloading, L&M had learned of the possible shift of "Untouchables" last November. ABC's strategy was to open up a hot half-hour between the hit com-

NBC Pacts Fred Coe For Selznick Series

Vet tv drama producer Fred Coe has been signed by NBC to produce the eight, live, color adaptions of Selznick feature films slated for next season.

The specials, to be bankrolled by American Gas Association via Lennen & Newell agency, will mark Coe's return to NBC where he was a staff producer of tv plays for more than a decade.

'Mr. Ed' Gets Sun. CBS-TV 6:30 Slot

"Mr. Ed," the Alan Young-starring comedy series about a talking horse, will switch from national spot exposure to network status in the fall. Studebaker-Lark, which is sponsoring the Filmways series in some 120 markets, will shift it to CBS-TV's Sunday at 6:30 timeslot and assume alternate-week sponsorship of the series on the web.

Deal, engineered via the D'Arcy agency, marks the first time a vidpix series has been moved from syndication to network status. It involves a cancellation of local station contracts by the sponsor and by Filmways in time for a September or October starting date on CBS-TV.

The deal also closes out the CBS-TV Sunday lineup. With "Twentieth Century" renewed by Prudential but moving down to the 6-6:30 Sunday period, that opened up 6:30-7. But not for long, with "Mr. Ed" moving in quickly as "Lassie's" new leadin.

NBC-TV's 615G for Pro Grid Plum But Will Clients Go for Heavy Tab?

Ford has already come in with an order for a quarter of the National Football League championships on NBC-TV next fall, and network sources say that the automotive house is meeting the demand for a full quarter share of the full price—a record-breaking $850,000 for time, game rights, special remote charges and "administrative overhead." However, while there are several other interested bankrollers backed up at NBC's door, there is some doubt how many of them are willing to meet their proportionate shares of the NBC price tag.

Ford move followed closely on the heels of the NBC signing with NFL boss Pete Rozelle for the championship pro games in '61 and '62, for which the web will be paying $615,002 each time. (For each of the last five years, NBC only paid $200,000.)

Originally, NBC brass refused to exceed a bid of $500,000 for the rights to the pro championship game, but a few significant things occurred to them later that obviously brought about a change of heart and the willingness to shell out another $115,000 per annum.

(1) Tom Gallery, head of NBC sports, reportedly went to see network prexy Bob Kintner and explained that if the web didn't want to disenfranchise itself further in the area of major sports events, a higher bid must be in order.

(2) The $615,002 winning bid frustrated, if only temporarily, CBS-TV's high hopes of selling Ford and the other interested parties a package consisting of some 18 regular season games in the NFL—although now Ford looks interested in the regular season games as well. A final decision there must remain until it's established just how many games CBS will have, which leads to the next point.

(3) By overbidding, NBC might have spoiled CBS' chances to get all 14 teams in the league tied to its tv lineup. This season, NBC has the Baltimore and Pittsburgh team games. Rozelle wants to bring all the teams under one broadcast banner to prevent what he feels are the financial inequities of individual team negotiation. Because of Rozelle's support for the one web plan, it does look as though CBS will get the regular season games, but it's still not certain. Not so incidentally, the price of the regular NFL games will probably go too—to about two-and-a-

CBS-TV Firms Up Its Summer Sked

CBS-TV this week firmed up its summer schedule with the addition of a pair of Monday night replacements—the Spike Jones show for "Hennessey" and a Ray McKinley show with the Glenn Miller Orchestra for Danny Thomas.

Both are outside packages, the Jones series brought in by Lennen & Newell for Lorillard and the McKinley series—which may be titled "The Glenn Miller Story"—via General Foods and Benton & Bowles.

Jones series will be a repeat of last year's, and feature Bill Dana as producer-performer-writer. It aired last season as the Ann Sothern Monday night replacement. McKinley package will stress the Miller orchestra and will also utilize guest stars. McKinley himself is no stranger to CBS, having served on the web's ill-fated "Be My Guest" season before last.

Crosley Staffers' Stripes

Cincinnati, April 11.

General managers of three Crosley Broadcasting Corp. tv stations have been upped to vicepresidents by the board of directors.

They are John B. Babcock, WLW-I, Indianapolis; Walter Bartlett, WLW - C, Columbus, and George J. Gray, WLW-D.

The board, headed by James D. Shouse and including Robert E. Dunville, CBC president, advanced James H. Burgess, g.m. of WLW-A, Atlanta, to a veep in January.

Morgenthau Joins Cowan at Brandeis

Waltham, Mass., April 11.

Henry Morgenthau 3d, tv exec producer for Boston's educational, WGBH, becomes associate director for the new Communications Research Center at Brandeis U. here. He joint former CBS-TV prexy Louis G. Cowan, who as previously revealed, will be director of the setup for studying "communication's function in modern society."

The Cowan project was started with a large grant from two Los Angeles residents, Sylvia and Samuel Schulman.

Directors Extend Contract Talks With Networks

The four networks and the Directors Guild of America have agreed to an extension of their collective bargaining contract until Friday (14) to permit further negotiations on a new pact. The old contract expired at midnight Monday (10).

The negotiators were described as still far from agreement on a DGA demand to change the status of directors from staff to freelance contract, with major revision of pay scales, but it was authoritatively reported there was little likelihood of a strike. The extension was announced Monday morning after a weekend of negotiations.

Some 900 radio and tv directors, assistant directors and stage managers are involved in the dispute. Contract is a network-only pact, involving ABC, CBS, NBC both radio and tv) and Mutual. Work involved is live and taped radio-tv only. Telefilm directors are covered by a separate contract.

Basis for the disapproval is a proposal by the Guild to change the payment structure for tv directors from a salaried staff basis to that of a freelance with minimum guarantees. Under the current staff setup, directors have a base pay of $190 a week to which are added commercial fees and overtime payments.

Guild seeks to change this structure, making the directors freelance agents under contract to the networks with payments of $630 a week for a minimum guarantee of 23 weeks' work out of each 26-week cycle or 46 weeks out of each 52. Eliminated would be overtime payment and limits governing hours per day or days per week of work.

Background to the dispute is the merger of the 900-odd television directors, assistant directors and stage managers who had been represented by the Radio-Television Directors Guild into the Screen

AMVETS' 5 AWARDS

Bob Hope Included and N.A.B.'s LeRoy Collins

Washington, April 11.

Show business figures copped two of top five awards presented by AMVETS this year. Two-time Academy Award winner Harold Russell, AMVET national commander, made the presentations Saturday (8) at the Shoreham here.

Bob Hope and LeRoy Collins, former Florida governor and now prexy of National Assn. of Broadcasters, were honored along with former U.N. envoy and GOP vice presidential contender, Henry Cabot Lodge, ex-Civil Defense Director Leo Hoegh and Dwight Guilfoil, noted Chicagoan noted for his efforts to help the disabled.

Hope won a "special silver helmet award"—consisting of a silver replica of the GI battle headgear—for being "ambassador of entertainment to America's armed forces and for his dedication in sustaining for 20 consecutive years the highest morale of GI's throughout the world.

Collins was accorded the AMVETS' "Americanism" award for what was described as his "exceptional and continuous contribution to the American way of life in his unwavering adherence to moral rights." The award was based on his work as Governor of Florida rather than his NAB career, which only recently got under way.

NBC's 'Hold Down That Violence' On All New Entries

How effective it will be not even NBC-TV can say, but the network's brass, including program boss David Levy and standards and practices boss Ernest Lee Jahnke are heading Coastward at the end of the week to lay down some partial edicts about diminishing violence for the sake of violence in all NBC-TV programs for next season.

"We're going to place everybody on notice that NBC will not tolerate writers using sheer violence as a crutch to eat up time on the screen," said Levy. This concept is to be spelled out, NBC said, before too many more of the 1961-'62 scripts are written. (The network said it always reviews scripts in advance anyway and that this procedure will enable NBC to cut down on mayhem.)

Violence, the network said, will not go entirely, but "it has to be necessary to the story."

First step might be with regard to the Goodson-Todman hour pilot on Las Vegas, which the network might still use despite pressures from L.V. city fathers who don't want crime played up in their town. Reportedly there are some six deaths in the pilot of the series. This, NBC declared, will be written out "as much as possible."

Will Dreier Be Sent to Cleaner?

Chicago, April 11.

In his address to the local ATAS chapter here last week, ABC News viceprez Jim Hagerty expressed a distaste for the editorialized newscast in which hard news and adulterated by personal opinion. He opined that news commentary and analysis should be labeled what it is and berthed separate from newscasts on radio and tv.

What Hagerty apparently did not realize is that the format he deplored is the stock-in-trade of his principal Chicago newscaster, Alex Dreier. That very "personal view of the news" technique, Dreier's insistence on attaining to it, was one of the sore points at WNBQ that led to his departure from that station last December.

Dreier and his new boss seemed quite chummy at the luncheon affair, but the local trade is wondering if Hagerty's remarks re objective newscasting might not foretell some future friction between them.

Hagerty to Pick Up Half the Tab If Newsmen Brush Up on Berlitz

Chicago, April 11.

ABC News veep Jim Hagerty estimates that in about five years the most valuable newsmen on tv will be those who can speak several languages. Five years, he prognosticates, is how long it will take the communications satellites to bring about world wide television; and to be ready for it, Hagerty is encouraging his staffers to study language courses at Berlitz partly at company expense.

The web, he says, will foot half the tuition, while the individual pays the other half to assure his genuine interest and intentions.

He has found, in his experience as President Eisenhower's press officer, that nearly all foreign newsmen have a working command of at least three languages—English, French and Spanish—while, on the other hand, their U.S. counterparts generally knew only their own. The effect of this difference, he suggested in a speech last week to the Chi chapter of the Television Academy, will be to make a poor image for this country when worldwide video comes about. "If we don't prepare for it, we're going to be left far behind the other countries," he said.

His belief in the coming of world-wide tv is one of the principal reasons he signed on with the ABC network, he told the Windy City gathering. "That's when tv will really come into its own," he said, "but, more than to the industry, it will make a great deal of difference to the world."

Hagerty reiterated his feeling that broadcast news is doing well but could do much better. He said he would try to effecutate a radio-tv version of the newspaper "byline theory," which he described as a paper's pledge that a certain reporter had been on the scene and is giving a firsthand account. He opined that television news would greatly benefit from that same "I was there; this is what happened" effect.

P&G, Quaker Oats Ponder 'Ichabod'

Decision is due the first of the week from Procter & Gamble and Quaker Oats on whether they'll buy in on CBS-TV's new "Ichabod" series or relinquish their hold on the web's Tuesday 9 to 9:30 time period. Both sponsors cancelled the Tom Ewell show, and have since been sparring with the web over a replacement.

CBS is high on "Ichabod" and has decided to anchor it in the Ewell slot regardless of whether the sponsors go along with the show. P&G wanted "Hazel," the comedy series based on the Satevepost cartoons, but CBS nixed it, insisting on "Ichabod." Web has sent the sponsors a revised script on "Ichabod" embracing changes in the format introduced since the pilot was filmed, and also introducing the new casting in the person of Robert Sterling, who'll costar with George Chandler.

CBS-TV Fall Sked Finalized (Except For a Half-Hour)

Entire fall schedule for CBS-TV is now set, with the exception of a single time period—Fridays at 10:30. There are currently two candidates for the slot, "Eyewitness to History" (which would be dubbed simply, "Eyewitness"), timeslot's current occupant, and "Way Out," currently occupying the Friday 9:30-10 period for spring and summer.

"Eyewitness" renewal depends on whether and how quickly CBS can find a sponsor for the show to replace Firestone, which was unhappy with its more controversial aspects. If a weekly sponsor can't be found, then "Eyewitness" will revert to specials on a preemptive basis, covering major news stories. As to "Way Out," CBS was mightily impressed by its initial ratings—it topped all competition—and feels that if the audience levels hold, it would make an ideal 10-11 pairing with "Twilight Zone," being in the same format genre.

But the Friday spot is the sole remaining question mark on the fall schedule. CBS filled out Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday nights last week, as well as putting a "final" stamp on its remaining Tuesday question mark. On Thursday, it scheduled its two Revue pilots—"Frontier Circus" with Chill Wills and John Derek and "The Investigators" with James Franciscus and James Philbrook—at 7:30-8:30 and 9-10 respectively. Bob Cummings at 8:30 and "CBS Reports" at 10-11 complete the evening.

On Wednesdays, "Checkmate" fills the remaining gap, 8:30-9:30, moving over from Saturday. It's preceded by "Alvin and the Chipmunks" and "Father Knows Best" repeats and followed by "Mother Is a Freshman" and the alternating U.S. Steel - Armstrong dramatics. The one Sunday hole—6:30-7—was filled with "Mr. Ed," brought in by Studebaker-Lark.

Judy Garland's Special for Dow

Judy Garland has been inked by Dow Chemical for a one-hour television special next fall, her first since she made her videbut in 1955. Dow has placed an order for time with CBS-TV—Miss Garland has agreed to one and possibly a second special on that web, though not on an exclusive basis.

Deal for the special, which she'll pretape, was set by Freddie Fields and Dave Begelman, Miss Garland's agents, and Hank Fownes of MacManus, John & Adams, the Dow agency. Miss Garland is currently set for two Carnegie Hall appearances April 23 and May 21 and just completed a straight-dramatic role in Stanley Kramer's "Judgement at Nuremberg."

Enjay Prod. Deal On Vanderbilt Travelogs

Author-lecturer Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. and Enjay Productions, headed by Nat Gold, have completed a deal to produce former's films for television and motion pictures. Included in the deal will be a series of 15 travelogs on various countries.

Also being blueprinted are interview films with various personalities under the label of "Vagabonding with Vanderbilt" named after his newsletter.

Some Things You Just Can't Explain

Nobody can explain it any more than they can explain the onslaught of 10,000 visitors to midtown Manhattan and a seven-block line for Radio City Music Hall the same day, but for some reason CBS-TV's daytime shows last Wednesday (5) skyrocketed to fantastic seven-city Arbitron ratings. Web swept every daytime period.

Network execs were mystified by such figures as an 11.2 and 54.7% share for "I Love Lucy" against a 4.5 for "Say When," or an 8.7 for the new "Double Exposure" against 8.2 for "Price Is Right," or a 10.5 for "Search for Tomorrow" against 4.9 for "Number Please" and 5.9 for "It Could Be You."

And so it went. "As the World Turns" pulled down a 13.4 against a 4.5 for ABC and 4.1 for NBC, neither with network service. "Verdict Is Yours" had a 10.0 against 5.4 for "Who Do You Trust" and 3.6 for "From These Roots." Even the new "Surprise Package" topped NBC's tower of strength, "Concentration," by a 7.6 to 7.0 margin.

From 7 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., CBS swept every single quarter-hour time period recorded by Arbitron, even those periods in which it offered no network service, and won most of them by 2-1 margins or better.

It wasn't the weather, as with winter, when storms keep people indoors and away from their work. In fact, the weather appeared to drive people out of their homes that day, as witness that seven-block line at Radio City. Whatever the reason, though, CBS wasn't asking for any recounts.

NAB GETS A JFK TURNDOWN

'Open End—NAB'

What may well turn out to be the highlight attraction of the upcoming NAB convention in Washington is currently being plotted by the industry organization's new prexy, ex-Gov. LeRoy Collins. It involves the participation of the three network chieftains—Leonard Goldenson of ABC, Bob Sarnoff of NBC and Frank Stanton of CBS. All three have tentatively agreed to go on.

It will be in the nature of an "open end" discussion by the three web principals (preambled by their own individual statements) in which they'll kick around the major problems besetting the industry. It's slotted in for Monday night, May 8, opening day of the convention.

There are, however, some puzzling overtones to the Collins maneuver. The new president has already made known his feelings about network dominance in the industry and the need to reactivate station management in future pursuit of industry matters.

Yet it's felt that "Open End—NAB," designed for top billing on the agenda, would perhaps do more to perpetuate network mastermind in industry affairs that any single event of the year.

ATV's Norman Collins: 'Let's Put An End to This Com'l Monopoly'

London, April 11.

Associated Television favors ending the monopoly of the commercial tv programming features. In its submission to the Pilkington Committee inquiring into the future of the brodcasting servies in Britain, the company has recommended that there should be two commercial tv outlets competing in each area.

The submission, which covers nine main points, also recommends the introduction of the 625-line standard and is prepared to provide such a service on bands 4 and 5 of not less than four hours duration per day in addition to the 405-line program in band 3.

That proposal is the alternative to their main suggestion that there should be competition in band 3 and the duplication on 625-lines in bands 4 and 5 of all band I and band 3 services on 405 lines. Within the 625-line service ATV is prepared to transmit at least one hour of color programming per day.

ATV, which now has the weekday concession in the Midlands and the weekend time in the London area, is seeking a seven-day week operation. As it regards itself basically as a London company with headquarters and studios in the London area, it is obviously seeking a full week's operation in the capital.

Among other proposals submitted to the Committee is a demand for ending the restrictions on tv broadcasting hours; the introduction of a license on a year by year basis, subject to standards of service, and the limitation of toll tv to wired systems until sufficient frequencies are available for all normal broadcasting services as well for pay-as-you-view programs.

Amplifying the proposals at a press conference last week, Norman Collins, ATV deputy chairman, said the company was openly inviting competition. They had successfully ended the monopoly of the BBC and it was now time to end the commercial companies' monopoly. He estimated that the duplication of services on the two-line systems would involve an expenditure of about $3,000,000 a year, while the cost of color programming would be about treble the cost of originating a black and white show.

Equitable Eyes College Series

Equitable Life Assurance may move over to the NBC-TV Sunday sked next season with a series on the histories of famous American colleges prepared by Four Star.

There has been no deal yet, but NBC-TV is offering a 5 to 5:30 p.m. Sunday time for the weekly series. If this goes, there is a possibility that NBC will once more (it's been an annual effort these last two years) to lure "G-E College Bowl" into the 5:30 to 6 anchorage. "Bowl" is now on CBS-TV.

Pilot of the Equitable series is based on Notre Dame in South Bend.

CBC Gets Indian Sign

Ottawa, April 11.

Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has a television show to teach French and is mulling a tv stint to teach English. Now its Halifax produtcion staff is setting up a method of distributing a list of words from the Micmac Indian tongue.

This is in response to requests resulting from the CBC moppet show, "Junior Roundup," which includes Indian legends. Requests for the word lists come even from other Indians (Weywaykums in B.C., Beavers in Alberta).

$8,000,000 Armour Budget To ABC-TV Day-Night Spread

Chicago, April 11.

For the fourth straight year, Armour is plunking down its whole network bankroll on ABC-TV this time to the tune of $8,000,000. That's a 30% boost over the present season.

Fall buy involves a heavy daytime sked, co-sponsorship of "Bachelor Father," moving over from NBC, and participation in four other nighttime shows—"Untouchables," "Surfside Six," "Adventures in Paradise" and "Roaring Twenties." Daytime purchases are to be worked out when ABC sets its lineup.

Sponsor will use the various programs to rotate messages for Liquid Chiffon, Dash, Dial Soap and its meat. Foote, Cone & Belding is the agency.

SUN OIL COIN FOR ABC-TV LATE NEWS

Sun Oil has picked up sponsorship of ABC News latenight tv news strip, which begins Monday (17). Called "ABC Final Report," the program will go nightly from 11 to 11:12 p.m. (allowing last few minutes for local weather by affils).

Series, which on its first night will be seen after the Oscar awards telecast (and thereafter at 11), is network tv's first latenight news feed.

Probably next fall it will be followed on ABC-TV by reruns of the hour Warner Bros. films from 11:15 p.m. to 12:15 a.m.

Mpls. TV Hoopla

Minneapolis, April 11.

A flock of top show biz officials are expected here this week to help ballyhoo the new tieup of ABC-TV with KMSP-TV, 20th-Fox station in the Twin Cities.

Coming here for the KMSP-ABC kickoff Saturday (15) are Fox prexy Spyros Skouras, ABC chief Oliver Treyz and Pete Lavathes, head of the Fox tv organization.

WON'T ADDRESS D.C. CONVENTION

The National Assn. of Broadcasters has put in a bid for President Kennedy to address the annual NAB convention in Washington next month, but the President has indicated that he wants no part in it. It not only puts the new NAB prexy, ex-Gov. LeRoy Collins, in an embarrassing spot, having been entrusted with the job of delivering the President and thus far failing to do so, but the broadcasters themselves feel put out. They're not even asking him to leave town to make the address.

It's all the more bitter pill to swallow since President Kennedy has accepted invitations to address the nation's publishers at their annual conclave (which precedes the NAB meet) as well as the annual meeting of the newspaper editors. What the broadcasters find it hard to live with are the following cold facts: (1) The almost universal concensus that television, more than any other single factor, helped put Kennedy in the White House, through the good offices of the "Great Debates"; (2) editorially, the newspapers of the country were overwhelmingly in favor of a Nixon victory and if the publishers and editors had had their way, it would be Nixon and not Kennedy in command at Washington.

Yet why, the broadcasters are asking, is JFK giving them the cold shoulder and honoring the publishers and editors with an address?

It's felt in some quarters that the Kennedy nix is the result of pressures—that a Kennedy acceptance and appearance before the broadcasters would automatically be construed as an official JFK endorsement of Collins and his policies as leader and spokesman for the broadcasting industry. And by the very nature of the controversial medium, he might have cause to regret such endorsement, whereas an address before the publishers (ANPA) would carry no such complex overtones or implications.

As far as the average broadcaster is concerned, however, it's simply a matter of winding up with a lowercase status in the JFK refusal to accord them equal attention or respect as the publishers.

It's Cash & Garry For R. J. Reynolds

R. J. Reynolds has shifted its coin from one Garry Moore show to another on CBS-TV. Ciggie outfit, miffed when the network shifted "I've Got a Secret" from its longtime Wednesday berth to Mondays at 10:30, decided to drop the show after years of sponsorship (so did companion sponsor Bristol-Myers).

But this week, Reynolds bought in for an alternate-week half-hour of Moore's Tuesday night 10-11 variety stanza. Reportedly, it used the same coin it saved with the "Secret" cancellation. With Reynolds moving in, Polaroid dropped its alternate half-hour on the Moore show.

This leaves the show either SRO or three-fourths sold, depending on whether Plymouth retains its full alternate-week hour or cuts back to a skip-week half. Decision on that is due in a couple of weeks.

NAB TAPS BARTLETT

Washington, April 11.

George W. Bartlett, vet staffer of National Assn. of Broadcasters, has been named acting manager of NAB's engineering dept.

Formerly assistant manager of the dept., Bartlett succeeds A. Prose Walker who left NAB to join Collins Radio Corp., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

RTES Walking Out on Peabody To Set Up Its Own Awards Next Year

The Radio & Television Executives Society of N.Y., which for the past several years has sponsored the U. of Georgia's Peabody Awards luncheons, will drop its association with the Peabodys after this year and institute its own industry awards setup.

Decision has already been made, on a conditional basis, by the RTES board of governors, and will be made known to the Peabody group before next week's annual Awards luncheon, slated for Tuesday (18) at the Hotel Roosevelt. Some elements of the decision haven't been pinned down, but will be worked out at the next RTES board of governors meeting May 5.

The RTES decision was motivated by two considerations, first that awards which are constituted like the Peabody prizes appear to have lost a great deal of their value, and second that it might be more appropriate for an industry group like the RTES to sponsor its own awards which would lay more emphasis on industry achievement in its more trady aspects. In other words, the new RTES awards would constitute the professionals of the business appraising the best work in their industry.

Final structure of the RTES awards hasn't been drawn, but a tentative prospectus has been proposed and given tentative approval. The decision to drop the Peabodys for RTES awards was by no means unanimous; spearheading the group in favor of the move reportedly was Sam Cook Digges, v.p. of CBS Films; opposing it was outgoing RTES prexy Dick Salant, prez of CBS News.

The RTES pullout leaves a question mark surrounding the future of the Peabody Awards, which are given by Georgia's Grady School of Journalism. Not that the sponsorship of RTES is indispensable to continuation of the awards—Peabody group can get some other backing or stage its own awards ceremonies. But the impact of the Peabodys has been wearing off over the past few years, and it's conceivable that the committee, as did Sylvania a couple of years back, may figure it's no longer worth the effort and expense to carry on in the face of diminished interest.

WCBS-TV's Prostie Posie

A program dealing with prostitution and whether it should be legalized has been taped by WCBS-TV, the CBS-TV flagship in N. Y. Program, featuring Gotham's Chief Magistrate, John M. Murtagh, was taped as a segment of "New York Forum," but has not yet been scheduled by the station for a specific date.

Instead, it's being held as a reserve show, since there's no time element involved. Show, with CBS newsman Dallas Townsend as moderator, will deal with the recent proposal in Philadelphia to legalize prostitution. Judge Murtagh is an expert on the problem, having coauthored a pair of books on the subject with researcher Sara Harris, one of them, "Cast the First Stone," a bestseller of a few years ago.

'Hazel' Gets Nod For NBC Thurs. In Ernie, Ford Split

There's no longer an Ernie in Ford's future. It looked for a while as though Tennessee Ernie Ford, sponsored these many seasons by Ford Motor in his Thursday NBC time period, was going to accede and do a full season's worth of half-hour program, but at the last minute remephasized his disaffection with the idea of doing more than maybe 15 or 16 shows. He wanted to spend more time on his ranch.

On this basis Ford didn't want him and since he couldn't be persuaded to change his mind, the automotive latched on to "Hazel," the tv film comedy series starring Shirley Booth that CBS-TV turned down, allegedly because ABC-TV saw it first.

And ABC-TV turned "Hazel" down when sponsor Procter & Gamble offered same for its Thursday 9:30 berth. Ironically it ends up in the same time slot, but on NBC.

NBC, MCA and J. Walter Thompson were involved earlier this week in trying to "sell" Ernie Ford on returning in '61-'62 for a full season, but when he refused "Hazel got the nod.

Balto Judge Refuses To Be Influenced By TV; Rees Gets Life Term

Baltimore, April 11.

Motion for a new trial, on the basis that the rights of Melvin Davis Rees Jr., 32, convicted of kidnaping and murdering a Virginia mother and her five-year old daughter, were prejudiced by a program presented by WBAL-TV in which nine of the 12 jurors who found him guilty, reenacted jury proceedings, was denied Thursday (6) by Federal Chief Judge Roszel C. Thomsen and Rees was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Imposition of life term followed hearing in which Rees' attorneys contended that jurors, on tv, had discussed "facts which hadn't been brought in the trial."

Program had been presented March 22 on tape only a few hours before Judge Thomsen had denied motion for new trial and only 12 hours before he was to sentence Rees. Sentencing was then postponed after attorney for Rees asked that it be deferred until he had time to see script of show. In overruling motion for new trial, Judge Thomsen said that he was not and would not be influenced in sentencing by the program.

Robt. Taylor, 'Sun' Kaiser Twosome?

As it now stands the chances are good that Kaiser a month and a half before its option is due at ABC-TV will renew Sunday nights 7:30 on that web for an hour program called "Follow the Sun," island adventure series out of the 20th-Fox shop. NBC is willing to take an hourlong version of "Captain of Detectives," the program in which Robert Taylor now stars on the ABC Friday lineup in half-hour form, provided Kaiser is willing to buy half the show.

ABC is releasing the Taylor show and NBC is banking on what it feels is the distinct possibility that Kaiser will sell off half of its ABC "Sun" in order to take the Taylor series Friday nights 8:30 to 9:30.

"Hong Kong" is finished although for a time it looked like it might be the Kaiser entry on NBC.

Fisher's Canada Post

Ottawa, April 11.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker's new publicist will be John Fisher, w.k. lecturer and radio-tv gabber, who left the Canadian Tourist Assn. where he was g.m. to take the top Parliament Hill public relations chore. He will get $25,000 a year, a leap from his CTA wage of $15,000.

Fisher will be the first flacker in the PM's office since James Nelson, his first, resigned last summer to join Canadian Press' news staff in Ottawa.

NBC-TV's 615G for Pro Grid Plum But Will Clients Go for Heavy Tab?

Ford has already come in with an order for a quarter of the National Football League championships on NBC-TV next fall, and network sources say that the automotive house is meeting the demand for a full quarter share of the full price—a record-breaking $850,000 for time, game rights, special remote charges and "administrative overhead." However, while there are several other interested bankrollers backed up at NBC's door, there is some doubt how many of them are willing to meet their proportionate shares of the NBC price tag.

Ford move followed closely on the heels of the NBC signing with NFL boss Pete Rozelle for the championship pro games in '61 and '62, for which the web will be paying $615,002 each time. (For each of the last five years, NBC only paid $200,000.)

Originally, NBC brass refused to exceed a bid of $500,000 for the rights to the pro championship game, but a few significant things occurred to them later that obviously brought about a change of heart and the willingness to shell out another $115,000 per annum.

(1) Tom Gallery, head of NBC sports, reportedly went to see network prexy Bob Kintner and explained that if the web didn't want to disenfranchise itself further in the area of major sports events, a higher bid must be in order.

(2) The $615,002 winning bid frustrated, if only temporarily, CBS-TV's high hopes of selling Ford and the other interested parties a package consisting of some 18 regular season games in the NFL—although now Ford looks interested in the regular season games as well. A final decision there must remain until it's established just how many games CBS will have, which leads to the next point.

(3) By overbidding, NBC might have spoiled CBS' chances to get all 14 teams in the league tied to its tv lineup. This season, NBC has the Baltimore and Pittsburgh team games. Rozelle wants to bring all the teams under one broadcast banner to prevent what he feels are the financial inequities of individual team negotiation. Because of Rozelle's support for the one web plan, it does look as though CBS will get the regular season games, but it's still not certain. Not so incidentally, the price of the regular NFL games will probably go too—to about two-and-a-

The Cowan project was started with a large grant from two Los Angeles residents, Sylvia and Samuel Schulman.

Directors Extend Contract Talks With Networks

The four networks and the Directors Guild of America have agreed to an extension of their collective bargaining contract until Friday (14) to permit further negotiations on a new pact. The old contract expired at midnight Monday (10).

The negotiators were described as still far from agreement on a DGA demand to change the status of directors from staff to freelance contract, with major revision of pay scales, but it was authoritatively reported there was little likelihood of a strike. The extension was announced Monday morning after a weekend of negotiations.

Some 900 radio and tv directors, assistant directors and stage managers are involved in the dispute. Contract is a network-only pact, involving ABC, CBS, NBC both radio and tv and Mutual. Work involved is live and taped radio-tv only. Telefilm directors are covered by a separate contract.

Basis for the disapproval is a proposal by the Guild to change the payment structure for tv directors from a salaried staff basis to that of a freelance with minimum guarantees. Under the current staff setup, directors have a base pay of $190 a week to which are added commercial fees and overtime payments.

Guild seeks to change this structure, making the directors freelance agents under contract to the networks with payments of $630 a week for a minimum guarantee of 23 weeks' work out of each 26-week cycle or 46 weeks out of each 52. Eliminated would be overtime payment and limits governing hours per day or days per week of work.

Background to the dispute is the merger of the 900-odd television directors, assistant directors and stage managers who had been represented by the Radio-Television Directors Guild into the Screen

AMVETS' 5 AWARDS

Bob Hope Included and N.A.B.'s LeRoy Collins

Washington, April 11.

Show business figures copped two of top five awards presented by AMVETS this year. Two-time Academy Award winner Harold Russell, AMVET national commander, made the presentations Saturday (8) at the Shoreham here.

Bob Hope and LeRoy Collins, former Florida governor and now prexy of National Assn. of Broadcasters, were honored along with former U.N. envoy and GOP vice presidential contender, Henry Cabot Lodge, ex-Civil Defense Director Leo Hoegh and Dwight Guilfoil, noted Chicagoan noted for his efforts to help the disabled.

Hope won a "special silver helmet award"—consisting of a silver replica of the GI battle headgear—for being "ambassador of entertainment to America's armed forces and for his dedication in sustaining for 20 consecutive years the highest morale of GI's throughout the world.

Collins was accorded the AMVETS' "Americanism" award for what was described as his "exceptional and continuous contribution to the American way of life in his unwavering adherence to moral rights." The award was based on his work as Governor of Florida rather than his NAB career, which only recently got under way.

NBC's 'Hold Down That Violence' On All New Entries

How effective it will be not even NBC-TV can say, but the network's brass, including program boss David Levy and standards and practices boss Ernest Lee Jahnke are heading Coastward at the end of the week to lay down some partial edicts about diminishing violence for the sake of violence in all NBC-TV programs for next season.

"We're going to place everybody on notice that NBC will not tolerate writers using sheer violence as a crutch to eat up time on the screen," said Levy. This concept is to be spelled out, NBC said, before too many more of the 1961-'62 scripts are written. The network said it always reviews scripts in advance anyway and that this procedure will enable NBC to cut down on mayhem.)

Violence, the network said, will not go entirely, but "it has to be necessary to the story."

First step might be with regard to the Goodson-Todman hour pilot on Las Vegas, which the network might still use despite pressures from L.V. city fathers who don't want crime played up in their town. Reportedly there are some six deaths in the pilot of the series. This, NBC declared, will be written out "as much as possible."

Some Things You Just Can't Explain

Nobody can explain it any more than they can explain the onslaught of 10,000 visitors to midtown Manhattan and a seven-block line for Radio City Music Hall the same day, but for some reason CBS-TV's daytime shows last Wednesday (5) skyrocketed to fantastic seven-city Arbitron ratings. Web swept every daytime period.

Network execs were mystified by such figures as an 11.2 and 54.7% share for "I Love Lucy" against a 4.5 for "Say When," or an 8.7 for the new "Double Exposure" against 8.2 for "Price Is Right," or a 10.5 for "Search for Tomorrow" against 4.9 for "Number Please" and 5.9 for "It Could Be You."

And so it went. "As the World Turns" pulled down a 13.4 against a 4.5 for ABC and 4.1 for NBC, neither with network service. "Verdict Is Yours" had a 10.0 against 5.4 for "Who Do You Trust" and 3.6 for "From These Roots." Even the new "Surprise Package" topped NBC's tower of strength, "Concentration," by a 7.6 to 7.0 margin.

From 7 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., CBS swept every single quarter-hour time period recorded by Arbitron, even those periods in which it offered no network service, and won most of them by 2-1 margins or better.

It wasn't the weather, as with winter, when storms keep people indoors and away from their work. In fact, the weather appeared to drive people out of their homes that day, as witness that seven-block line at Radio City. Whatever the reason, though, CBS wasn't asking for any recounts.

Will Dreier Be Sent to Cleaner?

Chicago, April 11.

In his address to the local ATAS chapter here last week, ABC News viceprez Jim Hagerty expressed a distaste for the editorialized newscast in which hard news and adulterated by personal opinion. He opined that news commentary and analysis should be labeled what it is and berthed separate from newscasts on radio and tv.

What Hagerty apparently did not realize is that the format he deplored is the stock-in-trade of his principal Chicago newscaster, Alex Dreier. That very "personal view of the news" technique, Dreier's insistence on attaining to it, was one of the sore points at WNBQ that led to his departure from that station last December.

Dreier and his new boss seemed quite chummy at the luncheon affair, but the local trade is wondering if Hagerty's remarks re objective newscasting might not foretell some future friction between them.

Hagerty to Pick Up Half the Tab If Newsmen Brush Up on Berlitz

Chicago, April 11.

ABC News veep Jim Hagerty estimates that in about five years the most valuable newsmen on tv will be those who can speak several languages. Five years, he prognosticates, is how long it will take the communications satellites to bring about world wide television; and to be ready for it, Hagerty is encouraging his staffers to study language courses at Berlitz partly at company expense.

The web, he says, will foot half the tuition, while the individual pays the other half to assure his genuine interest and intentions.

He has found, in his experience as President Eisenhower's press officer, that nearly all foreign newsmen have a working command of at least three languages—English, French and Spanish—while, on the other hand, their U.S. counterparts generally knew only their own. The effect of this difference, he suggested in a speech last week to the Chi chapter of the Television Academy, will be to make a poor image for this country when worldwide video comes about. "If we don't prepare for it, we're going to be left far behind the other countries," he said.

His belief in the coming of world-wide tv is one of the principal reasons he signed on with the ABC network, he told the Windy City gathering. "That's when tv will really come into its own," he said, "but, more than to the industry, it will make a great deal of difference to the world."

Hagerty reiterated his feeling that broadcast news is doing well but could do much better. He said he would try to effecutate a radio-tv version of the newspaper "byline theory," which he described as a paper's pledge that a certain reporter had been on the scene and is giving a firsthand account. He opined that television news would greatly benefit from that same "I was there; this is what happened" effect.

P&G, Quaker Oats Ponder 'Ichabod'

Decision is due the first of the week from Procter & Gamble and Quaker Oats on whether they'll buy in on CBS-TV's new "Ichabod" series or relinquish their hold on the web's Tuesday 9 to 9:30 time period. Both sponsors cancelled the Tom Ewell show, and have since been sparring with the web over a replacement.

CBS is high on "Ichabod" and has decided to anchor it in the Ewell slot regardless of whether the sponsors go along with the show. P&G wanted "Hazel," the comedy series based on the Satevepost cartoons, but CBS nixed it, insisting on "Ichabod." Web has sent the sponsors a revised script on "Ichabod" embracing changes in the format introduced since the pilot was filmed, and also introducing the new casting in the person of Robert Sterling, who'll costar with George Chandler.

CBS-TV Fall Sked Finalized (Except For a Half-Hour)

Entire fall schedule for CBS-TV is now set, with the exception of a single time period—Fridays at 10:30. There are currently two candidates for the slot, "Eyewitness to History" (which would be dubbed simply, "Eyewitness"), timeslot's current occupant, and "Way Out," currently occupying the Friday 9:30-10 period for spring and summer.

"Eyewitness" renewal depends on whether and how quickly CBS can find a sponsor for the show to replace Firestone, which was unhappy with its more controversial aspects. If a weekly sponsor can't be found, then "Eyewitness" will revert to specials on a preemptive basis, covering major news stories. As to "Way Out," CBS was mightily impressed by its initial ratings—it topped all competition—and feels that if the audience levels hold, it would make an ideal 10-11 pairing with "Twilight Zone," being in the same format genre.

But the Friday spot is the sole remaining question mark on the fall schedule. CBS filled out Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday nights last week, as well as putting a "final" stamp on its remaining Tuesday question mark. On Thursday, it scheduled its two Revue pilots—"Frontier Circus" with Chill Wills and John Derek and "The Investigators" with James Franciscus and James Philbrook—at 7:30-8:30 and 9-10 respectively. Bob Cummings at 8:30 and "CBS Reports" at 10-11 complete the evening.

On Wednesdays, "Checkmate" fills the remaining gap, 8:30-9:30, moving over from Saturday. It's preceded by "Alvin and the Chipmunks" and "Father Knows Best" repeats and followed by "Mother Is a Freshman" and the alternating U.S. Steel - Armstrong dramatics. The one Sunday hole—6:30-7—was filled with "Mr. Ed," brought in by Studebaker-Lark.

Judy Garland's Special for Dow

Judy Garland has been inked by Dow Chemical for a one-hour television special next fall, her first since she made her videbut in 1955. Dow has placed an order for time with CBS-TV—Miss Garland has agreed to one and possibly a second special on that web, though not on an exclusive basis.

Deal for the special, which she'll pretape, was set by Freddie Fields and Dave Begelman, Miss Garland's agents, and Hank Fownes of MacManus, John & Adams, the Dow agency. Miss Garland is currently set for two Carnegie Hall appearances April 23 and May 21 and just completed a straight-dramatic role in Stanley Kramer's "Judgement at Nuremberg."

Enjay Prod. Deal On Vanderbilt Travelogs

Author-lecturer Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. and Enjay Productions, headed by Nat Gold, have completed a deal to produce former's films for television and motion pictures. Included in the deal will be a series of 15 travelogs on various countries.

Also being blueprinted are interview films with various personalities under the label of "Vagabonding with Vanderbilt" named after his newsletter.

NAB GETS A JFK TURNDOWN

'Open End—NAB'

What may well turn out to be the highlight attraction of the upcoming NAB convention in Washington is currently being plotted by the industry organization's new prexy, ex-Gov. LeRoy Collins. It involves the participation of the three network chieftains—Leonard Goldenson of ABC, Bob Sarnoff of NBC and Frank Stanton of CBS. All three have tentatively agreed to go on.

It will be in the nature of an "open end" discussion by the three web principals (preambled by their own individual statements) in which they'll kick around the major problems besetting the industry. It's slotted in for Monday night, May 8, opening day of the convention.

There are, however, some puzzling overtones to the Collins maneuver. The new president has already made known his feelings about network dominance in the industry and the need to reactivate station management in future pursuit of industry matters.

Yet it's felt that "Open End—NAB," designed for top billing on the agenda, would perhaps do more to perpetuate network masterminding in industry affairs that any single event of the year.

ATV's Norman Collins: 'Let's Put An End to This Com'l Monopoly'

London, April 11.

Associated Television favors ending the monopoly of the commercial tv programming features. In its submission to the Pilkington Committee inquiring into the future of the brodcasting servies in Britain, the company has recommended that there should be two commercial tv outlets competing in each area.

The submission, which covers nine main points, also recommends the introduction of the 625-line standard and is prepared to provide such a service on bands 4 and 5 of not less than four hours duration per day in addition to the 405-line program in band 3.

That proposal is the alternative to their main suggestion that there should be competition in band 3 and the duplication on 625-lines in bands 4 and 5 of all band I and band 3 services on 405 lines. Within the 625-line service ATV is prepared to transmit at least one hour of color programming per day.

ATV, which now has the weekday concession in the Midlands and the weekend time in the London area, is seeking a seven-day week operation. As it regards itself basically as a London company with headquarters and studios in the London area, it is obviously seeking a full week's operation in the capital.

Among other proposals submitted to the Committee is a demand for ending the restrictions on tv broadcasting hours; the introduction of a license on a year by year basis, subject to standards of service, and the limitation of toll tv to wired systems until sufficient frequencies are available for all normal broadcasting services as well for pay-as-you-view programs.

Amplifying the proposals at a press conference last week, Norman Collins, ATV deputy chairman, said the company was openly inviting competition. They had successfully ended the monopoly of the BBC and it was now time to end the commercial companies' monopoly. He estimated that the duplication of services on the two-line systems would involve an expenditure of about $3,000,000 a year, while the cost of color programming would be about treble the cost of originating a black and white show.

CBC Gets Indian Sign

Ottawa, April 11.

Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has a television show to teach French and is mulling a tv stint to teach English. Now its Halifax productcion staff is setting up a method of distributing a list of words from the Micmac Indian tongue.

This is in response to requests resulting from the CBC moppet show, "Junior Roundup," which includes Indian legends. Requests for the word lists come even from other Indians (Weywaykums in B.C., Beavers in Alberta).

$8,000,000 Armour Budget To ABC-TV Day-Night Spread

Chicago, April 11.

For the fourth straight year, Armour is plunking down its whole network bankroll on ABC-TV this time to the tune of $8,000,000. That's a 30% boost over the present season.

Fall buy involves a heavy daytime sked, co-sponsorship of "Bachelor Father," moving over from NBC, and participation in four other nighttime shows—"Untouchables," "Surfside Six," "Adventures in Paradise" and "Roaring Twenties." Daytime purchases are to be worked out when ABC sets its lineup.

Sponsor will use the various programs to rotate messages for Liquid Chiffon, Dash, Dial Soap and its meat. Foote, Cone & Belding is the agency.

Equitable Eyes College Series

Equitable Life Assurance may move over to the NBC-TV Sunday sked next season with a series on the histories of famous American colleges prepared by Four Star.

There has been no deal yet, but NBC-TV is offering a 5 to 5:30 p.m. Sunday time for the weekly series. If this goes, there is a possibility that NBC will once more (it's been an annual effort these last two years) to lure "G-E College Bowl" into the 5:30 to 6 anchorage. "Bowl" is now on CBS-TV.

Pilot of the Equitable series is based on Notre Dame in South Bend.

SUN OIL COIN FOR ABC-TV LATE NEWS

Sun Oil has picked up sponsorship of ABC News latenight tv news strip, which begins Monday (17). Called "ABC Final Report," the program will go nightly from 11 to 11:12 p.m. (allowing last few minutes for local weather by affils).

Series, which on its first night will be seen after the Oscar awards telecast (and thereafter at 11), is network tv's first latenight news feed.

Probably next fall it will be followed on ABC-TV by reruns of the hour Warner Bros. films from 11:15 p.m. to 12:15 a.m.

Mpls. TV Hoopla

Minneapolis, April 11.

A flock of top show biz officials are expected here this week to help ballyhoo the new tieup of ABC-TV with KMSP-TV, 20th-Fox station in the Twin Cities.

Coming here for the KMSP-ABC kickoff Saturday (15) are Fox prexy Spyros Skouras, ABC chief Oliver Treyz and Pete Lavathes, head of the Fox tv organization.

WON'T ADDRESS D.C. CONVENTION

The National Assn. of Broadcasters has put in a bid for President Kennedy to address the annual NAB convention in Washington next month, but the President has indicated that he wants no part in it. It not only puts the new NAB prexy, ex-Gov. LeRoy Collins, in an embarrassing spot, having been entrusted with the job of delivering the President and thus far failing to do so, but the broadcasters themselves feel put out. They're not even asking him to leave town to make the address.

It's all the more bitter pill to swallow since President Kennedy has accepted invitations to address the nation's publishers at their annual conclave (which precedes the NAB meet) as well as the annual meeting of the newspaper editors. What the broadcasters find it hard to live with are the following cold facts: (1) The almost universal concensus that television, more than any other single factor, helped put Kennedy in the White House, through the good offices of the "Great Debates"; (2) editorially, the newspapers of the country were overwhelmingly in favor of a Nixon victory and if the publishers and editors had had their way, it would be Nixon and not Kennedy in command at Washington.

Yet why, the broadcasters are asking, is JFK giving them the cold shoulder and honoring the publishers and editors with an address?

It's felt in some quarters that the Kennedy nix is the result of pressures—that a Kennedy acceptance and appearance before the broadcasters would automatically be construed as an official JFK endorsement of Collins and his policies as leader and spokesman for the broadcasting industry. And by the very nature of the controversial medium, he might have cause to regret such endorsement, whereas an address before the publishers (ANPA) would carry no such complex overtones or implications.

As far as the average broadcaster is concerned, however, it's simply a matter of winding up with a lowercase status in the JFK refusal to accord them equal attention or respect as the publishers.

It's Cash & Garry For R. J. Reynolds

R. J. Reynolds has shifted its coin from one Garry Moore show to another on CBS-TV. Ciggie outfit, miffed when the network shifted "I've Got a Secret" from its longtime Wednesday berth to Mondays at 10:30, decided to drop the show after years of sponsorship (so did companion sponsor Bristol-Myers).

But this week, Reynolds bought in for an alternate-week half-hour of Moore's Tuesday night 10-11 variety stanza. Reportedly, it used the same coin it saved with the "Secret" cancellation. With Reynolds moving in, Polaroid dropped its alternate half-hour on the Moore show.

This leaves the show either SRO or three-fourths sold, depending on whether Plymouth retains its full alternate-week hour or cuts back to a skip-week half. Decision on that is due in a couple of weeks.

NAB TAPS BARTLETT

Washington, April 11.

George W. Bartlett, vet staffer of National Assn. of Broadcasters, has been named acting manager of NAB's engineering dept.

Formerly assistant manager of the dept., Bartlett succeeds A. Prose Walker who left NAB to join Collins Radio Corp., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

RTES Walking Out on Peabody To Set Up Its Own Awards Next Year

The Radio & Television Executives Society of N.Y., which for the past several years has sponsored the U. of Georgia's Peabody Awards luncheons, will drop its association with the Peabodys after this year and institute its own industry awards setup.

Decision has already been made, on a conditional basis, by the RTES board of governors, and will be made known to the Peabody group before next week's annual Awards luncheon, slated for Tuesday (18) at the Hotel Roosevelt. Some elements of the decision haven't been pinned down, but will be worked out at the next RTES board of governors meeting May 5.

The RTES decision was motivated by two considerations, first that awards which are constituted like the Peabody prizes appear to have lost a great deal of their value, and second that it might be more appropriate for an industry group like the RTES to sponsor its own awards which would lay more emphasis on industry achievement in its more trady aspects. In other words, the new RTES awards would constitute the professionals of the business appraising the best work in their industry.

Final structure of the RTES awards hasn't been drawn, but a tentative prospectus has been proposed and given tentative approval. The decision to drop the Peabodys for RTES awards was by no means unanimous; spearheading the group in favor of the move reportedly was Sam Cook Digges, v.p. of CBS Films; opposing it was outgoing RTES prexy Dick Salant, prez of CBS News.

The RTES pullout leaves a question mark surrounding the future of the Peabody Awards, which are given by Georgia's Grady School of Journalism. Not that the sponsorship of RTES is indispensable to continuation of the awards—Peabody group can get some other backing or stage its own awards ceremonies. But the impact of the Peabodys has been wearing off over the past few years, and it's conceivable that the committee, as did Sylvania a couple of years back, may figure it's no longer worth the effort and expense to carry on in the face of diminished interest.

WCBS-TV's Prostie Posie

A program dealing with prostitution and whether it should be legalized has been taped by WCBS-TV, the CBS-TV flagship in N. Y. Program, featuring Gotham's Chief Magistrate, John M. Murtagh, was taped as a segment of "New York Forum," but has not yet been scheduled by the station for a specific date.

Instead, it's being held as a reserve show, since there's no time element involved. Show, with CBS newsman Dallas Townsend as moderator, will deal with the recent proposal in Philadelphia to legalize prostitution. Judge Murtagh is an expert on the problem, having coauthored a pair of books on the subject with researcher Sara Harris, one of them, "Cast the First Stone," a bestseller of a few years ago.

'Hazel' Gets Nod For NBC Thurs. In Ernie, Ford Split

There's no longer an Ernie in Ford's future. It looked for a while as though Tennessee Ernie Ford, sponsored these many seasons by Ford Motor in his Thursday NBC time periood, was going to accede and do a full season's worth of half-hour program, but at the last minute remephasized his disaffection with the idea of doing more than maybe 15 or 16 shows. He wanted to spend more time on his ranch.

On this basis Ford didn't want him and since he couldn't be persuaded to change his mind, the automotive latched on to "Hazel," the tv film comedy series starring Shirley Booth that CBS-TV turned down, allegedly because ABC-TV saw it first.

And ABC-TV turned "Hazel" down when sponsor Procter & Gamble offered same for its Thursday 9:30 berth. Ironically it ends up in the same time slot, but on NBC.

NBC, MCA and J. Walter Thompson were involved earlier this week in trying to "sell" Ernie Ford on returning in '61-'62 for a full season, but when he refused "Hazel got the nod.

Balto Judge Refuses To Be Influenced By TV; Rees Gets Life Term

Baltimore, April 11.

Motion for a new trial, on the basis that the rights of Melvin Davis Rees Jr., 32, convicted of kidnaping and murdering a Virginia mother and her five-year old daughter, were prejudiced by a program presented by WBAL-TV in which nine of the 12 jurors who found him guilty, reenacted jury proceedings, was denied Thursday (6) by Federal Chief Judge Roszel C. Thomsen and Rees was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Imposition of life term followed hearing in which Rees' attorneys contended that jurors, on tv, had discussed "facts which hadn't been brought in the trial."

Program had been presented March 22 on tape only a few hours before Judge Thomsen had denied motion for new trial and only 12 hours before he was to sentence Rees. Sentencing was then postponed after attorney for Rees asked that it be deferred until he had time to see script of show. In overruling motion for new trial, Judge Thomsen said that he was not and would not be influenced in sentencing by the program.

Robt. Taylor, 'Sun' Kaiser Twosome?

As it now stands the chances are good that Kaiser a month and a half before its option is due at ABC-TV will renew Sunday nights 7:30 on that web for an hour program called "Follow the Sun," island adventure series out of the 20th-Fox shop. NBC is willing to take an hourlong version of "Captain of Detectives," the program in which Robert Taylor now stars on the ABC Friday lineup in half-hour form, provided Kaiser is willing to buy half the show.

ABC is releasing the Taylor show and NBC is banking on what it feels is the distinct possibility that Kaiser will sell off half of its ABC "Sun" in order to take the Taylor series Friday nights 8:30 to 9:30.

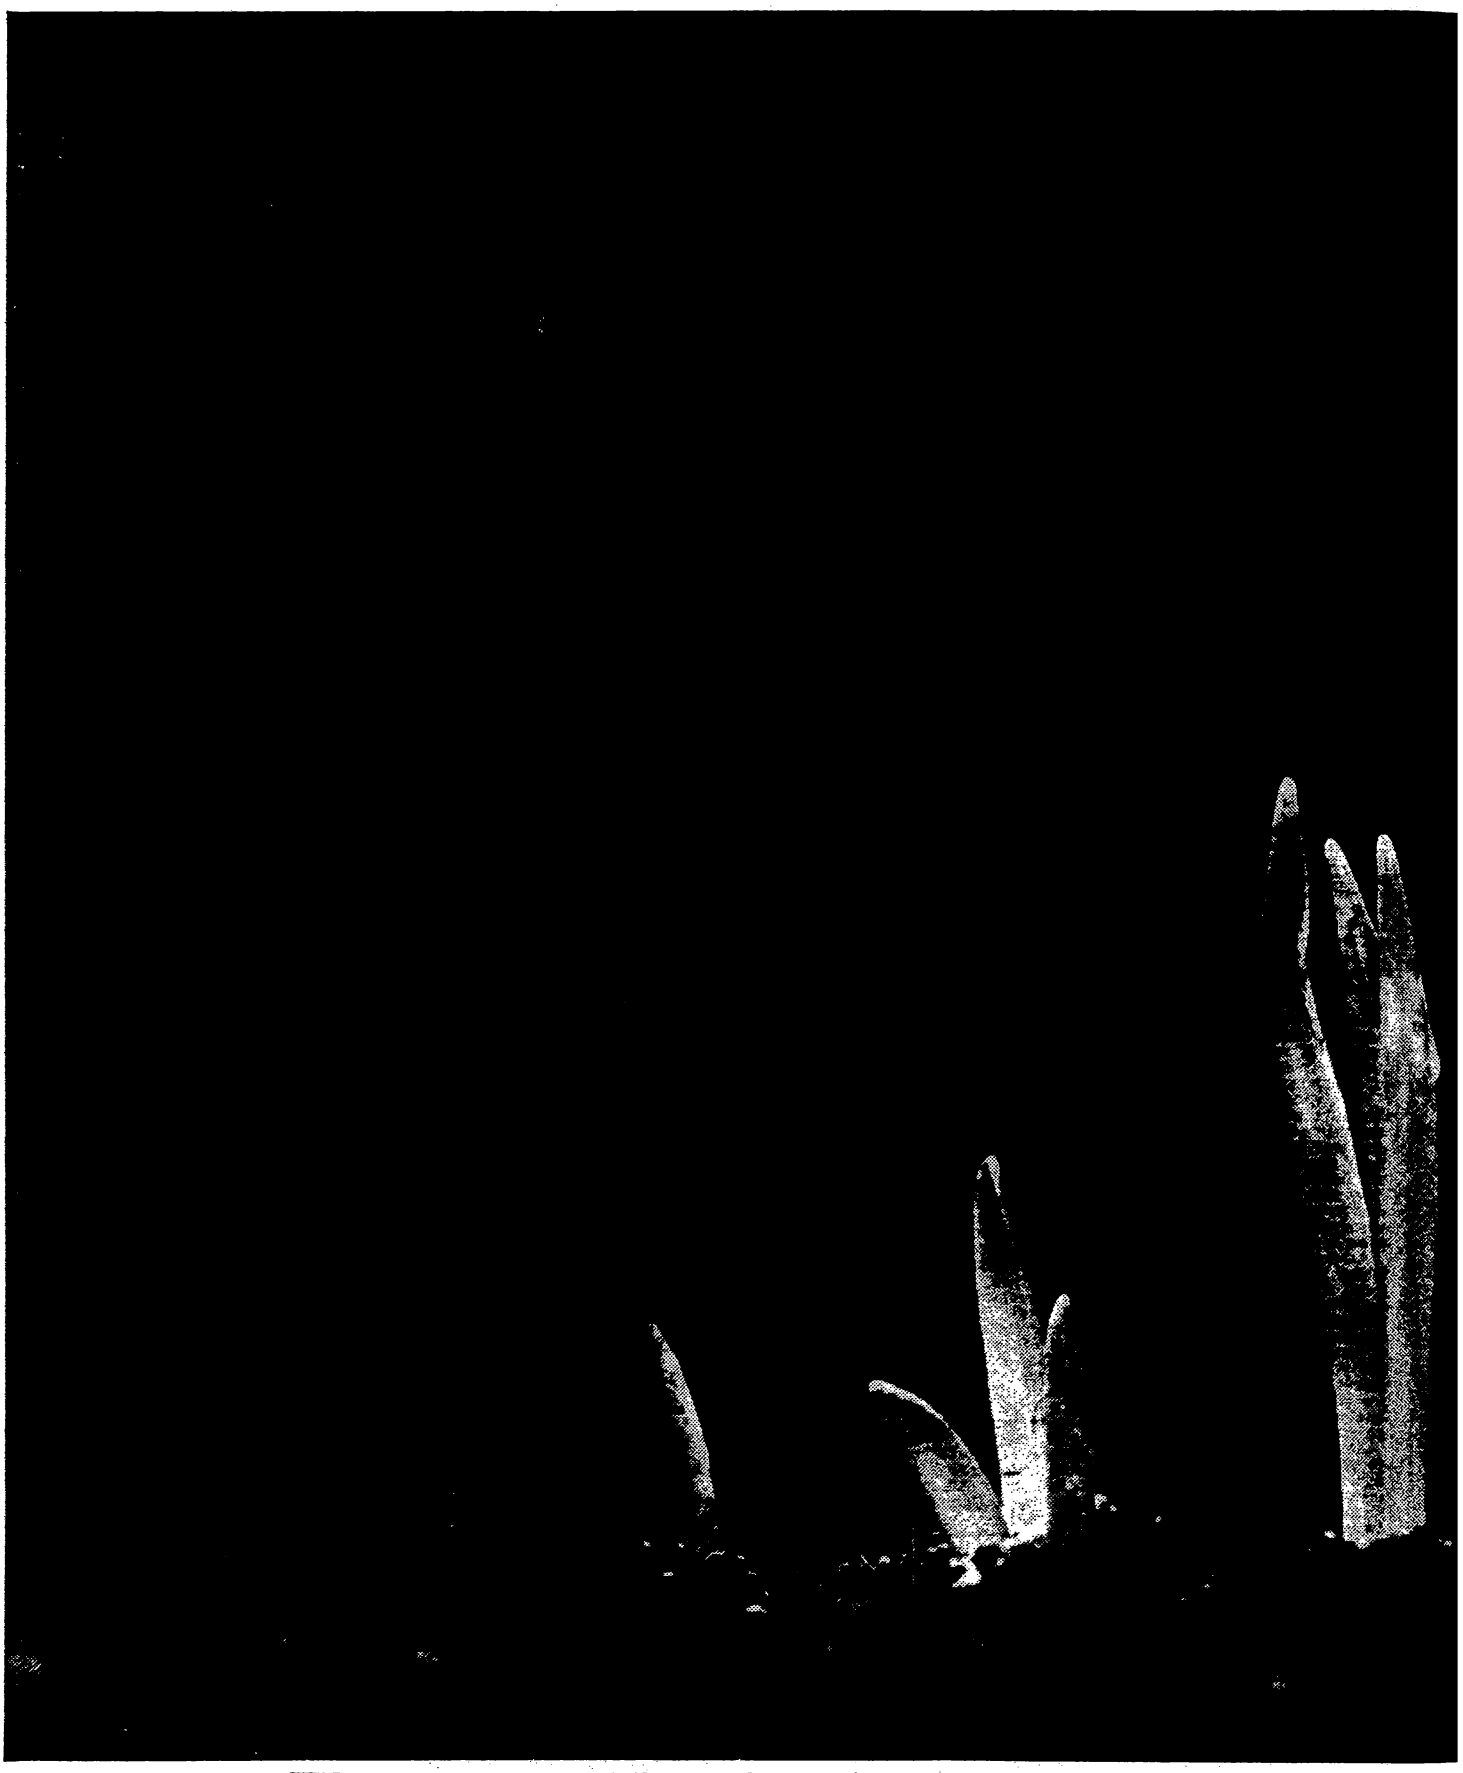
"Hong Kong" is finished although for a time it looked like it might be the Kaiser entry on NBC.

Fisher's Canada Post

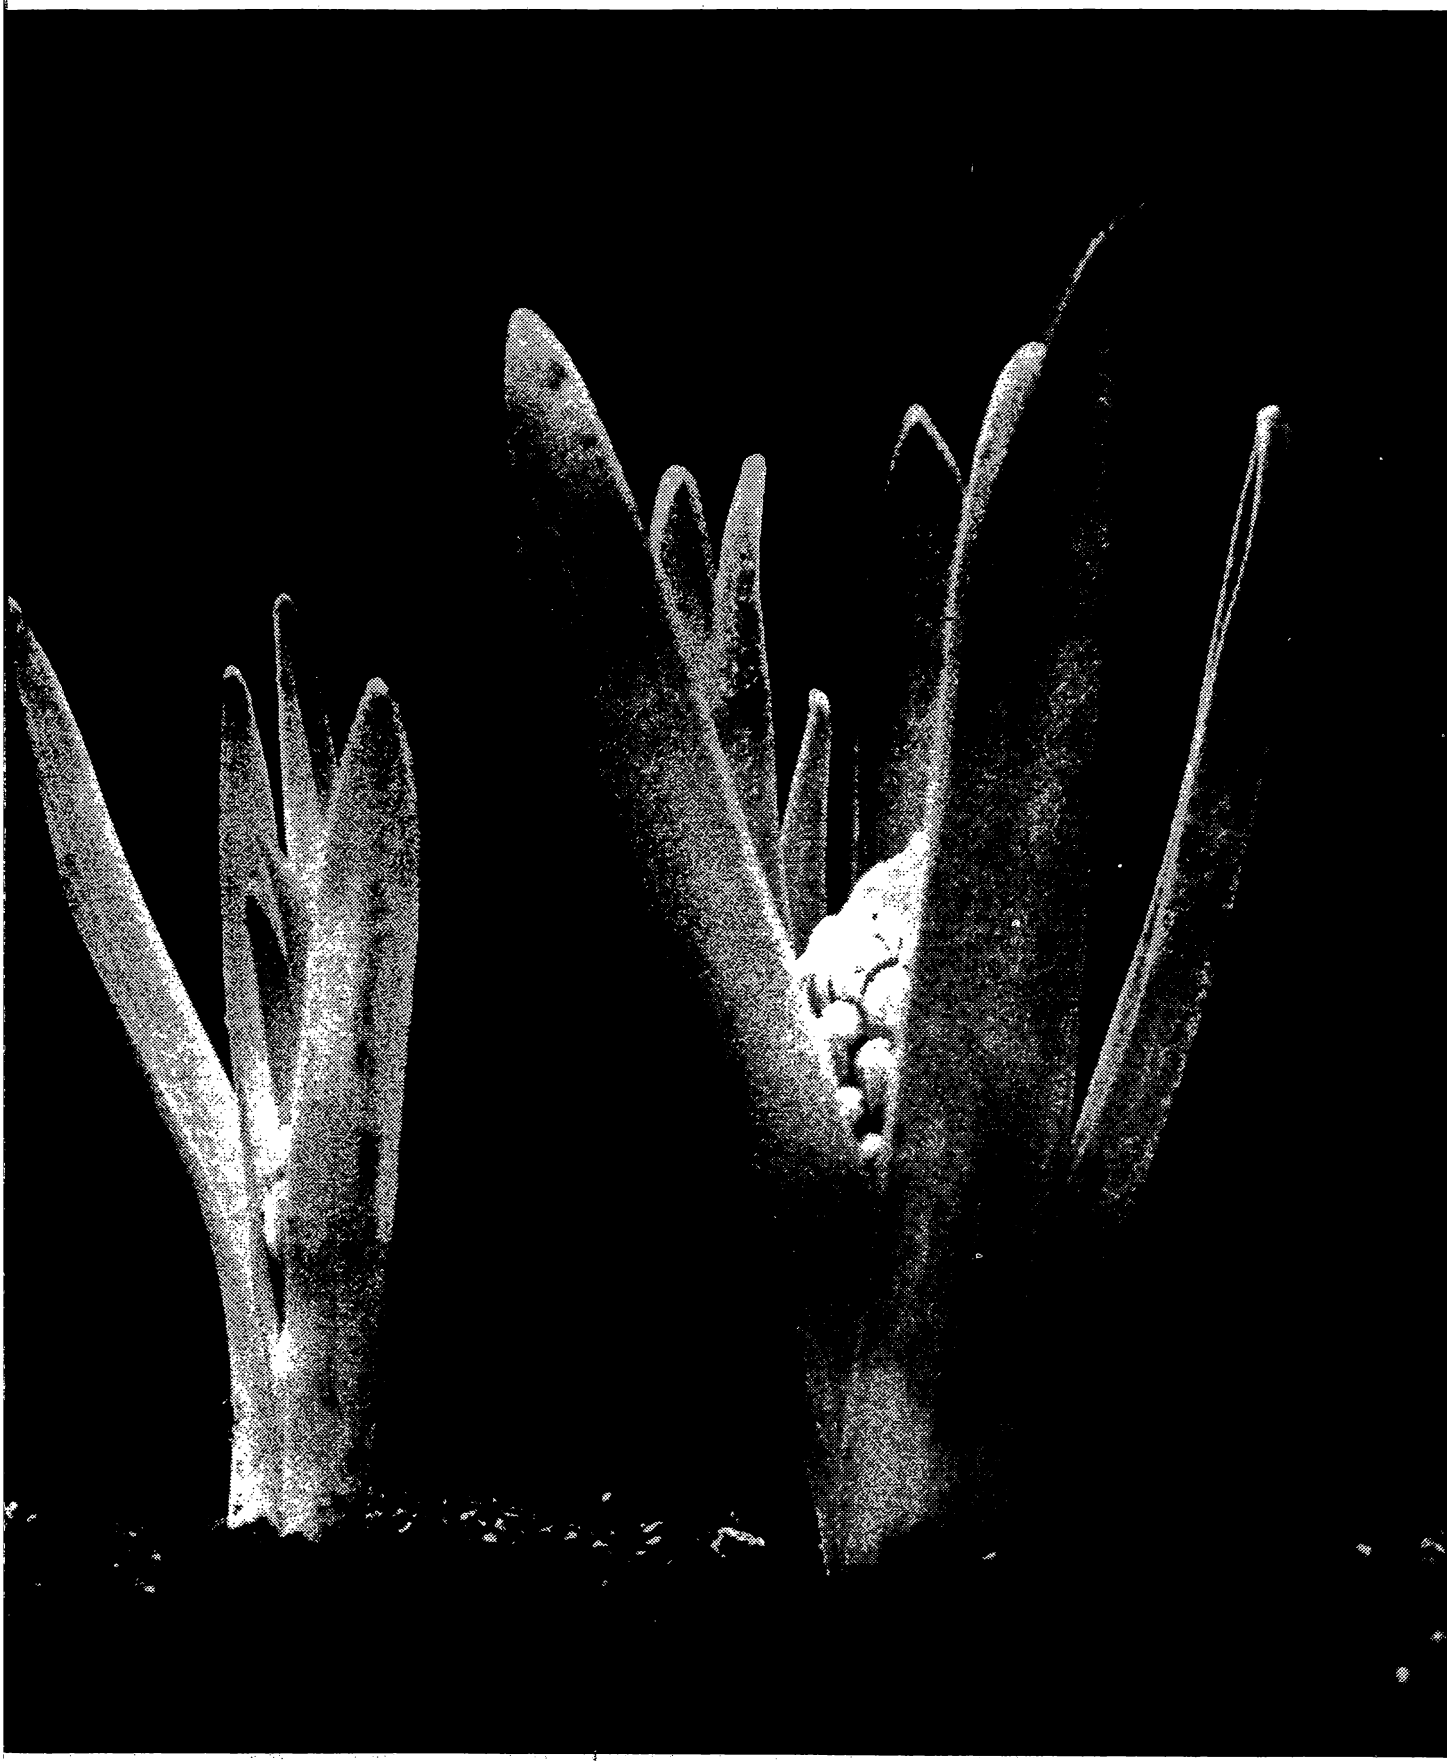
Ottawa, April 11.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker's new publicist will be John Fisher, w.k. lecturer and radio-tv gabber, who left the Canadian Tourist Assn. where he was g.m. to take the top Parliament Hill public relations chore. He will get $25,000 a year, a leap from his CTA wage of $15,000.

Fisher will be the first flacker in the PM's office since James Nelson, his first, resigned last summer to join Canadian Press' news staff in Ottawa.



There is nothing harder to stop than a trend



And the popularity vote on new shows is trending ABC's way*

Trendful, indeed, is the chart — considering: (1) the viewers have now had ample time to sample the season's new offerings on a consistent basis. (2) The viewing sample comes from where it counts most — the largest 3-network competitive market area measured by Nielsen.

And trendful, too, the standing of the top ten new shows.* ABC has five of 'em: My Three Sons, The Flintstones, SurfSide 6, Naked City, Bugs Bunny.

Inasmuch as the vitality of a network is most dramatically demonstrated by the vitality of the new shows, shouldn't you be trending along — with ABC?

Cautious Approach to Pilot Making Pays Off; Fewer Left Orphaned

The rifleshot approach to pilot making has won out in the current season, which saw fewer pilots made—and fewer left orphaned—than previous seasons.

The rifleshot pilot syestem, as opposed to the shotgun method, calls for a limited number of produced pilots. Object is to zero in with a property which already has some built-in acceptance, which is aimed at a definite time period and day. Most of the major vilfilmeries this season out used the rifleshot system to a varying degree of success. Few, if any, engaged in the shotgun approach, coming into the market with a wide array of pilots, hoping to land a network berth on the basis of a screening and the reputation of the producing outfit.

In the seemingly ever growing hour vidfilm series field, to come into the market without a web tie is perilous indeed. Screen Gems made it last year with "Route 66," a free ball hour show, but this time out it hasn't clicked on a deal as yet with another houd project, "The Insider," an action-adventure skein starring David Jansen. Most of the hour pilot projects are tied to a network, with the web putting up most of the pilot financing and sharing in ownership of the show. The many network ties for the hours are illustrative of today's rifleshot posture.

Of more than passing interest is the feeling among vidfilm producers that their shows, the half-hours as well as the 60-minuters, stand a much better chance of finding a network slot if the web, itself, has a financial stake. Some of the orphaned product, to date, of Metro, Screen Gems, 20th-Fox, Desilu, et al., represents free ball product.

No doubt about it, there's still large elements of risk in pliot making, with financial gambles running high. Everything is comparative, however. In previous years, when the scatter shotgun pilot approach prevailed, the pilot risks were even greater.

Chi's WBKB to Bump Susskind's 'Open End'; Kup Takes All the Play

Chicago, April 11.

David Susskind's "Open End" will be looking for takers in Chi again this spring. WBKB has given up on the NTA tape seres since it failed to prove any competition to Irv Kupcinet's live "At Random" on WBBM-TV. Latter show has a format somewhat similar to "Open End" and, in fact, was once dubbed by Susskind "an imitation."

Kupcinet's show, now in its third year on the air, had tapped a new audience lode after midnight on Saturdays that none of the other stations here have been able, so far, to cash in on substantially.

BRITISH SEG SET FOR HITCHCOCK SERIES

London, April 11.

With an American director, Norman Lloyd, Eyeline Films is filming an episode for the "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" series. It's the first time that a British company has been responsible for producing a segment for a top U. S. tv series. Eyeline, which is topped by Anthony Perry and Alfred Shaughnessy, was originally contacted by Hitchcock to make some establishing and background shots at Brighton for "I Spy," and eventually Perry ribbed Hitchcock into allowing them to make the whole film.

"I Spy" stars Kay Walsh, Eric Barker and Cecil Parker and is being filmed entirely on location at Brighton. Eyeline has been in existence just over a year. Its commercial ad-film for Dubonnet won an award at last year's Venice Film Fest, and it has already completed one feature film, "The Impersonators."

That's Show Biz

Vidfilm sales toppers now are switching their sales ammunition from the networks to ad agencies. Reason for this turnabout in many situations is that unless sponsor monies are secured, the show already sold to the web by the sales exec won't stay in the schedule.

As one vidfilm sales topper put it: "I can't take a vacation anymore. Once the network is sold then the advertisers must be sold. Once the show bows, we must turn to the upcoming season."

And he sipped another dry martini in frustration.

800G Sales On 'Dick Tracy' Segs

All those crepe hangers who forecast disaster in spring selling for syndication have another exception on their hands. Close to $800,000 has been racked up in the spring selling of the five-minute "Dick Tracy" cartoon episode.

Series, distributed by Television Personalities, Inc., has been signed in 18 markets, including nine of the Top 10 markets. Sales v.p. Al Unger reports that the "Tracy" pace is neck and neck with the pace set by "Magoo" last fall, also distributed by TPI. Spring selling, if aimed at advertisers might be full of pitfalls, but not as far as stations are concerned, Unger said. Of course, the nature of the product and its demand, on the station level, are consequential factors, he added.

Like "Magoo," all "Tracy" deals have been made with the stations. Deals include: WPIX, N.Y.; KTTV, Los Angeles; WGN, Chicago; WXYZ, Detroit; WCAU, Philadelphia; WTVN, Columbus; WHDH, Boston; WTAE, Pittsburgh; WTCN, Minneapolis; KMOX, St. Louis; WLW, Omaha; KGO, San Francisco; and KUTV, Salt Lake City.

Bill Ward Sets Guests For Jo Stafford Series

Bill Ward, production chief of Associated TeleVision, hopes to have Bob Hope as a guestar in the Jo Stafford hourlong vidtaped special series.

Ward, who will produce the Stafford series, recently was here to line up some talent. He said he's had a long personal relationship with Hope and that the gagman is due in England at the time of the taping for a feature film. Miss Stafford is due in London about mid-June when production on her show is slated to start.

ATV, and its U. S. subsid, Independent Television Corp., (ITC) plan to use the Stafford specials as a showcase of what can be done abroad. Marilyn Keith and Alan Bergman, successful husband and wife writing team, have been signed to write the series of specials. Already lined up as guestars are Ella Fitzgerald and Peter Sellers. The Keith-Bergman writing team have been associated as lyricists and special writers with such stars as Frank Sinatra, Bing Crosby, Danny Kaye, et al.

Ward is due to go to Moscow shortly to complete plans for the first live telecast, via microwave, out of Russia.

Sturm's Flock of Clients

New animation process developed by Sturm Studios has attracted seven new commercial clients, who've signed the teleblurb company for a series of commercials for fall airing which incorporate the animation process for the first time.

Clients include Speidel Watch Bands, out of McCann-Marschalk; Seabrook Farms, via Al Paul Lefton; the National Safety Council, via G. M. Basford agency; Fels-Naptha, via Aitkin-Kynett; Mazola, through Lennen & Newell; Elkman Co. and P.J.M. Laboratories.

NOTHING SERIOUS IN LAYOFFS, SEZ ZIV-UA

Hollywood, April 11.

"We're heading for what could be one of our biggest years," declared Babe Unger, executive veepee in charge of production for Ziv-UA, in denying any serious production problems or wholesale layoffs. The customary seasonal lull has called for some retrenchment, he said, but the cuts were no deeper than in previous years.

Currently in production are two syndicate entries—"King of Diamonds" starring Broderick Crawford, and Ivan Tors' "Rip Cord"; starting in two weeks will be "Some Like It Hot" scheduled for next season by NBC-TV; nearing the starting line is "Everglades" starring Ron Hayes (for either networks or syndicate sale), and another Tors' production, "Crime at Sea," is being readied for either a half-hour or an hour.

For the 1962-'63 season two hour shows are being prepared for ABC-TV. John Sinn, Ziv-UA prexy, is at the studio for production meetings. Reason for closing the casting office, Unger said, is a change of policy by which each production unit will do its own casting.

Advance sales of Crawford's "King of Diamonds" are running ahead of his "Highway Patrol," according to Unger.

MCA Off-Web Hrs. Into 31 Markets

MCA TV's four hourlong off-network series now have been sold in 31 markets.

New markets include WISC, Madison; WLUK, Green Bay; KTNT, Tacoma-Seattle; WRGP, Chattanooga; WRVA, Richmond; KGBT, Harlingen, Tex.; WKRG, Mobile; WMAZ, Macon; WTTV, Bloomington-Indianapolis; KOVR, Stockton-Sacramento; and WHIO, Dayton.

Series include "Riverboat," Suspicion," "Cimarron City," and "Overland Trail," with 108 hourlong episodes in toto.

Stations buying the hour vidfilms, according to v.p. Lou Friedland, seem to favor stripping them during early evening hours. Other slots, varying from weekend afternoons to late evening, also are being utilized for the series, Friedland added.

Lois Green, Elliott Lewis Join Desi Arnaz Staff

Hollywood, April 11.

Desi Arnaz handed out a pair of staff assignments in his Desilu Productions over the weekend.

Lois Green snagged post of story editor, and will work with Jerry Thorpe, programming veepee. Elliott Lewis was signed to a producer-director-writer pact, first assignment to be "Guestward Ho!" of which Cy Howard is exec producer.

Lewis swings to Desilu from Ziv-UA where he held similar spot for three years. Miss Green recently left NBC where she was story ed for "Shirley Temple Show," and prior to that was assistant story ed on Westinghouse-Desilu Playhouse.

McLean: 'Gotta Guard Canadian TV From Uncontrolled Foreign Invasion'

Ottawa, April 11.

Board of Broadcast Governors' regulation stipulating a minimum 45% Canadian content in Canadian television, which went into effect April 1 (to become 55% April 1, 1962), is "indispensable" to keeping Canadian tv Canadian, according to Ross McLean, program director at BBG. Speaking on Ottawa's new video station, CJOH-TV, McLean said the regulation would "guard Canadian tv from uncontrolled invasion from foreign countries, mainly the United States."

He believed it would not likely result in mediocre programs but declared the Canadian content percentage had nothing to do with quality, only quantity. "All we can do," he said, "is hope" for quality in the shows originating under the regulaution.

McLean told CJOH-TV announcer Peter Jennings (whose father, Charles Jennings, is a v.p. of opposition CBC) that BBG stretched the regulation by admitting the World Series, French-language shows from France and all shows from Commonwealth countries, as Canadian content. He figured there would be plenty time left for better U.S. shows after stations filled the 45% with Canadian items.

Asked by Jennings why BBG regulated tv and not theatres and publications, McLean explained that filmers came under provincial jurisdiction, and that publications were not licensed. He referred to a federal commission currently mulling its probings into magazines in Canada. Television and AM, he said, come under federal authority.

Canadian stations are generally reported not too concerned over the 45% minimum. Canadian Broadcasting Corp. figures it has always hit that figure or exceeded it. Non-CBC stations, particularly the new ones licensed during the past six months in market areas formerly held exclusively by CBC, are expected to find it hardest to meet.

Peddle Nipsey Russell 'Point of View' Show

Comedian Nipsey Russell, a performer on the Negro cabaret circuit, has been set to host a late evening variety and conversation tv show, the format of which now is being circulated among ad agencies for N. Y. sponsorship. Plan according to producers Michael Ross and Samuel Lax, is to vidtape the show for late night stripping.

Titled "Point of View!," show will feature guestars, jazz music, and people from various walks of life. Russell did a guesting sting on a recent "Jack Paar Show" and is currently at the "Baby Grand," a Harlem nitery. Some interest, according to producer Ross, has been evidenced by WNTA-TV, but any further station moves, he added, is dependent on sponsor coin.

Cartoon Tandem Animates WGN-TV

Chicago, April 11.

UPA's animated vidfilm series, "Nearsighted Mister Magoo," has knocked off all Wednesday night network competition in this market in its first month on the air. Although it's being sold by Television Personalities Inc. as a five-minute stanza for stripping, it's beamed in Chi as a half-hour program once a week, per WGN-TV's ingenuity in assembling the "Magoos" five at a time in a prime evening slot.

Nielsen survey covering the period from Feb. 6 to March 5 shows "Magoo" clocking a 19 rating in the Windy City, topping Perry Como's 18.6 on NBC, "Hawaiian Eye's" 14.8 on ABC, and "My Sister Eileen's" 12.2 on CBS. "Magoo" gets a strong lead-in from another animationer, "Huckleberry Hound," which has been averaging around 22 in the Nielsens. Cartoon tandem is putting the indie station in a strong Wednesday night position vs. the networks. WGN installed "Magoo" last Feb. 1.

UPA prexy Henry G. Saperstein discloses that KTTV, Los Angeles, off of WGN's success with the half-hour format, has installed a similar five-decker version on "Magoo" Fridays at 7:30 p.m.

Syndication Review

WILD CARGO
With Arthur Jones, Mel Leavitt
Producer: Jones
Director: John N. Leblanc
Distributor: Lakeside Television
30 Mins.; Wed., 10:30 p.m.
PARTICIPATING
WPIX-TV, N. Y. (film)

"Wild Cargo" is based on footage shot around the adventures of big game hunter and trapper Arthur Jones. It's a modest-budget package that's interesting and informative and logs as pubservice in the bargain.

Produced and narrated by Jones, stanza caught concerned the annual rattlesnake roundup at Okeene, Okla., which has been a tourist attraction for a couple of decades. "Cargo" cameras covered the capture of the diamondhead rattlers, America's largest and most dangerous snake, and the activities in O'Keene following the roundup—the weighing in, measuring for prizes and cleaning and preparing for sale. Jones pointed out that in all the years of the roundup none of the pros in the field had even been bitten, only victims being the over-festive during the in-town activities.

During the breaks, Jones worked with host Mel Leavitt, and as a finale a live animal was brought on camera (in this case a king cobra, most dangerous snake in the world). Both men worked intelligently, and Jones' soft-spoken (southern style) voice-over commentary was easy to take and added to the atmosphere of authenticity. Bill.

WB Anxious to Work Out An 'Acceptable Format' If ABC Takes Vegas Show

Hollywood, April 11.

If ABC-TV will schedule Warners-TV "Las Vegas File," the studio toppers, William T. Orr and Hugh Benson, will accept an invitation from several hotel owners in Vegas to try to work out some kind of a compromise so the series can be made for next season. So declared Benson last week, adding that "we are waiting to hear from ABC."

Bension said that they have been asked to return to Vegas in an effort to work out a format acceptable to the committee of hotel owners. If the show is put on schedule, the meeting will be held.

In the event of a negative response from either ABC or the Las Vegas committee, Warners will abandon the Vegas project. Bension said the series definitely wouldn't be shot away from the resort city.

CANADA COIN FOR RIPLEY QUICKIES

Sale on "Ripley's 'Believe It Or Not,'" the new five-minute dramatized film series based on the newspaper strip, are nearing the $100,000 mark in Canada, according to Hardie Frieberg, prexy of Major Programs, distributors of the show.

Such markets as Toronto, Montreal, Halifax, Winnipeg, St. John's, Vancouver and several others have already been sold. Negotiations are underway for sales of the series in England, Japan and South America.

Domestic distribution continues to progress, according to Frieberg, with sales in Phoenix, San Francisco, Des Moines, Saginaw, and to Kroger Grocery Co. in Detroit. Major Programs also has inked deal on its religioso anthology series "Crossroads" in Columbus, Tuscon and Toronto.

MAJORS: 25% OF TV NETWORKS

Researcher Turns Peddler

There's a research man in the area who's that impressed by his own findings that he's paid for an option to peddle an off-network series.

Henry Brenner, prexy of the Home Testing Institute, which does product test surveys and runs TvQ, a qualitative show and talent rating service, has bought a selling option on "High Adventure," the Lowell Thomas string of travel hours that had a '58-'59 CBS-TV outing.

Brenner says the color film that spans Thomas adventures in 11 episodes from the North Pole to Timbuktu, showed up so favorably in TvQ mail questionnaire surveys that he persuaded Thomas' production company, Odyssey Productions, to sell him an option on the sales rights. Brenner didn't bet all the way on his own research. He went to the Nielsens and found matching results (including ratings consistently higher than the regular series preempted for "High Adventure," and in one case a 28 aud share against "Wagon Train").

Series originally cost $250,000 a stanza, and is now available for $50,000. Brenner has sent a special promotion piece to more than 800 agency and client execs in quest of a potential bankroller for a web rerun next year.

Wolper-Sterling Documentary Unit Jumpin'; 750G on 8 Specials

Hollywood, April 11.

With six documentary tv specials in production and two others just completed, activity at Wolper-Sterling is at a peak. Wolper-Sterling Productions is an association of Saul J. Turell, prexy of Sterling Television, with David L. Wolper Productions, an association which has been hitting pay dirt.

For its 1961 schedule, Wolper-Sterling will spend more than $750,000, compared with $250 laid out for its '60 program. Considerable personnel changes, promoting staff members and adding others, have figured importantly in the growth of the firm whose personnel list has climbed from three to 42 within recent months. Producer-director list includes Wolper, Turell, Jack Haley Jr. and Mel Stuart.

Recently completed are "Hollywood: The Golden Years" and "The Legend of Valentino." Latter one-hour documentary has been picked up for sponsorship by Peter Pan Foundations. "Golden Years" has been bought by Procter & Gamble and is slated for fall airing in an NBC "Wagon Train" preemption.

"The Race for Space," the Wolper telementary which launched the young producer as an outside documentary specialist, has been picked up for a rerun ride on a syndicated basis by Tidewater. Same oil company also was inked to sponsor "Project Man in Space," a new telementary, produced by Jack Haley Jr., with Mike

Affluent Beachcomber

Hollywood, April 11.

Bob Stabler, president of Filmaster, Inc., flew to Winter Park, Fla., a few days ago for a gander at "The Beachcomber," the company's new series in production there.

Twist is that Stabler piloted his own plane, a twin engined Apache, did the navigation and was the only passenger.

TV 'Play of Week' Seen as Certainty For Next Season

A new cycle of dramas for "The Play of The Week" is understood to be in the cards for next season, despite the expected sale of WNTA-TV, Newark-N.Y. outlet owned by National Telefilm Associates.

NTA Productions, which does the showcase under the overall aegis of exec producer Worthington (Tony) Miner, has a healthy syndication operation working in its favor. "The Play of The Week" now is being telecast in 72 markets. In the recent stormy NTA stockholders meeting, NTA prexy Oliver Unger pointed out that the dramatic showcase not only has proved out as an artistic success, but has turned a profit too.

Whatever the disposition of WNTA-TV, or the wishes of the new owners, it's believed one of the other six stations in the N.Y. market would grab the property. It's because of these reasons that Miner and his production team are thinking in terms of the '61-'62 season, and going ahead with plans.

Among the properties slated to round up this season are "Wingless Victory," Maxwell Anderson, starring Hugh O'Brian, Ertha Kitt, Cathleen Nesbitt; "Close Quarters," authored by W. O. Somins and adapted by Gilbert Lenox, a two-character play with Richard Kiley and Patricia Jesel; and "All Summer Long," by Robert Anderson.

Sweets, Ideal In 50-City 'Funny' Tie

California National Productions, in launching syndication of its "Funny Manns" series, has secured a tieup with Sweets Co. of America and Ideal Toy. Sweets and Ideal will ride the eight-minute series in some of the top 50 markets.

More than 20 stations already have signed and many others are being lined up within the next month for the confection and toy concerns' commercials. Sweets campaign starts early this summer.

One hundred and four episode series consists of oldtime comedy shorts with the antics and running commentaries done by Cliff Norton, in an emcee role. Series is being produced for NCP by New Merritt Enterprises. E. Roger Muir, co-creator of "The Howdy Doody Show," is producer-director. His coproducer is Bob Nicholson who also has the "second banana" role in the series.

Among major stations and markets signed to date are WISN, Milwaukee; WEWS, Cleveland; WABC, N.Y.; KSL, Salt Lake City; WSAU, Wasau; WGAL, Lancaster; WBNS, Columbus; WSB, Atlanta; WALB, Albany, Ga.; KSD, St. Louis; WCCO, Minneapolis-St. Paul; KING, Seattle; WHC, Pittsburgh; WGN, Chicago; and KBTV, Denver.

'M Squad' Sales

Another 12 stations have inked for off-network "M Squad," bringing the total to 40 stations.

MCA TV, distributing the series, has made new deals with the following outlets: KGW, Portland; KNOE, Monroe; WOAI, San Antonio; WBNS, Columbus; KING, Seattle; WTVR, Richmond, Va.; WTCN, Minneapolis; KVOS, Bellingham; WSM, Nashville; KOTA, Rapid City; WFBC, Greenville; and WMTW, Portland, Me.

WB, COL, METRO, 20TH IN COMMAND

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

The celluloid triumph on network tv finds motion picture companies riding the crest of next season's programming wave, accounting for at least 25% of programming slotted during the prime evening hours of the three networks.

The leaders are Warner Bros., Screen Gems, (Columbia's offspring), followed by Metro, 20th-Fox and a single hour entry by Walt Disney.

There has been a turn of fortune in the fate of a number of vidfilmeries, on the basis of the blueprints of the three webs, now about 80% completely drawn. Four Star Films, compared to the season winding up, has been hit hard. Four Star Films only as four shows inked in for '61-'62 at this point, accounting for three hours weekly.

Desilu's banners are only riding on one show at this point, that show being "The Untouchables," ABC-TV. Desilu might have some partnership production arrangements on other network entries riding with different colors.

MCA TV's Revue remains as hot as ever next season, with a full roster of vidfilm shows slated for airing.

Showing surprising strength is the Danny Thomas-Lou Edelman-Sheldon Leonard combine under the Marterto banner. In a variety of deals, Marterto is slated to supply five shows, all half-hour situation comedies.

Hubbell Robinson is represented by two hour entries, both on NBC-TV.

Those are the major highlights of next season's schedule. Here are the details:

WB-ABC Still Married

Warner Bros. seems to have a franchise for itself at ABC-TV, that franchise, as spelled out in the past few seasons, is supplying the web with about one third of its nighttime programming. WB shows definitely slated for next season include: "Lawman," "Cheyenne," "Surfside Six," "Bugs Bunny," "Hawaiian Eye," "Room for One More," "77 Sunset Strip," and "Roaring 20's." Other possible WB entries include "Las Vegas File," and "The Force," both hour entries.

Screen Gems roster leans more heavily with ABC-TV. Shows on that network includes: "Top Cat," "Naked City," Donna Reed, "The Hathaways," and "The Flintstones," "Dennis the Menace" and "Route 66" return on CBS-TV with fresh episodes next season, while CBS-TV will give another rerun ride to "Father Knows Best."

Examined in this rundown are the time periods from 7:30 to 11 p.m., Monday through Sunday. Outside that time span, SG has an NBC-TV Sunday at 7 p.m. half-hour entry, titled "Daring Deeds of Donny Dru." (SG also has three cartoon shows on a national spot basis with Kelloggs.)

Metro has "Cain's 100," "Dr. Kildare," and "National Velvet," NBC-TV. ("Velvet" is slated for Sundays at 7 p.m.) "Father of the Bride" will be on CBS-TV.

Twentieth-Fox will account for "Bus Stop" and "Adventures in Paradise," ABC-TV; and "Dobie Gillis," CBS-TV. Possibilities are

Cartoon Scorecard

For kiduits following the evening network cartoon craze for the '61-'62 season, this is the scorecard to date:

"Walt Disney Show," (cartoon insertions), NBC; "Calvin & The Colonel," "Bugs Bunny," "Top Cat," and "The Flintstones," all ABC. Going beyond the 7:30 to 11 p.m. prime time period, there's also "Bull Winkle" as a possible NBC Sunday night 6:30 to 7 p.m. entry.

Par's Susskind-Levy Deal Bid To Catch Up With Other Majors in TV

Par to Reap Col Coin?

Could well be that Paramount Pictures will be sharing in the ownership of at least three, perhaps four, feature films made by rival Columbia Pictures.

David Susskind, whose Talent Associates joined with Par last week on a deal (that Par says gives it participation in everything he does), has already done one picture for Col and, was contracted to do three more, including a filmization of "Requiem for a Heavyweight."

Such an ownership, even by so great an indirection, is unusual in Hollywood annals.

Paramount Pictures will probably be using the David Susskind-Al Levy Talent Associates, which it bought 50% of last week (for under $2,000,000), as the springboard to get deeper into video production. Among the Hollywood majors, Par is lagging behind Metro and 20th and is years behind Screen Gems (Col) and Warner Bros. in terms of tv development.

Susskind and Levy's live and tape production firm, Par said last week, will be "integrated" into what remains of its own "production activities for sponsored tv," which evidently means that Par's Coast tape operation at KTLA, L.A., will also move under the aegis of the two N.Y. production partners. There are farther-reaching implications, too, in the Par 50% buy into the "live" tv production house. Talent Associates might well become the backbone of production for Telemeter, Par's pay-tv arm.

TA, according to its new partner, had cash in excess of $1,000,000 at the time of the Par deal, plus yards of tape and kinie material shot by Levy and Susskind for network consumption since '49. TA has long looked to finding a residual market for the old network programs, and possibly now Par's distribution setup can be of help here.)

Par further listed TA's gross last year at $5,500,000. TA got a cash-plus stock deal in selling 50% to Paramount.

One other aspect of the Par-TA partnership is the possibility that Susskind will also produce some features for his new partner, since the Columbia production deal he made last year (with three pix still to go) was non-exclusive, according to Par prexy Barney Balaban. Balaban also said that everything that Talent Associates does from now on will be for the new combine. One exception is Susskind's "Open End," weekly interview program he hosts and produces on WNTA-TV, N.Y., and which is syndicated on tape to other U.S. markets.

Lotsa Licensing Deals; CBS Films' Multiple Tieups

CBS Films' licensing division is on a variety of fronts, ranging from publishing an original paperback novel on "Danger Man" to 16m distribution of "Harvest of Shame."

In the non-theatrical 16m field, licensing director Murray Benson said that he's made a number of deals involving several CBS News programs. Carousel Films was given distribution of "The Influential Americans" and "The Boat Majority" and McGraw-Hill, "Harvest of Shame" and "Crossroads Africa—Pilot for a Peace Corp." All four programs are part of the "CBS Reports" series. McGraw-Hill will also distribute "The College Panic," a program from the 20th Century series.

In addition, Carousel secured non-theatrical rights to the Terrytoon cartoon, "Juggler of Our Lady," based on the religious fable.

Dell Publishing has been licensed by CBS Films to create and publish an original paperback novel on "Danger Man," the British produced adventure series which recently had its debut.

Benson also announced that the first drafts of three manuscripts of hard-cover books based on CBS News division programs have been completed. They are "The Years Between," by Marvin Barrett, various "Twentieth Century" programs; an untitled book by Andrew Rooney about four great battles of World War II, and "Big City—1980," by John Burchard, dean of the School of Humanities at Mass. Institute of Technology, and based on the "Tomorrow" program of the same name. First two books will be published by Little Brown, and the third by J. B. Lippincott. All three are aimed for fall publication.

TV MARKETEERS TO PEDDLE 'SEA HAWK'

"Adventures of the Sea Hawk," starring John Howard, is being offered in syndication by TV Marketeers, the recently formed firm headed by Wynn Nathans.

Nathans said he acquired the 26-episode series from Wesmor, Inc. Series, shot on location in the Caribbean, was produced by Eugene Solow and Brewster Morgan, same producers who teamed with actor Howard on MCA TV's "Doctor Hudson's Secret Journal."

In conjunction with Marketeers' first syndie entry, outfit has opened offices in Los Angeles, under the direction of Ed Simmel, Chicago, John Rohrs; and has hired Charles Ross in N.Y. Nathans said he is looking for sales representatives in other areas of the country.

Regional Brewers Hop on 'Diamonds'

Three major regional brewing companies have hopped on the Broderick Crawford "King of Diamonds" bandwagon, encompassing 33 markets including New York and Philadelphia. Sponsoring trio include Jax Beer, Piel's Beer and Jacob Schmidt Brewing Co.

Jax Beer, via Doherty, Clifford, Steers & Shenfield, will sponsor the show in 18 markets in the midwest and southwest, with particular markets yet to be finalized.

Piel's Beer, via Young & Rubicam, has bought the series in five markets, including N.Y., Philadelphia, Hartford, New Haven and Syracuse.

Jacob Schmit, through Maxon, Inc., has signed in 10 midwest cities.

WB Post-'50 Sales

Another eight markets have signed up for the post-'50 group of 40 Warner Bros. pix being distributed by Seven Arts Associated. Total market tally for the package now is 70.

New station deals include: WCYB, Briston Va.; KREM, Spokane; WCTV, Tallahassee; WISC, Madison, Wisc; WTVY, Dothan, Ala.; KGW, Portland, Ore.; WTVO, Rockland, Ill.; WSLS, Roakane, Va.

WNBQ, Chicago, bought four WB special features and WSLS, Roanoke, bought 18 WB pix in the special action group. Titles in the latter group include "Cosmic Monster," "The Crawling Eye," and "Heroes of the Alamo."

The Real and the Credible

The word is "hospital." What immediate personal recollection does it bring to mind? A last whiff of ether before sinking into limbo? A frantic vigil outside the door of an emergency ward? A very first look at your very first daughter (through a nursery window) and your unabashed delight that she had the good sense to resemble her mother?

Whatever the scene, chances are it was highly colored with emotion and much too narrow in outlook for you to have come away with a truly comprehensive picture of the hospital's organization, personnel and problems.

To get that picture in the easiest possible way (you don't even have to buy chocolates for the nurse), we suggest a viewing of next Sunday evening's "Anatomy of a Hospital," the fifth in executive producer Irving Gitlin's splendid series of "NBC White Papers."

The program—narrated by a perfectly healthy Chet Huntley—concentrates its attention on the Cambridge (Mass.) City Hospital, but in its filmed examination of just about every phase of that institution's activities, it does reflect the nation-wide hospital dilemma brought on by personnel shortages and rising medical costs.

As viewers of previous "NBC White Papers" ("The U-2 Affair," "Sit-In" et al.) might easily guess, Sunday's documentary is designed as a treatment rather than a treat—serious, meaningful and fair.

Producer Al Wasserman's crewmen spent more than a full month at the Cambridge institution, where they had the full cooperation of the hospital's staff. They returned to New York not merely with footage, but with an enormous respect for the professional competence and durability of the doctors and other staffers, some of whose regimens make a professional basketball player's schedule sound like an Adriatic cruise. One resident physician—without so much as a single yawn—calmly told the crew of a 120-hour week he'd just completed.

Few backgrounds are as fertile in drama as a city hospital. It wasn't too long before the "White Paper" crew began feeling a warm kinship with the people around them. The not-unexpected death of an elderly patient with whom they'd become quite friendly over the weeks hit them as a genuinely personal loss. The news that an injured child (whom they'd seen being whisked into the accident ward) was not as badly hurt as originally feared, made them want to cheer.

There were moments of laughter, too. At the Cambridge hospital, just about three-fourths of the internes and resident doctors are from foreign countries. They're an able, tireless and extremely likable bunch, but they do have occasional difficulties with the English language.

The chief surgical resident told our crew that shortly after his arrival at the hospital (from Peru) about five years ago, he was confronted by a young patient who complained that his tummy was upset. "Who is 'Tummy?' " asked the puzzled medic seriously. When the term was explained to him, he laughed harder than anyone else in the room (not excluding the tummy's owner).

A documentary such as "Anatomy of a Hospital" is, we feel, a fine example of the kind of realism that has been proving increasingly attractive to TV audiences. A skilful, sensitive TV staff can (from the planning right through to the film-editing) make such realism as absorbing as the most expertly fashioned work of fiction.

Curiously, the very success of such documentaries over the years has made TV strive relentlessly for authenticity in its fictional presentations. In these latter cases, obviously, the key is not reality but credibility. We doubt whether any viewer thinks our "Wagon Train" dramas were shot by a couple of newsreel cameramen who happened to be following the caravan west at the time.

The element of credibility has never been as important as it is today (with viewers being far better informed than they were a decade ago). But at NBC we've always been sticklers for authenticity. What isn't patently real (such as a documentary) must, at the least, be believable.

A couple of the newcomers on our fall schedule illustrate that point rather neatly. "Cain's Hundred," for example, is a series in which a law-enforcer battles the nation's 100 rulers of syndicated crime. To insure a maximum of conviction —no pun intended—literally months of research were conducted before a pilot script went into production.

Similarly buttressed with authenticated atmosphere and characterization will be "87th Precinct," a series centering on activities of a metropolitan detective squad. The dramas will be based on the big-city mysteries of novelist Ed McBain, pseudonym for author Evan ("Blackboard Jungle") Hunter; and Hunter is the fellow who spent several weeks as an observer at a Manhattan police precinct before putting finger to typewriter key. This same assiduous regard for dramatic fidelity will prevail through each of the "87th Precinct" teleplays.

The quest for authenticity in TV drama is tedious and expensive. And the uncompromising producer who refuses to shave time by skimping on details is considered a trifle daft by less exacting competitors. But they're so wrong. That producer isn't losing his marbles; he's gaining an audience.

Schenley Trying to Slip TV Stations A Mickey Finn In Its Wine Com'ls? —On Other Madison Ave. Fronts

By BILL GREELEY

Is Schenley trying to slip broadcasters a Mickey Finn? New York stations WNBC-TV and WCBS-TV have indicated they think so in a recent rejection of the booze firm's wine commercials.

Continuity acceptance execs at both stations objected to the repeated and prominent display of the Schenley logo in storyboards for a Dubonnet wine campaign. Station men feel that the Schenley crest is clearly a promotion for the company's hard liquors (Schenley-branded whiskies) and superfluous in blurbs for the wine subsidiary, which is pitched only under the Dubonnet label.

Under the National Assn. of Broadcasters code, only wine and beer advertising is acceptable, and, in fact, no U.S. tv station has ever taken a straight campaign for the hard stuff. Both WNBC and WCBS are code subscribers.

Same time, the commercials have been accepted by the Metropolitan area's nonsubscribers, WOR-TV and WNTA-TV. Former will carry a straight spot campaign, latter a half-hour Mantovani musical stanza on Saturday nights, both beginning this week. Dubonnet radio campaigns will be heard on WOR and WNTA (simulcast), and possibly WABC, WMGM and WINS where negotiations are underway.

Campaign is being placed by Dubonnet's agency Keppner, but it's been learned the $800,000 to $1,000,000 (covering some national mag ads as well as New York broadcasting) is not coming from the shop's budget for the wine company. Funds are being switched from agencies that handle the Schenley-branded hard stuff.

One station man who rejected the campaign said virtually every frame of the storyboard carried the Schenley logo, sometimes in full-frame blowup, and even on zoomed-in glasses receiving the bubbly. Another commented, "I don't know if they want to sell Dubonnet, but they sure wanted folks to know about Schenley."

The station men, of course, were acting on their obligation to the code, but there are those in the industry who figure (while also figuring new revenues) that regulations drawing the line at wine are pretty unsophisticated — reasoning, perhaps, that a New York viewer who goes to Bellevue a wino is hardly better off than one who packs in on barleycorn.

Blurbing Over

What ever happened to sponsor identification? Following is a list of sponsors and agencies spotted on the new ABC-TV hour, "Asphalt Jungle:" Speidel, via McCann-Marschalk; Gillette, Maxon; Beecham Products, Kenyon & Eckhardt; Chiett, Peabody, Lennen & Newell; Union Carbide, Wm. Esty; American Chicle, Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample; Carter Products, Ted Bates; Pepsi-Cola, BBDO; Simoniz, D-F-S; Polk Miller Products, N. W. Ayer; Liggett & Myers, McCann Erickson.

FSR Pipeline

As are several other agencies, Fuller & Smith & Ross is completely wired for intra-office, closed-circuit tv, but unlike most others, FSR also is rigged to pipe in outside video signals.

Using the outside system, agency last week fed the opening of client Hercules plastics plant from Lake Charles, La., to the shop's New York offices at 666 Fifth Ave. Hercules execs and the press caught the ribbon-cutting bit, including a dedication by Louisiana Gov. Jimmy Davis, off various receivers around the agency offices.

FSR veepee and radio-tv manager Ed Mahoney says the agency is now completing a circuit that will pipe network program screenings direct from ABC, NBC and CBS to exec offices at 666.

Paylootvee

In a talk before the Pittsburgh Radio-Television Club titled, "The Myth of Pay Television," FSR senior veepee for radio-tv Art Duram gave a conservative example of the toll take:

"On the incredible side, let's take Rogers's "Wagon Train." The last time Nielsen counted up its audience, some 18,500,000 homes were tuned in. Now, let's say suddenly its a Telemeter operation and the book says it costs 25c for the hour. So be pessimistic and cancel out 75% of all the homes because they refuse to pay the 25c. Only 25% of the audience love it enough to pay, and from just that small portion the end result would be $1,250,000 in the coffers for one night and that would be just the beginning—every star in the show would have a permanent annuity, for that film could rerun many times—all over the world.

"Now, hardly anyone is complaining — only the sponsor who used to be happy to pay $35,000 for a one-minute crack at that audience and its agency who has to resort to magazines for sales impact, and, of course, the congressmen in Washington who are getting thousands of letters from families who liked the good old days and the commercials much better."

Up and down: David McCall has been named to succeed agency prexy David Ogilvy as copy chief at Ogilvy, Benson & Mather. McCall joined the shop in '51 and has been a veepee since '56.

George B. Norris, formerly with Lennen & Newell, is now an account exec on Brown & Williamson at Ted Bates.

New Biz: Technicolor to Kenyon & Eckhardt for consumer division advertising.

With the Station Reps

New biz continued to fall to the Katz reppery this week with signing of another NBC Spot sales station and reportedly two outlets in the Rines group.

KSD-TV, St. Louis, biggest station left that's been scheduled to drop network subsidiary representation, has pacted with Katz, and the rep firm is understood to be close to landing WRGB-TV, Schenectady, N. Y., and WCKT, Miami, both still with NBC Spot Sales. However, no word has come down on the latter two, and several other shops are still pitching.

The Rines acquisitions are said to be WCSH-TV, Portland, Me., and WLBZ, Bangor, Me., both with Weed up till now. Rine radio stations in Portland, Bangor and Augusta, Ga., are understood to be staying with Weed.

Loss of the Rine group tv stations will be a hard blow to the Weed org, which once repped the ABC-TV o&o's and has lost a score of first rate tv properties to other repperies during the last three years.

Hardly Pat

Metropolitan area radio independent WPAT, bucking the downtrend in first-quarter '61 biz, reports an alltime high for the three months, representing a 16% increase over the first quarter a year ago.

New advertising, according to the station, is up 94% in the first quarter, and for the third consecutive year, WPAT is showing a 98% renewal of bankrollers.

Briefs: GHP Cigar has slated a spot campaign on WABC-TV via Compton agency. Radio Advertising Bureau has turned to the direct-mail medium for a promotion mailing of jumbo postcards to local and regional advertisers and their agencies. Some 170,000 of the giant cards will go out. Sherry Gordon Stations, KQBY, San Francisco, and KBUZ, Phoenix, to Adam Young, Inc.

Is TV Dealing U.S. A Cultural Blow?—That's Rot, Sez Robt. Sarnoff

One of video's great accomplishments has been achieved by giving viewers what they don't want, NBC chairman Robert Sarnoff last week told a seminar at the Annenberg School of Communications at Pennsylvania U.

"Perhaps the most impressive accomplishments of tv as a social force," he said, "have been made possible by the phenomenon unique to broadcasting. That phenonemon is the exposure of viewers to material that they would normally have little chance or desire to see . . . This phenomenon has enabled network television to confront millions of viewers with cultural and intellectual opportunities that they do not ordinarily seek and would not otherwise have experienced."

Picking examples, the NBC chairman pointed out that tv had given Americans "unparalled opportunity to become familiar with the thinking and character of the leading personalities of our time, with the events that are shaping our future, and with the issues that engage us all."

He called it significant that each of the three national elections since the advent of television on a network basis had a greater percentage of eligible voters going to the polls than ever before in U. S. history.

In answer to charges that web programming has lowered public taste, Sarnoff declared, "In the decade since the United States began to feel the impact of television as a national medium, our populahas gone up 20%, but the publica- of books has gone up more than 100%; publication of juvenile books is up about 200%; library circulation is up 50%; the number of museums has grown by nearly 80%; the number of symphony orchestras has doubled; the sale of classical phonograph records is up 50%; college enrollment is up 46%. "Now, I don't suggest that television is necessarily to be credited for all of this upsurge in cultural vitality. At the very least, however, it's hard to see how it is dealing us a cultural blow."

Open End

A panel of five legit critics, Broadway and out-of-town, one producer-director and an actor-playwright probed into the state of contemporary dramatic criticism on David Susskind's "Open End" show on WNTA-TV Sunday night (9). While a flock of stimulating ideas were tossed around, the session was most intriguing as a lesson in conversational gamesmanship.

Director Peter Glenville, critic Kenneth Tynan and actor Peter Ustinov demonstrated once again that the sun rarely sets on a silent Englishman. The trio, taking off from diverse viewpoints, studded the two-and-a-half hour stanza with glittering insights and aphorisms and easily walked off with team honors. Walter Kerr, N. Y. Herald Tribune, kept the American colors flying bravely with an occasional assist from Elliot Norton, veteran Boston critic. From the Toronto critical scene, Nathan Cohen scored as a contentious Cassandra of the dramatic arts, while Tom Curtiss, of the Herald Tribune's Paris legit staff, was odd man out, stuck in left field with few balls hit his way.

The talk chiefly focussed on the state of the theatre and the responsibility of the drama critic. On the present level of the Broadway drama, there was virtually unanimous agreement that it had sunk to an artistic nadir due to soaring costs and declining playwrights. Glenville stated that the prevailing mood among investors and managers was to stage musicals only and forsake the more serious dramas entirely.

The question posed to the critics, mainly Kerr as the only representative of the all-important New York dailies, was whether they had an obligation to encourage the more intellectually ambitious plays by writing unqualified raves. Or as moderator David Susskind put it: "should they consciously adjectivize" to get out the theatregoers for deserving works. Kerr conceded that a real problem existed for critics confronting a serious play that was not entirely successfully executed. Cohen insisted and insisted that the critic's only obligation is to express himself forthrightly and damn the torpedoes. How he carries out this policy in Toronto was not explored but he did admit writing a positive notice for "Camelot" when it opened, also claiming to have suggested a piece of "stage carpentry" on the musical that was finally adopted.

Susskind was interested in whether critics tend to write raves more easily for a frothy dramatic offering than for a lofty drama. He also was interested in how Walter Kerr got along with his wife, Jean Kerr, an irrelevancy that Kerr handled kindly. Herm.

Play of the Week

"In a Garden" is hardly the sturdiest of the late Philip Barry's plays, but has enough flashes of the Barry wit and brilliance to make this "Play of the Week" revival worthwhile. Certainly, it constitutes more stimulating fare, for all its weaknesses, than most of the drama available on tv today.

It is a play of manners, a tragi-comedy that explores the differences between a playwright husband governed by a need to order his life along his conceptions of style and taste, and a wife who's yearned to be her spontaneous self, but has never been permitted the luxury. Against this background, Barry institutes a clever situation that becomes a springboard for his action and resolution, a recreation of the single instance, years before, when she did act spontaneously.

Barry's characters aren't entirely believable, and in some respects are dated as well, but a fine performance and sensitive direction by Henry Kaplan nonetheless produce fine moments of high comedy, drama and stage magic. The cast is uniformly fine—Roddy McDowell gives a clever, controlled performance as the husband, George Grizzard sets the right romantic tone as a man out of the wife's past, and Barbara Cook takes the honors with a wonderfully wistful performance as the wife. Frances Sternhagen contributes a show-stopping bit of broad comedy as a mousy secretary who sheds her inhibitions temporarily and devastatingly, and Laurie Main lends good support. Lewis Freedman produced. Chan.

Young People's Concert

While the N.Y. Police Dept. was breaking up the gathering of folk singers in Greenwich Village, Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic were telecasting the importance of folk-songs and folk-music to the musical world. It was Bernstein's valedictory for the season under the Shell Oil auspices, and appropriately enough, the conductor took cognizance of the import contributions made by this group of artists.

Bernstein took the thesis that folk songs came from the speech of the people that later found its way into the important musical libraries of all lands. It's the flavor that gives character to many great pieces of musical literature. By way of illustration, Bernstein read from Mozart, Carlos Chavez, Charles Ives and Canteloube.

Soloist for the occasion was Marni Nixon, a young and charming soprano, who delineated a group of folk songs from the Auvergne.

Per usual, Bernstein was most of the show. While his concerts are presumably aimed at the youngsters, his contagion and enthusiasm are picked up by adults as well. He provides lessons that can be profitable to all age groups, and gives music appreciation one of its most valuable boosts. Bernstein is, of course, a great artist in his own right, but on television, he becomes a great entertainer as well.

Another contribution to the show was the camera work which became pixieish at times. The lens picked up children, and adults as well, in the process of paying attention or inattention, and provided an added note of charm.

Another plus was the commercials, which provided an excellent image for Shell. They were tasteterms of people and indicated an interest in the company's young employees. Jose.

Twentieth Century

"The Twentieth Century's" cameras and roving correspondent Walter Cronkite moved into Sweden last Sunday (9) for the first of a two-part investigation of the premise "Trouble In Paradise?" Once again the CBS series brought a current problem to the fore in vivid pictorial terms and pointed interviews.

Since it was the first of a two-parter, the initial half-hour just laid the groundwork for the investigation. But even so it was a good introductory lesson to Sweden, its people and life in the welfare state.

In interviews with Prime Minister Tage Erlander, Swedish political leaders and the man-in-the-street, Cronkite did a superb job of getting to the heart of the matter. How the welfare state operates and its effect on its citizens were discussed with candor.

The big poser is why this country with its high living standards, old age security and sundry other comforts should have such a high rate of alcoholism, suicides and juvenile delinquency. That's to be spelled out in the second part next Sunday and the initialer served as an excellent trailer for it. Gros.

SLASH PRICES ON BRITISH TV SETS

London, April 11.

It is a sign of the times that one major tv manufacturing company has slashed prices on its receivers. the prices have been cut by as much as $48 on some models. Other manufacturers had reduced their prices in the latter part of last year in a bid to cut stocks which had accumulated in warehouses and in retail stores through the country.

The latest sales index covering last February, shows that the average number of sets sold per shop per month was 5.1 compared with 6.3 in January and 7 and 9.3 in the corresponding months of 1960. Sales of radio sets hae suffered less than tv and, while below the 1960 level, are running about 10% up on 1959. The introduction of transistor radios on the market has obviously been a major fillip in new sales.

AFFAIRS OF ANATOL
With John van Dreelen, Oscar Beregi, Kathleen Crowley, others
Producer: Alexander Ramati
Director: Ezra Stone
Adaptation: Robert Boon
90 Mins., Thurs. (30) 8:30 p.m.
KNXT, Hollywood

This second of five special 90-minute dramatizations being presented this season by KNXT in the interests of better television was, indeed, better than most of what is seen on tv but, alas, fell somewhat shy of the special excitement one hopes for in what is classified as prestige entertainment. In the wake of Alexander Ramati's first effort in the series, his excellent production of Shaw's stimulating "Candida," this revival of Arthur Schnitzler's light and episodic 1893 play, "Affairs of Anatol," emerged a disappointment.

Popping out of a 1961 picture tube, "Anatol" has evolved into a rather shallow, wordy and lethargic attraction, its native spirit of witty sophistication, delicate irony and subtlety of style as well as the intended endearing nature of its central characters tarnished by the passage of time, victimized by the modern viewer's acquired immunity to astonishment when confronted with the "naughty" manners of its rakish, but outmoded "lady's man" hero, and faintly incompatible with the supercharged requirements of the living room medium itself.

In condensing and unifying Schnitzler's popular comedy of manners to fit the time allotment and erase the detached nature of the seven original episodes or dialog scenes, adaptor Robert Boon employed a rather feminine and slightly artificial device (a memento box) to knit the sequences together and handle exposition. The three chosen episodes had their share of wit and romantic vigor, to be sure, but the results were uneven and the pace measured, a static condition upon which director Ezra Stone could not greatly improve.

John van Dreelen exuded charm in the title role, but somehow the character emerged hapless and less than well-rounded, devoid of the desirable savoir-faire and consistently one-down to his flames. Oscar Beregi appeared to warm up to the part of Anatol's faithful confidante, Max, as the play went along, but there were times when he seemed quite ill-at-ease and uncertain. Kathleen Crowley scored with a spirited enactment of Ilona, Susan Silo contributed a flashy personification of Lita, and Didi Ramati got the appropriate sweet naivete into the character of Cora. Jack Tesler and Ralph Smiley were effective as Anatol's servants. Tube.

EICHMANN & ISRAEL
With Warren Wallace, Charles Collingwood, others
Producer-Writer-Reporter: Wallace
Music: Robert Starer
60 Mins., Wed. (5), 7:30 p.m.
WCBS-TV, N. Y. (film)

Diffuse, but important and generally well done was the judgment of an unusual hour (for local tv or, for that matter, network tv) called "Eichmann & Israel." Planted in the middle of the network's prime time schedule, "Eichmann & Israel" stressed the meaning of the trial in Jerusalem for Jewry and, in some measure, the world at large.

To Warren Wallace, who was billed by WCBS as "producer-writer-reporter" (under the aegis of exec producer Ned Cramer), the political, sociological and historical importance of the trial was more interesting than the crimes against mankind and the guilt of Eichmann. This may have been a source of discontent for some viewers who tuned in expecting a detailed report on scenes of Nazi brutality. But Wallace, whose soft yet persistent style as an interviewer deserves further attention from his station and from the parent network, was emphatically after bigger truths, although he may not really have needed an hour to get at them.

The trial, said one interviewee, "will remind people of what happened; they are happy to forget unpleasant things." Said another: "(It) may serve as shock treatment and restore (Jews') former views." Both statements indicate to Israeli Jews and some of America's Jewry the "need" for the trial, however rife with political overtones it may be. One observer interrogated by Wallace noted that the trial will, because of the offenses against the religious minority, create a new bond among Jews, which some on the program felt was weakening. There were many points of view, some subtle, some blatant and nationalistic, expressed in the course of the hour.

Program's value for New York area, where there is a proportionately and numerically large Jewish population, was great. And as a reminder of how easy it is for the majority to victimize the minority, the program was also valuable to other groups.

Original music by Robert Starer, an Israeli composer, was muted but authentic and sometimes melodic. Camera work of Edmund Bert Gerard competent, aiding Wallace considerably. Art.

DANGER MAN
(Handcuffed)
With Patrick McGoohan, Sarah Lawson, Lionel Murton, Derren Nesbitt, Carl Jaffe, Louise Collins
Producer-Director: Ralph Smart
Writers: Brian Clemens, Ian Stuart Black
30 Mins.: Wed., 8:30 p.m.
BROWN & WILLIAMSON, KIMBERLY-CLARK
CBS-TV N. Y., (film)
(Ted Bates: Foote, Cone' & Belding)

A taut, suspenseful charade which would blow into nothing if examined closely, characterized the first episode of "Danger Man," a midseason replacement on CBS-TV. It had more derring-do than plausibility, more finesse than content.

Whether the British import has the legs for the long pull is problematical, judging from the initialer. Preem half-hour, though, to its credit, did reflect better writing and more polished production, compared to British imports of the past.

Series was produced by Associated TeleVision of England and sold to CBS-TV by ATV's American subsidiary, Independent Television Corp. Deal represented one of those infrequent instances in the recent past where a British vidfilm show found a network berth.

Principal role fell to Patrick McGoohan, cast as an undercover man for NATO. He's a good looking chap and has a Douglas Fairbanks flair for action. Some updating on what he's called on to do might take away the incredible superman quality—leaving the adults free to join the kids in accepting the action, suspense yarn.

In the preem, McGoohan got out of an impossibly tight situation by running into a helicopter and flying out of enemy territory. Just like that—as if such prowess was as normal as driving a car.

If the viewer suspended belief—not an unusual request for theatre—there were many elemental moments of suspense. NATO-eye McGoohan had a mission to either capture or kill an assassin of the enemy camp, not clearly identified, but the implication being some Soviet satellite. He was put through some fast paces, involving subsidiary characters, and the viewer for the most part was carried along. For the Britishers who claim to shy away from Hollywood violence, there was one scene which could match Hollywood on that score.

Supporting cast was competent and the direction was tight. Horo.

THE TRIAL OF ADOLF EICHMANN
With Frank McGee, narrator
Producer: Chet Hagan
Director: Robert Priaulx
30 Mins., Sun. (9), 6:30 p.m.
NBC-TV, from N. Y.

On the eve of the Eichmann trial, NBC-TV, like everyone else, got in its specials on the event. "The Trial of Adolf Eichmann," with Frank McGee as anchorman, covered the background adequately. There was no attempt at any major evaluation of the problems and questions the trial has aroused, moral or political, but as a chronology of events and a smattering of views, the show served its purpose nicely.

McGee narrated a quick film dissertation on the takeover by the Nazis of the German government and their racist philosophies, showing subsequently the attacks on the Jews and the establishment of concentration camps and the perfection of the Nazis' extermination system. Then came footage of the Nuremberg trials, a cut to Argentina in 1960, and a recreation of the abduction of Eichmann.

From this, the show moved into the interview format, showing a former Nazi colonel in Buenos Aires who defended Eichmann an Israeli painter who was a concentration camp inmate, Israeli Prime Minister Ben-Gurion, who defended the trial, and Israeli prosecutor, Gideon Hausner, who insisted that this will be a trial, not an educational lecture. British historian Gerald Reightlinger summed up the case against Eichmann eloquently as the signoff. Chan.

LAUDES EVANGELII
With Angelo Pietri, Tatiana Massine, Gerard Ohn, Nicola Petrov
Executive Producer: Norman Marshall
Director: Joan Kemp-Welch
Writer: Giorgio Signorini
Music: Valentino Bucchi
75 Mins.; Fri., 9:40 p.m.
Associated Rediffusion from London

Anybody but Leonide Massine, who master-minded this ambitious and, for the most part, successful attempt to dance the New Testament, would call it "a Bible ballet." But Massine has declared: "To call Laudes Evangelii a ballet would be detrimental . . . It is really a sort of choreographic mystery."

But there was no mystery about the reasons for the compelling, practically hypnotic outcome of what, in the publicity hand-outs, looked like a doubtful experiment. In every department sights had been set high—and achievement matched them.

Music, spoken text, sets and costumes—all based on medieval models—were almost literally out of this world in their power to evoke the drama of the great moments of the story—the Massacre of the Innocents, the Flight into Egypt, the Betrayal at Gethsemane, the Crucifixion, the Resurrection. And, where these trappings evoked, Massine's dancers — particularly Angelo Pietri, as the virile Christ, Tatiana Massine, as the shining Mary and Alberto Testa, the sharply evil Judas—confirmed. This was often television on a mountain-top of perfection.

From the slow beginning, the "choreographic mystery" grew in relentless intensity with each episode it unfolded until, at the close, it was as if some old and wonderfully moving Church paintings of the Stations of the Cross had sprung into life.

Impeccable is the only word for Joan Kemp-Welch's direction and the singing of soloists April Cantelo, Jean Allister, Ronald Lewis, Victor Godfrey, and backed by the Glyndebourne Festival Chorus.

Veteran Massine first had the idea of basing a dance-drama on the Bible when he was a young sprig terping for Diaghilev nearly 50 years ago. But "Laudes Evangelii" was not staged until 1952—at the 13th century church of San Domenico in Perugia, Italy. Nine more years went by before Associated Rediffusion gave it a Good Friday television world-premiere. It was worth the waiting. Nash.

Cabinet Press Conferences Next?

Pittsburgh, April 11.

President Kennedy is considering something new in White House policy—special press conferences by various members of his "new frontier" cabinet, it was revealed privately here.

Cabinet press conferences, sources understood from discussions with Press Secretary Pierre Salinger in Pittsburgh at the Westinghouse Broadcasting Conference, would be called for specific members of the Cabinet during crises touching on their departmental activities. This would be in addition to regular Kennedy press confabs, for the purpose of bringing an added touch of impact and prestige to information imparted by the administration.

Salinger Deplores 'Trend Toward Trivia,' Appeals to All Stations For Fuller Coverage of JFK Press Meets

Pittsburgh, April 11.

"The trend toward trivia" in coverage by the mass media was one of the major problems seen by Pierre Salinger, White House Press Secretary. At the Fourth Annual Conference on Public Service Programming, given here by Westinghouse Broadcasting Co., the front-line media contact for Kennedy also felt that "a disturbing trend this early in the administration" was, according to White House information, that fewer and fewer radio and tv stations are carrying the Presidential press conference.

Third note of perturbation struck by Salinger, in addressing the more than 400 station execs attending the WBC three-day event that began this morning, was "the certain ground rules" set by the networks against providing unlimited coverage of the press confabs to indie stations.

"The press conference," Salinger said, "is not a network show. It is a news event." He appealed to the networks "to go back to the practice of the first few weeks and let everybody have the press conference." This was an allusion, it seemed, to the ban NBC placed against unrestricted use of Kennedy's press talks during the weeks when NBC provided the "pool" coverage out of Washington.

With all the other "problems" raised by Salinger at the Monday (10) luncheon, he still considered "trivia" as "the one great danger."

"In these times, when the problems that confront us—nationally and internationally—are so great, too much attention is devoted to the trivial," Salinger opined. "They have asked—and these are actual experiences—what people in the White House eat for lunch, what color paper the First Lady writes on, what soap is used by the President.

"This is a plea to unset the trivial (which) clog up the communications channels and are a waste of the administration's talent and time."

Salinger dealt summarily with the critics, who felt that Kennedy might be suffering from "overexposure." "Overexposure," he said, "is falling back into show business terms. They're talking about a juggler or an actor. In this particularly critical time, I do not regard overexposure as a great danger." Before his speech, Salinger enlarged on this when he told reporters, "when the President has something to say people will want to hear it."

Salinger paid a degree of homage to some of the "better" programs done about the President by the three tv networks. He singled out CBS' "Nine Minutes," ABC's "Adventures on the New Frontier" and NBC's "JFK Nos. 1 and 2," as fresh ways of communicating to everybody with insight "what we are doing in Washington."

For from fearful of "overexposure," Salinger reiterated a point made several times in the last few weeks—that the White House was seeking further means of communicating Presidential information and views to the general public, domestically and abroad. But he strongly implied that the answer did not lay "in Fireside Chats," which he considered a handy and useful reference to an old style of communication by the administration.

The Hot Feed

Pittsburgh, April 11.

Westinghouse Broadcasting has offered all radio and tv stations in the country the opportunity to take a daily closed-circuit feed on what's happening at the annual local pub-service confab this year from Pittsburgh.

Dail sessions, running eight hours or longer, are being distilled into 60 minutes of tapes on daily highlights. Stations are getting the stuff next day.

Hefty Sponsor Take On Buff Station's Singalong; Spreads to 60 Outlets

Singalong programming, the radio format that's in stride with the national video fad created by Mitch Miller's NBC-TV show, was launched by a Buffalo, N.Y., outlet last October and is now a fulltime thing with more than 60 stations around the country.

Originating station, WEBR, Buffalo, started the singalong idea in the face of sagging ratings against the popmusic purveyors, and the station is now swinging along with several local sponsors (and at least one national account) that are on as a direct result of the new sound.

Station's program and promotion manager, Bill Schweitzer, says he actually struck upon the idea while searching for the answer to r&r at a local brass-railery (probably one with Muzak). After mulling it a bit, he checked out the station's disk library and found it had more than 3,500 recordings that would fit the singalong format—"If the pop stations could do it with the top 40, I figured I surely could do something with 3,500."

Singalong clients, including Sattler's of Buffalo, city's leading retail store, the Sample Shop, Chip Steak and others (and Wrigley's gum on the national side) have proved the PD right. Singalong's sponsored segs have generally been aud participation promotions, with instore lyric sheets with lucky numbers etc. A full Sunday supplement in one of the local papers featured singalong lyrics with strong ad support from record companies.

WEBR's format even inspired Commercial Recordings, Dallas, to wax a series of singalong breaks. Among stations now programming for hearth and home pipers are KQV, Pittsburgh; WWRL, New York; WCUE, Akron; WMNI, Columbus; and WMIL, Milwaukee.

Keefe Brasselle May Get 'Checkmate' Lead

With the two series in which he was involved now out of the running for fall, CBS-TV is considering installing Keefe Brasselle in "Checkmate" as the lead of the show, replacing Anthony George.

Web is unhappy with George, feeling he hasn't realized the potential of the role, and would like to make a change. At the same time, though the show won't be scheduled, web was impressed with Brasselle's performance in its "Beachfront" pilot, and has him in mind for "Checkmate." Brasselle, via his Luna Productions, also produced a pilot for CBS, "Joey Trouble," which "also ran."

WBC Conference Sounds an 'Alert' To Nation's Delinquent B'casters

By ART WOODSTONE

Pittsburgh, April 11.

Some 400 broadcasters are here attending this the fourth annual Westinghouse Broadcasting Conference on Public Service programming. Some 3,000 more broadcasters are not attending, and it seems that the story may turn out to be what is not happening "out there," not what is happening here this week.

The topic on the main floor of the Pittsburgh Hilton Hotel here is "change"—"the changing community," "the changing craft" and "the changing world." The topic in the back room and on the stairwells of the hostelry is also change—there has been a change in the Federal administration and a change in the demands by that administration, and many here feel that sufficient warning has been given broadcasters "to meet the changing environment" (as a guest speaker said of a different subject) or suffer the consequences.

"This is the Kennedy Administration," said one guest at the WBC affair. "He doesn't see things about broadcasting the same way Eisenhower did."

Specifically, the backroom worry of this three-day confab is that when license time rolls around (as it already has for certain outlets in radio and tv), the innocent might mistakenly suffer with the guilty—if not through loss of license, through loss of prestige.

Merely being absent from a conference on public service, sponsored and arranged by a private company, does not, it is felt, make an absentee guilty. Yet a growing attitude at the WBC conclave is that "too, too many" of the absent broadcasters are failing to fulfill their public responsibilities. And the result, they sense, will be that Washington will drop dozens upon dozens of small bombs (i.e., license cancellations) in the next several months or the next year which, added together, will make a dent in broadcasting far bigger and far more dangerous than the sum of the 1959-60 quiz scandals.

The Salinger Tipoff

Pierre Salinger, President Kennedy's press chief who spoke here Monday (10), is thought to have provided broadcasters with a warning of things to come when he told the conference that the White House has found that fewer and fewer stations are carrying the Kennedy press confabs.

Kennedy seems to feel that his press conferences are not just for developing his image but are, to him, important cogs in the wheel of the Democratic process. That being the case, it might be, some think, that Newton Minow, Kennedy's appointment as FCC Chairman, will begin soon lopping the licenses of broadcasting's delinquent operatives.

While there is a new regime in Washington, the Democrats are not likely to forget that some outlets ignored even a relatively "simple" request from the FCC of the previous administration to put a certain amount of pubaffairs in prime time locally as well as on network facilities. That was the "Doerfer Plan."

Part of the Salinger warning to broadcasters was evident when he also blasted "trite" handling of news. It was a criticism as much of newspapermen as of radio and tv news reporters. But if Minow can find some way to measure triteness, which is fobbed off as news or public affairs, he can always raise the devil among licensed stations even if he can't touch unlicensed newspapers.

Besides it could be, in the way Salinger speaks of tv's power and radio's breadth, that the Kennedy Administration might want more from broadcasters than from the important, but narrower-reaching print media.

Coupled with Salinger's indictment for being trite is the industry's self-indictment here for timidity and selfishness among broadcasters. To some observers on the scene in Pittsburgh, broadcasters, taking the easy way, are making the mistake of pursuing "public opinion" rather than molding it. As for Kennedy, he evidently prefers to mold it. If only to gain popular support for his legislative and administrative programs and "to make democracy work," as one Washingtonian recently put it.

Since he was talking of something other than Washington pressure—Don McGannon, president of the sponsoring WBC, in the keynote address on Monday morning (before Salinger arrived) gave the official indirect support by saying, "many intelligent people believe we now face the choice of all of us keeping up with the world . . . or abruptly leaving it. This clearly places a heavy new load of work on all the other media of education . . . Certainly on television and radio . . . since schools are no longer enough."

Westinghouse Conference was designed to help local stations program local time with "better public [illegible]" while that first prevailed in most of the public sessions, the Salinger remarks of the first day and the backroom talk to date have given the Pittsburgh meetings a national scope.

Thought to be one way of stopping trouble on the Potomac is a local broadcaster is sincerely convinced that carrying Kennedy's remarks is not always sound news judgment—is to pay more attention to local public affairs. Still the fear remains that too many stations are serving only minimally in this area.

CBS Yanks Edwards Off Armstrong Show

Doug Edwards has been ordered off the "Armstrong Circle Theatre" when it returns to CBS-TV next fall in a reinforcement of CBS News policy regarding the use of its commentators on entertainment programs.

Decision to yank Edwards comes almost as a direct result of the hassle a couple of months ago over Armstrong's "The Spy Next Door" telecast. The show had been postponed by CBS-TV so its execs could get a look at the tape to determine whether it might prove embarrassing to the web in light of President Kennedy's then go-easy policy in regard to Soviet relations. CBS execs subsequently okayed the show and it was telecast two weeks later.

A major source of their concern at the time was Edwards' presence on the show as host-narrator. It was felt that although the show was an outside package and an "entertainment" program, Edwards' presence might be construed as an endorsement of the program's editorial position by CBS News, or even worse, an official presentation of CBS News. Since that time, Edwards' status, along with questions of subject matter tackled by Talent Associates, program's producer, have been the subject of continuing talks between CBS and Armstrong.

Although the talks had not been resolved—Armstrong's official renewal date isn't up for another month—CBS News prexy Dick Salant last week took the initiative and ordered Edwards off the show on the basis of a policy decision that newsmen should not participate on entertainment shows. As a corollary of the same policy, he last week turned production responsibility for the web's beauty contest telecasts—Miss America, Miss Universe and Mrs. America—over to the CBS-TV program department and indicated that CBS News commentators will no longer narrate the pageants.

Armstrong plans to replace Edwards with a non-CBS host-narrator with a news identification. It's recalled that when it switched the show over to CBS from NBC in 1957, it planned to use John Cameron Swayze until Edwards was made available by CBS.

Keesely's Tobacco Show

Annual National Assn. of Tobacco Distributors Convention gala Sunday night (9) in Chicago was spiced with tv stars, among them Danny Thomas, Jackie Cooper, Tab Huner and Les Paul & Mary Ford. Show, hosted by P. Lorillard, was produced for the 13th straight year by Nick Kessely, v.p. of Lennen & Newell, the Lorillard agency.

Show drew an SRO audience of over 3,000 of the tobacco execs.

CBS-TV's Grand Shake on Nielsens

Everything's coming up roses for CBS-TV in the ratings department this week. Columbia has topped ABC-TV consistently this season on the Nielsen National scorecard, but has just as consistently been behind the eight-ball on the 24-city competitive-market countdown. But now, for the past two weeks, while maintaining its National Nielsen supremacy, CBS has swept the 24-market competition as well, the first time this season it's been able to do so for two consecutive weeks.

On the basis of the seasonal pattern relating to the differences in the 24-city and national ratings, CBS-TV is projecting its two-week 24-city win to a season's high 17% lead over ABC on the next national report, covering the same two weeks it won the 24-city outings, the two weeks ended April 2. That report—the April II List—will be out next week.

CBS had won the 24-city report only twice before this season. One occasion was in early October, before the year was well under way. The other was the second week in December, when its unusually high "Wizard of Oz" rating lifted CBS to the top. But now, it's won two weeks running. First week found it 6% ahead of ABC on average audience with a 19.6 to ABC's 18.5 and NBC's 16.8. Second week found CBS ahead again, but by 2%, with an 18.3 to 17.9 for ABC and 16.0 for NBC. CBS took four nights of the week on the first report, three on the second, it took 11 of the Top 20 on the first report.

At the same time, the network continued its supremacy on the National Nielsens, the March II report, coming up with a 20.1 average to 18.4 for ABC and 17.3 for NBC. It also won four nights of the week and took 25 half-hour wins vs. 22 for ABC and six for NBC. Out of the Top 20, it won 12, ABC took five and NBC three.

A Visit From a Russ

Pittsburgh, April 11.

After agreeing last night (Mon.) with Pierre Salinger that news coverage in the United States, particularly when it dwells on the kind of soap used by President Kennedy, is trite, Russian Oleg Kalugin voluntarily scuttled out of Pittsburgh because as an industrial centre it is closed to Russians.

Yet he was here 26 hours before his departure as guest of Westinghouse Broadcasting, where he had plenty of time to appear as a participant in a conference held for the benefit of students from Dusquesno. Earlier, the 27-year-old reporter for Moscow Radio even had time for a nonchalant visit to the Pittsburgh Playhouse before he got word he might not be wanted in town.

The Russians earlier this month applied for State Department permission to appear at the invitation of Westinghouse at the Pittsburgh meeting. He came when he assumed that no response signified tacit approval of the trip. But the Feds knew nothing about his presence in Pittsburgh until about two hours before he left last night, and then security officers and the FBI hopped into the Pitt Hilton directly after Kalugin had taken a plane to Newark. For awhile, the FBI seemed insistent that the Russian had never been in Pittsburgh.

In Russia, said the Moscow Radio newsman to the students, they never worry about what kind of soap Khrushchev uses, and crime is never played up except when it's meant to illustrate larger points.

VARIETY - ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top ten network shows on a local level and offers a rating study in depth of the top six syndicated shows in the same particular market. This week five different markets are covered.

In the syndicated program listings of the top ten shows, rating data such as the average share of audience, coupled with data as to time and day of telecasting competitive programming in the particular slot, etc., is furnished. Reason for detailing an exact picture of the rating performance of syndicated shows is to reflect the true rating strength of particular series. Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations and/or advertisers to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY. Coupled with the rating performance of the top ten network shows on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every tv market in the U. S.

(*) ARB's Nov.-Dec. 1960 survey covered a multi-week period. Syndicated shows sharing one of the weeks with an alternating or special program could not be properly judged for comparative performance. Therefore, Nov.-Dec. data will be limited to those syndicated shows which played in all weeks.

Closed-TV Com'ls On Orient Lines

London, April 11.

Program Exchange Ltd., has been signed up by Orient Lines to supply programs and to sell commercial ad time on closed circuit tv in the two new passenger liners, Oriana and Camberra. Programs are transmitted daily while the ships are at sea, between 6 and 7 p.m. for children and from 9:30 to 11 p.m. for adults. Eight minutes of commercial time are available during the adult programming. John A. Warner, late of Thomson Newspapers, has been hired as advertising sales manager for this setup.

A 30-second advertisement, booked to appear on both vessels throughout a year (that is, six voyages) would cost $1,412, though single voyage bookings can be accepted. A "Window On Britain" magazine, for showing products indigenous to Britain, is being devised and will cost $542 for a seven-second spot, including production costs. Similar magazines for California, Canada, Australia and New Zealand are projected. Potential viewing audience per voyage is reckoned at 10,000, as there is virtually a turnover of audience at every one of the five stages of the three-months voyage.

Stars, Execs Join As Dallas WFAA Preems New $3,500,000 Center

Dallas, April 11.

WFAA-AM-FM-TV entered a new era of broadcasting Wednesday (5) with a twist of dials representing three outlets through which it reaches 2,000,000 listeners and viewers in North Central Texas and Southern Oklahoma.

More than 1,000 broadcasting, advertising and business executives, plus a flock of ABC stars joined local officials in dedicating WFAA's new Communications Center next to its parent company, The Dallas News.

WFAA general manager Mike Shapiro hosted the ceremonies in the new $3,500,000 studio where dials representing WFAA-570, WFAA-820 and WFAA-TV were turned to put the giant new broadcasting facility officially on the air.

Dallas News chairman of the board E. M. Ted Dealy and James M. Moroney Sr., vice chairman, joined Shapiro in turning the dials.

Shapiro said if marked "the end of one era and the beginning of a challenging new one."

Dealey described the new facility as "the outstanding center in the country and the fruition of a great dream." The Dallas News board chairman called the vast electronic complex "the heartbeat of Texas."

Moroney told the guests that "there is nothing we can't do with the new center. We are setting the pattern of a young industry with a bright future."

ABC-TV prez Oliver Treyz said the new center is "the finest physical broadcasting plant I've seen in the U.S."

VARIETY-ARB's weekly chart offers a day-by-day analysis of the top feature evening slots in a particular market. On Saturdays and Sundays, daytime feature slots compete with nighttime pix periods for designation as the top feature slot of the day. The analysis is confined to the top rated feature slots in the ARB measured period, broken down by days in the week. The ARB measured period usually covers three or four weeks. Other data such as the time slot and overage share of audience is furnished. Top competition and competitive ratings also are highlighted.

ATV's $11,000,000 Elstree in Bow

London, April 11.

Associated Television's new $11,000,000 studio centre at Elstree was formerly inaugurated last Friday (7) by Dr. Charles Hill, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. It was previewed on the previous day to the press corps.

The entire development is expected to be complete by the end of the year and all the four studios are equipped to operate either on 405 lines, the U.S. system of 525 lines and the European system of 625 lines.

The studios are geared to cope with a full seven-day week service and can be used for live programming or for taped or filmed shows. They are also equipped with ancilliary color equipment and all that will be needed to start a tint program would be the necessary color cameras.

JFK's 'TV Show' Burns Newsmen, Sez Brinkley

Boston, April 11.

Newspapermen are unhappy with the way JFK's press confabs are being run, because "they believe the conferences are being turned into a tv show," NBC's Dave Brinkley told the Mass. Safety Council here. "Their unhappiness," he said, "is not with tv, but with Kennedy's use of it. The press conferences are not entirely satisfactory because they have become a forum for announcements and speeches."

Speaking on the Washington scene, he cracked: "There's a new kind of public official in Washington. I refer to the way they work down there. It seems to me we have a band of wide-eyed liberals. The most conservative liberals I have ever seen. Pragmatic is the word. Not wild eyed liberals as anticipated. The people around Kennedy are not visionaries. They are mild eyed liberals who tend to think an idea is only good if it works."

When Brinkley was introduced to the gathering at the Safety Council's 40th annual meeting, bringing numerous safety awards presentations with Sylvania products div. taking top honors for the best records—he quipped: "Sylvania must be the safest place in the U.S. It might be a good place to put Caroline Kennedy for a few years."

The NBC newsman did a sound-on-film interview with WBZ-TV's Arch Macdonald in which "newsman met newsman," and the film was shown on the 6:30 WBZ-TV news Brinkley's own show, from which he was absent, came on at 6:45 with Chet Huntley.

Majors In Vidpix

"Margie," and "The Hunters," ABC-TV.

MCA TV's Revue is the giant of them all, accounting for some eight hours, week-in, week-out on all three networks, exclusive of other than film deals. Revue's rundown includes "GE Theatre," "Bachelor Father," "Alcoa," alternating weeks on ABC-TV, "Ichabod," "Laramie," "Checkmate," partnered with Jack Benny's vidfilmery; "Wagon Train," "Frontier Circus," Bob Cummings, "The Investigators," and "Tall Man."

Diminishing lustre of Four Star Films finds that house with only four entries definitely set. They include "Rifleman," ABC; "Dick Powell Show," NBC; "Mother Is A Freshman," CBS; and "The Corrupters," ABC. Last season, Four Star opened with no less than 12 shows.

Not to be forgotten is the two-hour weekly feature pix slot on NBC-TV, with the post-'48s being supplied for that Saturday night berth by 20th-Fox.

Virtual dominance of nighttime web programming by films now is an old story. The growing drama is the takeover by the motion picture companies of tv programming. It's at least 25% next season. What will it be in '62-'63?

USIA '60 Sumup: 'We Get Around'; Extend Coverage to 51 Nations

Washington, April 11.

U.S. Information Agency did a bangup job USIA says during the last half of 1960 in getting across America's message to people overseas via radio, television and films. The self-assessment is in USIA's semi-annual report to Congress.

Agency boasted of its expanded tv service which now provides special events coverage and feature films to stations in 51 nations. "In many of these countries, where television is so new as to be a novelty, tv programs are viewed with fascination by all who have a set or can get near one," the report said.

Use of videotape to supplement filmed programs was also cited. A quarter-hour newscast in both Spanish and Portuguese is placed on videotape and seen in 24 Latin American cities.

In the radio field, the report noted construction of the huge Voice of America facility in North Carolina, which ultimately will be the most powerful international shortwave transmitting complex in the world. Costing about $25,000,000, the VOA outlet is scheduled to go on the air by the end of this year, beaming broadcasts to Europe, Africa, the Middle East and Latin America with a total 4.8 million watt power output.

KBTV SETS SMITH AS HEAD OF NEWS DEPT.

Denver, April 4.

Arthur J. Smith, formerly with WHTN-TV, Huntington, W. Va. will head KGTV's newly created news and special events department, according to John C. Mullins, president of Channel Nine, which heretofore has had no regularly scheduled news programs.

Smith, who has 22 years of radio and tv news experience, has made numerous news forages in Europe and Asia and behind the Iron Curtain firm 26-week commitment, NBC had no alternate but to ride with it.

Sometimes a delaying action is possible, to permit a nibble at some sponsorship coin before firming up a property, as with NBC's indecision about Friday night 8:30 to 9:30, during which it has variously toyed around with such hour items as "Las Vegas," "Rio," "The Insiders," "Follow the Sun," and an expanded Robert Taylor hour series. If the web could lock in a piece of biz first it would help. It would also help to pick the right show.

Just how much is at stake can be gleaned from the fact that next season the three webs will be splitting up hour shows, give or take a few million representing something like $225,000,000 in production commitments. Naturally many are SRO even at this early stage, and others will achieve this status. But with the SRO status at the three webs only ranging at this point from 55% to 70%, the cumulative still unsold millions can add up to panicsville.

Mex Talent Exchange

Mexico City, April 11.

Mexico will try an experiment whereby talent below stellar ranks is to be exchanged with South America, Europe and the United States, principally for television appearances.

Producer Gabriel Pardo, before leaving on initial tour of South American capitals, said that idea is to contract talented performers whose salary demands are not as stratospheric as those of bigname entertainers whose international reputations are secure.

There are many singers, dancers, actors, comics, etc. in lower brackets whose artistic merits are just as great, Pardo said. Program, therefore, while not too much of a burden for producers, will give impetus to new performer elements, and set them on the road to international fame.

gler (John Gregson) and a French security officer (Jack Gwillim).

Into the sleepy little port of Tipasa on the Algerian coast arrived Gregson to deliver arms to the rebels. He became interested in the daughter of an old man whose job, till he retired, was to look after some historic ruins in the little harbor. Gregson, fed up with wandering the world as an outlaw, was playing with the idea of giving it all up and running off with the girl when the French officer arrived. Ever since Gregson, years before, had stolen arms from a camp commanded by Gwillim (thus causing him to be drummed out of the army in disgrace) the French officer, who had re-enlisted, had trailed the gun-runner, determined to pull him in. But in the end he refused to arrest Gregson believing that the best revenge was to compel Gregson to continue his shiftless life in which he'd find no peace or sanctuary. Main action revolved round the fact that the arms were hidden in the tomb and that it was due for demolition.

Would the army find the guns before the tomb was blown up? The girl, for Gregson's sake, did the blowing up herself only to fear that she had entombed her father. Of course, she hadn't. Though there was little physical action the scenes between Gregson and Gwillim were extremely well drawn and, despite some padding, interest in this play was sustained by straightforward direction. John Gregson gave a strong performance as the smuggler and Jack Gwillim's study of a patient, thoughtful officer was outstanding.

Yvonne Romain hardly had the range for the slightly fey local girl but there was a good distaff piece of thesping by Rosalind Atkinson as a hotelier's wife. Leslie French, Fred Kitchen and Steve Plytas brought some amusement and pathos to the roles of arguing cronies running the affairs of the little one-horse port. Toke Townley also contributed a telling cameo as the dedicated demolition man. Atmosphere of the dusty, hot little place was fell captured by director Philip Dale though direction was sometimes a little too slow, and art work was adequate. Howard Clewes' play might have been even more effective had it been clipped to an hour, but overall it was a well conceived effort. Rich.

Directors

Directors Guild a couple of years ago. The new organization, the Directors Guild of America, represents directors in all media, films, tv-films, live television, radio, etc. Frank Capra is prexy of DGA and Joe Youngerman is its exec secretary, both headquartering in Hollywood.

The networks have taken the position that the DGA is seeking to impose the contract pattern used in motion pictures on live and taped tv, and that this won't work, that both are different media and what is applicable to one is not necessarily so to another. Guild, on the other hand, insists the new setup is both feasible in terms of efficiency and economy and holds that the difference in the pay structures is not nearly so wide as it appears on first examination.

Inside Stuff—Radio-TV

The CBS Foundation has named eight newsmen as recipients of its fifth annual News Fellowships, providing for a year of study at Columbia U. Winners for 1961-62 are Stephen Banker, news writer at WCBS, N. Y.; Thomas W. Dorsey, news reporter and editor at WBNS, Columbus; Morris K. Hepler, news reporter, editor and producer at WWL-TV, New Orleans; Peter M. Herford, news director of KTVA-TV & FM, Anchorage, Alaska; David G. Nellis, assistant professor in the radio-tv-film dept. of the U. of Miami; Thomas B. Petry, production manager, writer and producer of WQED, the Pittsburgh educational tv station; William Seamans, news editor in tv for CBS News, N. Y.; and Sanford (Sandy) Socolow, news writer, assistant to the exec producer of "Eyewitness to History" and editorial aide to Walter Cronkite at CBS News in N. Y. Fellowships average about $8.000 apiece and cover a year's tuition and living costs.

Lecture and Service Bureau, of the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, has gotten up a full head of steam with five lecturers from the industry due to make appearances during the next several weeks before a variety of civic and educational orgs.

The unpaid lecturers appearing in behalf of the year-old Bureau are comedienne Pat Carroll, producer Roger Englander (of the Leonard Bernstein CBS-TV series), CBS Inc. veep and general counsel Tom Fisher, NBC scenic designer Jan Scott and Academy p.r. chief Peter Cott.

Miss Carroll, who essayed Sid Caesar's tv wife, hits the Philly Ad Club on April 13. Englander appears April 1, 19 and 20 at Indiana U. seminars on video music. Fisher will participate in a pay-tv panel sponsored April 28 by the Advancement of Management of N.Y.U., and Scott will conduct a workshop series at the U. of Georgia in May. On May 4, Cott joins a p.r. symposium at N.Y.U.'s School of Commerce.

Annual membership meeting of the Association of Maximum Service Telecasters Inc., will be held in Washington May 7 at 9:30 a.m. in the Shoreham Hotel's Palladian Room, according to Lester W. Lindow, Assn. executive director.

Directors will be elected and reports will be made on the year's activities as well as future plans. The once-a-year session is always held in connection with the National Assn. of Broadcasters convention, set for here this year.

Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris, former head of the Army space program, will be guest speaker at the 39 Annual Convention of National Assn. of Broadcasters in Washington next month.

Medaris, now president of the Lionel Corp., will speak to a luncheon of the Broadcasting Engineering Conference held in conjunction with the NAB conclave.

N. Y. City Chapter of American Women in Radio & Television will honor "top male executives in communications" at its initial Golden Circle party Thursday, May 25 at the home of Princess Helena Gourielli (Helena Rubinstein). Idea, says AWRT, is to fete the men who made it possible for women to make "major contributions" to radio & tv.

Gen. David Sarnoff last week, while addressing a U. of Detroit Convocation, suggested that global tv could be employed as a new channel of communication for summitry—by which heads of state "would confer face-to-face without leaving their capitals."

CBS newsman Ned Calmer has his fourth novel, "All the Summer Days," coming up for publication June 8 via Little, Brown & Co. It's a yarn about news reporting in Paris before the war, and reflects some personal experience, since Calmer worked for the N. Y. Herald Tribune and the Chicago Tribune in Paris before joining CBS in 1940.

half times what they were last season. For 18 games, the price should be about $4,500,000 in rights alone.

(4) The NBC sales department backed the hike to $615.002 on the grounds that it could sell off the championship game in a snap. At the door are many of the same sponsorships which are interested in regular NFL games: Ballantine, Falstaff, Omoco, Esso in Detroit, Speedway, Shell on a regional basis and Marlboro, along with Ford, on the national sponsorship side. Some of them confided late last week, though, they had to evaluate the NBC price demand further to see whether it would be worth it.

Before NBC came in with the winning bid (it includes radio rights too), there were at least four other bids from three other sources. First bid is understood to have come from Sports Network Inc. for $575,000. Sports Network apparently had an arrangement to bring the game over to NBC-TV, but Rozelle did not accept the bid. Irving Kahn, boss of TelePrompTer, offered $1,000,000 for closed-circuit rights, but the NFL leader turned that down on the grounds that "it would not be in the best interest of the league or the game to contemplate at present (closed-circuit tv) due to its pattern of coverage—theatres and arenas; we'd like everybody to be able to see the (championship) games."

Meantime, CBS, having heard that NBC wouldn't top $500,000, came in with an opening bid of $525,000, then, when competition became apparent, allegedly upped it to at least $575,000, the same as the evidently already rejected Sports Network offer.

Probably depending on how much of the CBS regular sked Ford decides it wants (in May, when the final sked will be established), the automotive house is rumored to be considering upping half of the pro football champship game on NBC.

WNEW Has Own Space Expert

WNEW, the N.Y. radio indie that pioneered the music & news concept, has signed its own space expert as the latest of a series of innovations and refinements in its coverage of news.

The space expert is Martin Caidin, who's written some 26 books on the subject and has served as a missile consultant to the Air Force. His first assignment will be coverage of Project Mercury, the upcoming man-shot, but he'll freewheel on every space story for the station as part of the regular news coverage and in special shows.

Inking of Caidin (he's tied up for WNEW-TV as well) represents still another step in the series of refinements of news coverage by the indie since the early days of five minutes on the half-hour, the original news-around-the-clock tag inaugurated by the station. First step was creation of its own newsroom, complete with reporter-writers, portable tape units and beeper phones, to replace the N.Y. Daily News coverage supplied until then.

Now, from the five-minute capsules, WNEW is expanding its coverage to capitalize on its manpower and facilities, as well as to escape the bonds of a 25-minute music and five-minute news formula. There's a minute of news on the hour, for one thing, but more importantly, the station has inaugurated a pair of full-length news strips.

One is the new "6 O'Clock Closeup," a 15-minute dinnertime strip featuring Reed Collins as commentator, with Kyle Rote and Alistair Cooke. Collins does the news with an editorial point of view; Rote covers sports, and Cooke ("Omnibus" and the Manchester Guardian) tackles any subject that interest him (including an attack recently on airline food, despite WNEW's big airline billings).

Collins also runs a 10-minute "11 O'Clock Closeup," with himself, Rote on sports and vet commentator Henry Cassidy as the specialist on diplomatic news. Both shows have clicked in terms of ratings, and WNEW v.p.-general manager Jack Sullivan and its new director of news, Lee Hanna, feel the longer length is a format that audiences seem to want.

Added to the two strips are other elements of coverage—one is a brandnew mobile unit ordered by the station, complete with shortwave transmitter, which will enable the WNEW newsmen to broadcast news direct from the spot where it's happening. Heretofore, station has had to use tape or beeper phone. Another is the extent of coverage the station is devoting to the Eichmann trial, with direct feeds from Martin Weldon and Gen. Telford Taylor to be integrated into regular news shows plus separate five-minute shows twice daily, plus specials.

CBS-TV Sunday Biz

never-to-return kissoff. A second was the "Mr. Ed" deal, filling the one programming hole in the lineup.

And finally, there was the maneuver by which CBS prevented a possible defection of "Lassie" and Campbell to NBC, which had been making come-hither overtures to sponsor and show. CBS merely accepted "Father of the Bride" from BBDO and General Mills for a Friday night berth. Campbell's had been tagged onto the show as an alternate sponsor with GM, and once "Bride" landed on CBS, the every-week discount structure afforded Campbell's by the "Lassie"-"Bride" was simply too much for NBC to overcome.

From the CBS standpoint, that $60,000,000 Sunday status is all peaches and cream. Much of it represents sales in marginal time from which billings had never been realized. Moreover, the network isn't taking any sort of beating on production costs on any of its shows—in fact is making some money on those it owns. So that after compensation to stations and amortization of cable costs, all of the time billings are gravy and represent a pretty profit picture for the network.

From the viewers' standpoint, however, it's something of another story. For all the lamenting about the "intellectual ghetto," the cultural attractions were there to be sampled, inconvenient or not. Now they're gone, or moved down to Sunday morning or Saturday afternoon.

edy half-hour "Three Sons," and the equally strong "Untouchables." Sponsor at that time tried to firm a commitment on the 9:30 opening, but got no promise from the network. The time has since gone to Procter & Gamble as part of the deal that kept the soapery from moving "Rifleman" to CBS. "Paradise" was moved back from 9:30 to 10 in the Monday ABC shuffle that saw "Rifleman" scheduled for 8:30 that night.

"Asphalt," which premiered this spring at 9:30 Sunday, was cancelled because the hour will be moved if it returns next fall.

In the case of "Rebel," the network moved the show out in a Sunday night shuffle that saw the hour "Bus Stop" committed to competing Brown & Williamson, scheduled for the 10 to 11 period.

L&M's prime complaint was the loss of three 9:30 time slots. Ratings indicate a sharp decline in audience after 10:30 p.m., and in moving back the hour shows, there's no guarantee the last half hour will hold up.

Alanta—Ed Thilenius, who has broadcast Univ. of Georgia football games on a Georgiawide radio network for the past six years, has been named sports director of WAGA-TV, Atlanta's link in Storer chain. Starting Wednesday (5) Thilenius took over a five-minute sports segment on station's newly inaugurated "Panorama" 60-minute melange of sports, weather, and news and so on between 6 and 7 p.m.

Sharp Slumps In TV-AM Set Sales

Washington, April 11.

Impact of the recession is reflected in sharp slumps in radio-tv set sales and production from the 1960 pace, according to latest figures of Electronic Industries Assn.

EIA, which keeps the most authoritative tabs on set output and sales, reported that tv retail sales for the first two months of this year amounted to only 852,073 as against 1,098,540 for the first two months of 1960. Radio sales slumped during the same period from 1,414,867 to 1,246,908, excluding auto sets.

Production reflects the same downbeat. TV set output fell from 1,029,947 through February, 1960, to 812,353 through February of this year. Production of radio sets, including auto receivers, was pegged at 2,205,102 for the first two months of this year and 2,798,156 last year. The slump in auto receiver output was even more marked.

of sports specials, while Ed Byron is dwelling on specials in news and public affairs. In short, Otter seems to be the only one working on entertainment shows.

General sales department at NBC, besides losing Fitzgerald, is likely to lose still another salesman, and four or five presentation writers and artists also are leaving the department. With all this, however, NBC still has a substantially large sales staff working under veepee Tom McFadden, and Max Buck.

Definite decision was made by NBC-TV to end the operation of the old "Today"-"Tonight" administrative and sales umbrella.

The Dave Garroway "Today" stanza, the early morning event, will from now on report to NBC-TV daytime programming and Jack Paar's latenight strip will report to the nighttime program department, and in the final analysis both stanzas will be reporting to program administrative veep Ed Friendly.

Bill Stork, who headed Danzig's sales staff, will report to sales veep Tom McFadden.

CBS-TV LURES 500G BILLINGS FROM ABC

CBS-TV has successfully raided ABC for some $500,000 in billings. The latter represents the S. C. Johnson & Son insecticide outlay, which rode the ABC daytime lineup in spring and summer of last year but this time switches over to Columbia, attracted by a combination of the network's morning rate structure plus the heavy discounts to be gained by matching daytime by Johnson's heavy nighttime outlays on the web.

In all, the 500G represents a total of 75 morning minutes, plus a renewal of 12 more of the A.M. participations, plus six alternate-week quarter-hours and two every-week quarter-hours in five CBS afternoon stanzas.

New Team of Rodgers & Lerner Ironing Out Details of Collaboration

The long-rumored and/or theorized show biz dopestering that Alan Jay Lerner and Richard Rodgers would make an "ideal" team made the wire services and radio-tv news bulletins when the collaboration was officialy announced. Details of their future project, publishing arrangements, etc. have yet to be ironed out by Howard Reinheimer, who happens to be attorney for both.

Even the reported "Coco," musical based on "Coco" Chanel's life and times, is still vague since (1) the property is owned by Frederick Brisson; (2) clearances of the famed Paris couturier and parfumer's associates have not been consummated; and (3) the degree of control and or participation by the new Rodgers & Lerner team in the Brisson production also must be worked out.

Fact is that Frederick (Fritz) Loewe is hibernating in Palm Springs, determined to "take it easier" despite w.k. gregariousness and penchant for the Riviera casinos and the like.

Nor does that mean a complete schism of the Lerner & Loewe team since they will be very much thrown together again in the film versions of "My Fair Lady" and "Camelot," as and when they're ready for production.

On the music publishing end, Lowall Music is Lerner (and Loewe's) firm, while Williamson Music is the Rodgers (and Hammerstein) company. Both are under the Chappell (Max Dreyfus) umbrella, so the new Rodgers & Lerner copyrights may be thrown into perhaps a third (and new) publishing entity.

Rodgers, on the other hand, feels he did a "creditable" job as lyricist to his own melodies, when Hammerstein died last year, including three new tunes for the remake of "State Fair" (20th-Fox) and a new song for "Flower Drum Song." Latter is titled "This Isn't Heaven." The three "State Fair" titles, says Rodgers, "would give away the jokes if the song titles were printed now," since they entail a play on words. Charles Brackett doesn't start shooting his 20th-Fox production (Walter Lang directing) until July.

Lerner left for France over the weekend with his French lawyer-wife. The Rodgers collaboration is primed for the 1962 season.

Ella-Peterson Click In Tel Aviv Due to Disks; 'Philharmonic' Tag Beef

By JOSEPH LAPID

Tel Aviv, April 11.

Although there is no real enthusiasm for jazz in Israel, Ella Fitzgerald's debut here was a click partly due to the success of records in this country. Miss Fitzgerald appeared with The Oscar Peterson Trio in a presentation tagged "Jazz at the Philharmonic" at the huge Fredric Mann Auditorium last week.

The bash received unexpected publicity from the Israeli Philharmonic Orchestra which uses the same aud for its Tel Aviv concerts. The orch protested against the use of "At the Philharmonic" at supposedly misleading the public. It claimed that some people would think that the orch gave up symphonies for jazz. In his answer, V. H. Robert, the Israeli impresario pointed to the fact that Miss Fitzgerald and Peterson used the "Jazz at the Philharmonic" tag long before they came to Israel.

The big surprise of the evening was Peterson at the piano. He was up to now totally unknown in Israel but from now on he will be remembered as the finest jazz pianist who ever visited here.

NARAS Nabs Disk Names For Grammy Giveaways

The National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences will surround its Grammy-giving ceremonies tonight (Wed.) with an all-star cast on both Coasts. The eastern sindig, which will be held at the Hotel Astor, will be emceed by vet recording exec Ted Wallerstein, while the Coast affair at the Beverly Hills Hotel will be emceed by Mort Sahl.

Diskers set to give away the Grammys in the east are Nat King Cole, Diahann Carroll, Duke Ellington, Peter Ustinov, Bob Newhart and Jackie Wilson, among others. Presenting on the Coast will be Peggy Lee, Stan Freberg, Gogi Grant, Lawrence Welk, Rudy Vallee and Elmer Bernstein, among others.

Don Costa Digs Coast As Cradle For New Talent

Don Costa, United Artists' director of artists & repertoire, heads for the Coast today (Wed.) for recording sessions and talent scouting.

According to Costa, the L.A.-Hollywood area is a relatively untapped source for new recording personalities. Heretofore, he added, too much emphasis has been placed on finding such talent in the east to the neglect of the Coast. He plans to be in Hollywood for about three weeks, during which time he'll hold auditions on the lookout to sign new talent to the UA label.

He'll also huddle with execs of United Artists Pictures, the diskery's parent company, on future pic themes to be recorded. UA already has made a big splash in the pic theme area with "The Apartment," "Exodus," "One Eyed Jacks" by Ferrante & Teicher, "The Magnificent Seven" by Al Caiola, and "Never On Sunday," "The Unforgiven" and "The Misfits" by Costa himself.

During the Coast stay, Costa will record singles and albums with Ferrante & Teicher, Eydie Gorme and Steve Lawrence. Because of the schedules of the company's talent and his plans to sign Coast-based artists, Costa plans to spend more time in Hollywood in the future.

HERMAN DIAZ SHIFTED TO RCA INT'L DIVISION

Herman Diaz Jr., veteran member of RCA Victor's artists & repertoire staff, has been shifted to a&r director of Dario Soria's recently established RCA Victor International liaison department. Soria said that Diaz will be concerned with the selection and release in the U.S. of foreign disks available through RCA's global affiliates.

Diaz joined Victor in 1947 as an a&r staff assistant for Latin American Records. He formerly was a retailer specializing in Spanish disks.

Forest Hills Adds Bikel

Theodore Bikel has been booked by Limelight Productions to appear at its Forest Hills, Queens, Music Festival July 15. The fest will be a series of 10 outdoor concerts at Forest Hills Tennis Stadium running from July 1 to Aug. 26.

Bikel, who records for the Elektra label, is currently appearing in the Broadway tuner "Sound of Music."

NEW WAVE OF PIANO DISKS

The record companies are finding gold in the ivories again. For the past several months the pianists have been taking a strong hold on the pop hit lists and even the longhairs are getting pop sales action with their album product.

The keyboard kick is building up steam at RCA Victor with a hefty push on 26-year-old Peter Nero who made his debut on the label several weeks ago with a "Piano Forte" LP. Diskery has allocated a big loot expenditure to start the album rolling with deejay tours for Nero and sundry other promotional gimmicks. Capitol Records, too, is planning a big drive on pianist Lee Evans and recently added the piano team of Whitemore & Lowe to its roster.

The Whitemore & Lowe signing, incidentally follows the pattern set by United Artists with its keyboard duo Ferrante & Teicher. Although Ferrante & Teicher broke in on the classical level, in the past year they've made an important dent in the pop singles market working over such pic theme music as "The Apartment," "Exodus" and "One-Eyed Jacks." Whitemore & Lowe are classically based, too, and Cap is banking on an F&T buildup for them.

The piano boom on disks probably got its biggest boost several years ago when Roger Williams emerged on the new Kapp label. Williams has been a steady best-seller for years hitting in both the album and singles field.

At Columbia, Andre Previn is beginning to cause a sales stir with his "Like Love" package while Floyd Cramer's "On The Rebound" and the Marty Paich Piano Quartet are racking up strong sales for Victor.

The honky-tonk piano, too, is making a dent in pop areas as witness the big sales racked up by Knuckles O'Toole on the Grand Award label. Victor also is going into its morguw to cash in on the current piano binge. Last week it issued "Boogie Woogie Revisited," a compilation of the works of such keyboarders as Pete Johnson and Albert Ammons.

The growing interest in piano disks have also brought classical performers into the pop sales lists. Currently riding high in pop areas are Sviastolov Richter with a Brahm's Concerto, Van Cliburn with Tschaikovsky's Piano Concerto and Artur Rubinstein with "Heart of the Piano Concerto."

Lester Sims has exited the general professional manager's spot at Bourne Inc. He's being replaced by Larry Taylor.

Reiner is planning to resume a full schedule of activities for the coming year.

RCA Victor Digging Its Archives For Balanced LP Reissue Program

Walk Right Back Everly Bros. (WB)

Love Me Tom'r'w?..Shirelles (Top Rank)
Where Boys Are.....Francis (MGM)

Only exploited as a sometime thing in recent years, the vast thesaurus of historical recordings in RCA Victor's archives will now be mined on a steady, year-round basis for LP packages. Brad McCuen, pop artists & repertoire staffer and himself a disk collector, is in charge of the oldie program which was given the greenlight by Robert L. Yorke, Victor v.p. over disk creation. Yorke's conception is to turn up the reissues in a planned and balanced program with new releases rather than trading the archives in sporadic spurts as in the past.

The program has been kicked off with a group of four packages in the jazz vein. Included in the current Victor LP release are "A Rare Batch of Satch," a collection of Louis Armstrong sides from the 1930s, "Bix," a group of Bix Beiderbecke recordings, one of which was never before released; "Boogie Woogie Revisited," an anthology by various prominent bands and soloists; and an Artie Shaw set, taken from his stand at the Cafe Rouge in the old Pennsylvania Hotel (now the Statler-Hilton) in the 1938-39 era.

Upcoming in the next few months will be sets of sides by Dizzy Gillespie made during the early days of bop; a Lionel Hampton package; an LP titled "Djangology," comprising the last sides made by the guitarist Django Reinhardt shortly before he died in Rome around 10 years ago; and a double-LP set titled "The Indispensable Duke," comprising sides by the Duke Ellington band in the 1940-46 period. In the folk field, Victor will put out another set by the late country singer Jimmie Rodgers, who was one of the best-selling names in the 1920s. These sets will be spaced out in releases over the rest of the year.

Victor hit paydirt with its reissues several years ago when it came up with a couple of de luxe packages by the Glenn Miller orchestra. Benny Goodman and Artie Shaw reissues have also been big sellers for Victor along with Wayne King and Ellington in the past.

FTC Lifts Payola Rap From Capitol; O.K.'s Cuffo Disks

The Federal Trade Commission payola rap against Capitol Records Distributing Corp. has been dismissed. Last week the FTC dismissed its payola complaint against Columbia Records Sales Corp.

The FTC complaint against Capitol was issued in July, 1960. According to J. K. Maitland, CRDC prez, the FTC attorneys asked the commission to dismiss the complaint, indicating that they consider prosecution of the matter "an unnecessary expenditure in time, effort and funds."

Maitland stated, "The Commission apparently now concurs with CRDC's continuing belief that giving records to radio stations for normal broadcast use does not violate any Federal law. Naturally, we are extremely pleased at the vindication of our company's position. At the same time, we can only regret the adverse publicity that is inevitably connected with the complaint originally filed by the FTC."

SEC PUTS ROULETTE ON CARPET APRIL 25

Washington, April 11.

The Securities & Exchange Commission has set April 25 for a hearing on a charge that a public stock offering by Roulette Records contained "false and misleading statements."

One of the charges made by FTC was that Roulette failed to mention in its circular that a payola complaint was pending against it by the Federal Trade Commission.

Maxin Joins Berman Tour to Tape Material For Next MGM/Verve LP

Maxin will cut tapes during Berman's appearances in San Francisco, Santa Barbara, Sacramento, Portland, Seattle, San Mateo, Los Angeles, San Diego, Pasadena and Santa Monica within the next few weeks. The tape will be used for an LP to be called "The Many Sides of Shelley Berman."

While on the Coast, Maxin will also meet with Verve artist Anita O'Day and with MGM studio execs as well as with Coast sales chief Bernie Silverman and Jesse Kaye, veepee in charge of studio and Coast liaison to discuss upcoming soundtrack albums and single releases from Metro pix in production.

Maxin has just returned from a European trek where he visited MGM/Verve overseas distributors and affiliates with Gene Moretti, foreign sales manager for the label.

Va. Beach's Jazz Fete

Virginia Beach, Va., April 11.

The third annual jazz festival held in this resort city will be held July 14-15.

BBC Forces New Lyrics For '100 Pounds of Clay'

London, April 11.

The BBC has banned the original lyric of U.S. hit "A Hundred Pounds of Clay" from its entertainment programs. But an amended version—with the offending words left out—has been passed for broadcasting.

Said a BBC official: "It was felt that the words of the original version might give offense on religious grounds so it was placed on our restricted list. This means it will not be played on entertainment programs, although it might be broadcast in a documentary feature—say, a survey of songs of the '60s."

Two disks affected by the ban are Gene McDaniels' rendering of the ditty, released here on the London label, and a Top Rank recording by 19-year-old British singer Craig Douglas.

When news of the BBC ban came through, Douglas's manager Bunny Lewis hastily rewrote the lyric, after consultation with George Pincus, U.S. publisher.

First six lines of both versions are the same. But the seventh line "He created a woman and lots of lovin' for a man" raised BBC eyebrows. So Lewis changed it to "He created old Adam and he made a woman for the man."

Other changes: "Thank Him every day/For every kiss you're giving" became "Thank Him every day For all the joys He's given" and "I'll thank Him every night" is followed by "For my world full of beauty and light," instead of the tabued "For the arms that are holding me tight."

Album Reviews

Dick Gregory: "In Living Black and White" (Colpix). Riding high on a publicity splurge that's setting him up as the first Negro comic to make it big in ofay nitery circles, Dick Gregory should do fine as a disk artist but only north of the Mason-Dixon line. His cracks about segregation, white supremacy and the terrors of the south, although widely quoted, still hold up in his easy and casual manner. He's got a lot to say about a lot of things, but it's when he targets on the white-black problem he's at his best. The platter was etched during a session at Chicago's Playboy Club and the audience response, even with some heckling, adds to the fun. It'll be interesting to see, though, how Colpix's southern distributors react to it.

Johnny Mathis: "I'll Buy You A Star" (Columbia). The singer has done extremely well in the LP field with his six previous packages and now with the added attraction of Nelson Riddle's orch, Mathis is sure to pick up more of the spinning and sales marbles. He mixes swing and sweet in a way that appeals to the young and adult disk fan giving him a buying spread that's held by only a few of the current diskers. "Love Look Away," "Warm and Willing," "When My Sugar Walks Down The Street," "Stairway To The Stars" and the title song will get lots of programming attention.

The Belafonte Folk Singers: "At Home and Abroad" (RCA Victor). The recent folktune binge on disks which was ignited by the Kingston Trio and brightened by the Limeliters is given still another dimension by the Belafonte Folk Singers. The 12-man singing group under Robert DeCormier's direction bring a warmth and intensity to their global song tour that will bring new folk buffs into the fold and please the diehards. The South American Gaucho song, "Mi Caballo Blanco," the Negro gospel song, "Didn't It Rain," the English nursery rhyme "Cock Robin," the Yugoslav love song "Sano Duso" give the group plenty of room to move around and whip up some stirring harmony sounds.

Enoch Light & The Light Brigade: "Provocative Percussion Vol. III" (Command). The fact that this is the third volume of Enoch Light's "Provocative Percussion" output attests to the series' sales power. Light has a bright and easy quality which bounces effectively across his sound stylings. The arrangements are undemanding and the repertoire consists of such delights as "Easy To Love," "April In Portugal," "Pagan Love Song," "Old Devil Moon," and "Far Away Places." It can't help but follow its predecessors into the hot sales bracket.

Roger Wagner Chorale: "A Song At Twilight" (Capitol). The voices that Roger Wagner have put into his Chorale are blended for top-drawer musical effect without, for the most part, the use of a musical instrument. Occasionally there's a harp or an accordion to help 'em along but they are so richly endowed that the instruments are almost superfluous. The tunes are of the familiar brand, like "In The Gloaming" and "Home On The Range," but the tasteful and sincere performance makes 'em all worth a replay.

Jane Morgan: "The Second Time Around" (Kapp). The romantic side of Jane Morgan is quite intriguing. Whether she romanticizes with a lilt such as in "Love Is A Simple Thing" or with a ballad maturity such as in "The Second Time Around," she conveys the lyric mood in no uncertain terms. With such other love-based songs as "Why Should I Cry Over You," "Romantica," "Our Language of Love" and "The Twilight Waltz" among others to help round out the set, Miss Morgan has a good chance to wrap up neat sales and spins. The orch and chorus direction credits are shared by Joe Sherman, Jack Elliott, Nick Perito and Ray Charles.

Earle Doud: "Sounds Funny" (Epic). This package is pegged for laughs in stereo circles. Earl Doud, with a strong assist from sound effects man Ralph Curtis, has whipped up a madcap platter that will tickle the audio buffs. The sounds are wild and the script, written and narrated by Doud, is fashioned for fun.

Eric Vaughn Orch: "Wine, Women and Waltzes" (Medallion). Eric Vaughn has added something new to the Viennese waltz to win over the audiophiles. He's taken a flock of the schmaltzy tunes and added a modern percussion beat to his rolling strings. Franz Lehar's "The Merry Widow Waltz," Robert Stolz's "Two Hearts In Three-Quarter Time," Emmerich Kalman's "Love's Own Sweet Song" and Johann Strauss' "The Blue Danube Waltz" and the like light up in this new setting.

Shep Ginandes: "Dogwood Soup" (Pathways of Sound). Shep Ginandes is a folk singer with a talent to attract the kids. For those moppets who haven't yet fallen into the rock 'n' roll groove, Ginandes has collected a pleasing folksong selection pegged for the youngsters. Once the parents get the disk on the turntable, they'll find that their youngsters have found a new friend in Ginandes.

FORMER ERA PARTNERS OK FTC PAYOLA ORDER

Washington, April 11.

Three former co-partners in Era Records, Hollywood, have bowed to Federal Trade Commission and agreed to a consent order forbidding them from engaging in payola. The three are Herbert Newman, Louis J. Bedell and Max Newman, all of Hollywood. Until May, 1959, they were partners in Era. Now they manufacture disks under separate labels.

FTC issued a payola complaint against them last November charging them with giving money or "other valuable consideration" to disk jockeys and other broadcasting personnel to push their Era records.

Under FTC's scheme of things, the consent order is solely for settlement of the complaint and is not tantamount to an admission of wrong-doing.

Frisco Lawyer Sues Helen Noga for $5,000

San Fancisco, April 11.

A Frisco lawyer sued Johnny Mathis' manager, Helen Noga, for $5,000 last week and also demanded an accounting of Miss Noga's and Mathis' business dealings.

Roy Sharff, in a superior court suit here, said he made an oral five-year contract in 1955 with Miss Noga for 5% of Mathis' earnings in exchange for legal work.

His complaint charged he was paid $2,000 until December, 1958, and nothing thereafter, although the contract still had two years to go. He estimated his share to be "at least" $5,000.

Noted jazz historian, MARSHALL STEARNS, author of the STORY OF JAZZ, takes notes for his new book on jazz and the dance from an interview tape that he plays back on his NORELCO 'Continental' tape recorder. DR. STEARNS is Director of the INSTITUTE OF JAZZ STUDIES and Associate Professor of English at HUNTER COLLEGE. "I make constant use of my NORELCO 'Continental' when doing field work for my books and articles," states DR. STEARNS. "Here, the most significant feature is three speed versatility. I find that the extremely economical 1⅞ speed is ideal for recording interviews from which I later take material needed for my work. The other speeds are exceptional for their ability to capture the full fidelity of music and voice." The NORELCO 'Continental' is a product of North American Philips Co., Inc., High Fidelity Products Division, Dept. 1LL4, 230 Duffy Avenue, Hicksville, Long Island, New York.

Mass. Probe Seeks End of Bookings By New York Talent Agencies in State

Boston, April 11.

An investigation into booking activities by unlicensed and out-of-state bookers has been launched by Ben Ford Abrams and Ray Marr, investigators for the State Dept. of Public Safety, which regulates booking activities.

Complaints that anyone in Massachusetts can and is booking shows, and that out-of-state bookers, nearly 100% New York offices, are riding roughshod over Boston agents, booking shows direct spurred the investigation.

The investigators also point out that the law does "have teeth" in it. It says. "No person shall act as a booking agent, personal agent or actor's manager, or engage, directly or indirectly, in the business of acting as an agent in the commonwealth unless he has obtained a license from the commissioner of public safety. Any person so licensed shall maintain one or more offices in the commonwealth."

The law states: "Whoever violates the provisions of this section shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both."

The Department of Public Safety is calling particular attention to the provision which says: "Any person so licensed shall maintain one or more offices in the commonwealth." According to the interpretation, this prohibits out-of-town bookers from booking shows direct into the state. Unless they book through a bona fide licensed Massachusettes booker, they are in violation of the law, the department says.

Round Hot Dog Takes Its Cause to Dave Garroway

Publicitywise, the hot-dog as an American institution has been giving way to alien imports such as the pizza, and with it comes a loss of markets, money and prestige. As a result, Nathan's, the Coney Island pyropup king, is now indulging in a series of polemics designed to renew interest in the traditional American comestible by indulging in a controversy on the relative merits of the hundwurst of the long traditional shape, and the round hotdog which has been introed on the food exchanges.

Participants in the verbal battle are Hy Brown, general manager of Nathan's who came on the Garroway show to discourse on the merits of the traditional canine, and Sid Jaffee, of the American Kosher products, who extolled the advantages of the new shape.

Many feel that it really matters little who wins in the battle of forms and shapes, the main item is to get the American public to resume thinking in terms of the great American dish, and to take attention away from pizza and other imports.

New Steubenville Arena Mapping Major Lineup Of Sports, Talent Dates

Pittsburgh, April 11.

The Diocesan Community Arena, in Steubenville, O., 50 miles south of here, is now open and shapes as one of the top auditorium-theatre operations in the country. It opened to the public for the first time on March 15 where it housed a Boat Show but the big excitement came when the Harlem Globetrotters came in and did a $20,000 gross in matinee and evening games.

Morris Saperstein, of the Trotters, and his half-time star, Cab Calloway, said the auditorium had facilities equal to any building in the country. The arena has 6,000 permanent theater-type seats and an additional 3,000 portable seats. There are no posts and plenty of wide aisles.

Frank Dominico is the general manager and handling all the booking arrangements. Rentals depend on the type of event. Vince Risko, Canton promoter who handled the Globetrotter game, is planning to put wrestling in the arena. Apples Mayers, who is putting up an office in Steubenville, plans to promote there all year around and is calling the talent agencies for anything that will lend itself to arena presentation. A portable stage is now being built for use in the fall. Meyers told VARIETY he has bids out for such attractions as Victor Borge, the Coldstream Guards, Fred Waring, Stan Kenton, Louis Armstrong, the Irv Feld rock rollers, Jazz for Moderns, Mort Sahl, the Kingston Trio, the Brothers Four, Bob Newhart and Shelley Berman.

Another strong date on the midwest jaunt was $7,350 at the Music Hall, Cleveland, March 19. Most of the midwest dates were generally on a guarantee basis.

Newhart begins his eastern tour Saturday with a one-nighter at the Mosque Theatre, Newark, Saturday (15), and the following night hits Carnegie Hall, N.Y. Total for east will be 18 dates winding up May 7 at Her Majesty's Theatre, Montreal.

Mexico Talent Union In Nitery Crackdown

Mexico City, April 11.

The National Association of Actors has taken action against nine night spots in the port resort of Acapulco. Clubs either refuse to negotiate new collective work contracts with the union or are heavily indebted to the Association in non-payment of salaries to members as well as union quotas.

Clubs blacklisted include such tourist spots as Ski Club, Canta Rana (Singing Frog), La Roqueta, Bohio, Caribbean, Bambu, Bahia, Barba Azul and Caleta.

Dunes, Riviera In Vegas Race For B'way Shows

The race for the booking of legit musicals into Las Vegas hotels is currently in progress. The Dunes Hotel there has booked "Tenderloin" for a six-weeks and options deal to star May 16, thus going into the same policy established some years ago by the Vegas Riviera Hotel, of buying Broadway shows as they become available.

The key figures in the legit musical entries for Las Vegas are Sammy Lewis, the former booker of the Riviera, who set the deal with "Tenderloin" producers Griffith & Prince, and Ben Goffstein, Riviera prexy, who arrives in New York Monday (17) to gander the current legit and nitery show crop as well as confer with talent agencies on name availabilities. Lewis was in New York last week and closed "The Tenderloin" deal just prior to Goffstein's arrival. Latter is currently in Chicago looking over talent in that city.

The Dunes is seeking to get out of the nude show policy, which, incidentally, it instigated initially, and apparently figures the legit musical booking is a good method of launching a former which will lead into name bookings. At the same time, Lewis, who until several months ago, handled all bookings for the Riviera, had an agreement, David Merrick to set all that producer's shows as they shuttered on the Stem.

Now that he is on his own, he took Now that he is on his own, he took the booking to the Dunes on the eve of Goffstein's visit here. Currently at the Riviera is "La Plume de ma Tante."

Maurice Evans, lead in the Broadway presentation, will not go into the nitery. His successor for the cafe version is to be named. Closing date for "Tenderloin" hasn't been set yet, but it's presumed that the show will have to close long enough in advance for retooling for the Dunes.

DAMONE OPENS TEX. CLUB

Houston, April 11.

Vic Damone has been booked to open the New Embassy Club here May 1. The spot, the old Park Towers Club now remodeled into twice its size will also bring in Howard Hartman and Don Estes, singers.

Spot is operated by Jim Gudgill.

Wildwood, N. J., Spots Parlay Names, Gambling in Bid for Summer Biz

Wildwood-by-Sea, N.J., April 11.

Five clubs out of the resort island's 150-after dark spots are slated to offer names from the top and middle brackets. Oscar Garrigue's Manor Hotel Supper Club returns to names after a three year lapse with Connie Francis, Paul Anka, Johnny Mathis, Carmel Quinn, Dion, Julius LaRosa, Damita Jo, Duane Eddy, Betty Johnson and the Mills Bros. Others hiring names will be Sylvan Rosenfeld's Hurricane Room, Harry Levy's Rainbow Room, Helen Roesch's Beachcomber and Ben Martin's Bolero. Fred Gleim has not yet announced plans for his Diamond Beach club.

The wheels of chance and some twenty other types of legalized gambling devices that proved a financial bonanza to the boardwalk are being augmented. In some cases, even eating places are being replaced with gambling. Two boardwalk piers are lacing their amusement ride zones with gambling features. They are Joseph Barnes and Elmer Foehl's Convention Hall Fun Pier and Gilbert Ramagosa's Sportland Pier.

Harry Levy's Rainbow Room will continue to offer rock 'n' roll headliners with Chubby Checker pacted for three engagements. His first five day stint will start May 26. He returns for 10 days over Labor Day and for another frame in midseason. Others set are Teddy Randazzo, Ray Peterson, Danny & The Juniors, Jimmy Clanton, Georgie Young and the Rockin'-Bocs, longtime tenants of the Rainbow, are inked in for a 14-week engagement.

Levy will also expand his operations to the boardwalk by leasing the Arcade Ballroom atop the Casino Arcade Park. Record hops will be offered with disk jockeys with live shows on Wednesdays and weekends. Levy plans to offer teenage favorites with a full band and show for the key weekend periods. Previous offerings of this type headlined by Dick Clark were fantastic b.o. successes at the nearby competitive Hunt's Starlight ballroom.

Sylvan Rosenfeld opens the Hurricane Room May 26.

Rosenfeld will return the Frankie Brent quintet to the bandstand with its featured comedian, Jay Price.

Hunt's Pier will offer the newest boardwalk spectacular with the Calypso, imported from Germany. Gondola type cars in multi-hues move in a calypso dance-like fashion on a revolving platform.

The resort is already flooded with seasonal job applicants from nearby cities indicating all is not well on the economic front.

Leonidoff in Puerto Rico For Music Hall Layout Marking Island's Anni

San Juan, P. R., April 7.

Radio City Music Hall impresario Leon Leonidoff arrived here for one week to complete plans for staging a spectacular honoring Puerto Rico. The all-Puerto Rican show is scheduled for April 27, and will play at Radio City with "Parrish," starring Claudette Colbert.

"We are coordinating the show with the 440th anniversary of the founding of San Juan," Leonidoff said. "We do not want just a series of acts, or a vaudeville-type show. We hope to stage an integrated presentation showing Puerto Rico at its best, and also work in our Rockettes, ballet corps, and symphony orchestra."

Leonidoff has signed Puerto Rican Graciela Rivera, (who has performed at the Met) and the Julio Rodriquez trio, which plays regularly at the Caribe Hilton Hotel terrace. Another feature will be the presentatoin of a Miss San Juan. "We will be filming some scenic material in Cinema-Scope, to introduce the 36-minute show," he said.

Disk Show Hits 173G, B'klyn Par

The 10-day disk show at the Brooklyn Paramount which ended Sunday (9) scored a sizzling $173,000. Produced by Sid Bernstein and tabbed "Easter Parade of Stars," the show had its biggest day April 5 with the appearance of Johnny Mathis who appeared only for two shows during the day.

Mathis flew in from Florida, but plane trouble delayed his arrival until 2.30 p.m. With a 34-minute intermission after his stint, managing director Gene Pleshette started the second show. Mathis could do no more that day because of a commitment the following day in San Francisco.

Others who appeared in the Brooklyn layout were Bobby Rydell, Chubby Checker, Dion, Bobby Vee, Johnny Burnette, Jimmy Clanton, Frank Gary, Ben E. King, The Shirelles, Capris, Little Anthony & The Imperials, Johnny Tillotson, Carla Thomas, Rosie, the Isley Bros., Ray Peterson and others.

Bernstein will now produce the Music At Newport concerts to take place June 30 to July 3 at Newport, R.I. Last year, the Jazz Festival was cancelled because of disorders by buffs who couldn't get entry into the stadium. This year, added police will be on hand, funds for increased protection being provided by a $10,000 fund advanced by Bernstein to the Festival.

RAY CHARLES ROLLS $34,000 IN CHICAGO

Chicago, April 11.

In two virtual sellouts, Ray Charles grossed nearly $34,000 in tandem concerts at the new 5,000-seat McCormick Place auditorium last Saturday (8) and Sunday, with tickets scaled from $2 to $4. Charles appeared with an augmented orchestra and chorus.

Although Charles is actually the second show biz attraction to appear at the new showplace, the two-concert gross establishes the first boxoffice marker for the house. First attraction was a jazz concert benefit.

Charles to Boston

Boston, April 11.

Hal Zeiger, who has been presenting Ray Charles in concerts across the country, is bringing the Charles Show to Symphony Hall for two performances on April 28. House is scaled at a $4 top.

The senior Balaban has been residing in Switzerland for several years, making periodic trips to visit friends and family in the U.S.

Early Bird Gets the Option

Banducci Gets Talent for Frisco's hungry i Before Salaries Get Stratospheric

Enrico Banducci, operator of San Francisco' hungry i, is apparently finding that travel throughout the country pays off. His casing of talent in many cities throughout the country has enabled him to catch some of the top acts in the country by the options. For example, Dick Gregory, current at the Blue Angel, is obligated to play the hungry i at $1,500 when the rest of the country is paying $4,000 for him. Shelley Berman played Banducci's spot for $600 when his price had zoomed to the stratosphere. Bob Newhart is reportedly beefing, but the contract and the law says that he still owes the hungry i a date at $1,000, which is far below the price that the comic gets on a one-nighter.

Others who have played Banducci's spot at the vastly reduced rates include Mike Nichols & Elaine May and, of course, Mort Sahl, who started his career under Banducci's guidance for $75 a week. Phyllis Diller played her first cafe date at the hungry i at a starter's salary but developed there in an 85-week stand until she now commands a respectable four-figures.

Banducci, who was in New York last week to tape several shows for PM West, which together with PM East is being groomed as opposition for Jack Paar to be carried on WNEW-TV and other stations, apparently feels that these short prices are his reward for working assiduously with an act after catching them early in their career. He has provided them with audiences and experience and an atmosphere in which they can develop.

Banducci says that a boniface has the duty of making a room attractive to an act and providing ful propaganda campaign to create an affirmative public image. This has been true from Gotham to Las Vegas where, in that particularly concentrated albeit legalized gambling oasis with its concommitant entertainment appurtenances, the casinos have been most circumspect in overall internal behavorism and, exteriorally, have done an aggressive community welfare job on everything from civic pride to religious pursuits. As a concomitant, the French influences in Vegas, in re nudity, are declining.

Careless criteria has appeared of late, confined not to the Barth or Bruce school exclusively because, even before their more generally exposed brand of indigo or "sick" humor, there already existed a big-under-the-counter and mail order business of "party" albums. Most of the titles are as unsubtle as backfence calligraphy and the lyric content singularly pornographic.

In re recordings, of another sort —doing LPs "live" off the cafe floor—this is a big plus, because of the audience values and the general informality when it applies to legitimate entertainers such as picking-up the actual—and class—nitery floor performances of Lena Horne, Tony Martin, Paul Anka, Noel Coward, Ella Fitzgerald, Pearl Bailey, Tony Bennett, Carol Channing et. al. This recreates for home-consumption an aliveness because of the audience response. The nitery comics, too, when are generally appealing (Mort Sahl, Bob Newhart, Shelley Berman) deliver the same vibrancy, and nothing is lacking. But when, for some unnecessary reason, as is a current happenstance in the case of a promising newcomer (who shall be spared here), he gives out with a needless Chic Sale expression one wonders wha' happened? Wha' happened not only to this obviously intelligent young comic but where is the judgment of the major disk label to permit such unedited expletive to mar an otherwise appealing and witty platter.

'Blue' for Blowup

Manifestations of a current blue wave should be curbed before it explodes in the industry's face. It happened with the picture business and Hollywood had to pay-roll a "czar" and create a self-regulatory agency. But direr things can happen to the nitery entrepreneurs and their talent if the idea of a fast buck through "shock" (or misguided "sophisticated") appeal is at the root of this new evolution.

The paradox is that a certain segment of the talent itself seems convinced that "that's what the people want." One great-name crooner, latterly touring the niteries, is most articulate and glib in his conviction that "people who go out at night want to laugh, and don't mind if it's risque." True, he typifies the insecure performer because the top stand-up comics have an acceptancy in the bistros with wit and humor and a "clean" approach to their routines as much as over the air when broadcasting into the home.

If the performer has professional know-how he can be commercial in any medium, under any circumstances. A clean act has never been a handicap but a passport. It is the smutty purveyor of leers and "leer-ics" who circumscribes his or her orbit.

The theory that if some freak songalogist or "far-out" comic manages to make impact then "let's find some others like him or her" is fallacious. This is in answer to some of the minor bistros and opportunistic agents reportedly starting to scout the "party" diskers for possible open-door cabaret bookings. They're strictly stag workers and should be left there.

Right now on the Manhattan scene are two instances where police harrassment can summarily put anyone foolhardy not to stick to the rule out of business. They are not analgous to any threatened "blue" wave, but it points up that over night the Greenwich Village coffeehouses find themselves in a hot seat and, in the Times Square belt, over night the legitimate dancehalls find themselves under a cloud just because cha-chaing detectives gathered enough evidence against one Broadway ballroom because some of its patrons allegedly were marijuana users, carried concealed weapons or loitered for illicit purposes.

In Miami there seemingly is a "broader" attitude about vulgar comedians, song "stylists," strippers and "third sex" bistros. In Hollywood, one Sunset Strip essayed a Belle Barth booking and (1) found itself out of business for several nights, (2) facing trial, and contiguously, (3) a disk pressing plant purveying her records was raided and the albums confiscated. In Las Vegas, for a never clarified reason, a Barth booking scheduled for March never came off, presumably for the sound business reasons that there just isn't any sense asking for trouble.

Seemingly there is a market for these "singing French postcards." It should be kept in bounds. Bistros faced with local police regulations on behaviorism, rules on public safety, and statutes under the liquor licensing laws face too many standard hazards to be wooing any needlessly additional problems. This is the just the hard-core approach to their operations if they ever start thinking dimly about the overall obligation of good taste. And that, incidentally, goes for at least this one major disk label where, if the artist's viewpoint is jaundiced, should not have permitted such a lapse in management control.

Early Bird

attentive audiences. The latter is the most difficult, but, he says there are the rules of the house. He is credited in one evening, of refunding money to a party of 14 and telling them to go elsewhere, because they failed to pay sufficient attention to an act which Banducci thought rated it.

It's Banducci's theory that an admission charge is a desirable method of forcing audiences to pay attention. People will pay attention to what they are paying hard cash for. The $3 admission in effect at the hungry i has also tended to separate the spot from the beatnik movement which had a strong base in the Golden Gate city. Banducci points out that there are four major universities around San Francisco, which set the tone of his establishment, and he has had to provide upper IQ acts to take advantage of that potentially important audience.

Another item that has made the hungry i an important factor in San Francisco is the ban on blue material. He pointed out that because of this tenet, parents have no qualms about their kids attending his spot.

Banducci says that during his travels and by the process of auditioning, listening to reliable agents and through his instincts, he bought such acts as Shelley Berman originally for $350; Newhart first played his spot for $600 and signed an option to return at $1,000 before 1962. These, of course, turned out to be fortunate talent buys, and Banducci expects to unearth others even at a greater rate now that he must look for talent for PM West in addition to meeting the needs of the hungry i.

Anna Russell Starts 3-Month Aussie Tour

Melbourne, April 4.

Comedienne Anna Russell commenced her three-month Down Under tour here on the eve of Melbourne's annual Moomba Festival. Many of opening events of the 10-day festival had to be cancelled because of bad inclement weather but Miss Russell's three concerts at the Town Hall here for the Australian Broadcasting Commission were such hits that a fourth has been squeezed in for a Saturday matinee.

Miss Russell's tour embraces many country areas but she's expected back in Melbourne in May for a concert date. She was last here in 1955.

India Dancer on 2-Mo. Tour

New Delhi, April 4.

Danseuse Kamela Laxman, noted performer in the Bharata Natyam style of Indian terping, is set for a two-month tour of Britain and the Continent which may be extended a further month if her plans to visit the U.S. jell. She is traveling with a nine-member troupe which includes her sisters Radha and Vasanthi and choreographer Sudarshan Kumar.

Her European circuit takes in Rome, Switzerland, Stuttgart, Karlsruhe, Cologne, Bremen, Hamburg, Berlin.

Inside Stuff—Vaude

VARIETY review of Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey circus last week erratumed in noting acro-comic Gutis was abetted by clowns. It happens to be the topper's own seven-man troupe, and longtime circus and fair unit staple here and abroad.

Adah (Mrs. Ted) Lewis, in connection with some Broadway column references to Monte Proser's and Joe Kipness' just-opened Lanai restaurant, recalls that it was not the site of a Prohibition nitery wherein Clayton, Jackson & Durante starred. The present Lanai, in the Winter Garden Theatre Bldg., was opened as the Bal Tabarin Club in 1918 and was jointly owned and operated by Lewis, who starred, Jack Lanigan (a waistcoat manufacturer) and Gaillard T. (Gil) Boag, a hot-shot nitery operator of that era. Lewis worked there until Prohibition took effect in 1919 and then went into the "Greenwich Village Follies," subsequently opening his own Ted Lewis Club on 7th Ave. and 52d St.

There was another swank nitery on the floor above the Bal Tabarin, with its own entrance (by elevator) on 52d St., called the Montmartre, and later El Mirador, where Beatrice Lillie and Moss & Fontana starred. Clayton, Jackson & Durante were then at the Parody Club.

Julie Wilson is attempting to widen her employment horizons. Having recently changed agencies to Joe Glaser's Associated Booking Corp., being brought in by Freddy Williamson of the Chicago office, Miss Wilson is now going in for an entirely different type of booking. She's set for Basin St. East, N. Y., on the Louis Armstrong bill, starting May 22.

Agency feeling is that Miss Wilson, whose New York dates were mainly at the Maisonette of the St. Regis Hotel, and originally at the Copacabana, should strive for a different type of audience, thus her bid for favor with the jazz crowd rather than returning to the chichi audiences.

Acapulco's Fire God Club Sets New Mexican High For Hill Site & Cover Tab

Acapulco, April 11.

Promoter Hal Hayes, has moved in on this port with grandiose schemes for a super-super mansion and an equally swanky night club.

Both are a reality, after a fashion, and the Club La Mira Fire God, rushed through to completion, did an initial rush business in the past tourist season which ended in Holy Week, even though it has a stratospheric $8 per person cover charge.

The night club is located on one of the highest hills overlooking the expanse of Acapulco Bay. Entrance is of stone construction and there is lavish use of tree roots in interior decor. At one side is a massive figure of the Aztec God of Fire, the symbol of the Club. Club has a roofed-in area and an open air terrace, and cash customers in latter have feeling they are dancing in the clouds.

Entertainment is not traditional floorshow but two ballets, creations of Mexican choregrapher Leon Escobar. In one, "Los Poseidos," attempt is to capture African atmosphere, and second is an alleged Maya legend "Nic-Te-Lol-Tum."

Featured dancers are Isai Lopez and Aida Casablanca; singers Humberto Canas and Alicia Gonzalez, latter brought from the Casino de Paris and the necessary complement of dancers to interpret the two ballets.

With long slack season coming on club may face its first real problem. The novelty, decor and high location (originated by Armando Sotres who now manages the club) had customers ponying up the high cover without too much beefing.

Hayes and his associates already have alleged they are targets of an insidious campaign by Acapulco hotel and club men to tear them down. But that despite all the "criticism" they will continue to offer the public "a distinctive club and entertainment."

Club itself was built in 27 days with a force of 400 workers, and investment in construction is reportedly around $60,000.

Hayes also put up a "palace" in the port, with this allegedly having 144 rooms, 88 baths, 15 kitchens and 42 living rooms. This building took a little more time to erect, somewhat under three months.

Invites for the inauguration of the club and the abuilding fabulous villa were sent out late in December by Hayes, with telegrams promising the most fabulous shindig of the year. Guests receiving bids to attend included persons high in society, entertainment, banking and political circles as well as the working press. Offer included an all expenses paid year-end celebration in Acapulco.

Odd thing about all this was that few of the invitees showed up and the fabulous party was somewhat less than that. And, shortly thereafter, upper floors of the dream house caved in. As of now nothing much has been done to repair the damage.

Mirror Follows N.Y. Times In Policy That Nite Club Reviews Are Fit to Print

New York niteries are attaining increasing stature as far as the daily newspapers are concerned. Latest to go in for more intensified coverage of the cabaret scene is the N.Y. Daily Mirror, which is now publishing floorshow reviews in the final edition of the paper on the morning after the show. The early editions of the following day will carry the same review, thus the paper will provide the same type treatment as legit shows normally get.

The Mirror's step follows that of the New York Times which recently started reviewing cafes and which has been strongly instrumental in reconsideration of cafe show values by the other N.Y. sheets.

The Mirror's Frank Quinn, who doubles as film critic, and Mel Heimer, a syndicated columnist on the paper, are now assigned to round out their coverage with nitery reviews. Both staffers have a midnight deadline, and thence to the office to pound out the copy. In some instances, especially in the supper clubs, they may miss the tail end of the headliner's turn, but the Mirror's deadline time, generally enough has been seen to formulate an opinion of the act.

Cafe coverage has always been a perplexing problem for the N.Y. dailies. Beneficiary of a large number of ads, the amusement departments have given much coverage to the cafes, but reviews were carried on specified days or when space permitted. Recently, the N.Y. World Telegram & Sun and the Journal-American tried reviewing all the night clubs, and both these evening papers filled a lot of space with nitery stuff. However, that type of intensified coverage didn't last long.

Mass.' $2 Window

Boston, April 11.

A rose by any other name will now cost $2 in Mass. Performers appearing in theatres, niteries and other amusement spots must pony up a deuce when they file their true name statements with the commissioner of public safety.

True name law has been on books since 1948, but no fee was charged previously. The new fee, it was explained, will help defray costs of administering the act. The receipt issued for filing will also serve as an I.D. card for the entertainer.

ADAM KEEFE
Comedy
25 Mins.
Blue Angel, N.Y.

Adam Keefe appears to be a pleasant addition to the ranks of the new comics. His specialty is satires on filmsters, for which he shows a sharp ear and a versatile voice. His vocalistics are excellent, and his writing is of similar calibre.

At his Blue Angel bow he needs some editing. About 10 minutes out would help the routining. For example, he dwells lengthily on an impression of Frankenstein which, after a while, becomes wearing. There are a few pieces also, here and there, that need sharpening. But the overall effect is quite good for this spot as well as for the avantguardisti.

Included in his better bits is the discourse on Lugosi, his reading of a Dickens piece, and a rib of a cut-up video film. Jose.

NANCY WILSON
Songs
15 Mins.
Blue Angel, N.Y.

Nancy Wilson is an attractive Negro singer with a finely developed voice and a lot of feeling for her work. At her Blue Angel bow Miss Wilson delivered a rather elaborate treatment of comparatively simple themes. Many of her vocal curlevcues are rather involved. A more direct statements would help her at this particular spot. Also her tune selection has no particular character of identification in any category.

Miss Wilson has the makings of a fine jazz singer. She has comprehension as well as an apparent knowledge of music but needs to be brought back to this world, at least at the Blue Angel. She's slated for the Village Vanguard shortly, and her style may be more in order for that spot.

For the Blue Angel, Miss Wilson needs a change of catalog and simplification. She's a good singer essentially, well built and coiffed, but her quest for style and distinction has driven her to unusual lengths and a too offbeat pattern for these environs. Jose.

DON SHERMAN
Comedy
18 Mins.
Playboy Club, Chicago

Two years ago Don Sherman quit as a fast-quip nitery monologist to write comedy material for television and for other comics. His new turn is pitched for avant-garde audiences and styled for chichi or intimate clubs where patrons will dig his wryly good-humored commentary on "the news behind the news."

Sherman's background as a writer is strongly in evidence in his fresh and pungent material. Although his discourses represent a point of view a bewildered pilot calls the Pentagon: "It's me, Francis Gary Powers. You know—fly over Russia, take a few pictures, no trouble at all'", he eschews the hard-biting satire current with night club commentators.

His other narratives—including a routine on getting a traffic ticket from an anti-Northerner southern cop and a portrayal of a beatnik lecturing Khrushchev on how to handle the cold war hip-style—are broad social farces that drew good response from the would-be-hipster clientele of the Playboy Club.

Sherman appears to have made the transition from a one-liner standupper to his current languid delivery without sacrificing momentum or tempo. His material is potent, although he cut his act down to fit the four-act bill that plays the Playboy's Penthouse. Mor.

DANIELE CLARY
Sons
25 Mins.
Statler-Hilton, Washington D.C.

Daniele Clary a cliche Parisian import of petite figure and tres boudant hairdo, is just breaking in as a supper club chirper American-style after only three months in this country. But, despite a lack of ease in delivery, the 24-year-old chanteuse is a classy attraction for the Statler-Hilton's Embassy Room and like situations, which go in for the continental-cosmopolite atmosphere.

Her format consists of some standard French and standard American numbers (latter, mainly Cole Porter) rendered frequently in the usual bilingual manner—French original followed by English version and vice versa.

She could have done better without some of the selections, but Miss Clary will find her best format. She excels in a clever and demanding arrangement of "To Keep My Love Alive" from "Connecticut Yankee," the undisputed high spot of her act. She also displays aplomb in overcoming what was an evident lack of rapport with Steve Kisley's orch. Jay.

House Reviews

Apollo, N. Y.

Count Basie Orch (16) with Ocie Smith, Lambert-Hendricks & Ross with the Ike Isaacs Trio, Redd Foxx- Norma Miller Dancers (5); 'Price of Fear' (U).

This Harlem flagship reached into the jazz nitery circuit for its current bill and it turned out one of the house's more enjoyable sessions. With Count Basie's big band leading the way and the hip Lambert-Hendricks & Ross trio dishing out some snappy jive numbers, layout is solidly based and paced.

For the opener Norma Miller returned with a four-boy accompaniment to dish out a lively terp set. The guy aides supply a neat lift to her footwork activity and she toys around in a frolicsome manner to please the house and warm it up nicely for things to come. Vocalist Ocie Smith starts the vocalizing rolling next with a fine shouting style. Accomped by Basie's big band of seven brass, three rhythm, five reed, and the maestro on piano, of course, Smith gets into stride right away with a blues shout called "It Won't Be Long." He follows with a strong ballad, "Make a Present of Yourself" and winds with a hot rhythm workover of "All Right, Okay, You Win." The Basie group then comes through with a joyous bounce number to pave the way for Lambert-Hendricks Ross.

Dave Lambert, Jon Hendricks and Annie Ross are hip and happy. Their voices are attuned to jazz sounds and they essay a hot instrumental beat for top effect. Backed by the Ike Isaacs Trio (bass, piano and drums) the threesome run through such jazzed up nifties and "The Hooked Rabbit," "Gimmee That Wine," "The Girls Go Home" and a long but ever-interesting scat piece.

Even the comedy here this session has a hip, although sometimes blue quality. Redd Foxx, who's developed a strong marquee lure via his comedy-on-disk try is slick, pertinent and naughty. It's all put together, however, for sharp comedic values and he builds plenty of yocks with his barbs at segregation as well as his marital and animal stories that are sprinkled with innuendo. He's definitely not for the kiddies but the hipsters here get his message in no uncertain terms. House reverts to its routine rock'n'roll policy with a Dr. Jive layout beginning Friday ('14). Gros.

Bobino, Paris

Paris, March 30.

Felix Vitry presentation of musical revue "Boum Sur Paris" in two acts (20 scenes) by Marc-Cab, Jean Valmy. Choreography, sets & costumes, Luska; staged by Valmy; music, Gerard Calvi, Jack Ledru, Maurice Boulais, Guy Magenta; musical arrangements and conducted by Boulais; starring The Peters Sisters (3); featuring Jacques Bodoin, Micheline Dax, Monique Herval, Baby Scotch, Bowing Ballet (8), Jacques Villa, Philippe Audrey, Roger Royer, Robert Piquet; $2 top.

Vaudeville just does not seem to be considered as a spring and summer draw here, or maybe there are not enough headliners to go around, for even this nabe house goes to a musical revue status for the next few months. A simple unassuming show is wrapped around the voluminous Peters Sisters for okay entertainment results and this should please the locals with enough freshness for visitors.

No lewd skits or nudes here, but a series of fairly witty sketches and acceptable terp numbers with emphasis on bouncy and zesty song interludes by the Peters Sisters and comic bits by Jacques Bodoin and Micheline Dax. Latter score on video program takeoffs with the right twists in the satirized formats for big laughs. Bowling Ballet have some good looking girls and two agile men for acceptable ballets even if they are familliar and derivative.

Baby Scotch, a neatly volced soubrette Monique Herval, Jacques Villa, Philippe Andrey, Roger Royer and Robert Piquet all contribute amiably to the proceedings. Costumes and sets by Luska are good and it is generally a pleasant show piece that should keep the house in biz until it comes time for a return to the vaude format next fall. Price is reasonable. Mosk.

Ice Show Review

Ice Capades

(MUNICIPAL AUD., K. C.)

Kansas City, April 5.

20th edition of ice show in two acts, presented by John H. Harris; choreography by Ron Fletcher, Robert Dench, Rosemary Stewart, Tommy Mahoney; costumes, Billy Livingston; settings, George Jenkins, Floyd Parrish, Gaile Brown; Musical director, Jeri Mayhall. Cast: Aja Zanova, Louisa Orwell, Helga Neff, Peter Voss, Jimmy Grogan, Freddie Trenkler, Hans Leiter, Doug Austin Katherine & Fred Emanuel, Bernie & Maggie, John Demko & Ben Gee, Ice Capets (32), Ice Cadets (16); Municipal Auditorium April 3-9, 1961.

The ice show has always been a staple entertainment commodity here, and judging from boxoffice biz on this one it is as staple as ever. Producer John Harris has left little undone in the way of fine staging and elaborate costuming, and with the talented array of skaters this turns out to be all the movement and spectacle the fans come to see. After 20 years around there is little that is new to the iceskating exhibition, and yet the appeal of this one seems fresh and new, much of it traceable to the skating artists themselves.

This company is peopled largely with European champions, with a sprinkling of Canadians, an English team and an American. Their skating skill is international, however, and the show they move through has few light spots throughout its two hours and 15 minutes running time. Generally speaking, individual performances are the high spots, yet the production numbers add the broad scope to the show.

There is something for everyone in the production numbers, from the opening "Blue Danube," which features Canadian lass Louisa Orwell, through "Babes in Toyland" as a romp for the kiddies, to the "Operama Number Two" for the longhair buffs and the "Moiseyev On Ice" as interpreted folklore. The finale is the traditional line drill number, this one done up as "A Salute to the Mounties," expert and deserving of the big hand it got. All, of course, are beautifully costumed.

Individual specialties begin with Miss Orwell in her first professional engagement, Peter Voss as slick a skater and looker as there is on ice, Helga Neff and Hans Leiter in the "Toyland" number, and the Operama giving special attention to Aja Zanova, the big beauteous Czech, and Jimmy Grogan, the fallish boy from Tacoma. Rhythm and acro work is provided by Katherine & Fred Emanuel, who work tirelessly in three key spots, and by Bernie & Maggie, the sprightly English team. Even Miss Neff and young Voss have a fling at acro teaming in the second half. Comedy is the entre of John Demko & Ben Gee as a team, and by pert Freddie Trenkler solo, much loved by the kiddies.

Following the date here the unit has one more in Evansville, then heads for New York and preps for a tour of Russia this spring and summer. Quin.

Palmer House, Chi

Chicago, April 11.

Joey Bishop, Bob De Voye Trio, Ben Arden Orch (11); $3.50 cover weekends, $3 weeknights.

If there was any doubt as to what happened to the regular patrons of the shuttered Chez Paree (Chi's former prime nitery), it has been dispelled by Joey Bishop's current stint at the Empire Room. It's apparent that they will follow big name talent wherever it goes, and that they are as much at home in this plush hostelry as they were at the Chez.

Although top names have been more in evidence at the Empire Room since the demise of the Chez, it took the Bishop show to confirm that this poshery has staked its claim as the preeminent room in Chicago and that the Palmer House is willing to back up the claim with the requisite talent tab.

Tabler response to Bishop's gagalog is electric, and he has to let up from topping himself time and again to make room for yocks and palm praise. He opened his first stint at the Empire Room with about five minutes of nifties on the room itself and its elegant decor. He also topicalizes with a bit about his early show biz days in Chicago that blends nostalgia neatly with his now-seasoned jibery.

The Bishop eye is as alert as his wit, as was demonstrated by his spotting a lovely eight or nine year old girl in the audience whom he brought into the spotlight. What might have been mawkish or coy in someone else's hands became an inspired bit of dialog between the two and a further demonstration of Bishop's facile wit.

The Bob DeVoye Trio is a smartly styled dance unit that helps to perpetuate the class atmosphere of the room. The team of two men and a shapely looker manage to bring some freshness into their highly stylized form of terpery and also provide balance and contrast for Bishop's standupping.

Joe Merman accompanies Joey Bishop with piano patter, and the lush sound of Ben Arden's 11-piece group backs the show handsomely and provides inviting dance sets.

Bill is in till April 21, to be followed by Marguerite Piazza April 22 for three weeks. Mor.

Basin Street East, N.Y.

Erroll Garner Trio, Red Norvo Quintet, Kenny Burrell Trio; $3 music charge.

Erroll Garner has cooked up an unparalleled parlay for a jazz pianist. He's a major attraction in the concert field (under S. Hurok's aegis), he's in big demand for summer tent dates, he's got virtually every disk company after him since his hassle with Columbia, and when he consents to a nitery date, as with this Basin Street East session, it adds up to big biz.

Garner is an uninhibited pianist in a night club with no limit on his time or style. He goes as the spirit moves him and the spirit always seems to move him along vigorous and imaginative lines. He thumps away with passion and purpose, grunting along with the beat and with an enthusiasm that takes hold of the audience.

His repertory is as wide as it is solid. A typical set will display his own compositions, "Misty" and "Dreamy," and a lot of standards that make sense and give a full-bodied dimension to his overall offering. His jazz techniques are firmly based on the original melodic line and he finds much appreciation from a diversified audience because of it. Helping him wrap up a socko musical session are Eddie Calhoun on bass and Kelly Martin on drums.

Although Garner alone is enough for any house, boniface Ralph Watkins has been extremely generous with his bill. When the main attraction is off-spotlight, he's got the nifty Kenny Burrell Trio and the vibrant Red Norvo Quintet supplying the musical licks.

It all adds up to one of the best all-around musical treats the room has had in some time. Gros.

Detroit Athletic Club

Detroit, April 4.

John Shirley & Bonnie, Joan Fairfax, Wes Harrison, Gene Pringle Orch (7); no cover or minimum—private club.

The unlikely combination of a balloon blower, a soprano and a sound effects man performing at the dignified Detroit Athletic Club proved to be a very pleasing potpourri.

John Shirley, aided by his wife, Bonnie, bill their act as a "balloon fantasy." He works fast, fashioning hats, dogs and other objects out of balloons, maintaining apt patter all the while. The pair come back at the end of the show, throwing dozens of balloons to the audience which keeps shooting them around the room for playful and colorful effect.

Joan Fairfax is a petite, pretty blonde with a terrific sense of rhythm and a good set of pipes. Her special material is only so-so however. She scores best with "I'll Follow My Secret Heart," "Stranger in Paradise," and "Hey Look Me Over." Miss Fairfax has the voice, looks and personality to hit it big if she'd only organize her act better.

Wes Harrison is a sound effects virtuoso who tells an amusing and effective story about "Red Riding Hood and the Wolf." His vocal cords produce the sound of horses, water, gunshots, thunder, automobiles, trains and planes. For his encore, he tells the audience he has rigged his car with a loudspeaker under the hood so he can practice his sound effects while traveling from town to town. He spins an imaginative and hilarious story of the effects of his various sounds on other drivers and pedestrians as he roars down an expressway making like a horse or train, or simulating a brake-screeching stop while waiting for lights to change at busy intersections. He didn't say how many tickets he has received for disturbing the peace, but his practice pays off in a big mitting from this audience. Tew.

Flame Room, Mpls.

Minneapolis, April 4.

Ford & Hines, Danny Ferguson Orch (7); $2-$2.50 cover.

Fresh from Las Vegas, Ford & Hines get an appreciative in this ornate Hotel Radison nitery. Together with Mickey Sharp who preceded them, they've broken the room's comedy drought. Comedy team's first local showing could be a recordbuster in view of heavy demand for reservations.

Comics score first nighters with their familiar Sayonara and dog show routines. Yocks come fast as couple indulges in witty bantering with Danny Ferguson, his bandsmen and just about everybody else within range of Mimi Hines' perceptive eye and roving mike.

Distaff side of the twosome has a good set of pipes which she uses to advantage. She draws heavy mitting on "Follow Me" and "Start of Something Big" with Ford accompanying adroitly on the 88. It's her clowning, mugging and bouncing though, that really make tablesitters flip and which, at the preem, kept the pair on stage for more than an hour with repeated encores.

Only interlude marring an otherwise topnotch performance involved a few denominational gags and songs which, while inoffensive, evoked little response here. Couple should tailor their material to the locale and leave sectarian lines to Las Vegas, Miami and New York where they're more suitable to audience taste. Ford and Hines remain through April 15 with thrush Felicia Sanders returning for 10-day stay on 17th. Rees.

Village Vanguard, N. Y.

Art Blakey & Jazz Messengers (5), International Jazz Quartet; $2 cover, $2.50 weekends.

There's a heaping order of jazz moderne for the buffs in Max Gordon's cellar currently, with Art Blakey & the Jazz Messengers figured to lure healthy biz. This group, which did some well-publicized innovating a few years back, has swung a loyal following behind it, and justly so.

The Blakey group offers one of the more definitive sounds in the progressive idiom, making with the atonals in a crisp, witty fashion that can tickle squares as well as delight the buffs. It's one of the few units proving that "longhair" jazz can be wider entertainment.

In this instance, the Blakeyites are the more appreciated in contrast to the sub-billed International Jazz Quartet, firsting in this spot with polish but a conventional sound. Some day an international unit is going to wail an international sound—something like polyethnic progressive.

Based on the Thursday (6) turnout, biz looks to hold brisk here through the run, with Jack Teagarden due in April 25. Pit.

Desert Inn, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, April 4.

Rosemary Clooney, Paul Gilbert, Art Johnson, Joyce Roberts, Donn Arden Dancers (12), Carlton Hayes Orch (15); produced by Frank Sennes, choreography by Donn Arden; $4 minimum.

Rosemary Clooney is the kind of performer who initially projects warmth to her audience and continues to build a winning charm which is certain to capture the last remaining skeptics. She magnifies this quality in her debut here and bowed off to cheers from her opening-night observers.

Miss Clooney gets a tremendous assist from one of the best piano artists in the biz—Buddy Cole—who guides her songalog as pilot of the Carlton Hayes orch. Numbers include "Tenderly," "April In Paris," "This Old House" (which is shared vocally by Cole), "You Do Something To Me," "Magic Is The Moonlight," "Bye, Bye, Blackbird," "Get Me To The Church On Time," "Bess," "Whoopee," and her big novelty click "Come On-A My House."

Paul Gilbert balances as comedy star, reprising the yock rewarding act which he presented here several weeks ago. Holdover Donn Arden production number, featuring laudable piping by Art Johnson and Joyce Roberts, plus nifty terping by the 12 Arden Dancers, is the curtain-raiser. Phil Harris opens here April 18. Duke.

Embers, N.Y.

Teddy Wilson Trio, Henry (Red) Allen Quartet; $3.50 minimum.

Teddy Wilson isn't a guy to rest on past glories. In 30 years at the keyboard, he's established a solid rep with his light-fingered manner but even he has the urge to explore new vistas. The "new" Wilson who is showcased at the Embers this sesh (it's his 20th engagement here), is one who's finally caught the modern jazz bug.

His piano doodling has the same slick techniques and his takeoffs on modern jazz compositions give a new dimension that should help him move into wider circles. A lot of his standard styling is put into the new works, but he gives 'em all an interpretation that's tasty and vigorous. Even the diehards who can't seem to get enough of his standard repertoire, like "Ain't Misbehavin'," "Someone to Watch Over Me" and "Liza" will find much to appreciate in his modern jazz excursion.

He does as well by such modernists as Horace Silver, Art Farmer, Dizzy Gillespie and Thelonius Monk as he did and does by George Gershwin and Fats Waller. In his modern jazz round are items like "Round Midnight," "Night in Tunisia," "Strollin' " and "Mox Nix." Arvell Shaw's bass and J. C. Heard's drums supply an important assist on the old as well as the new.

Henry (Red) Allen's quartet provides a strong change of pace. Allen swings his trumpet in a brisk dixieland way with a thumping beat. Assisted by bass, piano and drums, Allen blows through "When the Saints Go Marching In," "Rampart St. Parade," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Sleepy Time Gal" with a drive that holds the tablers. Even when he takes off on a moody "Tenderly," his trumpet is sharp and arresting. Gros.

Camelot, N.Y.

Buddy Greco & Trio, India Adams, Gladys Johnson Duo; $4.50 minimum.

With this bill the Camelot marks the return of Buddy Greco to the Manhattan environs. Greco is a young vet on the musical circuits, and perhaps one who hasn't gotten his full measure of appreciation. However, he has been showing signs of greater appeal. His stand at the Camelot is attracting an increasing number of youngsters during this engagement, and there are some avid listeners.

Greco is a strong rhythmic singer with a touch of ebullience and a hep sense of humor. In addition he imparts a jivey stress on his efforts. Greco starts out as a standup operator, with piano bass and drum behind him and afterward, seats himself down at the ivories to do his own thumping. His vocal and keyboard exercises seen to hit responsive touches with the audience and his talk also has a flavorsome quality which enriches his entire session. It's a rewarding turn.

India Adams has a richly textured voice which seems excellently suited for her string of legit musical tunes which she medleyed toward the close of her act. Miss Adams make a strong impression with the standards and provides a pleasant listening interlude.

Gladys Johnson Duo (piano and bass) backs Miss Adams and provides the interim festivities. Jose.

The Cloister, L. A.

Hollywood, April 6.

Al Hirt, Mae Williams; $2.50 cover, two-drink minimum.

A torrid trumpet and a sizzling, swinging style mark Al Hirst as a standout attraction which will pack 'em in from word-of-mouth publicity. This corpulent commander of the high notes, low notes and a seemingly never-ending range in between, bedazzled an audience that kept shouting "bravos" and begging for their favorites.

The Victor recording artist, satisfies the patrons with a repertoire that displayed his facile style. Among the best are "I Love Paris," "What's New?" "Birth of the Blues," "Begin the Beguine," "Riverboat Shuffle" and a finale that has the crowd on its collective feet, "South Rampart Street Parade." Hirt is distinctive in style, huge in girth (310 lbs.) and every inch an entertainer.

Hirt gives his five sidemen a chance to get the spotlight treatment and his colleagues from his New Orleans "Pier 600 Club" give him a well-rounded performance. Each is a master of his instrument; They are: Pee Wee Spitalara, clarinet; Jack Dulaney, trombone; Paul Ferarra, drums; Oliver Felix, bass; and Ronnie Dupont, piano.

Supporting Hirt on the bill is Mae Williams. The chirp hasn't lost her belting style on the vocal side but has chosen to dress in the Edith Piaf style; simple plain black dress and no jewelry, which seems out of character with her offerings. On only briefly, she opens with "Life Is Just a Bowl of Cherries" and segues into nostalgic ditties. She wins only a lukewarm mitt.

Hirt moves into Basin Street East May 1, and Hirt and Williams are billed through April 15 at Cloister. Hous.

Jazz Gallery, N.Y.

Max Roach production of "Another Valley," with Max Roach Quintet, Abbey Lincoln, Mal Waldron, Helena Walquet, Charles Moore, Maya Angelou, Robert Whitley, Julio Medez; produced, directed and choreographed by Roach; music by Roach, Thelonius Monk; lyrics by Oscar Brown, Jr., Langston Hughes and others; lighting by Roger Furman; $3 minimum.

Jazz drummer-composer Max Roach's "Another Valley" production at this East Greenwich Village cool-music spot is new-frontier club stuff and most likely a little too far out in uncut timber for most tastes.

Roach is a first-rank jazz man, both as a composer and performer —and also as a group conductor— and the music in this unique two-part presentation is alone well worth the tab. The choreography and often bitter mood of the material is something else. Still it's unusual and makes up in verve what it lacks in showmanship and sentiment.

Spread is divided between two nightly shows, and show caught was a segment called "Freedom Now Suite" (the other is "Jazz Sketches"). The Suite has five numbers with lyric and dance accomp, dealing with Afro and American Negro struggle for freedom in the ofay world.

Standout is, "Freedom Day," a driving, extended swinger in the modern idiom that includes a fine vocal by Abbey Lincoln and brilliant solos by all hands in the Roach quint. "Drivah Man" also scores with its hard blues lyric voiced by Miss Lincoln.

Contrasting is the windup, "Protest," which has Miss Lincoln merely belting a series of wretching wails while terpers Helena Walquer and Charles Moore indulge some angry, anguished writhing. Terping in itself is well executed, but limited in appeal by the meller symbolism. Another number, "Tears for Johannesburg," ends with the dancers gunned down by staccato drums to blinking lights.

For all its faults, "Another Valley" has a driving pace keyed by the music, and should be distinguished by the vanguard tag in nitery experimentation. Bill.

Beverly Hills, Cincy

Cincinnati, April 7.

Jimmy Durante bids to set an attendance record in this current engagement unveiling this 24-year-old Blue Grass swankery's facelifting. Dinner show opening night had 946 tablers (normal cozy seating is 700) to surpass turnout at his preem last May of a 10-day date. Regular sessions are two-weekers. Room's name has been changed from Trianon to Versailles in keeping with French decor and design by Jac Leesman, who beautified Stardust and Desert Inn, Las Vegas.

Star is backed by an increase in location talent, plus his own troupe, for a wham floorshow of musical comedy proportion. Supporting acts are the ballroom team of Heller & Helene for a soothing 10 minutes after the lively and colorful 17-minute George M. Cohan medley lidlifter by the Moro-Landis ensemble and showstopping acro-adgio turn of the Wood threesome, John, Dick and Jacqueline.

In his traditional zest, Durante sparks more than an hour of hilarity in high speed. Sticking to his popularly accepted routine, Schnoz clowns with chorines, band leader Gardner Benedict, his own regulars, longtime partner Eddie Jackson, for Bill Bailey struts; drummer Jack Roth, pianist George Finley; songs and byplay with Sonny King, beaut chirper Beverly Watson and near-closing floating cane bit by hoofer Johnny Mack and Durante's comedy dance with buxom Sally Davis.

Starter of a parade of names for the baseball, racing and vacation season, Durante is followed by the Ritz Bros., April 21, and the Vagabonds, May 5. Koll.

King Edward, Toronto

Toronto, April 7.

Hildegarde; Leo Romanelli's Orch (8) conducted by Fred Stamer; $2 admission.

Teeing off a new policy of name entertainers, the King Edward Sheraton has started with the 10-day engagement of Hildegarde. As first lady of the international supper club circuit, Hildegarde continues to show a constant change of act, ranging from her riotous "Mack the Knife"—in German lyrics—to her pianistics of the "Grieg Concerto" and the "Warsaw Concerto."

For the posh 188-seater Oak Room, which has never before levied a cover charge, Hildegarde presents an entirely different program in her twice-nightly stints at 10:15 p.m. and midnight on opening night, she jammed in the customers, sang and played at the grand, stayed on for 50 minutes each session, and left the patrons begging for more—and never used her trademarked handkerchief.

For her first show, she opens with a bouncy "It's Not Enough," segued into "Follow Me" from "Camelot" and then the theme from "Never on Sunday," took her place at the grand for her playing of the "Grieg Concerto," with a vocal "I Love Thee" in Norwegian. Request numbers included her French and English lyrics of "Let's Walk" and an exuberant "Mack the Knife"—with the lady at the piano digiting the ivories with elbow-length gloves on, but not bringing this to her enthusiastic audiences' attention.

Hildegarde made three costume changes from her opening green and blue brocade to a simple black ensemble and a white and gold gown for finale of request numbers that included "Autumn Leaves" and "Lili Marlene."

Hildegarde opens at the Blackstone, Chicago, on April 17 after her stand here ends April 15. She will be at the Savoy in London next month; Paris in June and then a European tour, with a side visit to the Far East.

Danish-born Fred Stamer, is accompanist for Hildegarde in her non-piano performances, also conducts the house orchestra for her on-piano renditions of the "Grieg Concerto" and the "Warsaw Concerto." McStay.

A Far Country

Roger L. Stevens & Joel Schenker presentation of drama in three acts, with prolog and epilog by Henry Denker. Staged by Alfred Ryder; setting and lighting, Donald Oenslager; costumes, Ann Roth; associate producer, Lyn Austin. Stars Kim Stanley, Steven Hill, Sam Wanamaker, features Lili Darvas, Salome Jens, Patrick O'Neal. Opened April 4, '61, at the Music Box Theatre, N.Y.; $7.50 top Friday and Saturday nights, $6.90 weeknights.

Sigmund Freud	Steven Hill
Martha Bernays Freud	Salome Jens
Nurl	Wayne Carson

Amalie Freud	Lili Darvas
Dolfi Freud	Ellen Weston

Dr. Joseph Breuer	Sam Wanamaker

Sigmund Freud, whose theories have a major factor in character motivation in the modern theatre, has at last become the subject of a play himself. "A Far Country," which opened April 4 at the Music Box Theatre, is about the famous Viennese psychologist, the daddy of psychoanalysis. More to the point, it's an absorbing though curiously objective drama, a likely hit and the basis for a potent film.

Henry Denker, a prolific air scripter in radio days who turned to the stage several years ago with a taut but commercially unsuccessful melodrama called "Time Limit," is obviously not one of the scornful breed who sneer about head-shrinkers and discount the whole business of psychiatry. "A Far Country" is a respectful, not to say reverential, portrait of a hero of science, an undeviating trail-blazer who risked professional and personal ruin to bring light into the dark and terrifying recesses of the human mind.

Although it is constructed as a story of Freud's domestic life as well as his scientific career, the play is primarily a dramatized case history. It shows how, just before the turn of the century, Freud first used the analytical method to delve into the subconscious and, by uncovering hidden guilt-feelings, restore his patient to physical health and emotional freedom.

To anyone ignorant of and uninterested in psychoanalysis, if there is any such person nowadays, "A Far Country" should be an engrossing play, though lacking in emotional impact. For the army of psychiatry-minded playgoers, it is likely to be fascinating—a virtual must. Awareness of the subject is now so general, in fact, that the play should be readily adaptable for screen success.

Even those old theatrical bugaboos, the prolog and epilog, don't jinx the show. The opening and closing scenes, located in 1938 as the aged genius is forced to leave Vienna to escape the Nazis, provide a reference for Freud's achievements.

The core of the play is the capsulized case history of one of his first psychiatric patients, however. In three slow, but steadily mounting acts the young, insatiably curious physician keeps digging into the guilt-ridden memories of a young woman whose crippling pain has baffled the most eminent doctors of Vienna.

There are two sub-plots, well related to the central theme. They involve Freud's frightened mother and his cautious physician-friend who fail to dissuade him from his misunderstood and risky experiments, and his devoted wife's worry and latent jealousy. In the case of the mother and colleague, the secondary story thread brings out the prevailing anti-Semitism against which Freud had to contend.

The attention-riveting scenes are the crucial moments of analysis under the doctor's relentless probing. As played by Kim Stanley, this somewhat fictionalized character is a tormented creature, and her ordeal as he forces her to delve deeper and deeper into the agonies of old guilt is brilliantly portrayed.

The actress, who can seem painfully awkward at times and inspired and meticulously restrained at others, gives one of the fine performances of her career. Feigning lightness and gaiety as a defense at one moment, she makes stunning shifts to hauteur, blazing anger, trembling panic and screaming hysteria. The transitions of mood are expertly and brilliantly done. Her performance is so vivid and compelling, in fact, that it tends to pull the play out of balance.

As the young doctor who refuses to be diverted by poverty, domestic worries or the risk of ruin and disgrace, Steven Hill has admirable concentration and drive. But could so intense and implaccable, not to say harsh, a questioner, one so seemingly devoid of sympathy, have won the confidence and cooperation of patients? It seems questionable. Moreover, Hill's characterization and personality lack the stature to sustain the center of attention.

Sam Wanamaker, back on Broadway after a decade on the British stage, gives a well rounded and shrewdly detailed performance as the successful doctor-friend who fears that Freud's controversial experiments may arouse the latent anti-Semitism of powerful colleagues and thereby destroy his hard-won position. As he explains, security brings timidity, and so he pleads with his adamant friend to abandon the probings into what he calls the far country of the human soul.

The other parts are secondary, but generally well played. Lili Darvas is persuasive as Freud's interfering mother. Salome Jens is expressively self-effacing as the loyal wife who tries to hide her concern, and there are acceptable bits by Patrick O'Neal as the patient's protective brother-in-law. Eda Reiss Merin as a busy servant and Ellen Weston as Freud's younger sister.

Alfred Ryder, Miss Stanley's husband, has staged the production on a note of increasing tension, keeping his wife the focus of interest in her scenes. Donald Oenslager has designed an atmospheric setting of the doctor's commodious office and a small entry, and Ann Roth has provided plausibly dated costumes.

"A Far Country" has slow moments and it may be a bit heavy for escapist playgoers. But for serious drama addicts, it offers an engrossing drama, a vivid performance and a memorable if not personally affecting show. Hobe.

TYNAN ENCORES HIS OPINIONS—AT $7.95

"Curtains" by Kenneth Tynan (Atheneum; $7.95), is a collection of reviews and theatre observations by quondam drama critic of London Observer and The New Yorker. Selections are chosen from Tynan's 1950-60 output, and are culled from several British and American publications. Author, in a preface, suggests that he has corrected and expunged his work to some extent. He has arranged his material to be "partly chronological, and partly geographical." In five sections, tome views theatres of Britain, U.S., France, Russia and Germany.

Like yesterday's newspaper, theatrical reviews of former seasons are likely to pall with reprinting unless the writer happens to be a Shaw, Beerholm or Nathan. Tynan has not yet gained this stature, but he is, what is perhaps more important, himself; and value of this work lies principally in its reflection of a young critic's development. "Ten years ago," Tynan states, "I was in love with the theatre of fantasy and shock . . . for me, in short, drama was apart from life instead of a part of it." His later view leads him to believe that no theatre can "safely flourish" without a connection between what happens on stage and what happens in the world. Brecht and Miller are among Tynan's lodestars in this changing conviction.

Once regarded as a precocious incorrigible, Tynan still writes pungently, with an inimitable style, stooping now and then to outrageous puns he admits he cannot resist. Like most critics with strong points of view, he has angered many stage pros. He has also gained a wide cult of admirers. Best passages deal with his reactions to Russia and its theatre (some readers will be surprised to learn that not all Soviet theatre is subsidized, and to German stage activities particularly the work of Brecht's Berliner Ensemble.

Volume seems overproduced, with its 475 large-size pages; and, perhaps, overpriced. It's success likely depends on devotion of Tynan disciples. Rodo.

Sparrers Can't Sing

(Wyndham's Theatre, London)

London, March 30.

"Sparrers Can't Sing" follows the trail from Stratford, East London, to this theatre in the Charing Cross Road. The first Theatre Workshop production to make the transition from east to west was Shelagh Delaney's "Taste of Honey," followed shortly thereafter by Brendan Behan's "The Hostage," both of which have subsequently played on Broadway. This latest is hardly likely to make the Atlantic crossing.

When first presented by the Theatre Workshop, last August, the VARIETY reviewer (the late Ernie Player) accurately forecast that it would transfer to town and summed it up perceptibly as a sustained cross-talk act, involving some dozen tough characters in the East End of London.

Stephen Lewis' first attempt at play-writing shows an occasional flair for vivid dialog but he has deliberately eschewed any thought of a coherent plot and very few of his characters are real people. Indeed, it is very much a caricature study.

Joan Littlewood, the Theatre Workshop's resident director, has staged the piece at an almost breathless pace; so much so, that in the first act particularly, it was impossible to catch large junks of dialog which were being delivered at breakneck speed. All the principal members of the cast of the original production, with the exception of Teddy Green who replaces Murrey Melvin, are in the West End presentation. The acting is generally first-rate, with impressive performanees by Barbara Ferris, Bettina Dickson, Bob Grant and Brian Murphy. Myro.

Concert Review

Tamir and Eden

(CARNEGIE HALL, N.Y.)

For the benefit of the library of the Rubin Music Academy in Jerusalem and under the auspices of the America-Israel Cultural Foundation, Barch Eden and Alexander Tamir from Israel gave a two-piano recital, the second since their N.Y. debut in 1955. On the whole their playing proved skillful, though in spots there was stiffness and at times the tempo was too fast. Rare as two piano teams are, Eden-Tamir did not rank equal with the great class of Gold-Fitzdale, Vronsky-Babin or Whittemore-Lowe—but the rapport between them shows admirable integration and smoothness.

Music on the program was mostly re-arranged and known, such as the Brahms Sonata in F minor op. 34b which is an earlier version of a Quintet for Piano and Strings, and a Bach-Babin arrangement of the Organ Trio Sonata No. 1 in E flat, as well as Lutoslawski and Schubert work for one piano, four hands. Unfortunately only one novelty, Haim Alexander's Sonata Brevis was played—and well liked in spite of its lightweight interspersed with Bartok-touches.

Brendan Behan's Boozing

Toronto, April 11.

Anyone who gives Brendan Behan a drink in future is a murderer, and if he does it on his own he's a suicide, say friends of the Irish playwright who has been in Sunnyside Private Hospital for the past fortnight and is expected to be out this week. Now hobbling about with a stick, Behan was committed to the alcoholic clinic after a night's bout with the bottle during which he assaulted a house detective in the Royal York Hotel, then police who came to arrest him, and spent the night in a cell, prior to his disappearance after Alexander H. Cohen, Broadway producer, had put up $500 bail which Behan forfeited after non-appearance in court.

Irish writer is a diabetic, suffered a heart attack two years ago and had been warned not to drink. Meanwhile, he must stand trial in Toronto.

In its U.S. revival at the Circle in the Square, "Under Milk Wood," Dylan Thomas' last-completed work and his only play, proves again that the Welsh poet who died at 39, had all the instincts of a born playwright. Originally commissioned by the British Broadcasting Co. and written as a "play for voices," the work had its premiere locally in 1953 at Y.M.H.A.'s Poetry Center, with Thomas taking part in the production. In 1957, following a successful West End presentation, it was brought over to Broadway with most of the London Cast and ran for a disappointing 39 performances at the Henry Miller.

The dawn-into-dusk story of a spring day in a Welsh village is a kind of an unpoliced "Our Town," but its vivid, lush prose, ribaldly, inventive humor and poetically evocative passages are held in excellent check by William Ball's clean-cut direction.

The hard-working cast of ten which handles 63 speaking parts, involved pieces of business, intricate stage movements and tricky vocal accompaniments is, if not of a stand-out caliber, very capable.

As sundry villagers Sasha Von Scherler is commically loathsome, Ken Ruta, effective as the town-loafer, and Gene Roche, good as a long-suffering husband, and a tormented boy. Jack Dodson is touching as a blind captain and Sada Thompson scores as the local floozie, and in a number of comforter-of-men roles.

Carol Teitel gives her characterizations of an old lady, vivacious gypsy, and others, good shading and pitch, and Jenny Egan imparts a comic touch to various fussy females. Robert Gerringer and John Harkins line out narration in a straight-forward, pear-shaped toned manner and Dana Elcar is fine in his quota of parts.

The set and lighting by Boyd Dumrose are unobtrusive, as is Lee Hoiby's music. Costumes by Theoni V. Aldredge are serviceable.

Co-produced by Jose Quintero who usually serves as director of the Circle productions, but it away in England on his first film directorial assignment. "Milk Wood" is on Monday through Thursday, with a 7 o'clock curtain Friday and a Sunday matinee. The Quintero-directed "Balcony," now in its 13th month is on a 9:30 Friday; two show Saturday, and one show on Sunday schedule.

There has been town talk that the present production of "Milk Wood" has more to recommend it production-wise than the somewhat "busy" mounting four years ago. At the time, VARIETY's reviewer Land (Oct. 23, 1957) commented that "seldom has a stage production demanded closer attention for to lose the words, because of a moremont or cough in the audience, is to lose contact . . . amidst so much verbalization the staging is almost extraneous visualization." Jaal.

The Only Sense is Nonsense

The Jan Hus Neighborhood House presentation of two one-act plays by N. F. Simpson. Directed by William Gyimes; stage manager, Sketch Barrett; sound editing, Ervant O. Berberian; sound engineer, Frank Wicks. Features Roger C. Carmel, Muriel Dooley, Tom Martin, Elizabeth Jones, Paxton Whitehead, C. Wolff and Jane Lowry. Opened April 3, '61, at the Jan Hus House, 351 E. 74th St., N.Y.; $2.50.

N. F. Simpson bats about .400 in his double-header, "The Only Sense is Nonsense." The London schoolteacher strikes out with the opener, "A Resounding Tinkle," but "The Hole," while not quite a home-run, is nevertheless a solid base-hit.

Both plays, which opened a series of Monday evening performances at the Jan Hus House on April 3, are in the avant-garde tradition of Ionesco and Beckett, and as the title states, the sense comes from nonsense.

"The Hole" refers to a workman's excavation, around which congregate five passers-by. They see in the hole various aspects of life: a golf game, a prison cell, an aquarium, primitive religious rites, etc. Through their amusing dialog. Simpson comments on man's fears, prejudices, vanities and desires. When it is discovered that the hole contains, in reality, nothing but an electrical junction-box, the passers-by adjust to the fact by formally worshipping electricity. Only a tramp, who saw the hole as a cathedral all along, demonstrates a faith that is stronger than the desire to conform.

Two excellent performances are contributed by Paxton Whitehead and Roger C. Carmel as passers-by. Bob Brady, Muriel Dooley, Jane Lowry and Gary Filsinger are the others in a good cast. Mr. Simpson has allowed the play to run too long, but his observations are sharp and witty, and "The Hole" is an admirable piece.

Neither the script nor the players are successful in "The Resounding Tinkle," however. The play deals with a young couple who have ordered an elephant, and are dismayed to discover that it is too large. They argue over what to name it, and then decide to swap it for a snake, whose owner considers it too short. The third character is "Uncle Ted," who has somehow been transformed into a woman. The nonsense here far outweighs the sense, and Mr. Simpson's message, if there was one, has failed to survive the voyage from London.

The cast, which included Elizabeth Jones, Tom Martin and C. Wolff, is heavy-handed and unamusing.

William Gyimes, the director, succeeds in maintaining a lively pace throughout "The Hole," but he cannot disguise the fact that "A Resounding Tinkle" is static and tedious. Kenn.

FEED SUMMER MELODY HUNGER

B'way a Jungle, Sez Tyrone Guthrie; Sees Hope in Repertory Groups

Minneapolis, April 11.

Broadway is a "murderous, vulgar jungle," according to Tyrone Guthrie. He says that it has an oversupply of theatres and actors. The Irish director also scores Broadway's "rootlessness," explaining that both its actors and patrons are assembled from the entire world.

Guthrie has here recently to consult with officials in charge of plans for the erection of a $1,900,000 Tyrone Guthrie Repertory theatre, which he hopes will develop a local flavor in stage drama. A theatre foundation has already raised $1,100,000 for the project, slated to open late in the spring of 1963, a year later than originally scheduled.

Addressing a Minnesota Univ. convocation, Guthrie said that his purpose in bringing a repertory theatre to the Twin Cities is "to fill a gap that still exists." He asserted that films are a mass entertainment medium, and commented, "A thing that everyone wants no single person will want desperately." He said that he has rejected several bids to do big-budget television shows, and commented, "What is the point of doing Shakespeare when it is not suited to tv?"

Establishing a repertory theatre in this area will produce a twofold problem, Guthrie believes, since audiences, as well as actors, will have to be trained to assume a role he considers vital for legit patrons. The audience role, he says, is to generate a stimulating effect on the cast.

"Actors on a stage set up vibrations in the audience which come back across the footlights. It is a cooperative enterprise and the audience does not just absorb—it has to work."

Guthrie told university students and faculty that he assumes that

Lucy Loves Both

It's no wonder Lucy's so popular. In the election battle currently being waged in Actors Equity, Lucille Ball's name is appended to two documents in support of opposing candidates. Her name is among the endorsees of a campaign mailing sent out by Equity president, Ralph Bellamy, in which he favors a split ticket comprising some of the candidates selected by the union's nominating committee and some of those nominated by petition.

In a subsequent mailing sent out by a group supporting the entire nominating committee's slate, Miss Ball, is quoted as having stated in a wire to Tom Bosley, one of those selected by the nominating committee, that "Contrary to recent literature sent to the membership I am in full support of your election to council along with the regular ticket as proposed by our nominating committee."

Paris Likes 'Tis Pity' But Film Stars Key to Run; $100,000 Production Cost

Paris, April 11.

Though put off two weeks due to a sudden appendectomy of femme star Romy Schneider, the French legit version of John Ford's Elizabethan drama "'Tis Pity She's A Whore" (Dommage Qu'Elle Soit Une P. . .) opened Thurs. (30) to good reviews and a solid ovation by a show biz and diplomatic audience. Though costing a great deal this is a prestige success and may even pay off if the stars, Miss Schneider and Alain Delon, can spare time from film chores to give it a fairly long run.

Italo film and stage director Luchino Visconti gave this a stunning set. The tale of incest between a brother and sister that ends in carnage was considered excellent theatre even if it did not quite have the charge of terror and tragedy called for. Austro-German film star Miss Schneider was found delicate, right and excellent as the sister while French film star Delon was thought possessing the strength, dynamism and fervor as the brother. Both essay their first stage roles in this and show that film stars can hold their own in legit and are a further plus for director Visconti.

Already costing almost $100,000, due to delays, it will be hard put to pay off but has all possible chances due to the star names, publicity and general response. However it is felt this type of melodrama is not the average French audience's cup of tea. They get somewhat restless with outspoken, bloody poetic dramas of this sort. Yet there is a theatregoing nucleus for good support, with word-of-mouth sure to help. Reviews have all been favorable and this exquisite show may be a bonanza for producer Elvire Popesco of the Theatre De Paris. Miss Schneider, Visconti and Miss Popesco put up the money. It was a tour-de-force for the former playing in another lingo.

Summer Musicals At O'Keefe Centre Via Alex Cohen

Broadway producer Alexander H. Cohen, who's also New York representative for the O'Keefe Centre, Toronto, will produce a summer season of musicals at the Canadian showcase beginning next July 3. The venture will be run by Cohen's general manager, Roy Somlyo, who's had wide experience in the summer theatre field.

The warm-weather session, which will run six-to-eight weeks, will follow by a fortnight the June 17 close of the O'Keefe's first regular season. The 3,200-seater, which opened Oct. 1, has not had a dark week and the balance of the semester is solidly booked. The Fall season will begin Labor Day with the pre-Broadway tryout of "Kwamina," the Alfred Le Liagre Jr. production with score and lyrics by Richard Adler and book by Robert Alan Aurthur.

Cohen who was in London last week, returned to New York Monday night (10). He'll be off to London next week scouting talent for the International Revue he plans preeming next Oct. 8 at the Golden Theatre, N.Y., as the third entry in his Nine O'Clock Theatre series. On his London visits, Cohen is also looking for a lead to play Sherlock Holmes in the musical, "Baker Street," which he plans producing on Broadway next season.

The current Nine O'Clock Theatre offering at the Golden is "An Evening With Mike Nichols and Elaine May."

SHOW OF MONTH'S 3D BURG: PHILADELPHIA

Boston, April 11.

Jerome Rosenfeld's Show of the Month Club, originated here, is moving into Philadelphia. Half page ads in the Philadelphia Inquirer and Bulletin appeared Sunday (9). Club will now be operating in three cities, Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

In addition to his Show of the Month Club operation, Rosenfeld has taken on the producer's mantle too. He's currently presenting, in association with Frank Sugrue, producer of the Charles Playhouse, "Two For the Seesaw," with Jeffrey Lynn and Lee Grant at the Wilbur Theatre, and plans to continue locally produced ventures, backed by his Show of the Month Club.

RIGHTS TO MANY NEW WORKS OPEN

By JESSE GROSS

New product for the musical-hungry stock field this summer takes in not only Broadway-originated properties, ranging from the delayed release of a 15-year old vehicle to one still running on the Main Stem, but also adaptations of a teletuner and a filmmusical.

Only two of the Broadway originals have powerhouse track records and they're being released on a restricted basis. The two, both of which will still be represented on the road this summer by regular touring companies, are "Music Man" and "Flower Drum Song." Also being released on a restricted basis is the current off-Broadway success, "Fantasticks."

The show still running on Broadway is "Tenderloin," which is scheduled to close May 13. That musical, now in its 26th week at the 46th St. Theatre, N.Y., has been on twofers for some time and as yet has not earned back its entire investment. Two other musicals, which closed during the current season and are being released for the first time this summer, failed to score as financial hits. They're "Take Me Along," which folded after a 57-week run, and "Destry Rides Again," which put in 60 weeks on Broadway and then toured.

Another current touring presentation, "Once Upon a Mattress," is also being released this summer. The original production of the musical, which originated off-Broadway and then moved to Broadway, has earned a modest profit on its investment, but a separately-financed two-company road venture, of which only one production is still running, has been taking a financial beating. The "Mattress" company touring is scheduled to close May 27.

The 15-year-old tuner being released for the first time this year is "Billion Dollar Baby" (see separate story). The tv original is the Richard Rodgers-Oscar Hammerstein 2d musical version of

Stella Adler May Act Once More

The often-invited, never-secured, somewhat-legendary Stella Adler may return to the stage after an absence of 15 years. She's being sought to star this summer in a Broadway-targeted London production of Arthur L. Kopit's "Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Momma's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling So Sad."

Frank Corsaro is slated to stage the play, which is to be presented on the West End by H. M. Tennent, Ltd. Broadway producer-realtor Roger L. Stevens owns the rights to the property, which he intends presenting on the Main Stem. The London production is scheduled to go into rehearsal late next month.

Miss Adler who runs her own acting studio in New York, began her stage career in New York in 1906 at the age of four. Her last legit appearance was in a 1946 Broadway revival of "He Who Gets Slapped."

Hurok Pre-Trial Exam In Parkson Fee Claim

Alexander Parkson, a film importer who has been attempting for two years to bring a suit to issue against impresario Sol Hurok, has succeeded in forcing Hurok to stand pre-trial examination by Parkson's attorney, Maxwell Handlesman. This resulted from a decision of the Appellate Division of the N. Y. Supreme Court.

Parkson is charging that he's entitled to fees for assistance to Hurok in lining up various Soviet talent for U. S. tours. Hurok has denied the performance of any services by Parkson, and hence any financial consideration.

Columbia Concerts Still In Legit; Fox & Wilford Administer 3 Tours

Columbia Artists Management will continue its involvement with legit on a large scale next season. Tours for three theatrical ventures are planned. The project is not related to CAM's Broadway Theatre Alliance subsidiary subscription network, which has been sold to United Performing Arts (Harlow Dean) with the transfer effective at the conclusion of the current semester.

The shows will be booked in prime time and into colleges and other spots that are feasible and available. Touring of the theatrical attractions by CAM will be under the supervision of Herbert Fox and Ronald Wilford, both connected with BTA, the former as president. Of the three shows contemplated, one is definite, the other in negotiation and the third undisclosed.

Set is "A Pride of Lions," the tentative title of a new property adapted from the works of Ernest Hemmingway. The vehicle in negotiation is a road company of "A Thurber Carnival," which closed on Broadway earlier this season. "Lions," formerly titled, "Of Love and Death," was adapted by A. E. Hotchner, Hemmingway's exclusive collaborator in theatrical adaptations of his works. Hotchner will also produce the play. "Carnival" will be co-produced by Michael Dewell and Frances Cannon Hersey.

"Lions," in which Rod Steiger will star, will be directed by Frank Corsaro and will have sets by Jo Mielziner and incidental music by Bernardo Segal. Joseph Harris will be general manager. Tentatively set to costar in "Thurber Carnival," are Imogene Coca and her husband, King Donovan. "Thurber Carnival," made up of material by James Thurber, was presented on Broadway by Michael Davis, Helen Bonfils and Haila Stoddard.

Costarred on Broadway in the off-beat Thurber revue were Tom Ewell, Peggy Cass and Paul Ford. The offering closed last November after a 12-week return engagement, following a summer run in Central City, Colo., which had been preceded by 17 weeks on the Main Stem.

National Theatre 'If'—

London, April 11.

London County Council is preparing to go ahead with the national theatre project which was recently vetoed by the Government if the Treasury will agree to release the $2,800,000 voted by Parliament in 1949.

Theatre is now expected to cost around $7,000,000 and the Council will raise the remainder of the coin if the 1949 cash is forthcoming. Lord Chandos, chairman of the joint council of the national theatre, is to discuss the position with Selwyn Lloyd, Chancellor of the Exchequer. If the project materializes, it is hoped to have the theatre built in time for the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth and the Commonwealth Arts Festival in 1964.

Union Attorneys Map Defense Vs. B'way Theatres

Attorneys for four major legit unions met in New York last Friday (7) to map strategy in the face of the stand taken by the League of N.Y. Theatres that certain contractual demands of the labor organizations are illegal under the National Labor Relations Act. It was decided at the meeting that specific objections be obtained from Burton A. Zorn, the League's attorney, so that the legalites would then know exactly the changes desired.

The unions represented at the meet were Actors Equity, Assn. of Theatrical Pressagents & Managers, Theatrical Protective Union No. 1, N.Y. local of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (stagehands) and Local 802, American Federation of Musicians. The contract conflict stems from the recent recognition of Broadway and road theatre by the National Labor Relations Board. In a confidential report issued last month to its members, the League listed a number of provisions regarded as being illegal in its contracts with various legit unions, including the four mentioned.

Among the abuses cited are featherbedding, closed shop, "hot cargo" and secondary boycott provisions, plus illegal union security and hiring hall clauses.

'FLOWER DRUM' SUMMER DATES SANS G&FG PROD.

The strawhat team of Lee Guber, Frank Ford and Shelley Gross have abandoned their plans to produce their own package of "Flower Drum Song" this summer. Instead, they have arranged to offer the Lenny-Debin package of the Rodgers & Hammerstein musical, now in preparation. The Lenny-Debin edition has been scheduled for three weeks, beginning June 6, at the Music Fair, Westbury, L.I., and for two weeks, starting July 3, at the Music Fair, Storrstown, Mass., both Guber-Ford-Gross operations.

"Flower Drum" will also be presented for one week, beginning June 26, at the Oakdale Musical Theatre, Wallingford, Conn.; for one week, beginning Aug. 21, at the Carousel Theatre, Framington, Mass.; for one week, starting Aug. 28, at the Warwick (R.I.) Musical Theatre; and for two weeks, starting Sept. 5, at Melody Fair, North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Donald Gantry will appear in "Seven at Dawn," opening April 17 at the Actors Playhouse, N.Y.

'Billion Dollar Baby' Released for Stock After 15-Year Delay

"Billion Dollar Baby," which ended a 220-performance Broadway run June 29, 1946, is being released for stock production for the first time this year. The musical, which has been added to the Tams-Witmark Music Library catalog, is scheduled for a two-week run at the State Fair Musicals, Dallas, beginning Aug. 7. Elaine Stritch is to star in the Dallas presentation.

According to a Tams-Witmark rep the 15-year delay in the musical's availability for stock production was due to the lack of an orchestration. Books and lyrics for the presentation, which was produced on Broadway by Paul Feigay and Oliver Smith, are by Betty Comden and Adolph Green. The music is by Morton Gould.

Mort Sahl's Silo Solo At Herb Rogers' Spot

Chicago, April 11.

Herb Rogers' Music Theatre, a silo operation, has booked comic Mort Sahl for a week of concert performances in August, following its skein of musicals. Rogers began booking one-man vaude shows, supplementary to legit tuners, in the 1959 season and has found them highly profitable.

Tunetent will open June 20 with Tony Bennett in "Guys and Dolls," followed by Genevieve in "Can-Can," Kathryn Grayson in "Merry Widow," and Patrice Munsel in "King and I." Sahl, in his solo stint, will end the season Sept. 4.

Can. Restoring Dawson City Playhouse But Faces Need for 1899-1902 Data

(The following communication from Canada's Dept. of Northern Affairs and National Resources is an appeal by its chief, J. D. Herbert, for assistance in restoring a picturesque, still-standing theatre of the raucous conviviality era in the Canadian gold strike country. —Ed.)

By J. D. HERBERT

The Palace Grand Theatre at Dawson City, Yukon, was built in 1899 as the "Grand opera house," by C. H. Albertson, described as "the leading architect of Portland, Oregon." The man who put up the money was "Arizona Charley" Meadows, promoter extraordinary. Meadows operated the theatre, successively named "The Savoy," "The Old Savoy" and the "Palace Grand" until 1901, when Murray Eads took over and the name was changed once more, this time to "The Auditorium."

The Palace Grand is to be completely rebuilt as a living museum and will embody as many as possible of the features present during its years of most active life. These included, in addition to the theatre proper, a bar, a gambling concession, a "novelty" (which was for at least part of the time a shooting gallery) and a number of "apartments" on the second floor. There was a "hall for the different fraternal orders" on the third floor.

In the theatre it is planned to produce shows as similar as possible to those put on by travelling stock companies during the Gold Rush period.

Much of our information about the Palace Grand has come from files of local newspapers of the period. In addition to a few sparse descriptions of the interior of the building there are literally hundreds of names, of actors, "artists" and managers and of the productions featured. A list of these names will be prepared and a copy will be forwarded upon request.

The theatre has survived 60 years of fires and vandalism, almost intact as far as gross structural details are concerned; but the interior has been stripped of surface features (with some notable exceptions) and the task of restoration of drapes, hangings, curtains, wall-and-floor coverings will be difficult.

In approaching this problem it occurs to us that sources of information may fall into three categories:

First, are published books, pamphlets and periodicals, contemporary or more recent, containing accounts of the theatre in America and particularly the stock and road companies. These we have exhausted, as far as they are available in this area (including the National and Public Archives of Canada Libraries). We know of the existence of other volumes, at least one of which purports to be an account of "the theatre on the frontier" and these are being obtained. Yet there are doubtless other such publications which we have so far not located.

Second, there are almost sure to be unpublished materials of the same general character as those mentioned above, resting in archives, libraries and private collections. These may include diaries, personal letters, photographs and personal reminiscenses. We have so far no means of discovering even the existence of such materials, let alone their locations if they do in fact exist.

Third, there still may be living persons who themselves were in Dawson, or in the Yukon, during the crucial years, and whose memories retain pictures of events and places and persons of the time; or there may be descendants of such persons, who have heard stories from the old-timers who were there.

It is at this juncture that we appeal for help.

What we need are eye-witness or well-documented reports on the Palace Grand as it was during the years 1899-1901: stage facilities, lighting, house fournishings, colors and materials of drapes, curtains, upholstery and carpeting. We need assurances as to locations and size of doors and stairways (some of these have quite evidently been changed since 1901). In fact, almost anything at all that will add to our knowledge of the theatre as it used to be will be welcome.

We believe that an accurate restoration of the Palace Grand will constitute a serious and valuable contribution to the history of American stock-company theatres. Thus we do not hestitate to ask: Have you in your files or in your library documentary of photographic records that might assist us? Or, do you know, or know of, individuals or organizations that might be able to do so?

We are not asking that our research be undertaken by anyone else—only that leads be supplied; and any action you can take to help us, even if it consists only in passing on this appeal, will be greatly appreciated. Please address, National Historic Sites Division, Ottawa.

B'way 'Consul' Investor Wonders Wha' 'Oppened With Pay TV Royalties

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

As an investor in the original New York production, I have read with great interest (but no income) of the Canadian paid television broadcasts of Menotti's "The Consul." The limited partnership agreement for the stage production clearly specified participation in television rights, though of course, paid television was not anticipated in 1950.

As an investor, I have received no communication from International Telemeter, original producer Chandler Cowles, Jean Dalrymple or any others concerned. I have written, to no avail, to the production's accountants, Samuel L. Kozak & Co., New York.

While VARIETY reports that Miss Dalrymple has been talking with Zenith-RKO General "about possible exchange programs," I and the other investors who made the initial production possible find ourselves in a position quite similar to "The Consul's" neglected heroine, Magda Sorel, for we too can receive no answer.

At least Magda was given papers to fill out. We have received none.

'Theatre Language'

"Theatre Language" by Walter P. Bowman and Robert H. Ball (Theatre Arts Books; $6.95) is a compact dictionary of stage terminology. Bowman, for years, has been concerned with theatrical philology, and is currently with American U. Language Centre. Ball, a drama historian, is chairman of English Dept. at Queens College, N. Y. City.

Authors have produced a contemporary lexicography of theatrical nomenclature, also containing prime historical references and sources. Technical terms having different uses in various branches of show biz, are given in all accepted senses. Actor-talk is not neglected. VARIETY is listed under its own heading, for example, and also as "the actors' Bible." Shubert Alley, Tin Pan Alley, Toby shows, George Spelvin, ice (in its boxoffice sense), scalpers, Tomshows, Tony Awards, and pratfall are salted in between toggle-irons, tormentors, wings, grid, and pin hinges. Tome carries modern British stage terms, and also some Continental expressions.

Of general works on the subject, book is doubtless the best. In addition to its usefulness for pros and amateurs, volume makes fascinating reading for the occasional browser. Rodo.

Helena Carroll left the cast of "The Hostage" at the close of its Chicago engagement last Saturday (8) to appear opposite Dermot McNamara in the Lucille Lortel off-Broadway production of the Irish Players in Donagh Mac Donagh's "Happy As Larry," opening April 25 at the Martinique Theatre, N.Y. Eileen Kennally of the English company of "Hostage" replaces her in the touring presentation.

London Bits

London, April 11.

Max Bygraves goes to New York later this month to gander "Do Re Mi." He may play the lead in the London edition of the musical at the Coliseum next fall.

John Carlsen succeeds Ian Crichton as pressagent for Sadler's Wells Ballet.

"Flower Drum Song" folds April 29 at the Palace to make room for "The Sound of Music."

Pamela Charles is due back next week after two years on Broadway as femme lead in "My Fair Lady."

AGMA Dispute Threatens Opera Season in Frisco; Fear Stagehands, AFM?

San Francisco, April 11.

The American Guild of Musical Artists and the S.F. Opera Assn. are deadlocked in a dispute over wage and unemployment insurance demands. The row threatens the whole local opera season, scheduled to start in mid-September.

The battle came into the open late last week when Robert Watt Miller, Opera Assn. president, wrote his board that he would recommend suspension of the 1961 season unless AGMA cuts its demands. The union represents the chorus, minor singers, ballet, stage directors and wardrobe staff.

Miller told the opera board that AGMA's demands would increase the company's annual wages to AGMA-represented persons by $25,000, or 12%. He also claimed AGMA is insisting on unemployment insurance for its members, which would cost another $18,000.

Mrs. Diane Fivey, exec-secretary for AGMA in Frisco, sharply disputes Miller's assertions. She says the union's wage demands would amount to only $14,000 and adds, "We have offered an alternative, either to have the wage increase this year and defer unemployment insurance until next year, or vice versa."

The AGMA executive claims that unemployment insurance benefits would cost the company only $6,000 a year, and declares that the union had accepted an informal 6% (or $14,000) wage increase proposal made by the opera's general director, Kurt Herbert Adler.

She asserts, Adler said he would recommend this to Miller, and we thought we had a deal. Then we were told it was unacceptable."

In his letter to the board, Miller said, "Unemployment insurance for non-profit organizations is optional in California," but he noted that according to California law, "if an employer elects to provide unemployment insurance for some of his employees, he must do so for all." He concluded, "Only a small number of AGMA members and other opera employees would benefit from this insurance coverage, since most are protected through employment elsewhere."

What Miller, whose chief job is board chairman of the huge Pacific Lighting Corp., seemed to be hinting was that a concession to AGMA on these points would leave the opera association vulnerable to similar demands by the stagehands and the AFM.

"Cinderella," the book of which has been worked over by Donald Driver for legit presentation. The tele debut occurred in 1957.

Making the pic-to-legit transition is "Calamity Jane," the 1953 western filmmusical, adapted by Charles K. Freeman from the screenplay by James O' Hanlon. Sammy Fain and Paul Francis Webster, respective composer and lyricist for the film, have revised the original songs, in addition to providing several new numbers. "Calamity" is being licensed by the Tams Witmark Music Library, which is also handling "Destry," "Take Me," "Tenderloin" and "Billion." Incidentally, "Calamity" is not being released within a 250 mile radius of New York.

Music Theatre Inc., is licensing "Music Man," "Fantastiks" and "Mattress." "Cinderella" is being handled by the Rodgers & Hammerstein office, as is "Flower," another R & H property, produced by Rodgers and his late collaborator, in association with Joseph Fields, with whom they also wrote the musical based on C. Y. Lee's novel.

Inside Stuff—Legit

In answer to last week's VARIETY piece about his refusal to use critical quotes in the advertising of his Broadway production of "Rhinoceros," Leo Kerz wires, "Who says it's new? So it's all right to brag with incomplete quotes but it's publicity gimmick to use complete reviews even when they are good? "Rhinoceros" has regained confidence of Broadway refugees by using unedited notices as exciting part of theatregoing. After 106 performances they are still alive and work for show. Reason for omitting VARIETY and Mirror reviews is to avoid embarrassment. They said "Rhinoceros" not for Broadway. Difference between Anderson (Maxwell Anderson; the late playwright and member of the Playwrights Co. producing organization) and Kerz is that former hated critics. Kerz likes them."

(William Gillette, old actor-manager, was another who opposed critics' quotes.)

Hope Harding Davis, daughter of the late Bessie McCoy and Richard Harding Davis, now in the promotion department of the Dutton publishing house, took issue with Time calling the famed war correspondent's wife—her mother—a "showgirl." This was in course of a book review of "The Richard Harding Davis Years," by Gerald Langford Holt, Rinehart & Winston).

It is generally acknowledged that Bessie McCoy Davis was a full-fledged legit star and, while starring in "Three Twins," a 1908 legit musical, she introduced a song of that title and thus became known as "The Yama-Yama Girl." Another song titled "Cuddle Up A Little Closer," according to her daughter, flopped in the show but eventually became a big hit many years later.

The VARIETY legit story last week on the International Telemeter pickup of "Show Girl from the Eugene O'Neill Theatre, N. Y., erred in stating that the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists has jurisdiction over both live and filmed tv. Screen Actors Guild has jurisdiction over filmed tv.

Jurisdiction over tape tv commercials hasn't been settled yet, but AFTRA and SAG have agreed to negotiate jointly in that area. Thus far AFTRA has gained jurisdiction over virtually all tape tv programs.

The advisory board of the Ford Foundation's recently-established Theatre Communications Group includes the executive committee, consisting of Theodore Hoffman, head of the drama department of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh; John Reich, head of the Goodman Memorial Theatre, Chicago, and Nina Vance, managing director of the Alley Theatre, Houston, plus Michael Ellis, director of the Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa.; Zelda Fichandler, managing director of the Arena Stage, Washington; Jules Irving, managing director of the Actors Workshop, San Francisco; C. Lowell Lees, head of the U. of Utah Theatre, Salt Lake City; Mack Scism, director of the Mummers Theatre, Oklahoma City; L. Newell Tarrant, managing director of the Playhouse, Erie, Pa., actresses Nan Martin and Geraldine Page, director Alan Schneider, and Broadway producer-realtor Roger L. Stevens.

Lesser's Italo Stageplay in Paris Stars Mercouri, Dassin Directs

Arthur Lesser, currently in New York with his songstress-wife, Patachou, now at the Hotel St. Regis, will ready a fall Paris production of "Il Benessere" (The Well Being), an Italian play by Franco Brusatti and Fabio Maury, which will star Melina Mercouri. It will be directed by Jules Dassin. When Lesser made the deal with both it was far ahead of the Greek star's and the expatriate American's impact with their "Never On Sunday" film.

Lesser had read the play two years ago and held it for proper casting.

Miss Mercouri is no stranger to legit, including the Paris stage, having done "Sweet Bird of Youth" in French, also a Marcel Achard play eight years ago. Albert Husson, author of "My Three Angles," is doing the French adaptation of the Italian play which may eventually come to Broadway. Miss Mercouri also speaks fluent English. Lesser owns the English-language world rights and also the motion picture rights. Play has no French title as yet.

Incidentally this is not his first Parisian legit production. His "Vive de . . ." is in its 14th month in the French capital.

In the late fall or early winter Joseph Kipness will "present the Arthur Lesser production of" a musical which Jerome Chodorov is adapting from the French, starring Patachou on Broadway. It's from a book by Alaxandre Bressfort (who coauthored "Irma La Douce") and music by Jean-Pierre Mottier. Bressfort also wrote the lyrics; American lyricist has not been selected. Original title was "Impasse de la Fidelete" and may be retitled "Fidelity Lane." Show ran 180 performances in 1960-61 at the Ambassadeurs and ABC, in Paris, and will be a big-cast book show. Miss Patachou meantime has her European tour set, plus the usual Riviera galas during the summer season.

B'way a Jungle

audiences attending his repertory offerings will not be very sophisticated because of the dearth of professional companies in the midwest and that patrons will have to develop a taste for good theatre.

The policy of the proposed theatre will be for predominantly classical works, the director declared, adding that the repertoire will probably include classic-potential works by such American playwrights as Eugene O'Neill, Thornton Wilder and Arthur Miller.

Listing what he calls the advantages of the repertory theatre, Guthrie noted that it keeps performances fresh instead of running them into the ground, and permits producers to exploit their successes and bury their failures.

'Me, Too'—From Kazan

Another repertory booster and batterer of Broadway is stager Elia Kazan, who's been working the last two years with Robert Whitehead organizing the Repertory Theatre, which is to be part of New York's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. As quoted by Arthur Gelb in the N.Y. Times last Friday (7), Kazan states, "I've had Broadway and I'm not even reading scripts anymore for Broadway production. The whole Broadway setup is inimicable to the theatre. It's almost impossible to do artistically daring work because of the current economy of Broadway. Costs have become so absurd, producers are actually abandoning plays they know to be worthwhile, because of the high cost of running them.

"Though I had a great time with 'Sweet Bird of Youth' (the last Broadway play directed by him in 1959) and 'J.B.' (also staged by him that year) I was disgusted with the short rehearsal periods I had foisted on me by Broadway; out of the four weeks granted for rehearsals, when time had been taken off for costume fittings and so forth, I had 19 actual working days for 'J.B.' and 20 for 'Sweet Bird.' How can a director do anything artistically daring under such limitations?" Kazan further commented, at the Lincoln Center "We'll be able to do plays that are inoperable on Broadway."

Ed Menerth, an exec with the advertising firm of Ketchum, MacCloud and Grove, Inc., has written the book and lyrics for an off-Broadway targeted presentation of "Lady of Scandal," a musical adaptation of "The School for Scandal," for which Arthur Brandon has composed the score.

Bull Market for Moppet Show Biz Pointed by Easter B.O. Around N.Y.

Moppet-aimed theatre in the New York area appears to be booming. During last week's Easter holiday there were around 30 groups in operation, ranging from puppeteers to companies presenting kiddie classics. Prominent among these groups is Little Golden Theatre Inc., a newly-formed professional troupe, produced by Arthur Shimkin, which presented its first show, "Young Abe Lincoln," at the York Playhouse last week. If the population explosion continues this augurs a new show biz bull market.

Although the outfit bears the Little Golden title, there is no business association or other financial connection between Little Golden Theatre and the Golden Press or Little Golden Records. The use of the name is by special arrangement with Golden Press, the only stipulation being that Golden approve the scripts. Producer-founder Shimkin also founded Little Golden Records, for which he is now production director and a&r chief. His association with Golden dates to his start with Simon & Schuster, Golden Press parent. Since founding Golden Records, he has left S&S and formed Arthur Shimkin Enterprises, through which he produces the disk and theatre ventures.

Bernstein & John Allen; lyrics, Joan Javits; music, Victor Ziskin; special dialog and lyrics, Arnold Sundgaard. Staged by Jay Harnick; settings & costumes, Fred Voelpel. Opened April 3, '61, at the York Playhouse, N.Y.; $1.50 admission.

Golden Theatre plans for Golden Theatre are fullscale. The longrange outlook calls for national touring companies which will perform a repertory of original, professional, moppet-targeted presentations. The repertoire is to be built up through showcase showings, such as the one just completed at the York, of new shows each Easter and Christmas holiday week. To these performances will be invited, in addition to the regular audience of children and their parents, theatre operators, community leaders, etc., in the hope of interesting them in booking the shows. Touring arrangements are being handled by Columbia Artists Management, under direction of v.p. Gerald Devlin and Irwin Scherzer. "Abe Lincoln" has been booked as far as March '62 with spot engagements but plans are for a full touring schedule of three companies by the fall.

Shimkin estimates the mounting cost of the initial production to have been around $8,000. Weekly operating cost is figured at about $2,000, with the cast of nine reportedly drawing top Equity scale. The second half of the one-week presentation at the York is reported to have done SRO business for almost all of the three-a-day performances, with all seats at $1.50.

Prior to the April 3 commercial opening, "Abe Lincoln" was given an extensive tryout. It was offered at no admission in N.Y. elementary schools through the Board of Education's "Higher Horizon Programs," and was performed for children in Bellevue Hospital and various Police Athletic League centres.

The production itself is delightful. As caught last Thursday (6), it is polished and professional throughout. The book by Richard N. Bernstein and John Allen, lyrics by Joan Javits, music by Victor Ziskin, and additional dialog and lyrics by Arnold Sundgaard, are geared for bright, tuneful and even informative entertainment. Also impressive is the fine quality of the performances which are not played down to the moppets but are performed straight for their full value.

Jay Harnick's direction has sprinkled the story of Lincoln in the days when he was just starting out on the political road as a simple, honest citizen from New Salem, Ill., with colorful brawling,

BEYOND BITTERNESS

Garrick's Loss But Ornaments Go To Museums

Chicago, April 11.

The fine arts and architectural buffs lamenting the razing of the 69-year-old Garrick Theatre by Balaban & Katz are being solaced by Field Enterprises Inc. (publisher of World Book Encyclopedia), which has made a $10,000 grant to save the mortar ornamentation designed by now noted architect Louis H. Sullivan. Acknowledged to have special significance in the history of architecture, and considered masterworks by lovers of art, the Sullivan ornaments are being donated by the firm to art museums and universities.

Some samples of the rococo facade will be sent to schools and museums in other countries, through an arrangement with the educational and cultural affairs division of the State Department.

Chicagoans who had protested, petitioned and picketed for the Garrick's preservation were not as concerned with the loss of another theatre here as with the loss of an architectural monument. That the landmark, with all its mortar treasures, was going down in favor of a parking lot was almost more irony than they could bear.

Palm Beach Digs Liberace Show

Liberace established a house record for the Royal Poinciana Playhouse, Palm Beach, with a sellout gross of over $34,000 for 10 performances March 27-April 1. The pianist, supported by soprano Janet Medlin and the dance team of Brascia and Tybee, appeared at the 813-seater in a program titled, "Mr. Showbusiness." The bill, preceded by nine regular legit productions, was the windup entry in the spot's 10-week season.

Productions at the Playhouse usually play nine performances, six nights and three matinees, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday. The Liberace engagement took in an extra matinee Good Friday. The scale at the Playhouse, which will reopen for its 1962 season next January, runs to a $7.50 top opening nights and $6.95 other evenings.

Legit offerings at the Frank J. Hale operation this year included break-in performances of the Theatre Guild-American Repertory Co. productions of "Skin of Our Teeth," "Glass Menagerie" and "Miracle Worker," now being performed overseas.

Drama School Head To Operate Dayton Stock

Dayton, April 11.

James Alex, local drama school operator, will present a season of stock at the Memorial Hall here this summer. The 2,492-seater, owned by Montgomery County, has been leased to Alex for one year. He has a "gentlemen's agreement" with the county commissioners that he'll get the spot again next year if this season is successful.

Alex will be the fourth producer of stock at the Hall since 1957, when John Kenley introduced summer shows there. Kenley was followed by Paul Winston in 1958 and Douglas Crawford in 1959. The house was dark last summer. On the three who've already produced at the spot, only Kenley clicked.

Kenley, who dropped negotiations to return here this year, has been operating at the 2,418 Packard Music Hall, Warren, since 1958. He's expanding this summer to Columbus, and plans a dual-booking operation.

Alex, who was choreographer for Douglas in 1959, has a deal calling for a 10-week season with an option for an additional three weeks. He'll pay $1,500 a week rent and split the cost of backstage lighting. The county will retain concession rights and Alex will get the revenue from program sales.

West Coast Mr. Foster 'Show' Tour to Europe

San Francisco, April 11.

A 32-day "Show Time" tour of Europe and New York this summer is being organized on the Coast by the Ask Mr. Foster Travel Service here. The tour, which is being peddled at $1,427 per person, plus tax, will take in 12 European countries and a day and an evening in Manhattan.

Those making the trip, which begins June 13, will be picked up in Frisco, Portland, and then Seattle from where they'll jet directly to London. The stopoff in New York will immediately precede the July 15 termination of the tour.

As a bonus for individuals forming groups of 15 to make the trip, the agency is offering a free round-trip air ticket to London, a Rand McNally Atlas and a subscription to VARIETY.

Chi's Edgewater Back for 11-Week Summer Stock

Chicago, April 11.

Henry Guettel, who has been active in stock production and concert management in the east, principally in New England, has been hired as managing producer of Edgewater Beach Playhouse for the coming season. He succeeds the producer-manager team of Noel Behn and Robert Kamlot who handled the shows the first four seasons and were dropped after the 1960 term.

Arthur Morse, head of the corporation which operates the silo in the swank backyard of the Edgewater Beach Hotel, is taking on the title of executive producer. Strawhatter has operated successfully with a straight package policy in the past, but Morse's intention this year is to book only a few packages and to produce most of the shows locally, with various outside directors.

Edgewater begins its 11-week season June 20 in same 966-seat tent. It's to be enlarged to 1,700 seats and with a permanent top before the 1962 season.

'BILLY BARNES PEOPLE' RECOUPS $102,000 NUT

Hollywood, April 11.

Reaching the 100th performance mark last week at the Las Palmas Theatre, "The Billy Barnes People," successor to "The Billy Barnes Revue," returned its $30,000 investment in 11 weeks and grossed over $102,000 in the 390-seat house.

More than 28,000 patrons have attended the revue since its Dec. 27 preem, according to producers Joe Landis and John Pool, who are sole backers of project. They say that business at this point is 68% ahead of its predecessor, which ran successfully two years ago in same house.

Plans call for the revue to run at least a year at Las Palmas, despite bids for tour or to play Manhattan. The original "Revue" ran locally for 48 weeks, followed by seven months in New York and four in London and Scotland.

Off-B'way 'Epitaph' Cast Playing Chi Univ. Stand

Chicago, April 11.

The off-Broadway production of "Epitaph for George Dillon," which ended an engagement March 12 at the Actors Playhouse, N.Y., has been booked for six performances at the Chicago Univ. Theatre, opening tomorrow night (Wed.). The New York cast of the John Osborne-Anthony Creighton drama will be imported intact.

"Epitaph" will give Chicago two concurrent off-Broadway roadshows, the other being a second company of "Fantasticks," which is billeted at the Crystal Ballroom of the Hotel Del Prado. The engagement is sponsored by the Chi chapter of the American National Theatre & Academy.

In the past, the university theatre has imported off-Broadway productions of Samuel Beckett's "Endgame," John Dos Passos' "USA" and the Irish Players company.

Both On and Off-B'way, Cutrate Tickets a Growing B.O. Factor

Uptown, downtown, all around town, discount theatre tickets are a growing boxoffice factor in New York. Although greater attention has been focused on the arrival of large-scale twofering on Broadway, there's an almost equally predominant cutrate ticket distribution off-Broadway.

On Broadway, the score is eight out of 27 shows offering discount tickets. Off-Broadway the count is five out of 28 Equity-bonded shows. The off-Broadway cutraters are not the two-for-one deal featured on Broadway, however. The usual procedure downtown is to issue exchange tickets redeemable at the b.o. for seats at lower prices than are sold over the counter, but not at as drastic a cut as the 50% reduction the twofers represent.

Although twofer has become the accepted term for discount tickets in general, not all Broadway coupons are the two-for-one variety. Some feature small reductions. Exchange tickets off-Broadway generally bring a scaled rakeoff based on the denomination of the seat bought. The average deal ranges from a straight $1 discount to a 50c cut on a $2.50 pasteboard, 75c on a $3.25, and $1 on a $4 ticket. Many Broadway ducats work similarly but on a higher scale.

The off-Broadway ticket situation is not simply defined. Of the 28 shows, four are presented in cabarets or restaurants. This presumably gives them additional revenue that helps defray operating costs. These shows, therefore, are not comparable to the uptown, straight legit operations and are less a part of the overall discount picture.

With their respective houses, the shows are:

"After the Angels," W. 3d Street Restaurant.

"O, Oysters," Village Gate.

"The Premise," Premise Theatre.

"Stewed Prunes," Showplace.

Another factor is the educational exchange ticket. This plan is used by such groups as the Phoenix Theatre, with "Hamlet," and the Living Theatre, with a repertory of "The Connection," "Jungle of Cities" and some classical selections. "Roots," at the Mayfair is also issuing these coupons. In this case, special reduced ducats are provided for students and faculties of various institutions and are redeemable for reduced-price seats. Broadway has used these cutraters as well, for such offerings as "The Wall" and through the ANTA educational program, but not as frequently. This type of coupon is not part of the commercial twofer picture, however.

Excluding these special entries, there are 20 shows off-Broadway, of which five are on cutraters.

With their respective houses, the shows are:

"Call Me By My Rightful Name," One Sheridan Square.

"Krapp's Last Tape" & "Zoo Story," Cricket.

"Leave It To Jane," Sheridan Square.

"Mousetrap," Greenwich Mews.

"Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath," Eleanor Gould.

Unlike Broadway, it has become the policy of some off-Broadway managements to print their discount pasteboards right from the start and to market them simultaneously with the boxoffice-scaled tickets. Such was the case with "Call Me" and "Ladies Night." Theory behind the practice is that the discount tickets can help to carry a show during the two to three weeks it generally takes for an off-Broadway show to catch on.

In some cases, like "Leave It To Jane," the exchange coupons are used sporadically for promotional stunts and the like but, on or off the Main Stem, it's figured that discount ducats are still about the last resort to attracting the public, short of cutting all prices at the boxoffice.

EXTEND ZOO OPERA

Yannopoulos, Also Sets Up Cincy Opera Workshops

Cincinnati, April 11.

Cincinnati Summer Opera season at the Zoo will be extended from four to six weeks with 27 performances of 10 operas, opening June 22 with Wagner's "Das Rheingold."

Dino Yannopoulos, newly appointed general manager, will inaugurate an opera workshop, in cooperation with the Cincy College-Conservatory of Music, to study management, production and fund raising.

Wolfgang Roth is set designer and Nelle Fisher the choreographer.

John L. Magro, executive committee chairman, reported that a 20% b.o. climb the past two years left a $1,780 surplus in 1960. This year's budget will be $273,000, to be met by seat sales and a United Fine Arts Fund contribution of $67,000.

Cincy's traditional biennial May Festival, due next year, is in financial straits and has been postponed to 1963. The nation's oldest such musical event had an operating loss of $55,473 in 1960, leaving the directors facing a net deficit of $11,000 to $15,000. Max Rudolf, Cincy Symphony Orchestra director, has not yet accepted a bid to succeed Josef Krips as the festival's musical director.

'Show Girl' Net To Top $30,000

"Show Girl," a revamped carryover of last season's touring production of "Show Business," is believed to have earned around $30,000 profit as of its Broadway closing last Saturday (8). That's exclusive of the International Telemeter pickup of the revue for pay-tv. The financial outlay involved in getting the Carol Channing-starrer off the ground last season is understood to have been about $70,000.

Besides the pay-tv revenue, additional income will be forthcoming from a 10-12 week tour of stock showcases this summer since the bookings are reportedly on a guarantee basis. Coin earned thus far by the show includes revenue from both "Show Business" and "Show Girl." The former was co-produced by James A. Doolittle and Charles Loewe, both of whom participated in the presentation of the Broadway offering in partnership with Oliver Smith.

Last Saturday's closing of "Show Girl," in which Jules Munshin and the French Singing act, Les Quat' Jeudis, appeared with Miss Channing, marked the end of a 13-week run at the O'Neill Theatre, N.Y.

Scot Arts Council B.R.'s New Play Productions

Edinburgh, April 11.

A plan is being launched here to encourage the presentation of new plays in Scotland. It has the backing of the Scot Committee of the Arts Council of Great Britain, which is offering guarantees of up to $900 against loss to repertory theatre managements for the production of new script.

Scotland's struggling stock theatres will now be able to take the financial risk of staging new works by unknown authors. The Committee will not consider applications direct from authors or agents. Plays must be submitted by a producing management and be of a standard acceptable to the committee.

A spokesman for the Arts Council said the scheme will probably lead to a better type of new play being staged. "A new play with a serious theme is probably more worthy of support and of being done by a repertory theatre, but it falls by the wayside because it is thought not likely to be a public success," he said.

ELT In New York Move

Equity Library Theatre will move its New York showcase to the Master Institute Theatre next season.

The group has been using the Lenox Hill Playhouse for its presentation the last 11 years.

George McCowan will direct "One Way Pendulum," the London drama which Caroline Burke Swann intends presenting on Broadway next fall.

Easter Turnout Fattens B'way B. O.; 'Happiest' $43,179, 'Devil's' $34,748, 'Country' $28,519 (7), 'Horn' $26,450

Broadway caught the holiday spirit last week. Business climbed for all shows with the exception of "Do Re Mi," which suffered a drop because of the absence of Phil Silvers for two performances. For most shows it was the best stanza of the last several weeks. Capacity entries were "Camelot," "Mary, Mary," "Sound of Music," "Wildcat," "Evening with Nichols and May" and the Phoenix Theatre's presentation of "Hamlet."

The "Mary, Mary" gross was cut by theatre party commissions and the "Camelot" figure again represents the take after refunds to patrons unable to attend performance because of a winter snowstorm. The Poenix gross was reduced by student theatre discounts. There were nine shows with discount tickets in circulation last week. Joining the list of cut-rate entries this week is "Miracle Worker."

Making his first extended scouting swingaround since having a heart attack some time ago, Mertens will hold auditions in London, Paris, Bonn, Frankfurt, Munich, Stuttgart, Zurich, Rome, Vienna, Copenhagen and Stockholm, all within approximately one month. Mrs. Mertens will go along, representing the doctor's interest.

marching, seriousness and comedy, in an unpretentious manner that holds the kids in hushed attention throughout. All nine characters are lively and completely drawn in the Bernstein-Allen book and Ziskin's music is cheerful and well-defined. Miss Javits lyrics are pleasant and well-integrated with the book and Sundgaard's material is an asset.

Expert Ingredients

Darrell Sandeen displays a fine, rich voice as Abe and Judy Foster is a cute vivacious love interest. Sandeen scores particularly in "Little Frog in a Little Pond," a tune about his ambitions. Lou Cutell is fine as Abe's partner in a mercantile store and provides most of the comedy bits, and Travis Hudson is a charming frontierswoman, doing a pleasant job with "Cheer Up, Cheer Up." Able and colorful assists are provided by Tom Noel, Jack Blackton, Ray Hyson, Robert Darnell and Jack Kauflin, as the mayor, the governor's son and some local rowdies, respectively.

Fred Voelpel makes clever use of some carpenter's horses and assorted props for the settings and his costumes are colorful. His designs make it possible to present the show in most any type of house a tour might encounter. Overall, the production is a click success which entertains both youngster and adult escort alike.

An original-cast album of "Abe Lincoln" is in the works and will be issued, natch, on the Little Golden label. In all, the show played 18 performances at the off-Broadway York and plans to engage a Broadway house for a continued engagement are presently being negotiated. The offering is also to be filmed for presentation over WNEW-TV. Kalt.

Biz Snappy for Many Road Shows; 'Becket' Record $61,007 in Boston, 'Majority' Record $51,248 in Wash.

Business was lively for most road shows last week. House records were set by "Becket" in Boston and "Majority of One" in Washington.

The Broadway-targeted "Carnival" sold out again in its second week in Philadelphia and "Sound of Music" just about went clean in the first frame of a three-week Toronto booking.

The bus-and-truck companies of "Andersonville Trial" and "J.B." closed next Saturday (15).

Estimates for Last Week

Parenthetic designations for out-of-town shows are the same as for Broadway, except that hyphenated T with show classification indicates tryout and RS indicates road show. Frisco Spring Opera Co. Slates 6 Productions

San Francisco, April 11

San Francisco's new Spring Opera Co. will play seven performances of six operas from May 2 to May 19 at a scale ranging from $1 to $3.95 in the 3,300-seat Opera House. Kurt Herbert Adler, general director of the regular opera setup and also musical boss of the Spring, says the performances will be alternated among three conductors, Joseph Rosenstock of the Metropolitan and Cologne; Sandor Salgo, of Stanford Univ., and Henry Lewis, young Los Angeles batoner who recently did a guest stint with the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

The singers will mostly be younger professionals, the best-known of whom probably is Marilyn Horne, who did "Wozzeck" here last year. Scheduled operas are Gounod's "Romeo et Juliette," May 2; Puccini's "Boheme," May 5; Flotow's "Martha," May 9; Verdi's "Traviata," May 13; Mozart's "Magic Flute," May 15-16, and Bizet's "Carmen," May 19.

The available roles will be repeated weekly until filled, and additions to the list will be made only when information is secured from responsible parties. The intention is to service performers with leads provided by the managements of the shows involved rather than to run a wild goose marathon. This information is published without charge.

Recalling Sime Silverman

H. Allen Smith's "How To Write Without Knowing Nothing," which Little, Brown will publish in the fall, is a collection of odd-ball pieces, with accent on slanguage and semantics.

Included are four of his VARIETY Anniversary Number special articles, titled "Of VARIETY and Sime," "Sime's Hidden-Note Trick," "How I Won the Championship" and "Biography of a Word." The first two refer to Sime Silverman, founder of VARIETY.

LHJ's Unique Study

What adds upto a unique piece of promotion is a voluminous dossier created by the Ladies' Home Journal to show how its editors plan and create a special feature. Labeled "Case History of a LHJ Article," the document concerns a story in the mag's current issue on "How America Spends Its Money."

Brochure-like tract was prepared by the Educational Bureau of the Curtis Publishing Co. Not only does it explain in minute detail how such an article is put together, but it includes a variety of exhibits ranging from an editorial assistant's preliminary report on the family selected for analysis to the final layout and editorial schedule.

Copies of the study are being sent to schools of journalism and college writing classes throughout the country. Curtis public relations execs feel that the study should be a "unique teaching aid for years to come." The April article, incidentally, is No. 4 in the Journal's new series examining family finances.

Rushing 'Elizabeth Taylor'

John B. Allan has rushed out a paperback biog entitled "Elizabeth Taylor" which Monarch will issue, as it did with "Jacqueline Kennedy."

Latter, published to hit the newsstands during the first week of the President's inauguration, has so far sold a sensational 2,500,000 copies at 35c.

Hillman Books has also just issued "The Elizabeth Taylor Story," by Olan Levy, as a 50c. paperback. Levy authored "Operation Elvis" for Holt, Rinehart & Winston.

Bantam's Churchill Rights

Ed Albee's Plays

New playwright Edward Albee's latest off-Broadway play, "The American Dream," will be published by Coward-McCann which also brought out "The Zoo Story," now in its second season off-Broadway, and "The Sandbox," Cobilled with "Dream" is Albee's "The Death of Bessie Smith," which Coward-McCann is also publishing.

William Faulkner will be among the eminent men and women of letters taking part in an international seminar in India Nov. 11-14, organized as part of the celebrations of the centenary of the Indian poet Rabindranath Tagore, 1913 winner of the Nobel Prize for literature. Other notable foreign participants will be Britain's T. S. Eliot and Aldous Huxley, France's Andre Malraux, Argentina's Victoria Ocampo, and Japan's Toshihiko Katayama. About 50 Indian writers representing each of the 16 major Indian languages recognized by India's Sahitya Akademi also will take part.

Stan Freberg—Author

Ad jingler, songsmith and disk artist Stan Freberg is doing a book on "Modern Advertising" for Random House.

Another will be titled "Freberg's First Reader," a "modern primer" in his familiar show biz offbeat style.

Syndicating Griffin

John David Griffin's "I See by TV" column in the N.Y. Mirror, which started only March 20, is being jumped to semi-syndication status via the Hearst wire, though no indication yet how many Hearst editors are picking it up. Nod for the intramural wire often preludes wider syndication via Hearst-owned King Features.

Griffin began the column after long sidelining by illness. His chit-chat pillar in no way effects Nick Kenny's tele column, since latter often goes far afield in addition to his frequent versifying.

O'Hara's Anthologies

"Four Plays by John O'Hara" is soon due under the Random House imprint, including a dramatization of his "The Farmer's Hotel." With the exception of experimental production in Princeton (where he resides) the plays are new.

Three more new books will also go out via RH, the first titled "Assembly," collection of his New Yorker pieces, novellas, etc., due next winter, followed by two new novels.

Freud & Family

consulted the sons or daughters of Sigmund Freud in London or any of us in this country who had been closely associated with Sigmund Freud in a personal and professional capacity. (The General Introductory Lectures on Psychoanalysis were translated under my supervision.) He answered to my great surprise that he had not contacted anybody because he felt consulting them would imply a commitment that he would have to take whatever advice they gave him.

I demurred from his conclusion. But he was the playwright. I was only interested that the drama be historically accurate. I then pointed out some specific errors in fact to Mr. Denker but he turned my suggestions down, indicating that dramatic license and the necessity for maintaing dramatic impact made his inaccurate version valid.

I bought tickets for the opening night of the play to see for myself what distortions, misrepresentations and false characterizations resulted from this, to me, strange attitude of the playwright.

Okay Re Analysis

The play, obviously, must be judged on three levels. First, its construction as a drama and its appeal to an audience. That area is not in my field of competence to evaluate. But certainly the New York critics in their favorable verdict indicated it met the standard of a good show and that it was well acted.

Second, the story of the discovery of psychoanalysis. Does it meet the standards of truth? I lent the available copy of the script I had to a distinguished psychoanalyst, Dr. David Abrahamsen. He read it carefully and said that, by, and large, the treatment of the psychoanalytic story was truthful. He criticized some minor elements, called the office of the producer, Roger Stevens, to acquaint him with them, but never heard from him. I am not a psychoanalyst, but believe the dramatist treated this subject sincerely and soundly in its main lines.

Third, the play must be judged on the truth with which the characters are represented. Are the individual characterizations truthful? Are the relationships of the members of the Freud family to Sigmund Freud and to one another truthfully represented? Is the relationship of Freud to his patient and the relationship of the patient to the Freud family truthfully portrayed? As to these, the playwright is way off the mark.

Family Distorted

The characterizations of the Freud family in all these relationships are distorted and false. I do not think this indicates maliciousness on the part of the playwright, who is devout and sincere in his appraisal of psychoanalysis, but he seems to have permitted economic pressure of time, laziness, lack of openmindedness or plain stubbornness to induce him to present to the American public on the stage, and presumably for the screen later, characterizations which by the greatest stretch of the imagination do not represent in their attitudes and actions the people they are supposed to represent.

There can be no acceptable excuse for such mishandling of the truth. Knowledgeable people tell me that Hollywood is a worse offender in the presentation of history and that there are few standards or criteria for truth or ethics that playwrights follow in the scramble for cash and boxoffice.

Our society protects living persons against damaging statements by its libel law. But once an individual is dead, society permits the sky as the limit. There is no recourse to assure that the public will not get false stereotypes and cliches about dead individuals. Figments of a writer's imagination rather than historical representations are tendered the public.

Although, as one of the oldest of Freud's immediate family in the U.S.A., I am interested in seeing that the truth is set right. There are broad moral and public issues inherent in this situation that lead to my interest in it. A historian who destroys the truth would find himself dishonored. A lawyer would be disbarred. Why should not his confrees or society hold a playwright responsible for the truth, always permitting such dramatic license as is necessary for the stage.

Possibly such an indictment demands specific comment on some of the matters not truthfully presented.

Not a Stormer

Sigmund Freud is presented as a storming man who yells loudly at his patient and his family. To anyone who knew Freud intimately, of has carefully read the authoritative biography of Ernest Jones this is, of course, not true. Freud was a scientist, gentle and quiet. He never stormed or raged with patients or members of his family.

The relations of the members of the family to Freud and to psychoanalysis are falsely represented. In the Vienna of the late 19th century and early 20th century, a woman's place was in the home. Certainly in Freud's immediate family no one criticized, argued or discussed psychoanalysis with him, and certainly not in his office.

His mother, my grandmother whom I knew, is depicted as remonstrating with him about entering a career in psychoanalysis. During her long lifetime, he was always her "golden son"; everything he did was right. And he had only the greatest affection for her. He called on her every Sunday during his mature life. To use her as a device for exposition and a foil for Freud is preposterous.

The relation bin of Freud to his sister, Dolfi, the only one of five sisters depicted, was not at all like that presented in the play. The playwright depicts the psychoanalysis of a patient as if it were a family affair, with Freud's wife and my aunt Dolfi moving in and out of his office while the patient is present. This is as false as to picture the family of my doctor running in and out of the office while I am in the examining room. The treatment of the patient is portrayed on stage as if the patient were being psychoanalyzed by the family and not by the doctor alone.

The relationship of members of the family to each other is grossly distorted. In no cultured family in Austria of that period would a mother give a slap on the face to an adult daughter as depicted in the play.

Omissions

Historically, the play misses many important characters in that part of Freud's life described on the stage. Freud's daughter, Anna, a mainstay of his life in the last days in Vienna, who now successfully practices in London, is not mentioned. Numerous sisters who played a more important role in his life than Dolfi are not mentioned. His sister-in-law, Minna, who was close to him, was omitted.

Our Ambassador to France at the time, William Bullitt, an adherent of my uncle's was deeply interested in psychoanalysis and in great part responsible for Freud's getting out of Austria. Visits of the members of the staff of the American Consul General Wiley, who took an interest in keeping the Nazi Gestapo within bounds, are not mentioned. A letter from FDR, I can find no record of anywhere, is dragged in and read. Freud's disciple, Ernest Jones, of London, stirred up the British Government to express solicitude for Freud's safe departure. The playwright omits the activity of Americans on the spot, a matter of historical record in Jones' biography.

This letter uses a case study to point up an issue that all Americans interested in the perpetuation of truth on the stage and screen should be concerned about. It presents an issue some national association of dramatists or historians might come to grips with to ensure the American public is not fed the imaginings of an agile playwright's brain under the guise of truth. An essential element of a democratic society is that the public shall be enabled to make its judgments on what is presented to it as the truth.

"Bei Mir Bist Du Shoen," a Yiddish-American musical by Louis Freiman, is scheduled to open next fall at the Anderson Theatre, N.Y., under the production auspices of Jacob Jacobs, who created the title and the original lyrics to the song of the same name, Sholom Secunda, who wrote the music for the song, or Abe Ellstein will do the score.

OBITUARIES

MARIAN JORDAN

Marian Jordan, 63, the "Molly" of radio's "Fibber McGee & Molly" and wife of Jim Jordan, who played Fibber, died of cancer April 7 in Encino, Calif.

The Jordans started as vaudevillians and worked their way into radio, evolving the "Fibber" format in 1935 and quickly turning it into a national byword. Their town of "Wistful Vista" and their lineup of characters, some of which evolved into shows of their own like "The Great Gildersleeve," were household names. For years, "Fibber" was the nation's first or second-rated show.

Television has never succeeded in recapturing the dry wit and the colorful characters the Jordans and writer Don Quinn created in their radio series. NBC's California National Productions the season before last attempted a recreation, utilizing Bob Sweeney and Kathy Lewis in the Jordan roles, but the program proved unsuccessful. The Jordans themselves have been in virtual retirement since 1953, when NBC dropped the show, but for the past couple of years have been doing taped radio capsules for the network.

The Jordans were childhood sweethearts who married in Peoria in 1918. After the war, they entered vaudeville, and moved radio in Chicago in 1926 as The O'Henry Twins. In 1931, after smalltime radio jobs, they started a comedy show called "Smackout" and met Quinn. The "Fibber" format was born in 1935 and it was never headed until television came along.

Survivors, beside Jordan, are a son and a daughter.

ALEXANDER F. VICTOR

Alexander F. Victor, 82, magician, inventor and the man whose dog, "Nipper," was used in the trademark with the phrase, "His Master's Voice," died March 29 in Monterey, Cal. Born in Sweden, he was still in his teens when in 1895 he began to exhibit crude films in India and other Far Eastern nations.

He came to the U.S. in 1901 as a magician billed as "Great Alexander." Using tricks picked up in the Far East, he built a magic and mind-reading show which toured the U.S.

He also became friendly with Thomas A. Edison because he built some of his stage devices in Edison's laboratories, and this led Victor into inventions on his own. Among his 300 inventions were the first 16m sound film projector and the first sound attachment for 16m cameras.

In 1910 he went into manufacturing on his own as board chairman of the Victor Animatograph Co. and his story was that the Victor Talking Machine was named after him—that's where his dog, "Nipper," came in.

He was one of the first to use motion pictures for educational purposes. During World War II he invented and manufactured special, still-classified devices for both the U.S. and Britain. Only recently he had been working on a device to convert black-and-white tv sets so they could receive color.

He retired to Pebble Beach many years ago. His wife died two years ago.

Beirut's Billing

some striking costumes. The girls do five numbers, one of which is called the Charleston. You can tell it's the Charleston because the four "boys" wear strawhats. It's a fast, slick show, handsomely mounted but it needs a top-drawer star to give it distinction. The food and beverage are good and served with a Continental flair.

The big headliners at the Casino are the Clayton, Jackson & Durante of gambling—roulette, baccarat and tout-va boule. You can lose your money in the beautifully appointed Salle de Jeux. There is one house rule. If you are Lebanese you must present affidavits testifying to an annual income of at least $15,000 and other substances stashed away for a rainy day. The rest of the world can wander in, lose it and thumb its way home.

The international set hasn't moved over here as yet, but there is a big play from well heeled Mid-Easterners and Southern Europeans. Maybe they aren't top drawer, but their loot is.

Niteries and Italo Bands

Most of the rest of the night spots are concentrated along the waterfront and the streets leading from it and the alleys off them. These range from small eating and drinking places to cafes and cabarets. Some are Arabic, more are "western" and some are both. Food and drink generally are good and reasonable. There are "clubs" lined up like soldiers with the usual names, the 222, the Stork, the Ace, the Keyhole etc. As with the rest of the Mid-East, the dance combos are predominately Italian, and good. They play all the European hits and American standards and older show tunes, with all the members of the combo making choral effects to back up vocal and instrumental solos. As noted, they're all good—but they all sound alike, even the vocalists. Consequently there is no dance combo with a style that makes it a real draw.

In addition to the playboys and playgirls of the Eastern world, there's another source of the root-of-all-evil—the oil drilling companies' personnel, mostly drillers from Saudi Arabia and points east. Theirs is a tough buck, even if good, so tough that they get a week or so every two months, in addition to annual leave, and they hit town like the cowpokes used to hit Dodge City.

In making its bid as an international playground as well as business centre, Beirut has a lot to offer including beautiful beaches complete with bikinis (some of them sheer, and, as Irene Franklin used to sing, "When that stuff gets wet!"). An hour's drive and you can ski in winter; at the famous Cedars of Lebanon.

During the summer in the spectacular ruins of the ancient amphitheatre at Baalbeck, something to see for itself alone, is the Festival International de Baalbeck which more than rivals Tanglewood. The 1961 season will present the Comedie Francaise, Opera de Chambre de Milan, Arabic Folklore, the 94 piece Halle Orchestra under the baton of Sir John Barbirolli and the Royal Ballet. During the winter season the Theatre du Liban housed plays by Marcel Achard and Francoise Sagan, among others, and presented stars of the calibre of Claude Dauphin, Gaby Sylvia and Dalida (Italian and French film star).

So you can wheel and deal in the Hong Kong of the Mid-East or you can play in the Monte Carlo of the Mid-East, or you can do both.

World Boxoffice: $3-Billion

Toronto, April 18.

Hollywood is big business and Eric Johnston, prexy of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, has the figures to prove it. In a speech here last week before the Empire Club of Canada, Johnston eschewed talking about the "glamor of movies" to point up the tremendous investment in films as a business. "Glamor," he said, is "merely the cosmetics" of the business.

Some of the facts:

Of the $3,000,000,000 annual worldwide boxoffice, U. S. films earn about $2,000,000,000. Of the average weekly attendance rate of 250,000,000 admissions, 45,000,000 are recorded in the U. S. and 2,500,000 in Canada.

As of January, 1961 there were 154,852 theatres around the world, about 35,000 more than five years ago.

Of the Commerce Department's estimate that U.S. "service industries" bring back to this country about $330,000,000 from abroad annually, motion pictures account for $225,000,000. And, according to Johnston, that $225,000,000 represents only about 30% of the gross receipts abroad for U. S. motion pictures, leaving about 70% in foreign lands to create jobs and stimulate business there.

"Clearly," said the MPAA topper, "U. S. motion pictures bring more than entertainment into these countries."

Who's Busiest Clubdater in Show Biz? Trick Shot Golf Artist Claims He Is

By JOHN QUINN

Kansas City, April 18.

Title of the busiest clubdater in show biz is claimed by Paul Hahn, trick shot golf artist. Here for a date at the new Brookridge Golf & Country Club, he revealed he plays an average of 250 one-nighters, mostly in the daytime, in a year. Now in his 12th season, he has piled up nearly 3,000 dates, playing six days most weeks.

Keeping the Brookridge appearance more than aptly illustrates how some of his dates are piled up. Leaving Dallas for Kansas City, he cracked up his new Comanche 250 when it edged off the runway before getting out of the airport. Transferring to commercial, he found one of the heaviest snowfalls of the season in progress when he arrived here.

Although the weather held the crowd to a minimum, Hahn gave his usual clinic and shotmaking exhibition indoors, skipping the outdoors trick shots, but including a special teaching session for Guy Mitchell, who was appearing at

South African Musical About Barney Barnato

The National Theatre Organization has undertaken production of the musical, "The King of Diamonds," which was written by Bob O'Keefe with music by Edgar Adeler. Harry Oppenheimer, chairman of De Beers Consolidated Mines, has guaranteed financial backing.

The story centres on the fabulous Barney Barnato who, at the age of 20, was a poor East End boy, and at 23 was So. Africa's first diamond millionaire. He was later made a life governor of De Beers.

BOB MOSES' VIEW ON 'HONKY' AURA

By ABEL GREEN

Robert Moses, president of the N.Y. World's Fair 1964-1965, states he has no objection to entertainment but just doesn't want a "midway."

Showmen and concessionaires alike have targeted Moses for what they consider his unrealistic attitude about mass come-on, especially after dark. Some of the barbs have been sharp, including an obvious play on "Grandpa" Moses to which he takes vocal exception.

A preview of the Fair's model, its plans, concept, financial underwriting and all that goes with it, certainly impresses the beholder. Despite his record as a civic servant, Moses abhors being called "dedicated" or a "do-gooder" but does insist on "proper" values.

He points to his long record of rehabilitating Coney Island and Far Rockaway—"not too long ago there were bordellos underneath the boardwalks"—and of course points with justifiable pride to Jones Beach as "never having been accused of lacking in fun."

The show business aspects of the fair are very much on Moses' agenda even if, from what he calls "the Broadway view," it doesn't meet with general approval.

"There will be plenty of entertainment in our international zone,

'Carnival' Heads For Fast Mop-Up

"Carnival," having already repaid its backers $50,000 of their $250,000 investment, is expected to recoup the balance of its nut by the end of June. The musical has been a hot ticket since opening on Broadway last Thursday night (13) and the projected rapid recovery of its comparatively modest capitalization is based on anticipated sellout business for at least the next 10-11 weeks.

It cost about $200,000, considering operating income from a profitable four-and-a-half-week hinterland tryout, to open the David Merrick production at the Imperial Theatre, N. Y. The Anna Maria Alberghetti-starrer, based on the film, "Lili," played to a sellout $48,028 in four performances and two previews last week.

The potential capacity at the house for a regular eight-performance week is around $65,000. It's figured the operating profit on that take will run from $18,000-$20,000. At that rate it would take the show, including the current stanza, 10-11 weeks to move into the black, since the deficit at pres-

No B.O. Zip in 'Wishy-Washy' Reviews, Producers' Squawk Vs. B'way Critics

By HOBE MORRISON

It's apparently open season again on the New York drama critics. Broadway producer David Merrick is leading the latest campaign, with at least token support from several other legit managements.

At Merrick's suggestion, the League of N.Y. Theatres has formed a committee, ostensibly to explore possible means of getting the critics to write more boxoffice-spurring reviews. What a League official carefully discounted but a board member confirmed, however, is that the group's main objective is to figure out "what to do about Howard Taubman." The latter is the N.Y. Times reviewer, new on the assignment this season.

On his own, meanwhile, Merrick last week took reprisal action against two other critics. He appealed to William Shawn, editor of the New Yorker magazine, to assign someone other than John McCarten, the regular reviewer, to cover the opening last Thursday night (13) of "Carnival." He also refused to admit Casper Citron, who does opening night capsule reviews over WNTA-TV, New York, to the "Carnival" premiere.

Attending a League meeting for the first time in several months, Merrick reportedly urged that the Paul Raymond, owner of Raymond Revuebar, one of the top Soho club stripperies, was found guilty of keeping a disorderly house between Aug. 31 and Sept. 17 of last year. He was fined $14,000 and $1,470 costs.

Raymond, who was charged under his real name of Geoffrey Anthony Quinn, had maintained that the acts staged at his revue were not obscene. He claimed that among his 45,000 members were many professional, business and society people. Three of the performers observed by the police gave evidence for the defense.

TV Now in 62 Nations O'seas; 43,000,000 Sets

Washington, April 18.

The global story of television outside the U. S. and Canada in a decade capsules like this: 1,000,000 sets in use in 1951; 43,000,000 in use today.

In the same 10-year span, the number of transmitting stations went from 28 to 1,488.

Not counted in the totals are U. S., its territories, Canada or Yank overseas military figures.

U. S. Information Agency, making this report, said 62 countries overseas today have tv. Six of them were newcomers in 1960. The report revealed steady expansion in Western Europe, the Far East and Latin America, with slower progress in the Near and Middle East and South Asia, with Africa taking the first steps.

Cuban tv, according to the report, has established "close ties" with all Communist bloc countries with arrangements for the exchange of tv programs. The Cuban government has taken over all tv on the island.

During the decade, sets in use in Communist bloc countries increased 40%, from 5,294,000 to 7,407,000, and the number of transmitting stations also climbed 40%, from 189 to 264.

Availability of tv was much greater in non-bloc nations, although the 10-year growth was by a smaller percentage. Sets in use in non-bloc countries went up 33%, from 26,796,000 to 35,535,000 (about seven times as many as Red nations have), and transmit-

'CBS Reports' to Dissect Atlanta Pix Censorship; Case History of 'Sunday'

A full-hour telecast detailing how "Never On Sunday" got banned in Atlanta, including footage of the Atlanta censors reaching their decisions, is scheduled for the May 11 "CBS Reports," Hour, titled "Censorship and the Movies," also includes a cross-section of authoritative views on the matter of film censorship.

Story of "Sunday's" battle of Atlanta was filmed at the "Sunday" screening before the Atlanta censor board and at an appeals hearing following their decision to ban the Jules Dassin-United Artists pic because cuts were not made. "CBS Reports" producer Arthur Morse brought a camera crew down to Atlanta to film the faces of five-man board as they screened the pic, then installed cameras in

Old Hoke Bucket Still Dredges; 'Turkish Bath' and 'Uncle Tom' Thrive

"Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath," which in its current off-Broadway revival has outraged some of the New York critics, is still one of the top-drawing properties on the strawhat circuit. In an analysis made of its members by the Council of Resident Stock Theatres to determine the potency of play titles, the 1920 farce is classed as a sure audience-puller on the basis of past performance.

The survey by the organization of smaller summer theatres, some of which occasionally employ stars, is based on the theory that since most of the member groups don't use name performers they therefore have to depend on the strength of a play's title to lure patrons. Gimmicks such as "one side tyme revival" per season are also strong in some spots, according to the analysis, which cites "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as a top-grosser in such places as the Totem Playhouse, Fayetteville, Pa., and the Ledges Playhouse, Grand Ledge, Mich.

It's pointed out that one of the member theatres, which employs stars, did very well with the Dana Andrews package of "Two for the Seesaw" last summer. But, on the other hand, 80% of those members of CORST who produced "Seesaw" with only resident company performers also reported it among the three top-grossing entries of the season. Thus, the title was obviously effective in itself, raising the question of whether the CORST member who booked the Andrews package may have come

Soapy Ballet

Monte Carlo, April 18.

In August the International Sporting Club of Monte Carlo will present a "gala" of ballet. Programs, casts, companies etc. are not definite; the only names are Ludmilla Tscherina as prima ballerina and Salvador Dali as designer.

Latter has warned the former to be prepared to dance on a very slippery stage, as all the scenery will be sculptured out of soap!

Antwerp Synagogue Indoctrination For '10th Man' in Belgium

By JOHN FLORQUIN

Brussels, April 11.

The Belgian National Theatre's production of Paddy Chayefsky's "Tenth Man" preemed here in a French translation by Belgian-born French playwright, Jose Andre Lacour, one week of its London premiere. Author was briefly here during a pre-Brussels tour and said he was impressed by the way in which this difficult play was brought before the footlights under the direction of Jacques Huisman, leader of Belgium's first French-speaking company.

Huisman took his flock of actors to Antwerp where, in a synagogue, they were initiated for days into the true actions of the simple Jewish people they were called to depict. Thus has come to maturity what has not been heralded as an outstanding work of the theatre but as a slice of life neatly cut out of the everyday life of a world alien to the majority of spectators.

'Diversify' in Canada Into Curling Game

Toronto, April 18.

In a new diversification policy, Odeon Theatres (Canada) Ltd. plans to enter the curling biz and has formed a partnership with the Tam-O-Shanter Curling Club of Agincourt, a suburb of Toronto, whereby the Rank interests in Canada will build a $750,000 rink to be known as the Hamilton Curling Club in a shopping centre there. Construction of the 20-sheet curling rink will begin immediately to have it ready to open early in the Fall season.

New Hamilton Curling Club will be a federation of leagues which will rent ice from Odeon and the club, all members of the league belonging to the main Hamilton club and registered with the Ontario Curling Ass'n. Expected that Hamilton club will cater to 4,000-5,000 curlers weekly.

LOGISTICS OF PRESS-TV COVERAGE OF EICHMANN

By JOSEPH LAPID

Jerusalem, April 18.

The trial of Adolf Eichmann, which resumed here yesterday (Mon.) after a two-day recess, has 99 correspondents representing the American press, including tv and radio. West Germany is next, numerically, with 51 newsmen. Every country behind the Iron Curtain has sent a few scribes and even Japanese journalists are on hand.

From the moment of arrival at Lydda airport, foreign writers, radio-tv commentators and photographers felt the guiding hand of the Israeli public information office. The newly-arrived reporter was handed an identification card which permits him to enter the courtroom. He was aided in exchanging his currency and was directed to a Jerusalem hotel where reservations were made for him.

Meantime, the volume of copy pounded out by the press corps is being transmitted by a special ra-

Columbia U.'s Arts Steps On No Toes At Lincoln Site

Columbia University's recent booklet on its future planning as respects new buildings, faculty increments and general facing up to its tomorrows includes a section on the prospective Arts Center. This is the project which has for some time engaged the attention of Davidson Taylor, ex-CBS and ex-NBC, both, vice president.

While publishing television and other arts are to come under the Center and there is reference to "theatres and rehearsal rooms" the creative experimentation of the future structure will be "particularly in opera and drama."

Reference is made to a carefully planned avoidance of duplication between Columbia's Art Center and the Lincoln Center of Performing Arts.

Some millions of dollars more must be collected before the Arts Center can be built on its earmarked Morningside Heights site.

Portias' 'Astrea' Awards To Actors Making Justice Look Like a Winner

Oscar, Emmy, et al., now must make room for another trophy, this being named "Astrea" and to be handed out by the National Assn. of Women Lawyers. Recipients are to be film and television actors cited for meritorious performances in roles upholding law and justice.

Awards will be presented April 30 at a luncheon at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles. A special award for an outstanding role against Communism will go to Barbara Stanwyck for one of her teleplays on the "Barbara Stanwyck Show" series.

"Astrea," from Greek mythology, is the name given the Statue of Justice.

Harpo Speaks Mouthful

Arthur Marx wrote about his father; Groucho wrote about "Groucho and Me!"; Kyle Crichton wrote about all the Marx Bros. in an equally entertaining biog, and now "Harpo Speaks!" This book is almost 500 pages, illustrated by Susan (Mrs. Harpo) Marx and sundry shots from legit to MGM and other days. Above all it is illustrated by wit and humor and camaraderie that point up (1) Harpo must have had—still has—the most fun out of life, and (2) that somehow those glittering days of the Algonquin Round Table are now history, probably never to be recaptured within the days

Calls Bernays a 'Professional Nephew'

Playwright Henry Denker Says He Avoided, Did Not Court, Public Relations Counsel

By HENRY DENKER

Last week VARIETY ran a long contentious article by Edward Bernays about my play, "A Far Country." I do not intend to enter into a long point-by-point exposure of all the mis-statements contained in the "article" because that would take more time and space than Bernays carpings deserve. But I think your readers are entitled to at least some clarification.

Some years ago I began intensive research on the life and work of Sigmund Freud, studying not only his own writings but numerous biographies and scientific works written by both his friends and his critics.

After absorbing all this material and making the selection of incident, story line and characters that is an important part of the dramatist's work, I began to write a play which aspired to bring to the stage certain dramatic and revealing events in Freud's personal and professional life. The ultimate aim was to create a play which would be an exciting balance of history, drama, science and humanity.

At various times in the development of the script, I submitted it to psychoanalysts who had known Freud personally. Adopting those of their suggestions which I felt to be of help, I reshaped the play.

Literal 'Bump'

Minneapolis, April 18.

Stripteaser Joan Sheldon ended her dance at Augie's bar with a bump all right, but not a single patron yelled for more. The bump was on her head.

Finishing her first night on the job, Miss Sheldon fell off the bistro's postage stamp-size stage and landed on her noggin. According to bar owner Augie Ratner, the performer "misjudged her distance at the climax of her number."

Dressed in hose, shoes, G-string and net bra, the stripper was rushed to a hospital where her condition is fair.

Victor Borge Sole Act At Hall Syndicate Party For ASNE in Washington

Washington, April 18.

Lots of the laughter will come from VIPs when Victor Borge sits down to play Saturday (22).

The comedian pianist will be the only act for the annual Hall Syndicate party here in honor of the American Society of Newspaper Editors. The bash, starting shortly before midnight, is the last event programmed yearly for the editors' national convention. Turner Catledge, of the N. Y. Times, is ASNE prexy.

Numerous high Government officials, diplomats from overseas and Washington society turn out for the syndicate's party, with Hall v.p. Ira Emerich in active charge of the show, aided by a Hall columnist, Earl Wilson. Bob Hall, syndicate prez, is host.

A one act policy was instituted two years ago with Carol Channing. Last year, Gordon & Sheila MacRae did the show. In previous years, numerous stars have performed, with several acts on each bill.

The Amsterdam (Holland) hotel will have 300 rooms; the London Hilton, on Park Lane overlooking Hyde Park, will be 27-stories tall, 530 rooms.

FINAL FILM TABOO: THE HOMO

For Par 20 Yearly About Right, Per Always—Conservative Balaban

Barney Balaban, talking privately to a VARIETY reporter in New York the past week, conveyed the attitude of a film company executive confident of what the future might hold. He's a conservative by nature, never having been imbued with the rah-rah, and often unrealistic, enthusiasm that springs eternally from the professional optimists of the trade.

The president of Paramount would like to see more pictures but only those of quality. Par apparently will continue at the 20-a-year pace, production-wise, but says Balaban, every studio would be happy with added starters on the obvious condition that the right kind of properties can be come upon.

It's a matter of continuing policy at Par that any film-maker with an acceptable package will be greeted like an old friend.

Company, said Balaban, is theatrically-minded, as it always has been, but will refrain from any commitment to numbers. By the same token the board of directors desists from establishing production budgets for, say, a full year's program. As Balaban explains it, each picture is measured on its own individual merits. Further, following the scheduling of extensive studio programs, it's long been established that a couple or more pictures will have to be dropped and, perhaps, others entered on the slate.

There are the uncertainties in production, of course, and in line with this the talk around the trade that Marlon Brando's "One-Eyed Jacks," at a cost of $6,000,000, got out of fiscal hand; Balaban relates that the Par brass feel the western nonetheless will do all right.

Impression given by Balaban is that the price is right for any given

Take A Wire—

Hollywood, April 18.

Hollywood, which usually hops on hot headlines within hours, waited a full day to figure out a tie to feat of the Soviet astronaut, Major Yuri Gagarin. But, at least, American-International tub-trumper Milton Moritz kept the tradition alive. He cabled the Russian (care of USSR Embassy in Washington) inviting him to attend the Hollywood premiere of filmization of Jules Verne's "Master of the World," May 31.

The tie-in (?) Moritz had read that Gagarin admires Verne's works.

Cable sent by Moritz was signed by James H. Nicholson, prexy of American International.

3 23-Year Olds' 2d Pic in Miami

"Pity Me Not," currently shooting in color in Miami Beach, is the second feature from Peter Gayte, Saul Swimmer and Tony Anthony, partnered as P.M.N. Productions. Each is age 23, and conceivably, from that standpoint, the youngest producing outfit extant in the American feature biz.

Fellows started two years ago with the short, "Boy Who Owned a Melephant," which copped a Venice fest prize and is still in release via Universal. Last year they bowed with a feature, "Force of Impulse," which they're distributing themselves.

Because of their own callow age, triumvirate claims to have better insight to youthful taste, which they state doesn't crave heapings of sex, horror, dope and similar sordid elements. Accordingly, "Pity," which is aimed for the youngsters, is said to bypass the unwholesome.

This intelligence, of course, may jolt older hands at serving films for the youth market.

$8.50 Jump for U Shares Sans Any Special Reason

In the biggest single day's upped-price activity in a motion picture stock in years, Universal common on the New York Stock Exchange last Friday (14) jumped $8.50 per share, closing at a new high of $62.50. But there are no special U deals pending of the type which normally would trigger such a movement.

Explanation from management sources is that earnings are going well and expectedly will continue. Further Wall Street analysts have been recommending U, along with the parent Decca.

Key factor is that there's a "thin market" in U securities. Only about one-fifth of the entire common issue is being traded by the public, the bulk being owned and held by Decca. In line with this it's noted that only 4,500 shares were traded during the day when the stock zoomed. A small number of buying shares has the effect of sending the price considerably up.

Paris, April 18.

STAGE HITS POSE 'GAY' PROBLEM

With the film producers continuing reliance on so-called presold properties, the Broadway legitimate stage isn't helping the motion picture industry's public relations problems by offering a large number of critically acclaimed but highly censorable (by Production Code standards) plays. Making things particularly difficult at the present time is the high incidence of homosexuality in current and recent Broadway offerings. The problem is that this boy-boy gambit is just about the last taboo to be specifically forbidden under Code bylaws ("Sex perversion or any inference of it is forbidden").

The situation was highlighted in New York last week by Geoffrey Shurlock, Code administrator, and his assistant director Jack Vizzard, in town to catch the current Broadway lineup as well as to attend the testimonial dinner for boss Eric Johnston, prexy of the Motion Picture Assn. of America.

Do You See It?

A homo element, it was pointed out, plays a featured, if not starring, role in five of Broadway's better tickets: "The Best Man," "Advise and Consent," "The Devil's Advocate," "Big Fish, Little Fish," and "A Taste of Honey."

It was further pointed out that whereas in the good old days of safe-and-sane romance, perversion was deemed a fit subject only for clinical and/or psychological drama, it's now turning up in political melodrama ("Advise"), political satire ("Best Man"), religious drama ("Advocate") and straight comedy-drama ("Big Fish").

Three of the five currently perverse offerings already have been sold to major company filmmakers. Otto Preminger has "Advise" lined up for production for United Artists, Dore Schary's stage adaptation of "Devil's Advocate" has been acquired by Warners, which backed Schary's "Sunrise at Campobello," and Frank Capra is set to film "Best Man" for UA. As major company pictures, these will all have to get Code approval.

Outside Code

"Taste of Honey," meanwhile, already is before the cameras in Britain, with Walter Reade's Continental Distributing set to handle it this side via a coproduction deal. Since Continental is not an MPAA member, "Taste" isn't bound by the Code, nor will be another forthcoming Continental release, French producer Paul Greaz now-filming adaptation of Arthur Miller's "A View from The Bridge." The latter, it may be remembered, caused some furor on the Broad-

Why cost-accountants gnash their teeth.

Meccoli Gives N.Y. Views Re Venice

Since the future of the film industry throughout the world depends on the artistic freshness and integrity of its product, the annual Venice film festival (Aug. 20-Sept. 3, this year) will continue to highlight and search for the art within the industry, Domenico Meccoli, recently-named Venice fest chief, said in New York last week. Meccoli, a veteran newspaper man and editor of L'Epoca, was en route to Hollywood to attend Monday (17) night's Academy Award ceremonies.

Meccoli's statement about pursuing the art, rather than the commerce, was sponsored by a query as to whether the Venice fest, under his guidance, would make any attempts to become more of a film trade fair. Exec pointed out that the annual film trade fair in Milan (this month) already serves this purpose.

He declined to make any statements about the Cannes fest, held in May each year, except to say that he thought the two did not come too close together. He did say that perhaps Cannes held a psychological advantage over Venice in coming at the beginning of summer, when film people are ready to travel after a long winter of staying at home and attending to business.

He did not know, he said, how

100 Most Useful Employes to Get Annual Incentive Stock Payoff If AB-PT Owners Vote Okay

American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres is in process of offering a new kind of incentive payoff to officers and key employes. It amounts to a bonus for those who have contributed the most to the welfare of the company, expectedly not to number more than 100 persons in each year, and with the amounts of money to be determined laregly by the AB-PT earnings.

The program, already approved by the board and subject to an affirmative vote by stockholders, calls for the establishment of an "Incentive Plan Net Earnings Fund." Placed into this bankbook will be whatever amount exceeds the $9,000,000 mark in pre-tax net earnings and before computing capital gains or losses or non-recurring income. Further, no money goes into the reserve until all preferred stock commitments have been met and cash dividends on the common shares have been paid.

If okayed by stockholders at the corporation's annual meeting on May 16, the plan will go into effect as of the current fiscal (calendar) year. As pegged to corporate earnings, the plan would have meant $552,000 available to the compensation reserve had it been in effect in fiscal 1960.

John A. Coleman, E. Chester Gersten and Walter P. Marshall comprise a committee of AB-PT directors in charge of the plan, and for this work each is receiving $10,000 a year. None of the three is eligible to participate. Other non-officer directors similarly are ineligible. Plan apparently is designed to benefit television personnel particularly.

AB-PT Shares To Number 10,000,000, If Owners Okay

American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres proposes to hike its common stock issue from 5,000,000 to 10,000,000 shares, and will seek approval from holders at its May 16 annual meeting.

Company thinks it advisable to have the additional shares available for "general business and corporate purposes," but has no specific intention regarding the issue at this time.

The holders meet also will be asked to okay an incentive compensation plan for execs and other key personnel. Proxy statements sent out also disclose a new nominee for the board, Jack Hausman. He's prexy of M. Hausman & Sons textile firm.

7 Arts Financing Malle's 'Get-Away-From-It-All' Tale of Job-Weary Yank

A deal is being finalized for Eliot Hyman's Seven Arts to finance French director Louis Malle's upcoming "The Singlehander," tentatively set to start filming next year on locations in N.Y., Azores and North Africa. Preparations await Malle's completion of the new Brigitte Bardot pic, "La Vie Privee," which he'll direct for Metro release starting in late May.

Malle says "Singlehander" is a satire on modern escapism, about N.Y. commuter who "chucks it all," buys a boat and sails Atlantic alone. An American male star will be used.

The director returned to Paris Friday (14) about a week of talks with Metro execs both in New York and on the coast.

Authors League of America Wants Toll Royalties on Gross, Not Producers'%

Authors League of America is one of the organizations concerned with status in the future unfolding of tollvision as a medium. It is adopting the position that royalties must be computed on the total gross payment, not on the producer's share. Thus, in the instance of the upcoming Hartford toll experiment, where Zenith Phonevision's share is 65% and Leland Hayward's 35%, the author's rights, whether for original stage scripts or adaptations of novels, short stories, etc., would be figured on the gross amount involved.

League is particularly concerned lest the royalties granted to reprint books, via hardcover publisher and now the subject of much grievance, shall not be "built into" the pay-see precedents. In this connection, the Authors League is insisting that terms covering Hartford be clearly labelled as "experimental" for three years only and subject to mandatory review and re-negotiation thereafter.

League membership covers legitimate playwrights and novelists and is separate from the Hollywood television writers who have their own organization and ideas. In general, the Authors League speaks for primary material written freelance as against scripts written by "employees" of film video studio.

Script rights covering the three "live" programs so far broadcast by Paramount's Telemeter system in Toronto have not been clarified to the amusement trade in any detail. Comic Bob Newhart, who had special material written for his week on pay-see (one live performance, followed by taped repeats) has certain rights to re-possess his material and is believed to have been separately compensated, partly as entertainer and partly as writer.

In the instance of Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Consul," the literary rights are believed to include one flat fee for the occasion plus a royalty if and when the Telemeter interest sells repeat performance rights to other, not-now-existent facilities. Interestingly, investors in the original Broadway production of 1950 are clamoring for an accounting on the tollvision payment.

Carol Channing's intimate revue, "Show Girl," was picked up live from Manhattan, as was "The Consul" and given one initial week plus several holdover nights via tape on the Toronto pay-see system. Where the writers of her sketches and other material came into the payoff has not been divulged.

The pitch to date for both the current Toronto and the imminent Hartford trial runs has been that at the outset there is a publicity value and auxiliary to it, a residual potential in years ahead. It is hardly a secret that the Authors League of America is nervous about a certain tendency of history to repeat itself, everybody getting immediate protection except the creative writers.

Piper Laurie (Oh That Studio Name!) Tells of Her Travails From 'Slave Contract' to Some 'Real' Acting

"You may be a very good actress, but I can't have anybody with a name like Piper Laurie in this play."

Last week in New York, Piper Laurie, nee Rosetta Jacobs, expressed a tentative hope that perhaps, now, at long last, she has escaped the spectre of the flower-eating ingenue which has haunted her ever since she broke with Universal in 1955. Taking time off from Robert Rossen's "The Hustler," her first film in almost five years, Miss Laurie quoted the statement above as being typical of the kind of reception she had when she removed her Universal Pictures' harem togs and went forth in the world to become an actress.

Because of all the talk about the need for developing new faces, the Laurie tale of the starlet who almost drowned in a sea of carefully manufactured banalities takes on particular significance. On one level it's the story of an industry which persists in wasting and/or not developing its natural resources. And on another, strictly personal level, it's a series of never to be answered questions about what-might-have-been-if.

Anent the latter, Miss Laurie herself says it's useless to speculate on whether or not she would have gotten to where she is today—a reporter would describe her as a "name" and a respected actress—if she had not had the Universal buildup. Nevertheless, with that buildup, she subsequently had to overcome even greater barriers than might face a total unknown. Her studio-given name inspired jokes and a general aroma recalling Baghdad-on-The-Pacific. Still it was her name and the one immediately salable commodity she had when she broke with Universal.

Rugged Going

After that break, as she recalls it, there followed a rugged period in which she turned down a number of but insipid film roles, finally getting a chance to do something more substantial via tv, first on the Robert Montgomery show that she sought to read for a part in an upcoming Broadway play, written by a then-boy genius. He's the one who turned her down—without a reading—making the crack about her name.

That the play eventually went on Broadway to do a quick fold doesn't make her fight against bitterness any easier.

The problem with the kind of "new face" promotion she went through at Universal, she believes, is that if one is working—and she worked almost steadily — one doesn't have time to utilize the facilities of the so-called "talent school" where one might logically be expected to develop his talent. Thus she worked, and made money, and remained a bland new face, barely distinguishable from any number of other actresses. Ironically, the ones who weren't working, got all the benefits which might have been available at the studio school.

Wrong Choices

She also feels that the studios for the most part choose the wrong kind of people to groom for stardom. They look first and foremost for a face that will photograph well, and then attempt to build a pretty personality to go with it. The individualistic oddball is almost never picked up, and even the pretty performer is sat upon almost immediately if he or she threatens to develop a personality that doesn't match some previously successful performer.

The people who scout and work with the new faces must be as "creative" as the talent involved in all the other phases of filmmaking, she says.

In the last year, Miss Laurie's stubborn persistence has begun to pay dividends. She scored a personal success in the off-Broadway production of "Rosemary" and "The Alligators," two short plays by Molly Kazan. Not only was it her professional theatrical debut, but it seems to have gone a long way towards removing the embarrassing connotations which her name formerly brought to mind.

It also led directly to her signing for "The Hustler" by 20th-Fox.

Council For Judaism In Roundrobin to Film-TV Eds Re Eichmann Pix

Refusal of spokesmen for the Zionist viewpoint in the United States to appear on any program with spokesmen for the American Council of Judaism which is anti-Zionist, has created an awkward situation for both networks and stations. Latter have long been reluctant to become "involved" in a dispute as to who is qualified to speak for American Jewry. Resultantly the Council repeatedly complains that its point of view is vetoed or neglected on discussion programs and panels.

Latest episode in which a division arises is the Adolf Eichmann trial. As to this event Bill Gottlieb, the publicity director of the Council for Judaism, has been circularizing not only television editors but film editors and critics.

Gottlieb argues to film reporters as follows:

"Unless there is some kind of balanced reporting, the American people will simply be inundated by Israel-Zionist presentations serving one or another of their national interests. Such an eventuality would be a disservice to Americans of all faiths, who would be deprived of the opportunity to judge the issues in this complicated, emotion-packed trial.

"If you plan to review any of these films on Eichmann, and would like to draw public attention to these, just fill out and return the enclosed card, and we will be happy to send you a specially prepared kit, free, containing background material on the significance for ALL Americans of the Eichmann trial."

BALABAN 'REVEALING' PAR FUTURE JUNE 6

Paramount's continued diversification plans will be revealed by prexy Barney Balaban at the annual stockholders meet slated June 6 at the New York home office. Company's stock has been advancing furiously in the past few weeks and yesterday (10) hit another new high at better than 85, the first time it's reached this figure since Balaban took over presidency from Adolph Zukor 25 years ago. Zukor has been chairman of board since and presently is in Hollywood making his headquarters at Par's Marathon studios.

Various suggestions have been presented as reason behind upsurge in stock, among them being strong product lineup for next six months, recently buy-in of 50% in Talent Associates (David Susskind-Al Levy), progress in Telemeter demonstrations and potential therefrom once tollvision becomes national pastime, improvements in earnings here and in foreign countries and future sales of post 1948 films to teevee.

Fred Goldberg Inherits Roger Lewis' UA Job; Gabe Summer as Aide

With Fred Goldberg officially named United Artists executive director of ad-pub-exploitation, Gabe Sumner has been moved up to post of exec assistant to Goldberg.

Goldberg, who replaces Roger H. Lewis, has been serving as ad-pub-exploitation director. Sumner joined UA last November as publicity manager. Lewis, as announced earlier, is mulling indie production offers.

Before joining UA as Lewis' exec assistant in 1958, Goldberg was head of the New York office of Blowitz & Maskell. He's also served with Condon & Norton, I.F.E. Releasing, RKO Pictures and Paramount. Sumner also is a Par alumnus and at the time he joined UA was a member of the indie publicity organization, Sumner & Friedkin.

It's getting so you need a score card to keep up with United Artists appointments and executive titles.

Mort Nathanson, who's been UA's international ad-pub director since 1959, switches back to the domestic side with his new appointment as national publicity director. Latest shuffle Monday (17) follows last week's appointment of Sumner, formerly publicity manager, to post of exec assistant to Goldberg, new exec director of ad-pub and exploitation.

It's assumed that Nathanson will be taking over duties previously performed by Sumner, though Sumner was simply publicity manager in post and title, incidentally, that Nathanson held from 1952-59 and Nathanson newest title is national publicity director.

Canada's Largest; Start 'The Mask' At 500G Budget

Ottawa, April 18.

Casting is completed on Taylor-Roffman's 3-D feature "The Mask," about to be produced and directed by Julian Roffman at 200-acre International Film Studios in Toronto.. Budget is $500,000, almost certainly biggest yet for a Canadian-financed film, and company later plans a $1,000,000 budget on "Execution."

Two N.Y. actors in "Mask" are Paul Stevens, who was in "Exodus," and Charlotte Nevins, who was in "The Wall" on Broadway. Included also are Bill Walker, vet emcee of CBC-TV's weekly quiz "Live A Borrowed Life," and Anne Collings, who was in the Roffman-produced beatnik film "Bloody Brood," just cleared of U.S. showing. Remainder of cast: Martin Lavut, from Toronto production of "The Connection," Norman Ettlinger, Leo Leyden, Steven Appleby, Rudy Linschoten, Alfie Scopp and Paul Elsom. Last three will be in the StereOvision fantasy sequences, being choreographed by CBC-TV dance director Don Gillies. StereOvision is a process developed by Meridian Films, Toronto, of which Roffman is v.p., as he is of T-R.

Herbert S. Alpert of Meridian is director of photography, with Herman Townsley and James Gordon—both from Hollywood—creating and filming special effects. David Ballou of N.Y. (who also worked on "Bloody Brood") is supervising art director. William Owens of Hollywood is production manager and Charles Smith from U.K. is StereOvision technician.

Stripper Vs. Nuyen

Los Angeles, April 18.

Stripper Beverly Hills is asking $100,000 damages from actress France Nuyen for asserted brain injuries she received in an auto accident March 20.

In action filed in Superior Court, peeler claims that a sports car driven by Miss Nuyen smashed into an auto driven by former's husband, William Powers, in which the performer was a passenger returning home from her Largo restaurant engagement. In addition to damages asked, performer claims loss of earnings, for which she wants compensation.

Nothing was sacred with Bob Hope as he emceed the Academy Awards television program Monday (17) night. He cracked about the fine hand of pressagents in the Oscar derby itself, the campaigning, the many ladies of the night now on the screen plus the skid row moral tone of "modern" productions.

'Priest' for Cannes

United Artists' "Hoodlum Priest" has been picked as one of two official American entries at the Cannes Film Fest, May 3-16.

Other, and previously announced, is Col's "Raisin in the Sun." Another Yank pic, "Exodus," will open the fest, but as an out-of-competition entrant.

Bardot True Life Gets Siegel Okay

Hollywood, April 18.

"Bardot's Private Life," with story switch to make it an embellished biography, has been okayed by MGM studio chief Sol C. Siegel for the Brigitte Bardot starrer formerly planned as a filmization of Noel Coward's comedy, "Private Lives." Producer Jacques Bar, here for a week of confabs with studio execs on this and other projects, reveals that the story will include much of the star's romantic life, with all reference to Coward's original storyline dropped.

Film starts shooting end of next month as one of eight scheduled on Bar's new exclusive two-year pact with the studio. Director Louis Malle, here to get Siegel's go-ahead, has returned to France to complete scripting. Simone Simone costars, playing Bardot's mother, and one sequence will have Orson Welles appearing in one of his actual Spoleto Festival performances.

"Life" is the first to go under the Cipra banner formed by Bar and the studio, with latter holding 49% of this company and producer controlling with 51%. Christine Gouge Renee, who holds Bardot's contract, also has a piece of the Bar interest in "Life" and functions as exec. producer.

Bar pact, signed last October, includes three films made under his Cite Films Co., among them the Japan-filmed "Bridge to the Sun," Carroll Baker-James Shigeta starrer directed by Etienne Perrier, which is slated for July release; "The President," recently completed, and "The Counterfeiters," now in production. Latter two star Jean Gabin, who is under exclusive contract to Bar until the end of '62, and were shot in France.

Upcoming slate includes "Magnet of Doom," Alain Delon-Romy Schneider starrer, Jean Valere, director, with a July starting date; "Swordsman of Sienna," English-language film starring Stewart Granger and Stanley Baker, Leslie Norman directing, August; "Rififi in Tokyo," new version of "Rififi" to be shot with Tokyo backgrounds, and an unselected new story to star Gabin, both set for October. Other projects in the works are "The Man in the Roles Royce," submitted to Cary Grant and Carroll Baker, a comedy version of "Romeo and Juliet" to co-star Gabin and Fernandel, and another Stewart Granger vehicle. All would be released worldwide by MGM.

NEW PROD.'S VAULT VALUES

Metro's Smiling Sequel to Squalls Continue; May Again Be Top Firm

By GENE ARNEEL

Joseph R. Vogel, president of Metro, had another success story to spin to stockholders this past week. Earnings for the second quarter of this year more than doubled the net take for the corresponding period last year. And in other fields there was more progress.

Vogel, in his report to stockholders, characteristically refrained from the high-sounding adjectives anent the new release of "Gone With the Wind." So far around, he said, "it is up to expectations." He didn't identify the source of the so-called expectations, but the fact of the matter is that "Wind" this time out might just exceed all past re-runs of the David O. Selznick productions. Excepting advertising and print costs the income is pre-tax profit and the rental gross, domestic alone, ought to be over $8,000,000.

Vogel offers as "an unusual achievement" the fact that two major productions are almost ready at the same time. The two are expensive and with them are high hopes in the current market, which sees the epics going higher and higher. "Mutiny on the Bounty" is nearly completed and "The Four Horsemen of the Acopalypse" is finished. Further, final editing on Samuel Bronston's "King of Kings" will be wound up this month and the Biblical entry will be marketed this fall. Then there's the continuing "Ben-Hur."

This story, far, might require

Metro Fiscal Mirror

Metro had earnings of $6,684,000 for the two quarters ended March 16, equal to $2.65 per common share, the company reported this week. This represented a 78% gain over the first half of fiscal 1960 when the profit was $3,739,000, or $1.47 per share.

M-G at the end of the new period had 2,521,529 common shares outstanding, compared with 2,539,988 the year previous.

Striking gain was shown in the second quarter of the current fiscal year (December through February) with earnings of $1.78 per share, against 76c per share for the corresponding period of fiscal year 1960.

Lovely Part Of Metro Boost: It's From the Films

The major contributor to Metro's new fiscal climb is the theatrical motion picture. Breakdown on earnings for the 28 weeks ended last March 16 shows that film production and distribution brought net income of $8,196,000, or almost six times over the $1,393,000 derived from this source for the corresponding period of a year ago.

Here again, then, is a statistical sumup proving that the road to riches for a film company can be what the film companies, prior to diversification, set out to prove in the first place.

Television income for the same new period was $5,911,000, up from last year's $5,402,000. Records and music dropped from 1960's $1,469,000 a year ago to $284,000.

M-G inventories went up to $71,650,000 as of last March 16, from $58,300,000 this time a year ago.

ACADEMY 'SPECIALS'

Lesser, Cooper, Laurel, Hayley Mills Singled Out

Hollywood, April 18.

Sol Lesser, film producer, has been named to receive the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences, and three other film figures also will be kudosed with Honorary Awards at upcoming April 17 33d annual Academy Awards show.

Gary Cooper was voted an Honorary Award for "his many memorable screen performances, as well as the favorable international recognition he, as an individual, has gained for the motion picture industry."

Stan Laurel: "For creative pioneering in the field of cinema comedy."

Hayley Mills: "For the most outstanding juvenile performance during the Awards year," for "Pollyanna."

United Artists' Quality of Mercy For L'il Houses

Small-grossing film houses, feeling the pinch more so in the present downbeat economy, are promised relief—somewhat a la JFK's "depressed areas" rescue efforts—from United Artists in the form of "fair," flat rentals. Further, in non-competitive situations, UA says it will sell its product in multiples at one crack to save the distrib and theatres time, manpower and expense.

UA's declaration of support for the small houses, which follows negotiations with representatives from the American Congress of Exhibitors, was disclosed over the weekend. But actually, according to UA prexy Arthur Krim, the policy has been in effect for "some months." C. of E., meanwhile, is dickering with other majors to follow the UA lead.

The project, to be sure, doesn't embrace the big budget product, whether grind or hard-ticket. But the feeling on both sides, reportedly, is that the policy can embrace the preponderance of UA release.

Small-grossing houses are defined, for purposes of the plan, as those taking in less than $1,000 a week. UA makes it clear that situations doing better needn't apply. Obviously, a lot of marginal situations grossing much better than $1,000 would also relish the scheme. But it's one thing to be marginal, another to be small.

Incidentally, the announcement said UA favors, in principle, the cooperative saturation ad-promo campaigns stipulated in the Marcus plan where multiple regional release is involved, and presumably the UA ad-pub department intends to pursue it in conjunction with the "relief" plan whenever possible.

NEW JAPANESE SCI-FI ITEM GOES COLUMBIA

Columbia, which earned a nice return last year with its Japanese-made "Battle in Outer Space," has picked up another Toho sci-fi feature, "Mothrea," according to Goro Uzaki, Toho's managing director in New York.

The new deal was made while the film was in production. "Mothrea," as title might indicate, has to do with a giant moth which lays waste goodly portions of New York and San Francisco. In the interests of international neighborliness, Toho hadn't intended to destroy the two U. S. cities as per original screenplay, but Col toppers suggested the change to add exploitable selling points for American audiences.

AIP AUDITS EACH OF 84 AT $4,000

About the only company in Hollywood today which isn't contemplating a television syndication sale of its post-1948 films is American International Pictures. (AIP was formed in 1954 and thus obviously doesn't have any pre-1948s to worry about.)

In New York last week on one of his frequent trips from his Hollywood base, AIP prexy James H. Nicholson reported that the company has 84 pix in its feature library, films which have been completely played off in the domestic market and thus might be considered eligible for leasing to the small screen interests.

While there has been interest by tv people in the AIP product, Nicholson said the films were presently much more valuable to the company as collateral on bank loans necessary for the financing of new product. Each of the 84 pix has been amortized down to a book value of $4,000. The only AIP films thus far to reach tv have been those whose rights reverted to the original producer after the theatrical playoff.

Nicholson was in town for exhibitor screenings of his first officially designated "personally produced" production. Jules Verne's "Master of the World," due for general release in July. Actually Nicholson admits to having produced one of AIP's early teenage epics, but he prefers to forget it.

AIP enjoyed its best year to date in 1960, Nicholson reported, with business up 52% over 1959, though, because it's a privately held company, he declined to talk in actual figures. Last year was particularly successful, he said, in that the company did not have one film which lost money, plus a couple of films that paid off extremely handsomely—"Goliath and the Barbarians" and "Fall of the House of Usher."

Prexy estimates that the second "Goliath" pic—"Goliath and the Dragon" will do about 50% of the first pic, which, as of March this year, had taken in $1,721,185 domestically. That is just about what AIP figured "Dragon" doing, Nicholson said, adding that he understood that the second "Hercules" pic released by Joe Levine had fared in about the same ratio to the first "Herc" picture.

Company's foreign business is continuing to grow, with a huge jump registered in 1960 because it was the first full year that AIP product was getting global release. Also contributing to the 300% rise in foreign earnings was the fact that the company had a big backlog in product that hadn't as yet reached the overseas markets.

Nicholson also reported that he's bought the remake rights to Fritz Lang's silent film classic of the twenties, "Metropolis," which AIP hopes to do as a coproduction in Germany either late this year or next. He's talked to Lang about directing the new pic, but the director has declined, understandably, says Nicholson, on the grounds that the new version would certainly be compared with the old, and probably in an unflattering way, no matter how good he could make it.

IATSE Overtime Rate, $12 an Hour, May Delay Toronto Sunday Films

Toronto, April 18.

Because of union wage dispute, holdup of Sunday movies in Toronto faces a stumbling block unless chains and indies agree with the Toronto local of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees for an overtime rate of $12 an hour, this double the present contractual overtime rate. Lined up solidly in opposition are Famous Players, Odeon, Loew and Twentieth Century theatres, plus major independents.

With present IATSE contract calling for overtime pay of $6 an hour, basic pay of most projectionists for a 22-hour week is $103.08 a week or $4.70 an hour. With two projectionists per booth, the proposed Sunday double-time rate would be about $66 each. Sunday movies in Toronto are skedded for May 7 by the chains and major independents, with the present IATSE contract expiring at midnight, Aug. 31.

Vogel Sells Off Old MGM Shares, Unintentionally Causing a Slump; New 30,000-Share Option Pends

Levine's Liz 'Ringer'

Dallas, April 18.

Joe Levine, head of Embassy Productions, which is releasing three films through Metro, interrupted his Dallas visit long enough to sign the Theatre Center's Mary Shipp to a picture contract.

A "ringer" for Elizabeth Taylor, she will be given a role in "Boy's Night Out," Levine's first indie film to be made in Hollywood.

Loew's Theatres Dividends May Come In 18 Mos.

Loew's Theatres, which had earnings of $1.04 per share last year and 37c for the first half of 1961, but which has been paying no dividends to stockholders, likely will go on a divvy basis of $1 annually within the next year to 18 months, Laurence A. Tisch, president of the corporation, stated this week. "With earnings continuing as they are we owe it to our stockholders to declare dividends," he says.

Company last year, he noted, had depreciation of $1.15 per share and this is running higher now.

Tisch, who with his family owns 25% of the Loew's stock, and his brother Preston (Bob) Tisch restressed that the outfit is in the theatre business to stay, that while there will be expansion in the hotel field, including a new inn in San Juan, Puerto Rico, there also will be additions to the exhibition circuit.

In addition to previously-announced new theatres now in the blueprint stage, Loew's execs are now scouting New York's Nassau and Suffolk counties as well as other areas around the country for sites.

Tisch freres underlined they're interested only in firstrun, limited-seat houses which can be operated economically and provide longer runs and greater rentals for the distributors. The days of the big "palaces" long since have been over, commented Bob Tisch.

20TH DIRECTORS SKED SPECIAL BOARD MEET

Twentieth-Fox's board of directors will meet in New York Thursday (20) at a special session which, insiders indicate, could turn out to have important consequences. Originally no board meeting was scheduled until May 10.

Those close to the scene are keeping extremely mum, indicating that possible action at the meeting could have far-reaching repercussions within the company.

Funny thing happened to Metro stock while Joseph R. Vogel was on his way to lunch last Thursday (13). The common issue, which has been robust of late, fell $4.50 in price in the first couple of hours of trading.

This sudden downslide caused concern among the downtown brokers but they were relieved shortly as Vogel, at about noontime, provided the explanation.

The New York Stock Exchange on Wednesday sent out its report on insider transactions. These included president Vogel's sale of 14,800 shares of the M-G common, leaving him with only 578 shares. This was printed Thursday morning in the Wall St. Journal, N. Y. Times, etc. The apparent bearishness on Vogel's part set off the investor timidity and thus the drop in quotation.

But the prez wasn't selling out, at all. The 14,800 shares he disposed of had come to him via options from the old Loew's Inc., involved margin buying and borrowing. They had to be dropped so that Vogel would be free to exercise options for 30,000 shares in M-G. He sold the old stock at about $53 per share in order to wipe out past obligations. He can exercise the options on the new stock beginning six months from the date of sale of the old stock, and at the rate of 6,000 a year for five years.

New option price, incidentally, is $30.25 per share; issue is now at the $66 trading level.

Footnote is that the M-G common recovered after Vogel set the record straight. Closed the day off only 25c per share.

Examiner Warns Frisco Theatres On Pic Ad Copy

San Francisco, April 18.

Hearst's morning Examiner will keep a much closer check on film advertising from now on. In a letter sent to all theatre advertisers, ad director Arthur L. Gilbert justified this closer scrutiny by indicating the paper has been getting a heavy volume of complaints about film ads. Text of the letter:

"We have come to the conclusion that it is necessary to effect a closer supervision over the advertising appearing on our drama pages. The number and the seriousness of the complaints we receive from readers require this. Effective at once we are establishing the following regulations:

"Any advertising appearing in our first edition which we find in poor taste will be eliminated for all later editions with no other warning to the theatre than this announcement.

"Advertising which any theatre believes we might have to withdraw may be submitted in advance for a ruling.

"Obviously, we are not in any way attempting to hamper theatres in the promotion of their product. We do, however, mean to see that the character of the Examiner is properly reflected to its readers.

"Your cooperation will be very much appreciated."

Examiner's crackdown comes at a time when it is locked in a circulation battle with the morning Chronicle with each daily's circulation running around 280,000.

Leadership in choice city circulation—which downtown firstruns particularly want—belongs to the afternoon News-Call Bulletin, however, which shows 134,000 in that category to the Examiner's 110,000 and the Chronicle's 80,000-plus. Neither the News-Call nor the Chronicle has indicated they will follow the Examiner's lead on film ads.

Atlantis, The Lost Continent
COLOR

Lesser fantasy effort by George Pal. Potentially fascinating subject sacrificed to the melodramatic gods. But sufficiently expoitable to make a presentable b.o. showing.

Metro release of George Pal production, directed by Pal. Screenplay, Daniel Mainwaring, based on play by Sir Gerald Hargreaves; camera (Metrocolor), Harold E. Wellman; editor, Ben Lewis; art directors, George W. Davis, William Ferrari; music, Russell Garcia; special effects, A. Arnold Gillespie, Lee LeBlanc, Robert R. Hoag; assistant director, Ridgway Callow. Reviewed at the studio, April 12, '61. Running time, 91 MINS.

Demetrios	Anthony Hall
Antillia	Joyce Taylor
Senoy	Frank de Kova
Zaren	John Dall
Xandros	Jay Novello
King Krona	Edgar Stehli
Azor	Edward Platt
Petros	Wolfe Barzell
Sargeon	Harry Kroeger
Andes	Buck Maffei

Through proper exploitation, curiosity inspired by the subject and, to a certain extent, producer George Pal's reputation as a science-fantasy specialist, Metro's "Atlantis, The Lost Continent" should drum up fairly good business. But, though cinematically skillful, the film as a whole is strictly lower-grade Pal; far inferior, for example, to his outstanding production of a year ago, "The Time Machine."

After establishing legendary significance via an arresting prolog in which the basis for age-old suspicion of the existence of a lost continental cultural link in the middle of the Atlantic is discussed, scenarist Daniel Mainwaring promptly proceeds to ignore the more compelling possibilities of the hypothesis in favor of erecting a tired, shopworn melodrama out of Sir Gerald Hargreaves' source material. A few novel incidents turn up in the story, and these are eagerly embraced by the artisans and craftsmen working in the picture to provide its best moments. But by the large the film is peopled with thoroughly worn out character types—vicious henchmen, feeble rulers, heroic slaves, scrupulous but helpless royal damsels—whose attitudes and activities are predictable from start to finish.

The plot: Greek fisherman is wooed to Atlantis by roving princess, promptly enslaved, then via muscular prowess leads oppressed people to escape as entire decadent continent is submerged, drowning all the bad guys.

Actually, and rather surprisingly, the picture closely parallels in style and structure of content the sort of escapist screen entertainment being fashioned in great abundance by Italian filmakers over the past few years. There is an astonishing similarity to the stevereevesian spectacle that have been arriving on these shores with clockwork consistency. There is a Romanesque aura about the production, undeniably imitative of the vast number of films that have been set in that civilization. An "ordeal by fire and water" ritual conducted in a great, crowded stadium seems almost a replica of gladiatorial combat in the Colosseum. When Atlantis is burning to a cinder at the climax, one can almost hear Nero fiddling. Even Russ Garcia's score has that pompous, martial Roman air about it. And, finally, at least several of the mob spectacle scenes evidently have been lifted and incorporated from Roman screen spectacles of the past (the 10-year-old version of "Quo Vadis" looks like the source), an example of some enterprising skinping by producer-director Pal, with the assistance of editor Ben Lewis.

The acting is routine. A pair of newcomers to the screen from the tv ranks, Anthony Hall and Joyce Taylor undertake the leading romantic assignments, and neither fares particularly well under the burden of some stiff, mechanical dialog and the uneven nature of the screenplay which is extremely untidy in detail, incomplete in exposition. Others in principal roles of shallow dimension are John Dall, Frank De Kova, Jay Novello, Edgar Stehli, Edward Platt, Perry Kroeger, Wolfe Barzell and a seven-foot, 408-pound hulk of a man named Buck Maffei who shares the film's most diverting dramatic sequence with hero Hall.

Harold E. Wellman contributes some pretty Metrocolor camera work. Gaudy, crystalline-dominated Atlantis is pictorially attractive through the efforts of art directors George W. Davis and William Ferrari. Its destruction is astutely managed via a combination of meticulous miniature work and the spectacularly explosive special effects operation (notably one awesome tidal wave) of A. Arnold Gillespie, Lee LeBlanc and Robert R. Hoag. A vital assist is fashioned by makeupman William Tuttle, whose transformation of human facial features into those of cows and asses brings to mind a similar arrangement in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The similarity is purely physical. Tube.

Double Bunk
(BRITISH)

Trite mixture of comedy, farce which only rarely is genuinely funny; after a promising start, whole thing misfires badly.

London, April 11.

British Lion release of Bryanston-George H. Brown production. Stars Ian Carmichael, Janette Scott; features Sidney James, Liz Fraser, Dennis Price. Written and directed by C. M. Pennington-Richards; editor, John D. Guthridge; camera, Stephen Dade; music, Stanley Black; title song, Stanley Black, Jack Fishman, Michael Pratt. Previewed at Studio One, London. Running time, 92 MINS.

C. M. Pennington - Richards' script has neither the wit nor the comedy invention to survive his own heavy-handed, predictable direction. As a result, "Double Bunk" is a rather tired comedy which is saved from complete defeat by a valuable piece of mugging by that reliable character, Sidney James. Somewhere along the line producer George H. Brown should have taken either Pennington-Richards, writer, or Pennington-Richards, director, by the scruff of the neck. Or maybe both. As it is, "Bunk" just plods along aimlessly and is unlikely to give much of a hoot to any but unsophisticated audiences.

Newlyweds Ian Carmichael and Janette Scott, desperate for living accommodations, buy a houseboat and it is predictably obvious that they have been sold a leaky property. Their honeymoon night is ruined by rain, paint flaking off the walls and other headaches. Then Carmichael decides to move the boat and reluctantly Miss Scott agrees to a short trip up the river. They are joined by Sidney James, as navigator, and his dumb striptease girl friend (Liz Fraser).

They cause havoc among the fishermen and boaters on the Thames, they lose their course in a fog, spring yet another leak and land in France without any petrol. They "borrow" some from a nearby yacht owned by their landlord (Dennis Price) who taunts them into accepting a challenge to a race home. Thanks to Price's skipper getting drunk and turning back on his course Carmichael's party comes home winners.

Trite though this idea is, much more fun probably could have been obtained via sharper script and more positive performances.

Ian Carmichael is a pleasant enough hero but his role of the slightly ineffectual but well meaning young man has been played by him so often that it's in danger of wearing thin. Janette Scott still looks too young to be convincing even as a newlywed. And it's doubtful whether comedy is her forte.

James has pulled the rescue act on many pix, but even his valiant efforts can do little with this one. Liz Fraser is getting type cast as a dumb, wiggly blonde but she goes through the motions with a cute mixture of Cockney sharpness and naivete. She and James shape up as a click comedy team.

Noel Purcell, Reginald Beckwith, Naunton Wayne, Miles Malleson, Gladys Henson and Graham Stark are responsible for telling little cameos. Dennis Price, as the nouveau-riche, smart jerk of a yacht owner, gives a competent performance.

Direction on the Thames is done with some dexterity. John D. Guthridge's editing is jerky and Stephen Dade's lensing okay. The song "Double Bunk" is not very inspired, though Stanley Black's score is pleasant. Rich.

The Sweet Life
(La Dolce Vita)

Federico Fellini's direction of "La Dolce Vita" is "a matured talent of poetic stature," according to the review from Rome by Hawk in VARIETY February 17, 1960. The controversial international blockbuster has its U.S. premiere tonight (Wed.) at Henry Miller's Theatre, N.Y. Astor Pictures International is releasing. U. S. version is subtitled and runs five minutes less than its original 180 minutes (three hours).

Fellini's drama about low life in Rome's high society shows "basic rottenness and immorality" but ultimately is a "very moral film." Hawk said. Some spectators "will squirm at the three-hour length of the film, yet others will never notice they've sat that long."

Performances were described as "uniformly excellent," with Marcello Mastroianni cited as being "perfect" in the key role of the journalist through whose eyes the episodic tale is seen. Also kudoed were Anita Ekberg, Yvonne Furneaux, Anouk Aimee and Alain Cluny. All credit, Hawk concluded, must finally go to the producers (Giuseppe Amato and Angelo Rizzoli) for making a film which "controversial or not, understood or not, honors the Italian film industry."

Paris, April 11.

Pathe Overseas release of Daiei production. With Eiji Funakoshi, Mantaro Ushio, Yoshiro Hamaguchi. Directed by Kon Ichikawa. Screenplay, Natto Wada from novel by Shohei Ocika; camera, Setsuo Kobayashi; editor, Hiroaki Fujii. At Studio de L'Etoile, Paris. Running time, 100 MINS.

Tamura	Eiji Funakoshi
Sergeant	Mantaro Ushio
Officer	Yoshihiro Hamaguchi
Soldier A	Osamu Takizawa
Soldier B	Micky Curtiso
Soldier C	Asao Sano

This goes much further than the accepted war masterpieces in detailing for humanity in crisis, and the spark left in one man, have it transcend its plot to make this production one of the most searing pacifistic comments on war yet made. This is a downbeat but fervent pic that merits specialized foreign outlet attention. But it needs individual handling.

Story covers the defeat and rout of the Imperial Japanese army during the Philippine campaign in the last World War. A ragged remnant is left but they are warned the Americans will slaughter them and so start a trek through the jungles to the sea. It is all seen through one tubercular Japanese soldier whose approaching death has put him above it all. He manages to maintain a semblance of humanity to keep him from sinking to cannibalism like many of his fellow soldiers.

Taken from a novel published in the U.S., director Kon Ichikawa has knit this into a visual tour-de-force in which man's inhumanity to man is denoted as he sinks into an animal void. The soldiers cannot stop in their retreat with chaos and hallucination blended. The widescreen is well utilized and the acting is exemplary.

The only criticism might be a certain literary quality in the handling of the lead character, many of whose actions are not always clear. But it is a bone-hard, forthright film. It is thus a difficult vehicle but one that should find its place. Mosk.

Qui Etes-Vous Mr. Sorge?
(Who Are You Mr. Sorge?)
(FRENCH-JAPANESE) (C'SCOPE)

Paris, April 18.

Cinedis release of Terra-Cormoran-Cinetel-Cite-Silver-Pat Film-Jolly Film-Shochiku production. With Thomas Holtzmann, Hans Otto Meissner, Keiko Kishi, Jacques Berthier. Directed by Yves Ciampi. Screenplay, Ciampi, R. M. Arlaud, H. O. Meissner; camera (C'SCOPE), editor, L. Alepee. At Balzac, Paris. Running time, 130 MINS.

Richard Sorge	Thomas Holtzmann
Hans Otto Meissner	Himself
Baronne Sakurai	Keiko Kishi
Serge De Branowski	Jacques Berthier

This spy film is based on the exploits of Richard Sorge who was a Soviet spy operating through the German Embassy in Japan from about 1935 to 1943. It mixes documentary and straight dramatic story telling. However, the pic does not get enough character, depth and suspense into it to make either aspect able to carry it for over two hours. Result is a tale that could stand some pruning and then be of exploitation value abroad on its story. But it is not of arty house calibre.

It begins with historical personages telling what they know about Sorge and then segueing into his story. He is picked up in Japan where he is a newspaperman for a German paper with access to the German Embassy through friends. He is part German and part Russian, and has thrown in with the Soviets. He has formed a spy ring consisting of pacifistic and communist Japanese, two French people and another German.

Sorge manages to get out the news of the invasion of China by Japan, the fact that the Soviets would be invaded by Germany, and that the Japanese would not attack Russia which allowed for the freeing of troops to help stop the Germans at Stalingrad. Some of Sorge's loves are brought in. The pic makes the point that his pride eventually passed his patriotic motives. Also that he was never really hung by the Japanese, and may be still alive. Plot has the ring broken up by an implacable Japanese security colonel.

Acting is solid but not much depth can be given the characters since historical precision and spy workings are the thing. Director Yves Ciampi has done the pic honestly but without either a real insight into the era or a firm dramatic flair. Stock footage is well utilized. Mosk.

Ojos Tapatios
(Mexican Eyes)
(MEXICAN—COLOR)

Mexico City, April 18.

Peliculas Nacionales release of Producciones Brooks production. Stars Christiane Martell, Luz Maria Aguilar, Pedro Geraldo; features Julio Julian, Roberto Silva, Rodolfo Landa, Oscar Ortiz de Pinedo, Eduardo Alcaraz, Hortensia Santovena, Maria Eugenia San Martin, Judith Sierra. Directed by Gilberto Martinez Solares. Screenplay, Julio Porter and O. Jason; camera (Eastmancolor), Jack Draper. At Alameda Theatre, Mexico City. Running time, 90 MINS.

A singing academy in Mexico City is background for this musical, with principals leading a Bohemian sort of life while waiting for the big break. Roberto Silva is the professor of the academy. Story line is more or less reminiscent of others of this type picture, with the penniless student who gets emotionally involved with a wealthy girl, who of course does not say she is rich.

Christine Martell and Pedro Geraldo act out the main love yarn. As a contrast there are Julio Hulian and Luz Maria Aguilar who also are in love. Julio Julian and Pedro Geraldo have a chance to display their ability as singers. In dramatic moments, they are somewhat weak, but the whole emphasis of picture is on the musical side. Christiane Martell is as tall and stately and beautiful as ever, with Luz Marin Aguilar also a charming eyeful. Color work by Jack Draper is good, and best of all is the dubbing in of singing voices.

This is all around entertainment for Mexican and Latin American chains, and Spanish circuit markets in the U.S. Emil.

La Mascara de la Muerta
(The Mask of Death)
(MEXICAN)

Mexico City, April 11.

Peliculas Nacionales release of roducciones Universal production. Stars Luis Aguilar, Rosa de Castilla, Fernando Fernandez; features Jaime Fernandez, Rosario Galves, Salvador Flores, Sergio Murrieta, Fernando Osés. Directed by Zacarias Gomez Urquiza. Screenplay, Luis Manrique. At Olimpia Cine, Mexico City. Running time, 75 MINS.

This is a modest sort of effort, revolving around imaginary incidents of the Mexican Revolution, with the inevitable masked rider, a sort of Superman and The Shadow mixed in one, doing deeds of derring-do, overcoming the bad guys (also masked), saving the maiden in distress and doing his bit for his country.

There's no attempt at giving an atmosphere of truth in this one. It's all pure hokum, with a lot of wild riding, shooting and all the rest of the trimmings of a Mexican western. The kiddies will love it.

On the whole, this picture is well made, with the direction of Zacarias Gomez Urquiza surefire and the acting of Luis Aguilar and other principals geared to give excitement and suspense. Sure of being a hit in nabe houses of all Latin markets. Emil.

Pleins Feux Sur L'Assassin
(Lights on the Murderer)
(FRENCH)

Paris, April 11.

Metro release of Jules Borkon production. Stars Pierre Brasseur, Marianne Koch, Pascale Audret, Jean-Louis Trintignant; features Dany Saval, Jean Babilee, Philippe Leroy. Directed by Georges Franju. Screenplay, Boileau, Narcejac, Robert Thomas, Franju; camera, Marcel Fradetal; editor, Gilbert Natot. At Marignan, Paris. Running time, 95 MINS.

Herve	Pierre Brasseur
Jeanne	Pascale Audret
Edwige	Marianne Koch
Jean-Marie	Jean-Louis Trintignant
Micheline	Dany Saval
Christian	Jean Babilee

Metro has an okay program pic in this whodunit. Concerned with a group of would-be heirs in an old chateau, and with one trying to kill off the others, this film is familiar in theme. But it is given a solid narrative flair, plus a grim humorous tinge, keeping it interesting throughout. Vehicle is a good dualer entry abroad with not quite the weight and uniqueness for art chances.

Director Georges Franju has done this honestly and made good use of the atmospheric and photographic aspects of an old chateau. A dying old man holes up in a secret niche in the chateau and his heirs find they can not get the right to sell the castle till his body is found. They decide to turn it into a tourist gambit via a light and sound setup. Then begin a series of accidents that finally point to murder.

Some twists perk it up as it bogs down about two-thirds the way through. Stereotype characters are given enough solidity to fit in with this tale. There are some offbeat touches, such as a risible quality to a funeral and a sexy widow, all of which combine to make this an entry with enough individual treatment to make it stand up.

Franju has brought off an entertaining melodrama. Technical credits are good. Mosk.

Am Galgen Haengt Die Liebe
(Love Hangs On The Gibbet)
(GERMAN)

Berlin, April 11.

Europa release of Rex (Berlin) production. Stars Carl Wery and Annie Rosar; features Bert Forell, Marian Mell, Paul Esser. Directed by Edwin Zbonek. Screenplay, Erna Pentsch, after stageplay, "Philemon and Baukis," by Leopold Ahlsen; camera, Walter Partsch; music, Ernst Roters. At Lehde-Studio, Berlin. Running time, 94 MINS.

Nikolaos	Carl Wery
Marulla	Annie Rosar
Alexandros	Bert Forell
Alka	Marisa Mell
Karl, German soldier	Paul Esser
Petros	Sieghardt Rupp
German lieutenant	Michael Lenz
German captain	Hannes Schiel
Jannis	Michael Janisch

The 33-year-old Edwin Zbonek, former Austrian film critic, has created an attention-getting film with this vehicle. Directed for Rex Film, a small Teutonic outfit, "Gibbet" emerges as one of the more unconventional domestic feature pix of the season. Subjectwise, the film, a war drama, stands a good chance to make way into foreign markets.

Adapted from the prizewinning German stageplay, "Philemon and Baukis," by Leopold Ahlsen, action takes place in 1944 in German-occupied Greece. It centers about an elderly Greek couple who grant shelter to two German soldiers, of whom one is seriously wounded. They know that if the two fall into the hands of partisans, they'll be killed. The old people put humanity above patriotic fanatism and are killed by their own countrymen.

Pic achieves a convincing war mood and benefits from impressive acting performances and brilliant lensing. Top acting honors easily go to Annie Rosar and Carl Wery who portray the old people. Miss Rosar's portrayal of a resolute but good-natured woman is as excellent as Wery's study of her patient husband. Both performances carry emotional impact. Cast includes several interesting faces such as Bert Forell, as a young Greek; Maria Mell, his sweetheart; Sieghardt Rupp, as a grim partisan leader, and Paul Esser, in a particularly fine performance as a German soldier.

Although the script appears contrived at times, this is a good film. It deserves a special compliment for being as compromiseless as possible and trying to avoid demagogical cliche and black-and-white treatment. Both sides, the Germans and Greek partisans, are shown as brutal as they were. Zbonek may be classified as a "new waver" because this ambitious pic marks his bow as a feature film director. Hans.

CANADA CHAINS' JOINT PLAN

Metalious: Return To The Oak Room

By VINCENT CANBY

The VARIETY reporter who attempts to interview New Hampshire housewife Grace Metalious at the Oak Room of New York's Plaza Hotel, on a Friday night at the end of a busy week, is at a distinct disadvantage, especially if he orders martinis while the famed authoress ("Peyton Place," "Return to Peyton Place," etc.) sticks to a series of scotches-and-7-Up, a type of Gilmanton (N.H.) digestif.

Mrs. Metalious, in town on a quick visit to promote 20th-Fox's film version of "Return etc." and to visit her publishers, arrived at the rendezvous about five minutes late, accompanied by her husband, G. G. Metalious. The interview, an easy give-and-take of colloquialisms, lasted about two hours. The following are best-remembered highlights:

Mrs. M.: (arriving with two copies each of "Return etc." and "The Tight White Collar" under her arm and speaking in a disarmingly little girl-like voice): These aren't for you. They're for Bruno (the maitre-D). I'm very fond of Bruno. I'm very fond of the Plaza. I wish I could be in Gilmanton one minute and the next minute here in the Oak Room, but I don't like to travel.

Reporter: How are you?

Mrs. M.: I'm fine. I just fired my agent.

Reporter: Is 20th-Fox keeping you busy?

Mrs. M.: The reason I'm late is that I just taped an Arlene Francis interview. She was late. She came rushing into the studio saying "Oy'm sorry Oy'm sooo late, but Oy've just come from St. Louis!" I mean how chic can you get? I've never even been to St. Louis.

Reporter: How'd it go? Arlene's a pretty sharp interviewer.

Mrs. M.: I don't know, but I thought it was going to be at Sardi's, but it was in a studio, so I didn't get anything to eat.

Reporter: How do you like New York?

Mrs. M.: It scares me. I mean that the only time I've ever been pinched by another—uh—day—was at a cocktail party here. Oh, oh, you're making notes. Please don't make notes.

Reporter: What are you doing to promote the film?

Mrs. M.: Radio and tv shows and interviews like this. Jack Paar won't have me on his show. He doesn't like me. I guess he's afraid I'd lower the tone of the program.

Reporter: Is it true you don't think much of "Return to Peyton Place" as a book?

Mrs. M.: I'll put it this way: it took me one month to write it, and I didn't work every day.

Reporter: What are your relations with Jerry Wald?

Mrs. M.: I like Jerry Wald. When I went out to Hollywood on the first film, it was just the way I'd heard it would be. When I admired a Toulouse-Lautrec painting in his office, Jerry said: "Yes, it was a great picture, wasn't it?"

Reporter: What do you think of the new picture ("Return")?

Mrs. M.: I haven't seen it. I just found out today that Jose Ferrer directed it. I'm very fond of Jose Ferrer. I've seen "Cyrano" 10 times, mostly on television.

Reporter: Having a Greek name, you must have something in common with the boss? Have you ever met Mr. Skouras?

Mrs. M.: Which one is he?

Reporter: The president of 20th Century-Fox.

Mrs. M. (to Mr. M.): Oh, G.G., I've said something wrong again.

Reporter: That's all right, Grace. "Peyton Place" has already made over 11 million domestic.

Mrs. M.: You're sweet to say so, honey.

Reporter: Did you have a percentage deal?

Mrs. M.: I don't think I'm supposed to talk about business matters.

Reporter: Do you believe it's true that people in small towns are more depraved than those in big cities?

Mrs. M.: Absolutely not! I mean that small towns aren't any worse—what's the word—percentagewise. I don't know why people think my novels are so sensational. I don't even write all that I know.

Reporter: What do you mean?

(Mrs. M. then reported, off-the-record, honey, a story of the extent to which a farm mother had gone to keep her son amused at home.)

Mrs. M.: I mean, if I put that in a novel, nobody would believe it. They'd say I was just being dirty.

Reporter: Are you working on anything now?

Mrs. M.: A novel called "No Adam in Eden."

Reporter: What's it about?

Mrs. M.: Can't you tell from the title?

Reporter: I'm not sure.

Mrs. M.: Guess.

Reporter: Let me see . . .

Mrs. M.: It's easy. Think.

Reporter: Women without men?

Mrs. M.: Women who are afraid of men. Frigidity.

Reporter: I'm not sure that's the idea I get.

Mrs. M.: Well, that's the title and that's what it's going to stay! Are you married? . . . (at which point the reporter lost control of the interview, along with his notes and ballpoint pen. Good luck, Grace, and if, by any chance, you have the notes, I hope you can read 'em.)

Spain's Crowded Religious Week

Valladolid's International Religious & Humanitarian Film Week was forced into an extra day of activities when fest organizers found it impossible to screen more than three features and three documentaries per day. A total of 24 films and six mornings, Catholic film talks were programmed in eight days.

Opening ceremonies were reduced to a minimum and projectors started to grind at afternoon, evening and night sessions. Inaugural activities included screening of one of four American entries, Billy Wilder's "The Apartment." The Plato Skouras production, "St. Francis of Assisi" was a late entry from 20th Fox while other American contenders either for The Golden Standard (best religious film) or The Golden Sheaf of Wheat (award for film with most human values) were "Spirit of St. Louis" and "Crime and Punishment, U. S. A." A fifth American film, "Toby Tyler," was shown out of competition.

U.S. Embassy's commercial attache Anthony Cefaratti was the American member of the jury. His colleagues were Mario Verdoni of Italy's Centro Sperimentale, French writer Carlo Rim and German newspaperman Karl Tichmann. Five Spanish jurists were led by film directors Saez de Heredia and Cesar Ardavin.

Katzman's Acorns

Hollywood, April 18.

Sam Katzman, who made his name in low-budget but big-grossing films during his many years at Columbia before swinging over to 20th-Fox last year, has budgeted next three pix at $1,000,000 each.

Producer also has an option from 20th on another trio.

UNITE TO DROP MORIBUND SPOTS

Toronto, April 18.

Famous Players Canadian and Odeon Theatres, which are the two largest circuits in the Dominion, have hit upon a plan whereby they will cease competition with each other in many areas. Because of the falloff in attendance they have decided to abandon one theatre where such competition exists. This will be done on a reciprocity basis; as Odeon closes a house in one town, FPC will shutter one of its units in some other area where the keen rivalry exists.

Unprecedented plan will see full operational responsibilities assumed by FPC or Odeon where both were formerly represented, with the initial coast-to-coast closing of houses involving film theatres from Victoria, British Columbia, to Moncton in the Maritimes, with such Ontario cities as Kingston, Port Arthur and Fort William immediately affected—with trans-Canada program to continue in the next few months.

Failing business and the shortage of film product are responsible for the dropping of competition of the two major Canadian chains, with FPC to take Rank produced or released films of Odeon (distributed in Canada by 20th-Century) which have hitherto enjoyed big potentials at Odeon houses.

As of present plans, Famous Players assumes full operation in two Canadian cities where Odeon was formerly active; with Odeon in two Canadian cities where FP had been formerly represented.

Managerial staffs of closed houses will be transferred by respective circuits to other situations, with the companies to dispose of the "dead movie houses" in the projected conversion to stores, offices and supermarket sites — or even bowling alleys. However, closed houses will not be permitted for film theatre reopenings.

Projection equipment and seats will be re-allocated to other situations of the two chains—or will remain in the closed houses until real estate deals are formulated with outside interests.

Teeoff of the new policy of "rationalization" is the closing of the Empress (660 seats), Moncton, N.B., which was operated by Odeon, with latter retaining the Capitol (914) and FPC the Paramount (1,166) in that city.

In Victoria, B.C., the Odeon-operated Plaza (712) is closed, with FPC still operating the Royal (1,467) and the Capitol (1,212), with Odeon Theatres continuing to carry on with the Odeon (1,472).

In the Ontario cities of Port Arthur and Fort William—which are only six miles apart—FPC retains the 995-seater Paramount, Port Arthur, and the Capitol (998), Fort Williams; with Odeon Theatres hanging on to the Odeon (993), Fort William and the Odeon (995), Port Arthur; and only the Lake (445), Fort William, formerly operated by FPC, being closed.

In Kingston, Ontario, Famous Players had the Capitol (1,177) and the Grand (884), the latter closed. Odeon will continue to operate the Biltmore (805) and the Odeon (984).

Drive-ins will continue to be operated as formerly; the Skyway, with a capacity of 540 cars, by FPC outside Moncton, N.B., the Kingston, Ontario, by Odeon Theatres; and the Inter-City (385) by FPC between Port Arthur and Fort William, Ontario.

Continuing decline of business has resulted from a joint study of the two chains in Canada over a considerable period, with closing action delayed as long as possible. Premise of both is that closing of houses in certain areas is inevitable or that theatre receipts will continue to decline until houses almost close out themselves.

It is believed that film customers will be benefitted by better-quality product in that fewer features will be needed in Canadian cities affected, with closure program across Canada to continue in succeeding months by the two chains.

Luise Sillcox to Be Authors League Consultant After 39 Years on Job

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

One of the most unique background figures (and powers) in show business has reached the end of a formal career with the resignation of Luise Sillcox as executive secretary of the Authors League of America. She had piled up 39 years of active leadership, working equally with Authors Guild and Dramatists Guild.

Resignation came following a heart attack and convalescence. Limited as to working hours by her doctor, Miss Sillcox preferred to offer her resignation. This was accepted "with regret" and with unusual expressions of respect and affection when the Dramatists Guild, at the St. Regis, and the Authors Guild, at the Gotham, meeting separately last Thurs. (13) passed similiar resolutions continuing Miss Sillcox at full salary in the new role of corsultant. Attorneys will decide how the salary is to be divided as between retirement pension and fee.

It is to be remarked that in voting to continue Miss Sillcox at full salary the "ink-stained wretches" are doing substantially better than fat corporations usually do in similiar circumstances. There is general agreement that Miss Sillcox's detailed knowledge of literary terms, personalities and precedents is without parallel and some regret that she has never had the leisure to write her memoirs. The distance between the way writers were treated at the outset of the League (founded in 1912) and today is synonymous with the separation of rights and the rise of the principle of leasing rather than outright sale, about which Edna Ferber was complaining the other issue of VARIETY concerning the recent Warner remake of "Cimarron," previously made by RKO. Author got naught on the 1960 version.

In One Job

Starting with the League as a girl, Miss Sillcox spent her entire adult life in the one job. It is probable that no figure in any theatrical craft organization had so long an uninterrupted tenure or so remarkable a position. During the 1942-46 period she was also a regular fixture of the Writers War Board, of which Rex Stout was chairman. Not ever officially part of the League but meeting weekly in its offices the Board was under a special dispensation of Elmer Davis' Office of War Information.

Dramatists and Authors Guilds each impacted the other media of entertainment extensively through the decades of Miss Sillcox's connection and, until recent years, the now-independent Radio Writers Guild and Television Writers Group were also under the League umbrella. The League's long, uphill fight for author rights gradually forced certain acknowledgments from books, magazines and stage auspices, the playwrights basic contract with the Broadway producers and their sharing setup in the sale of subsidiary rights being salient. In all these skirmishes, battles and alternating hot and cold wars Miss Sillcox has been a conspicuous fighter, albeit as a paid employe.

Her resignation comes with the Authors Guild in the black. With the withdrawal some years ago of the Radio Writers Guild, leaving unpaid debts which had to be assumed, the financial situation was unsatisfactory for some time.

Both guilds have joined in recommending as Miss Sillcox's success as executive secretary of the League, the man who has spent 15 years as secretary of the Dramatists Guild, Mills Ten Eyck. As such he will be superior to the new Dramatists Guild secretary, David Levin, and the continuing Authors Guild secretary, Peter Heggie, son of the late legit actor, O. P. Heggie.

Peru Optioning 'Simon Bolivar'

By THOMAS A. PRYOR

Hollywood, April 18.

Most writers sound the tocsin when a producer takes an option on their work. But what does a writer do when he acquires an option on a country?

Be that as it may, writer-director-producer Herbert Kline has a bona fide 18 months option, appropriately documented and signed by the minister of culture, on Peru for his projected film, "Simon Bolivar."

What's more, Kline says that Dino DeLaurentiis has agreed not to pursue his projected pictorial biography of the liberator, whose role in the history of South America, in particular Bolivia and Venezuela, is comparable to George Washington's.

Kline in return has entered into preliminary discussions with the Italian producer concerning possible acquisition by DeLaurentiis of releasing rights to pic in Italy and perhaps elsewhere in Europe.

At the moment Kline, whose completed screenplay already has received the green light from Peruvian authorities, says he has a commitment from an eastern production source to provide part of the financing. He is now here to negotiate a co-production-distribution deal, with a major company. Famous Artists and attorney Leon

REGINALD GARDINER'S BREAK-IN TROUBLES

Lancaster, Pa., April 18.

Reginald Gardiner's admitted "debut" into the standup-and-talk lecture circuit was a dismal klunk here recently. He was part of a double bill, with Katherine Williams, soprano, to fill a cancelled engagement of Meredith ("Music Man") Willson and his wife, Reni, for the local Kiwanis Club's package season of "Five-In-A-Row."

Miss Williams and Gardiner had never met professionally. She did a curious hodpodge of show tunes (nothing else), with continuity that she apparently had not read before, using notes on small cards she held in her gloved hands and had a hard time trying to read.

Gardiner also had a great deal of trouble getting started, and much more keeping going, for the one hour stint.

They played to no more than 350 in an auditorium seating 1,835. Joseph T. Kingston, drama and music critic of the Daily Intelligencer Journal, morning publication, said the joint performance was "one of the dullest, and longest—or so it seemed—professional performances offered here in a long time."

L.A. in Nosedive But 'Wind' Smash $20,000 in 4th; 'Alamo' Fat 17G, 3d; 'Suzie' Lofty 16G, 2d; 'Prof.' 15G, 5

Los Angeles, April 18.

First-runs here this week are taking a nosedive, the two new entrants being weak. Most houses are off with a few exceptions. "Hippodrome" is rated dull $8,000 in two theatres in first. "Carry on Sergeant" looks drab $6,000, also in two houses.

Reissue of "Gone With Wind" is pacing the city with a sockeroo $20,000 for fourth stand at the Hollywood Paramount. "The Alamo" is shaping to get a trim $17,000 in third round, four spots.

"World of Suzie Wong" looks lofty $16,000 in second, three locations. "Absent-Minded Professor" is holding up smartly at $15,000 in fifth Chinese session.

Most hard-ticket pix are down currently though "Spartacus" shapes smart in 26th Pantages week.

B'way Slowed by Dearth of Fresh Films; 'Prof.'-Stageshow Big 150G, 'Priest' Tall 22G, 'Impostor' 32G

Arrival of income tax deadlines, both U.S. and N.Y. State, plus some rainy weather is being blamed for the offish tone at Broadway deluxers this round, with not a single new pic to help oil the turnstiles. However, it's the fact that so many extended-runs have started to falter that is hurting the overall total at first-runs currently.

Still money champ is "Absent-Minded Professor" with the Easter stageshow at the Music Hall. This combo, with the stageshow obviously accounting for much of the draw, looks to hit big $150,000 in fifth session. This insures a sixth week. 'Hoodlum Priest" finished its second stanza at the Astor with a big $22,000. It's now in the third.

"Great Impostor" held at sturdy $32,000 in third round day-dating the Palace and arty Trans-Lux 85th St. "Raisin in Sun" continued lively with $30,000 in third round day-dating the Forum and arty Trans-Lux 52d Street.

"One-Eyed Jacks" looks to hit a solid $41,000 in third session at the Capitol. The advance reserved seat gimmick has been abandoned as being too confusing for prospective patrons and tending to slow down wicket activity. "All in Night's Work" looks nice $19,500 in fourth, playing the Victoria and arty Normandie.

"All Hands on Deck" is heading for a light $15,000 in third round at the Paramount. "King and I" is calling it a day after this (4th) stanza at the Rivoli with around $12,000 likely in final week. "Mein Kampf" opens Friday (21).

"Pepe" still was fancy with $21,500 in 17th week at the Criterion. "Exodus" still is top hard-ticketer, being near-capacity $47,000 in 18th frame at the Warner.

"Saturday Night and Sunday Morning" held with a wham $18,100 in second round at the arty Baronet, which is a new high for a second week at this house after a new alltime high on opener.

Nudist Convictions

Charlotte, N.C., April 18.

A Charlotte theatre owner and his projectionist were convicted today of showing an "immoral and obscene" film, which to local moralists means bare flesh.

Bill Lemmond Jr., owner of a drive-in house, was sentenced to 90 days in jail for showing "Sun Lovers Holiday," a nudist film. The sentence was suspended on payment of $350 fine and $13 court costs.

Carson Paul Jenkins, the projectionist, was ordered to pay $13 court costs.

Attorneys for the defendants filed notice of appeal to Superior Court.

National Boxoffice Survey

Biz Offish; 'Professor' New Champ, 'Exodus' 2d, 'Wind' 3d, 'Priest' 4th, 'Jacks' 5th

Trade is off quite generally at first-runs around the country this stanza. Combo of income tax blues and overly-extended longruns is depressing the take in most key cities covered by VARIETY. Oscar award night Monday (17) was anything but a biz booster, with thousands huddled around their tele sets.

New champion is "Absent-Minded Professor" (BV), which had given hints previously that it was going places. It is crowding out "Exodus" (UA), which is winding up second for the first time in many weeks.

"Gone With Wind" (M-G), out again on reissue, shows such strength that it is capturing third money. "Hoodlum Priest" (UA) is taking fourth place.

"One-Eyed Jacks" (Par), just getting started, is taking fifth position. "Pepe" (Col), fifth a week ago, is winding up sixth. "Spartacus" (U) is moving up to seventh place.

"101 Dalmatians" (BV), feeling the trek back to school currently, is taking eighth spot. "The Alamo" (UA) is finishing ninth. "Ben-Hur" (M-G) is 10th.

"All in Night's Work" (Par) will be 11th while "Cimarron" (M-G) rounds out the Top 12 pix. "All Hands on Deck" (20th), currently spotty; "Rachel Cade" (WB), "League of Gentlemen" (Kings), "Never On Sunday" (Lope) and "Virgin Spring" (Janus) are the runner-up films. Last-named won the Oscar for the best foreign pic, but so far it has had little influence on its b.o.

"Secret Ways" (U) shapes as an outstanding newcomer, being socko on initial stanza in Philly. "Hippodrome" (Cont) is not doing well in L. A. The reissue of "Giant" (WB) looms good in Providence and stout in Omaha.

"Black Sunday" (AI) is rated okay in Detroit. "Sanctuary" (20th) is so disappointing this round that even on seven playdates it is managing only two okay sessions. Others range from so-so to sad.

"Cry For Happy" (Col) looks hefty in K. C. "Gorgo" (M-G) is rated hotsy in Boston. "World of Suzie Wong" (Par), long high on the list, is sock in Toronto, fine in Balto and stout in L. A.

"Great Impostor" (U), big in N. Y., shapes nice in Philly. "Operation Eichmann" (AA) is rated slow in Buffalo and Cleveland.

"The Entertainer" (Cont), okay in Cincy, is lively in Cleveland. "Make Mine Mink," also from Continental, looms okay in St. Louis, good in Balto and trim in Chi.

'Rachel' Good $12,000, Denver; 'Pepe' Hot 14G

Denver, April 18.

Only one new entrant this stanza, "Sins of Rachel Cade," and it is barely good at the Paramount. However, some of the holdovers are doing nicely. Wall St. Pundit: U.S. Pix Clumsy Re Censoring

A Wall Street outfit this week came out with a blast against Hollywood. Rather than concerning itself only with stock potentials, which is usually the case, Arnold Bernard & Co. also told its clients that the film colony has been off the beam in several major areas, including censorship, conventional television and home toll tv.

Subscribers to Bernard's Value Line size-up of stocks were offered the theory that the U. S. Supreme Court censorship back-of-the-hand in the "Don Juan" Chicago cops case might loom as a costly matter for the distributors. For one, censor licensing fees are involved and, two, suits against apparently unjust censor decisions obviously will be expensive.

Then comes the rap, of a kind rare to be coming from a professional investment firm. Bernhard states that the Motion Picture Assn. of America has expressed a distaste for censorship but "seldom fights for its beliefs." Asserting that much of the blame for the top court decision lies with the industry itself, Bernhard sarcastically notes that the MPAA remained aloof from the "Don Juan" suit until a petition for rehearing was filed . . . "but then the industry may have acted too late."

A "lack of unity and foresight" on the part of Hollywood is complained of by Bernhard in the area of regular tv. The tv medium simply wasn't recognized as to profit potential, says the downtowner, adding that studios did no more than commiserate with each other anent falling theatre grosses while indie program suppliers in tv prospered. Major pic outfits are now in tv "but the profits to date have not been what they would have been with an earlier understanding of the real problems faced."

Bernhard asks if Hollywood has learned its lesson and provides its own answer — "probably not" — pertaining to pay-tv. Despite the setbacks this new form of show business has come a shade closer to materialization in the past few weeks. The market potential is enormous and Hollywood could benefit substantially as a prime supplier of programming.

But, says the analyst, the picture business has been apathetic in the face of strong opposition by other interested groups.

Continental Preem of 'Exodus' Will Be Initialer at Cannes Film Fest

Paris, April 18.

The official Continental preem of Otto Preminger's "Exodus" (UA) will be as the kick-off film at the Cannes Film Fest on the night of May 3. French publicist Georges Cravenne will fly down the cream of French letters, arts, journalism and diplomacy for the opening in a specially chartered jet and then host them at a midnight dinner with star entertainers after the pic before planing them back to Paris.

Among those on the list for this junket are Bernard Buffet, Francoise Sagan, Simone Signoret, Jean Seberg, Romain Gary, Brigitte Bardot, Jeanne Moreau, Marcel Pagnol, Georges Simenon, Prince of Yugoslavia, Marcel Achard, Ingrid Bergman, Jean Cocteau, Andre Maurois, Coco Chanel, Michele Morgan, Anatole Litvak, Raoul Levy, Roger Frey, Wilfrid Baumgartner, Maurice Chevalier, Picasso and Charles Chaplin.

Preminger will attend with film players Sal Mineo, Jill Haworth and Peter Lawford. Preminger will hold a luncheon press confab on May 4 with individual mikes on the tables. His opus is being shown out of competition.

So far Yank participation at the Cannes Fest May 3-18, looks strong, with a high calibre of commercial pix in "Exodus," the official entry, "Raisin in Sun" (Col), and an invited offbeat N.Y.—made indie, "The Connection," of Shirley Clarke, which will also be out of competition as a guest of the French Federation of Film Authors.

However, "Exodus" and "Connection" would be in line for side kudos like the International Film Critic's Award, and others. One or maybe even two more Yank pix will be invited to be shown at the festival. Highly favored for this status at this writing is "Hoodlum Priest" (UA).

Seek Big Biz Sponsors For Edinburgh Fest

Edinburgh, April 11.

Big business enterprises will be encouraged to sponsor performances at the Edinburgh International Festival under a new plan revealed here. An Edinburgh Festival Capital Fund, aimed at yielding an income of some $150,000 a year, is to be set up. The coin resulting will be used to enlarge the Fest's range and artistic standard.

Previous appeals made by the Festival Society have been confined to the city of Edinburgh. Now it is felt that the Fest has become an event of such major importance to the whole of Britain that the area of appeal should be expanded pronto. Since its launching in 1947, the Edinburgh Fest has practicaly doubled in size and capacity.

'Ben-Hur' Opens New House in Helsinki

Helsinki, April 11.

A new cinema, Bio Bristol, has been opened here. With a seating capacity of around 800, it's an ideal deluxer. House has a projection booth including CinemaScope and Todd-AO installations.

The preem show had "Ben-Hur" (M-G) on-a-day policy. The picture now has passed its fifth week and has been near-capacity since opening.

Rank Estimates Nearly Double 1960 Earnings

London, April 18.

Estimated profits for the year ending next June 24 of around $3,640,000 are forecast by the Rank Organization "in the absence of unforeseen circumstances." That is nearly double the profit for the previous year which totalled $2,013,000. Announcement came with the report that the directors have declared an interim dividend of 7½% less tax, with the forecast of a final distribution of 15%.

The Rank board also announced the proposed issue of $2,254,249 "A" ordinary shares of 70c each as a rights issue in the proportion of one new share for every five ordinary and "A" ordinary shares held. The price of the issue will be determined later and a further announcement is expected soon.

The profit estimate shows that the group profits before taxation are likely to be $14,000,000 as against $11,200,000 in the previous year. Taxation and outside shareholders proportion whittles that total down to the net figures given above.

At the same time it is also revealed that the directors of Gaumont-British have declared an interim divvy of 6%, less tax.

'Apartment' Longrun Grosser in Finland

Helsinki, April 11.

Present longrun pic here is "The Apartment" (UA), now in 20th week and seems set for an indefinite run. "The Alamo" (UA) started with a bang around Easter. Other b.o. winners include two domestic pix, "The Mink Fur," "The Scarlet Dove."

"The Millionairess" (20th) has wound up nine good weeks. "Magnificient Seven" (UA), "Suzie Wong" (Par) and Sweden's "Susanne" also have been strong entries, playing well all around the country.

India Slaps New 10% Tax on Radio Sets

New Delhi, April 11.

Radio sets are among the many items hit by upped taxes in Finance Minister Mararji Desai's new budget for India. Radios costing $30 to $60 will have a new 10% levy slapped on them, and the sets costing over $60 will have a 20% levy.

Since commercial radio is barred in India, tuners-in don't get their listening for free in this country. They have to take out licenses on ther radios, the $3 fee for which goes to the government, sole operator of radio stations in India. The government expects to rake in $700,000 via the new tax.

India Wars Vs. Immoral Films

New Delhi, April 11.

India, which already operates sharp film censorship, is mulling a clampdown on the import of such foreign pictures and production of Indian pix as are considered to be of dubious moral value. The Indian authorities also have decided not to issue import licenses for a number of foreign magazines similarly rated as of doubtful value. These include some 20 publications best known of which are Glamour, Hit Parade, Parade, Playboy, Sun Bathing, Swank and Beauty Parade.

Moves were suggested by Indian National Commission for Co-operation with UNESCO. Commission expressed concern at what it viewed as misuse of mass-communications media, which it said had led to a "deterioration in basic cultural standards."

Meanwhile, zealous social workers have persuaded the Indian government to legislate against "indecent" film posters. While the precise scope of proposed law is as yet unknown, indication that it is impending has been given in parliament by Information and Broadcasting Minister Balkrishna V. Keskar.

Rapping the proposal as "both unnecessary and undesirable," The Times of India editorialized: "Once started, where can this censorship of imaginary immorality be legitimately ended? If posters are a moral hazard, so must be the films themselves (except when they are documentaries produced with the official blessings of Dr. Keskar's Ministry). Why not scrap them all? Life will, of course, become dull, but won't it be pure!"

Decline in French Pix, Legit Theatre Patrons Traced to New Habits

Paris, April 11.

Both film exhibitors and legit theatre owners seem to agree that the low theatre and cinema attendance stems from changing French habits. As the level of living rises here, there is more interest in acquiring household appliances and an auto than in entertainment. And with the car, families take off for weekend jaunts, especially in good weather, but even in bad, rather than attending the film and legit theatres.

Hence, this legit season has been disappointing. Even shows that got good reviews have found it hard-going. Music halls usually go in for revues during spring and summer. Legiters can close for the summer but film houses keep going on. However, they have gotten some relief via Paris detaxation for July and August.

Television is also beginning to be felt here. So filmmakers and theatre producers feel they have a few years of readjustment in store for themselves. Yet production in both spheres is as high as ever. It may lead to a slowing down and an attempt for the big productions that can have longer runs.

One theatre man thinks that the season will eventually be only six months. However, this is all conjecture in the usually crisis-prone film and theatre industries. They still manage to continue.

Third Milan Film Mart Draws Many Film Co. Reps From All Sections Of World; Asia Enters First Time

Milan, April 18.

Early indications point to widespread participation by international film reps at the Thirty-third Milan Film Mart (MIFED), which opened here this week in the presence of Italian Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani. A fall event, the fourth, is already planned, probably Oct. 10-20.

Mart topper Guido Franci was particularly pleased at the wide participation at the third MIFED of representatives of several Far Eastern companies, among them the Shaw Brothers' Runme Shaw. Also booked are four Japanese firms, Daiei, Toho, Tosei and Nikkatsu. This is first time Asian outfits, including companies in Ceylon, Hong Kong, Singapore, India, Pakhistan, Thailand, and the Philippines, have come to Milan in such numbers.

Seventy-six distribs have to date sent reps to scout for product, among them 24 Italian firms, nine Swiss, six Benelux, four German, three French, two British, two Portugeuse, and one each from Monaco, Greece, Venezuela, Poland, USSR, Yugoslavia, Israel, Sweden, Mexico and Lebanon.

Producers who have "entered" product for viewing by prospective buyers are likewise numerous, with Italy again tops with 22 companies. Other nations include Liechtenstein, 10 feature films; Belgium, two pix; Japan, seven feature pix; Poland, seven; Austria, one; Switzerland, 27; Hong King, two; Soviet Russia, 13; Jugoslavia, 19; U. S., two.

Other companies from various countries, including Toei, Nikkatsu, Farnco London and Rank Overseas, have still to advise on the pix they are sending to MIFED. BBC has also announced its participation while other last-minute entries are still rolling in.

'West Side' In Paris At 60% of Capacity

Paris, April 18.

In spite of the triumphal opening and word-of-mouth it aroused, and complete 'rave notices, the "West Side Story" legit company from Israel now at the Alhambra here is not playing to the anticipated sellout. It is nearer 55%-60% capacity weekdays and filled up for weekends. It is thus still paying off for producers Pete Kameron, Giora Godik and Felix Marouani.

Many reasons are advanced for this state. Such as: (1) It opened during the Jewish High Holidays.

(2) In spite of the drama and music critics lifting it from the music hall status there is still a resistance among ordinary theatregoers to foreign language entries and especially musicals.

However "Story" is a prestige opus that has opened French eyes to modern musical technicalities.

Show is grossing an estimated $33,000 per week with an overall $25,000 nut. It is in for a month.

Assoc. British Closes Major U.S. Pix Deals

London, April 18.

Coincident with the announcement of an ambitious program of 10 British features for the coming year with a budget of $5,500,000 to $6,000,000, Associated British Picture Corp. has also closed a number of major releasing deals in the U.S.

At a luncheon last week Macgregor Scott, the corporation's foreign sales topper, revealed that the company sold a backlog of 17 Elstree features for theatrical distribution to Elliott Hyman and Seven Arts. Deal involves a guarantee against distribution of more than $400,000.

He also confirmed a deal with Continental Distributing Co. for the U.S. release of the company's alltime top grosser in the UK, "The Rebel." Pic is currently on prerelease in the London area on the Associated British circuit and has broken records established by "Hercules Unchained" and "Saturday Night and Sunday Morning." Continental also is distributing the corporation's "School for Scoundrels," which is heading for a U.S. gross in excess of $600,000. It represented the biggest-ever return from the American market for an ABPC film.

Scott also gave advance details of the success of British pix in various world markets. "Operation Bullshine," for example, had played six weeks in Johannesburg and was proving to be one of the all-time champs Down Under. "School for Scoundrels" recently completed an eightweek run in Johannesburg and five weeks at the Warner showcase in Bombay.

The corporation's production program calls for five comedies out of the total of 10 pix. The initial project, "Go to Blazes," is due to get under way before the end of April. It will be followed by "The Young Ones," a musical starring Cliff Richards; a new Charlie Drake Comedy, another Tony Hancock vehicle and a Warner Bros. production, "Nicola," which will be scripted and produced by Karl Tunberg.

Also on the production slate is "Tamshine," "The Pot Carriers," "If Chance a Stranger," "White Witch of Rose Hall" and "The Golden Fool."

Among recently completed Associated British Films due for April release are "Hand in Hand" which opened in the U.S.; "Story of David," starring Jeff Chandler; and "Don't Bother to Knock," Richard Todd's first independent production for the company.

Plan to Move Prod. Of 'Soldadera' to Another Latin Country Shelved

Mexico City, April 11.

Plans to make "La Soldadera" in nearby Central America or other appropriate Latin region likely will be shelved at least as far as Mexican cooperation is concerned. Producers Jose Bolanos and Ed Gottlieb have learned that talent and technicians have signified they will not go to Guatemala, or any other country, to appear in the picture.

Consensus among talent and technicians, backing up the Jorge Ferretis shooting ban, is that they will not flout an official ruling and possible risk incurring displeasure of authorities if they accept contracts taking them outside of Mexico.

Noe Murayama, spokesman for the actors, first offered the top role and then reduced to a secondary part when dickering with Pedro Armendariz began, said he did not feel inclined to make the film outside of Mexico.

Both the National Assn. of Actors and the Union of Film Production Workers feel that interests of their members have been damaged by the long delays, for elements have rejected other offers while the matter of shooting permit was up in the air.

Jorge Ferretis, militant head of the Film Bureau, who touched off entire controversy, still dubbed "La Soldadera" as "garbage and an ill put-together hodgepodge." The Film Bureau head denied that the entity is exercising "coercion" to get national and foreign producers to turn out "sane, moral and healthy" diversion in films. He added that producers of their own free will should follow in the footsteps of the entirely acceptable entertainment offered by circus mimes of two and more decades ago.

And a "sane diversion" does not necessarily mean dull and moralizing themes, Ferretis said. He described producers as guardians of public morals and that they should strive to channel them to constructive ends and not present "deviationary themes" harmful not only to youth but adults as well.

Does a U. S. distrib have the legal or even moral right to ask the overseas producer to kick in and help defray the costs of U. S. court and censor battles pertaining to the producer's pic?

At least one French producer's rep doesn't think so. In a specific case that arose last year, the rep said the distrib had no legal right whatsoever, since no censor battles were envisioned when the original contract was entered into. The rep also pooh-poohed the moral obligation idea, because he felt the troubles met by the distrib were largely of the distrib's making.

The rep said that although the film in question, which had been conceived and executed as an "artistic work," had been passed for exhibition in N. Y. with a couple of cuts, the distrib went ahead and, knowing the possible consequences, tried to exhibit it elsewhere without any cuts. The results are several court cases still pending.

So far, the producer's rep has refused to allow any part of the producer's share of the proceeds be used to fight the cases. He is, in fact, a little irritated with the distrib, since he feels that though, had the distrib been successful, the take might have been big, there's going to be no take at all now, at least until the court cases are cleared up.

Another producer's rep, who is usually one of the first cry that his clients are being unnecessarily bilked by U. S. importers, takes sharp exception to his confrere in this specific matter. He charges that his French confere and the producer knew very well that they had a "hot little picture" and that if it made money in the U. S., it would be largely because of its controversial nature. He also says that the pic in question has made a good deal of money in the U. S. and that the producer does have a moral obligation to participate in the court battles, because every such court battle that is won, means more dollars in the pockets of all producers, including those of his tightfisted friend from Paris.

Recent "Seven Days of Russian Films" (March 21-27) in W-Berlin was also a success as to attendance figures at 6,000-seat Atelier am Zoo. Highest figure (92% of seating capacity) was reached by "Ivan the Terrible," the last Eisenstein pic. "Flying Cranes" (89%) and "Silent Don" (81%) were next successful. On the average, the seven Soviet releases reached a seating capacity of 81%. (Most of films had regular runs in W-Berlin before.)

German reporters learned that Tatjana Samoilowa (of "Flying Cranes") is not as popular in the Soviet Union as they suppose. A Russian said that she is more prominent in the western world than in her own country. "But, of course," he added, "we have no star cult." Both Russian films, "Flying Cranes," and "Ballad of a Soldier," drew better reviews in western countries than in the USSR.

Jewish playwright Moshe Lieber is currently reported in Berlin looking here for a man who saved his life during the Hitler years. Lieber, who now lives in Israel and whose play "The Pledge" will be preemed at local Academy of Arts in April, resided in Berlin in the 30s and was arrested by the Nazis. Unknown persons brought him, under mysterious circumstances, to railway station where they handed him a ticket to Palestine. Saviors were a composer, Hans Rennert, with whom Lieber had worked together, and, as Lieber believes, Rennert's father, then councillor of a Berlin supreme court. For some years, Lieber has been trying to contact the Rennert family but all efforts failed.

Ken Revis Has Got It Made

Blind Theatrical Agent's Vidfilm on Accomplishment Makes Him a Figure

London, April 18.

Ken Revis, 43-year-old partner in an Oxford theatrical agency, has become one of the most talked-about men in Britain. All on account of a filmed tv program which showed him dancing, water-skiing, piloting a speedboat and driving a car at 90 mph.

What made all this remarkable is the fact that Revis was blinded in World War II, in which he served as an Army bomb-disposal expert.

The theatrical agency, in which he is partnered with his wife and BBC producer William Scott-Coomber, is called Sandra Productions, after Sandra, a now-dead guide dog who once accompanied Revis to auditions.

Said Revis: "We founded the agency at Christmas Eve, 1957. I've always been interested in show business. As a schoolboy, I used to listen to Crosby—I still think there is nobody like him—and that gave me the idea I'd like to be a professional singer. The war ended that dream. But I trained at the Royal Academy of Music and I've sung in a few television shows.

"Now the agency is doing well. We're booking a show in Liverpool and also handling a couple of summer shows. We've booked a lot of big names, including Yana and the Malcolm Mitchell Trio.

"I often go to auditions, but my wife handles most of the actual booking. I look after the legal side of the contracts. I'm a qualified lawyer."

Revis studied law for six years when he was already blind as a result of a booby-trap which exploded in his face on Brighton Pier in 1943.

Apart from the agency, he has a job as a press officer with a car firm. His wife helps him in his agency work by reading contracts and correspondence to him. She also sits beside him—as steering-guide—when he drives that 90 mph car.

The tv program showing the busy life of Revis has brought him a stack of fan mail. "I hope it has done some good, particularly in encouraging other blind people," he said.

Only thing Revis has failed to do is learn to fly. Says he: "I didn't know which way up I was."

Russos Seek Permit To Show Widescreen in Mex

Mexico City, April 18.

Russia is dickering with federal film officials here to obtain an exhibition permit for Soviet-made product having a system similar to Cinerama. The first so-called "art" picture gives aspects of life in Russia and also plugs a hefty propaganda line for the "paradise of the proletariat" under red rule.

Film circles here view with mixed feelings the more or less frequent showings of Russian films. Principal beef of producers is not on ideological lines but that there is no reciprocity on the part of Moscow in showing Mexican pix in Volga land.

PLAYWRIGHT'S 2D BAN

Wilberto Canton Again Fails of Mexican License

Mexico City, April 11.

The Office of Public Entertainments has ruled negatively against Wilberto Canton's play, "Inolvidable" (Unforgettable), with censors dubbing it "immoral" because it accents "scenes of strong passion" with this making it unsuitable for public showing.

This is the first play ban this year by the Office, and the second time playwright Canton has been refused sanction. Censors prohibited showing of his "Los Malditos" (The Bad Ones) some time ago.

Censor ruling is that play cannot be shown in any legit house, experimental theatre, or in abbreviated version for television.

Play was to have premiered this month at the Arcos Caracol Theatre.

No 'Luther' In Spoleto?

Gian-Carlo Menotti's plan to present at his Festival of Two Worlds in Spoleto, Italy, this summer the world premiere of John Osborne's new play, "Luther" is unlikely to mature. Menotti reckoned without the the opposition of the Italian government, from whom he obtains a certain amount of cash subsidy, and the Vatican. A play dealing with one of the chief architects of Protestanism, along with John Calvin and Henry VIII, would hardly be palatable. Moreover, the play presents a Pope on the stage, and apparently not too attractively.

Exact status of the situation is not known but there has been much exchange of correspondence between Rome and New York.

Japan Seeking Aussie Outlets

Sydney, April 11.

A Japanese trade mission recently visited this country and made a strong bid to interest Aussie importers in the marketing of Nippon-made goods, ranging from cinema equipment to automobiles. Mission leaders said they were convinced wider markets here would result from the visit, especially as the government had granted a greenlight to imports.

It was hoped to introduce more Japanese-made films here, it was indicated, in the near future, thus to include playdating in selected cinemas in the keys and near-suburbs. Understanding here is that Japanese film interests are hopeful of securing an intimate cinema for the exclusive presentation of Japanese-made product early next year.

Right now, Japanese-made carbons for projectors are finding ready sales here in opposition to American and British product, selling at a much cheaper rate than the former two. To local exhibitors there's no flagwaving barrier when it's a question of price.

Italian and French films are firmly entrenched here and likely will continue to further advance as the year progresses. Presently, there are four Continental cinemas operating in this key city, with Greek-made films screening exclusively in an industrial nabe.

German and Polish film producers are looking for more release outlets here, and will link with established distribs for a wider coverage.

It's interesting to note that several exhibitors, are close to hostels carrying a fair-sized foreign population, are now booking foreign-lingo films and reaping good returns.

MEX UNIONS PEEVED BY 'GERONIMO' SETUP

Mexico City, April 11.

Mexican unions and actor-technical elements are disgruntled over the policy initiated by producer Hank Spitz in shooting "Geronimo" in Durango. Instead of Mexican elements, the producer is bringing down Americans, and relegating Mexicans to only 20 extra jobs and possibly two actors in minor supporting roles.

Union leaders, who look for Hollywood activity to boost film employment in Mexico, are watching the matter closely. Producer Spitz for his part frankly said that under present pay scales asked by Mexican talent there is not much saving, and so he prefers to use Americans who speak a clear English instead of the heavily accented version by Mexican players.

Scot Officials Turn Down 'Warsaw Ghetto'

Glasgow, April 11.

Permission for the screening of films that were too gruesome for the Germans to see in wartime has been refused by city magistrates. One is "Warsaw Ghetto," illustrating Nazi bestiality against the Jews. The others are "Private Property" and "Black Jackets," two films with a sex content.

Request came from Cross-Channel Distributors. Screening permission was kayoed on grounds that the films do not have a certificate from the British Board of Film Censors

Mexican Film Bureau Chief Skeptical About Co-Production

Mexico City, April 11.

Jorge Ferretis, Film Bureau head, is not convinced that coproductions can be the salvation of the Mexican motion picture industry as is argued by producers. The executive said that only "one or two serious coproduction offers" have been made in the past half year. In other cases, demands by foreign producers willing to coproduce are too exacting and leave little chance of profit for Mexican elements, according to Ferretis.

The industry must seek other means of pulling itself out of its financial slump. Ferretis suggested that the most likely trend would be to pact international names to appear in Mexican-made pictures. While this would mean heavy expenditure in coin because of salary demands of internationally-known players, he claimed the returns would more than cover these costs and would definitely build up Mexican foreign markets.

Ferretis cited the case of producer Ismael Rodriquez who pacted Japanese star Toshiro Mifune for a Mexican film. Advantage of this is that picture will be made in Mexico, give employment to national personnel and perhaps insure sale of exhibition rights in key areas throughout the world.

Another outcome of policy of contracting international players, a trend the government is disposed to aid, is that an exchange system can be fostered with Mexican players obtaining contracts with producers in other areas of the world. Coproduction deals, Ferretis said, generally mean that Mexican producers must yield considerable advantages to foreign partners, especially in matter of division of exclusive rights. To gain ground and new markets, and to financially benefit, Mexican producers should pay more attention to policy of paying for the services of box-office names.

Few Producers Willing to Pay

A limited number of producers have already initiated this policy, but the heavy cash demands of international players is a major drawback. Zacarias Productions has revealed that it is pacting Harry Belafonte to star with Maria Felix in "Musica Negra" (Black Music), with the Negro actor reportedly agreeing to a $30,000 fee, tax free, with travel and living expenses also paid. Few Mexican producers, even with Film Bank aid, can shell out this sort of coin for talent.

That's why producers, seeking a division of costs, favor the co-promotion deal. And it's reported that considerable interest on the part of Italians, French, Germans and British to dicker coproductions with Mexico has been shown. Jorge Rado, bandleader recently returned from an 18 month European tour, stated that there is "very great interest on the part of foreign producers to talk pictures with Mexican counterparts.

Claims 96c Top Stalls His Legit Plans in Mex

Mexico City, April 11.

Bob Lerner, unable to obtain an upped boxoffice scale for lavish musicals from the 96c top imposed by Mayor Ernesto P. Uruchurtu, says he will definitely stand on the sidelines until there is a change in the official policy. He claims it just is not practical to bring in high cost shows at present box-office prices.

Meantime, Lerner plans to take his Spanish version of "My Fair Lady" to Buenos Aires, with Mexican actress Rosita Quintana and Jose Cibrian in the leads. He also indicated he has plans for film production because "there is a very big field in Mexico and future prospects, despite current troubles, are very good."

Yank Gymnasts Boffo in Mid-East

Damascus, April 11.

Pull that ancient billing "triumphant tour" out of the files and three-sheet it all over town for seven nephews and one niece of Uncle Sam who comprise the U.S. Gymnast-Trampoline Team touring the Middle-East under the President Kennedy Special International Program for Cultural Presentations. Opening in Istanbul, they play Ankara, Nicosia, Beirut, Damascus, Amman, Kuwait, Karachi, Lahore, Kabul winding up in Tehran in April. They've been an unqualified sensation on every date.

Coached by Erwin Volz, vet coach of U.S. Gymnastic teams and Olympic judge, and captained by Abe Grossfeld, member of the '56 and '60 U.S. Olympic Gymnast teams and member of the '58 World Championship team to Moscow, the team includes Mrs. Muriel Davis Grossfeld (wife of captain), member of '56 and '60 U.S. Olympic Women's Gymnast team, William Buck of Iowa State, three-time champ of Big Ten Side Horse competition and outstanding trampoline performer and leading comic of the group; Garland O'Quinn and Donald R. Tonry, members of the '60 Olympic team; Larry Snyder, U.S. Trampoline Champion; Marshall Claus (injured in Beirut) and Armando Vegas (injured in Turkey) both out of show and replaced by Raymond W. Hadley Jr., who placed first in the U.S. Central A.A.U. gymnastics in '59 and Tom Osterland of the University of Michigan.

A typical example of the show's success was the date in Damascus. Sponsored by Syrian Minister of Education, Amjad Tarabulsi, the show was booked into the Commercial H.S. because it was the only indoor spot in town with a ceiling to accommodate the trampoline work. The first performance was the VIP show. In affairs of this nature generally just the boys tapped to do the honors show. In this case, on hand for the amenities were Secretary General of Ministry of Education, Omar Shakashuro, and Syrian Region Director of Physical Education, Anwar Tello, who gave the welcoming spiel. The rest of the big wheels, including Army brass, instead of giving away their ducats, showed up in force, bringing relatives, friends, etc., overflowing into the aisles. It was a record attendance for any performance at the H.S. Minister Tarabulsi got the message and moved the next performance out-of-doors to the Damascus Fairgrounds Basketball Pavillion seating 2,500. They shoe-horned 3,500 into the stands . . . and turned more away.

Even their receptions were big draws. Consul General and Mrs. Ridgeway B. Knight tossed a VIP reception at the official residence and it was attended beyond protocol. Don Shea, PAG (flack man) of the Consulate General, threw a party for press, radio, tv, and sports.

Mission accomplished. Real Yankee Doodle Dandies.

Teleglobe System Of Toll Upcoming

Hollywood, April 18.

A new pay tv system, one of the three approved by Federal Communications Commission, will be tested over the air within three months, it was disclosed yesterday by Gerald Bartell, prexy of Bartell Broadcasting Corp. and Macfadden Publications. New system is called Teleglobe, in which Bartell's company has made a considerable investment.

Bartell, passing a few days here talking to picture people and surveying the field for a station, which he may buy to conduct the test, declined to say where the test would be conducted but intimated that he had already made a selection. He said the full details would be divulged at a press conference in N.Y. next week.

"I'm very much sold on toll-tv," said Bartell, "but only as an over-the-air venture. I don't believe in spending millions for the installation of cables."

Asked whether he would have any dificulty in getting FCC approval for the test, he replied "not at all." He declined to elaborate but indicated it was all cut and dried. Teleglobe, he said, was a sound security system, in which any set could get the picture but would require a switch to receive the accompanying sound.

Bartell had visited Phoenix and Frisco before coming here but declined to say whether either of these cities would be selected for the test. He indicated that a station would be bought for the experimental project.

Bartell Broadcasting owns four radio stations in this country and tv stations in Haiti and The Netherlands, West Indies.

Peru Option

Kaplan are handling Kline's negotiations.

The writer, who spent seven years on and off prepping the screenplay, will not attempt to direct it himself but is seeking a co-producer setup.

Option for cooperation by Peruvian government in use of army personnel and facilities followed writer's meeting last year with President Prado. Option arrangement is dated Dec. 5, 1960. It can be extended depending on actual start date of filming.

Kline figures 50% of pic, including massive battle action and march over the Andes, will be shot in Peru. Sequences also will entail filming in other South American countries and in Mexico as well, according to Kline. He said film would be a complete Pan-American venture, employing performers and crews from north and south America. Pre production work already is being supervised at Churubusco studio by Peter Mayer, son of N.Y. theatre operator Arthur L. Mayer, and Augustine Delgado, Kline's longtime Mexican associate. Mexican film union, Kline said, has offered to join in financing by providing part of production completion guarantee.

the number of Americans who attend the Cannes fest compares to the number at the Venice fest, but thought it might be a significant figure to check.

While in New York, Meccoli met with Motion Picture Assn. of America prexy Eric Johnston and other execs seeking their cooperation in the 1961 Venice affair. They are genuinely interested, he reported, expressing satisfaction at the frankness of his talks. Last year's Venice fest threatened to turn into a diplomatic shambles when fest authorities refused to accept the official MPAA entry. Since that fracas had taken place before his appointment, Meccoli thought it the better part of valor not to express his opinions on what had happened.

Earlier, during a brief stopover in Washington, Meccoli had presented Johnston with the Venice festival award, voted the MPAA prexy by the Biennale D'Arte headed by Prof. Italo Siciliano.

Par May Drop Special Ticket Sale for 'Jacks'

Paramount is expected to drop shortly its special ticket-sale for "One-Eyed Jacks." Gimmick was offered as a public convenience, but the word is around that it resulted in public confusion instead.

Policy called for the availability of tickets up to seven days in advance with the customer guaranteed a seat although the picture would be on continuous run. In New York, ducats are available at all Loew's houses, plus other sites, for the current Capitol run of "Jacks." Par has to see to it, of course, that no performance is sold beyond capacity of the house.

Par decided to give the idea a whirl as a followup to the successful marketing of "Psycho" (no seating once the opening frame is projected).

Seems as though it's hard to break with tradition, no matter how noble the motive.

WHAT'S 'OBSCENE'?

Jury Can't Decide — Lemmond Faces Second Such Charge

Charlotte, N. C., April 18.

After nine hours of deliberation, a jury of seven men and five women filed out of the jury room in Superior Court to say they couldn't decide if "Sun Lovers Holidays" is an "obscene" film.

Judge P. C. Froneberger declared a mistrial in the appeal of a County Court conviction of Fox Drive-In Theatre operator Bill Lemmond Jr. on a charge of exhibiting an obscene film. The jury had been 8-4 in favor of conviction.

Meanwhile, Lemmond faced trial in County Court on another charge of exhibiting an obscene film. He is scheduled to be tried April 18 for showing "For members Only," another nudist film.

First charge came when Lemmond and his parttime projectionist Carson Paul Jenkins were arrested on March 1. Lemmond was sentenced to 90 days in jail, suspended on payment of $350 and costs. Jenkins was fined court costs. They appealed and the case against Jenkins was dropped earlier in the appeal trial.

On March 22, county police again raided the theatre and confiscated the second nudist film.

SPG's Wage Hikes In New 2-Yr. Pacts With 20th, WB, Col

Screen Publicists Guild negotiated new two-year pacts with 20th-Fox, Warner Bros. and Columbia last Monday (17) night to avert a walkout that midnight—expiration of union contracts with the three companies. Meantime, talks continued at Universal and Metro, where current pacts terminate April 30 and June 1 respectively. Accord with United Artists was reached Saturday (15).

New agreements with 20th and Col provide weekly wage boosts of $8, and hike minimum salary for all job classifications. Union claims it also won increased job security, achieving further modification in the clause relating to hiring of outside agency personnel, a particular sore point with the union, and also via an improved "tolerance" clause involving overtime pay for publicity contact personnel. SPG feeling on the right of companies to transfer workloads ran particularly high in wake of recent shifts to outside agencies by 20th.

24 For 20th-Fox May Cost $50-Mil

Hollywood, April 18.

Give or take a million or two, 20th-Fox will spend about $50,000,000 on 24 productions for its 1961-62 season, studio chief Robert Goldstein said here. The figure doesn't include amount to be spent on Darryl Zanuck's "The Longest Day" or George Stevens' "Greatest Story Ever Told."

All but two of the pix will be made in Hollywood—those going abroad being Leo McCarey's "China Story," William Holden-Clifton Webb starrer, and Mark Robson's "The Inspector," with Steve Boyd and Natalie Wood. Both will be shot in Britain. There will also be European location work on "Tender Is The Night."

Included in the studio operation will be Sam Katzman's three $1,000,000 pix. He also has an option for three more.

Commenting on 20th's contract list of new players embracing 14 actresses and 21 actors, Goldstein said that the investment in these people is small if he eventually makes a star out of one of them. To help them along, he has circulated tests of all the youngsters through the other studios for possible loanouts. "It's exposure these people need," he said.

The Homo

way stage six years ago because of a scene in which Van Heflin kissed a fellow actor full on the mouth.

Because of the ruckus raised by the Legion of Decency when the Production Code approved "Suddenly Last Summer" in late 1959, it's a cinch the Code people are going to be particularly leery of letting "perversion or any inference of it" by in the projected film adaptations of the plays cited above. (Last year both the Code and the Legion rejected two feature films about Oscar Wilde).

An interesting angle on the Legion-Code fracas re "Suddenly" was that the Legion, while calling the film essentially moral and giving it a "separate classification" instead of condemning it, at the same time blasted the Code for having approved the picture, charging that "Suddenly" specifically broke the code rule on perversion.

This, in turn, points up the dilemma of the producer who tries to serve two masters—the Code and the Legion. What, for example, happens in the case of "The Devil's Advocate," a serious and probing drama which features an important homo character as well as a suicide?

Conceivably the Legion would not blast the film version if the homo stays in the story (it has no hard and fast rules on this subject such as the Code's) but it frowns on the glorification of suicide. The Code, on the other hand, is not so strict on suicide, but cannot pass the homo bit.

Par's 20-a-Year

picture so long as the public responds, the market being particularly receptive for the "right kind" of production.

The extensively-diversified Par is now in the midst of Telemeter, this being the home toll system which, after several years, has yet to get beyond a suburb of Toronto, causing trade comment about "getting off the ground." Balaban, when asked about this, said he's satisfied with the progress so far, did not look for an overnight blockbuster, and wants the franchise customers coming to Par, not vice versa. Incidentally, the major talent concerned with Telemeter's current run of "specials" is in on a participation, meaning incremental payoffs with re-runs and expanded audiences, Par's top man reported.

Par's common stock is now exchanging hands at the new-high level of $85 per share—how about that? In an allusion to the professional analysts who have been consistently supporting the stock issue, Balaban answers, "The people downtown are responsible, not us."

with all the craftsmanship I could bring to bear on a subject which I loved and respected.

The most demanding problem in the script was to recreate the complex man who was Sigmund Freud in his middle thirties. Attractive, intense, neurotic by his own admission, a failure in some way, a maverick in medicine, with a fine, warm sense of humor, a strong attachment to his mother and to his wife, beset by the anti-Semitism of his time (which proved to be an ironic forerunner of the Nazis who would make him a pawn for ransom in his last days) Freud was a challenging subject to say the least.

For, with all those qualities and, indeed, because of them he was also the man who reached into the unknown areas of the human mind and with genius and daring opened the door to affirmative and constructive treatment of mental illness for the first time in history.

Of course, this was an enormous challenge. But I assume that I met it, in part at least, for the play found producers, stars, a director, a cast and finally a place on Broadway.

Other Research

I would not like to give the impression that all the research was done only by me. Or that it stopped the day the production began. Far from it. Freud's own description of the Case of Elizabeth von R. his letters, and other works were devoured by an avid cast and director in the search for real truth on which to build and sustain theatrical truth.

Evidently this devotion and integrity and excitement transmitted itself to the critics and the audiences. For we were favored with fine reviews and I am happy to report that the performances in "A Far Country" at the Music Box Theatre have restored the word "bravo" to the vocabulary of Broadway audiences. And it is a gratifying sound as Kim Stanley, Steven Hill, Sam Wanamaker, Lili Darvas and the rest of an excellent cast can testify.

On opening night, Bernays came backstage and insisted on posing for photographs with members of the cast, claiming this right as a nephew of Sigmund Freud.

I need not tell VARIETY's readers that Bernays has been a publicity man by profession for almost two generations. And being a publicity man, he is well aware of what the famed French General, Foch, is reputed to have said during a rough moment in World War One, "My center is collapsing. My right flank is pushed back. Excellent! I will attack!"

For Bernays, like certain other publicity men, have a saying of their own, lifted loosely from Foch, which goes like this, "Someone else has a hit. I want in. Excellent! I will attack!"

But having decided to attack, Bernays was faced with certain embarrasing facts. His center was indeed weak, because the praise of the critics and the enthusiastic ovations of the audiences prevented him from seriously attacking the play or the performances on a dramatic level. And his right flank was badly pushed back because (by his own admission in his article) his psychiatric advisor had informed him that the scientific aspects of the play were truthful and sound beyond reproach. So Bernays was left with only one avenue of attack, the pose of the outraged relative of Dr. Sigmund Freud which he adopted in VARIETY.

That he is a relative of Freud is a fact. But as I will reveal, it was Freud who was outraged, not Bernays.

Now, briefly, about the article itself. The very opening sentence is a misstatement. Bernays says, "Some months ago the press agent of 'The Far Country' by Henry Denker telephoned me."

No one, repeat—no one—associated with the play initiated any contact with Bernays. There is no need to take my word for that as the "article" betrays itself.

Read it and then try to answer the following questions:

If we had solicited Bernays' help as he claims, why would we have avoided talking to him, as he also claims?

If we wanted his opinion and his help why would we have refused to send him a script? For, by his own admission in his "article," he had to secure one finally from "a friend."

And, again, if we were seeking his help, if we were calling him, why did he finally have to trap me at home early on a Saturday morning?

It is quite clear even from a single reading of Bernays that rather than seeking his help, as he says, we tried to avoid it. And instead of soliciting his assistance, we were, in fact, trying to avoid his gratuitous meddling.

Forced to tell you why now. I must admit that his reputation for being a troublesome "professional relative" was well known to us. And we knew, too, that he had nothing of value to tell us about Sigmund Freud because he never did know Freud very well to begin with.

Most certainly he did not know as much about Freud as was readily available to us, and in more lucid and impartial form, in the huge body of biographical and scientific work written by men and women who knew Sigmund Freud more intimately and far, far better than Bernays ever did.

But most important, Sigmund Freud himself had warned us about his difficult nephew, Bernays.

Before we come to that, a brief word about what is to me, the main burden of Bernays' article for it raises a question of importance not merely about "A Far Country," not merely for me, but for all creative people. It concerns his attack on my interpretation and treatment of Freud and certain members of his family.

When I undertook to write this play, I did not intend to portray Freud in such a way as to please any of his publicity-seeking relatives. I undertook to recreate Freud in the way that I saw him after studying, assimilating and living with all the relevant material I could find.

Faithful

Now, it happens (but only because it best suited the telling of my story), that the character of Freud as written and portrayed in "A Far Country" is faithful in all its important aspects to most of the biographies of Freud, as well as to certain of his own descriptions of himself.

But even if our characterization were not so faithful, even if we had taken liberties with it for dramatic reasons which we felt to be sound, we believe that as creative people we have that right.

If the playwright, yes, and the performer and the director, too, cannot add something of himself or herself to the creative work in which they are involved, then the very process of creativity and dramatic illumination will be seriously impaired, if not destroyed.

But the worst of all was a technique which most of us devoutly hoped had disappeared from the American scene—the technique of planting a falsehood and then making it bloom into a headline. Taking his statements as true, VARIETY's sub-head naturally reads "Nephew Raps Theatrical License' Excuse of Denker." This seems to indicate that one, Denker, being caught in an error attempted to excuse or cover his embarrassment by pleading "theatrical license," and that one, Bernays, was too wise to be taken in by it.

The facts are: I never made any excuse to Mr. Bernays about "A Far Country" because I never felt any need to. And so I never had any need to plead "theatrical license" which gave Bernays nothing to rap, except one simple fact, we didn't want any part of him.

In his "article" Bernays claims, with unpardonable pride, "The General Introductory Lectures on Psychoanalysis" were translated under my supervision."

I think VARIETY's readers might like to know how Freud himself felt about this. Let me refer them to Ernest Jones' towering biography, The Life and Work of Sigmund Freud, a biography completely authorized by the Freud family. In Volume Three, Jones, speaking of the same translation which Bernays was so proud to supervise, says:

"Freud was displeased with the numerous errors and other imperfections in the translation and later on expressed his regret at having sanctioned it."

But even more relevant, and again citing Volume Three of the authorized Jones' biography, the following, this time concerning Freud's book "Ego and the Id":

"Dorothy Thompson had written a severe criticism of the book which had so angered Edward Bernays that he wrote Freud asking what steps should be taken to defend him. In reply Bernays received a terse cablegram of only two words. "Never mind.'"

Perhaps, on receiving such an irresponsible article from this same nephew, VARIETY, instead of dignifying it, should have followed the grand old man's advice and sent it back to Nephew Bernays with those two words written across it, "Never mind."

French Aid

it more difficult for newcomers to make their way.

Film Aid, gotten from cinema admission ticket taxes, is given to producers usually on a percentage of the receipts of their last pix, locally and abroad, when they start a new film. The advance payments are supposedly to step up quality by awarding it to worthy scripts which should make worthwhile pix. But it is pointed out that the commission is composed of ministerial reps, noted writers and scripters, but only one man who actually made pix, Leon Mathot. Latter has not made a film since the war.

Thus they feel that many are not competent enough to recognize what could make an unusual film and fall back on the better-known commercial names. It is also pointed out that the two offbeaters by newcomers, which got this quality nod, were scripted by members of the commission.

As a result, a movement is on to either change this commission, do away with it or to have it give an equitable chance to newcomers really trying something original. Most of the 23 pix getting this Film Aid coin were already solid biz prospects or by noted "New Wavers."

UA'S 1960 NET UP

United Artists' 1960 net, after provision for income taxes of $3,476,000, rose to $4,295,000, equivalent to $2.85 per common share, from $4,111,000, or $2.47 a share, in 1959.

The 1960 net includes a special credit of $797,000, after provision for related taxes on income, arising from adjustment of prior years' reserves.

Worldwide gross income reaches $108,531,000 in 1960, compared to $95,068,000 in 1959.

Impose Trustee Upon Clerks' Union; Charged With Theatre Job Bribes

International office of Retail Clerks (AFL-CIO) has clamped a trusteeship on Local 1115-D (Bookmen and Chargemen) while three Federal agencies investigate complaints of bribes and payoffs to officers of the local in order to secure choice jobs.

The local covers supervisors of theatre concessions, cloakrooms, souvenir books, etc. It and a sister local (1115-C) covering concessions employes have a record of previous brouhahas fanning out from bribe charges.

In a letter to the 1115-D membership, Fred A. Ammond, trustee for the local and a vicepres of the International, disclosed that the complaints are being probed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Department of Labor and Internal Revenue. A special membership meeting last week (11), at which Ammond was to make a report, reportedly brokeup in a free-for-all.

Part of the local broke away about two years ago and won certification as local 863 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes. At the time, some 50 to 60 members were involved.

Incidentally, a check revealed the phone at 1115-D has been disconnected.

'Ben-Hur' All-Ways, All-Time Tops But 'Carry on Nurse' Right Behind

By T. BIDWELL McCORMICK

Denver, April 18

"Ben-Hur," now in its 53d week at the Denham theatre, has broken every known record for long runs, number of attendance and gross receipts ever established in this Mile High City since the first nickelodeon was opened on Curtis street back in 1901.

Opening April 10, 1959, with a series of press previews, the then newly remodelled former stock house has run a total of 563 performances of "Ben-Hur" to an estimated attendance of 277,000 persons and a gross near the $500,000 mark.

Nearest approaching long run for an advanced price reserved seat policy was "Around the World in 80 Days" (UA) which played at the Tabor theatre for 35 weeks and five days, some 16 weeks short of the "Ben-Hur" run which at this time shows little sign of closing in the reasonably near future, according to Mrs. Vera Cockrill, owner-manager of the 800 seat downtown house.

One film, which opened in Denver about a month later than the William Wyler epic did, appeared as though it might equal the "Ben-Hur" run in number of weeks was the British "Carry on Nurse" which ran at the Esquire a continuous 204 days, was moved over to the larger Center theatre for another 14 and finally completed its continuous first run with 83 days at the Bluebird, but even this fell short by about 11 weeks of the "Ben-Hur" record, and of course "Nurse" was on a regular price basis.

As, if and when "Ben-Hur" leaves the Denham, it will be followed in that house by UA's "Exodus," also on a reserved seat advanced price basis.

SUE TO FORCE PLAYOFF OF FERNANDEL RELEASE

Judge William C. Hecht Jr. of N. Y. Supreme Court Monday (17) reserved decision on a petition filed by Zenith International seeking a temporary injunction against Richard Davis, Fine Arts Theatre. Injunction asks that Davis' eastside artie be restrained from playing any other film except Zenith's "The Cow and the Prisoner," Fernandel starrer, following the run of the current attraction, "Breathless."

Another Zenith French import, "Hiroshima Mon Amour," gave the Fine Arts one of its longest runs last year. Zenith claims Davis is trying to break a contract by which he agreed to take the Fernandel film.

Arguing the case for the plaintiff was attorney Everett Frolich. Michael Mayer was attorney for Davis.

2d Suit Aimed At Atlanta Censor

Atlanta, April 18.

More legal batteries were brought into play last week against Atlanta's motion picture censorship setup when Continental Distributing, Inc., filed suit in Fulton Superior Court in behalf of "Room at the Top," barred from showing in Atlanta by edict of Mrs. Christine Smith Gilliam.

This marked second time within less than two weeks censorship machinery has been target of legal attack. March 24 a similar suit was filed seeking to enjoin censor and others involved from barring showing of Lopert Pictures Corp.'s "Never on Sunday."

Both suits were filed by Atlanta law firm of Heyman, Abram & Young, with details being handled by Maurice N. Maloof, member of firm.

Two petitions are practically identical with the exception that suit filed last week asks $20,000 damages, contending that delay in giving "Room" a permit has caused release to decrease in value in that amount because its showing a year ago (after it had won top actress Oscar for Simone Signoret) would have attracted much more business than it will when shown in Atlanta at this time.

Suit involving "Room at the Top" (like one concerning "Never on Sunday") names City of Atlanta, a group of individuals including Mayor William B. Harts field in their capacity as Atlanta's Board of Censors, and Mrs. Gilliam, city's censor.

Continental contends that barring of Laurence Harvey, Simone Signoret starrer is "illegal and unconstitutional act of censors" and deprives plaintiff of its right to show "Room at the Top."

Mrs. Gilliam refused to license pic because she believed dialogue "too earthy."

(She turned thumbs down on "Never on Sunday" because of use of word "whore" and scene wherein Miss Mercouri and sailor she picked up in a bar are shown in bedroom.)

Cincy License Up

Cincinnati, April 18

Imperial Theatre, uptown nabe, may operate within a license until April 24, when the management will appear in Municipal Court on charges of exhibiting and possessing "obscene" film. Judge Frank M. Gusweiler in Common Pleas Court so ruled in issuing a temporary injunction to prevent police or city officials from arresting the operators, I. M. Amusements, headed by William Berger, N.Y.

Theatre was raided by police March 11 after vice squad detectives viewed there a film, "Hell-Out In The Sun" with a nudist colony scene. Management applied for a license March 1 which was denied by the city March 15.

William Fangenbaum, 32, projectionist charged with exhibiting an obscene film, asked for a jury trial. Police Court Judge Clarence Denning set the hearing for April 24. Police confiscated four reels of film and also arrested Walter Hall, 38, projectionist.

Considering the fact that 20th has a rather large number of contract players who could have been easily had (it is, perhaps, a tribute to both her talent, and her single-minded pursuit of a goal, that she was signed. She puts in, parenthetically, that despite the fact that she wanted to do the role—that of a crippled alcoholic (a phrase she might call redundant—and does—the fact that Rossen wanted her, she almost didn't get it because of all the roadblocks put up by intervening agents.

There was talk of a long-term contract with 20th, which was about the last thing in the world she was ready to sign. Finally she was able to wangle a "very loose commitment," whereby she might do two more pictures for 20th that emphasizes the "looseness" of the agreement, and gives every indication that she might be ready to wait another five years to make her point about not doing roles that aren't important to her.

Tony Curtis' old girl friend has grown up.

Smiling Metro

some interpretation for the late arrivals. M-G (when it was Loew's Inc.) was the bellwether of the film industry for years in the interpretation of banking and Wall Street sources. Changes in, and fighting for, the helmsman's post, and control, along with the internal disharmony, contributed to a backslide. M-G sunk and sunk.

Even this would be past history, but not to be overlooked is the fact that the Wall Streeters in many cases think M-G might well be high man on that totem pole again. No one's saying for sure, knowing full well that most all other film companies are going ahead. But it's doubtless an intriguing thought for Vogel and his latter-day associates. Is MGM king of the hill again?

Big 'Bounty' Nut

There is an abundance of chancey factors involved, although it's obvious that the downtown investors think the odds favor the company. The stock quotations go up and up. That the risks are big is reflected, for one, in the fact that "Bounty" alone is a $10,000,000 negative film investment item.

But with or without the uncertainties, the conclusion is drawn that M-G is no longer a sedentary enterprise. There are more co-productions abroad and add to these the six-picture deal with Cinerama. "How the West Was Won" and "The Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm" are now in preparation via the C'rama process.

Television was something to be eschewed in the past, but no more. Columbia and Warners perhaps were the first of the major film companies to "get with" the tv potential. Now M-G is in, with telefilm productions playing all three national networks. These include "Father of the Bride," "Dr. Kildare," "Cain's Hundred," "Asphalt Jungle" and "National Velvet."

M-G figures importantly, too, in legit, what with "Carnival." Legit musical apparently (at this stage) will be a smash and the film company is 50% financier. "Carnival" is a re-doing of M-G's own "Lili"; M-G has the "in" on another celluloid remake of the on-the-boards remake, making for an unusual situation.

In the experimental field, M-G has formed a 50-50 partnership company with the Kalvar Co., looking to the development of a new process in the development and production of film. This is in the research stage, but if anything comes of it, it could be revolutionary.

M-G common stock on the New York Stock Exchange closed last week at $66.25 per share. Just a year ago it was trading at $28. Some Wall Streeters, recommending the stock, say earnings for the current year ending Aug. 31 will equal about $5 per share. This would be a tidy (about 30%) increase over 1960's $3.83.

Carl Sims, formerly Warner Bros. booker in the Dallas exchange, has joined the W. O. Bearden Theatres, operators of the Chief and Arcadia Theatres there.

Santa Monica Cops on Their Toes; Auditorium Works Out in General

Santa Monica, April 18

Like the strawberry festival which served prunes instead because there were no strawberries, the 33d annual Academy Awards were held this Monday (17) in Santa Monica, which hadn't seen so many screen figures since Mack Sennett's bathing beauties cavorted there.

The usual lights, glamor and roars prevailed with Santa Monica plainly happy to have all this attention plus the American Broadcasting network television spread.

If there was one aspect which seemed marked this time it was the emphasis of enthusiasm upon the very young players like Bobby Darin, Sandra Dee, Gardner Mac-Kay. They rated with Liz Taylor and Jack Lemmon.

Facilities at the new auditorium were both good and bad for the affair. Outside there is greater spectator area. Bleachers were set up in advance sufficient to hold 1,200. Police on duty, however, estimated more than 1,500 had crowded into these seats, with another 1,000 standees lining every available space outside 10 rows deep.

Traffic at the auditorium was under perfect control. Area allows three lanes of cars at the entrance with five cars per lane, allowing a total of 15 cars to unload at one time. This compares favorably with conditions at the Pantages in Hollywood, where event has been held in past years. Maximum of 10 cars could be handled there Nevertheless, many ticketholders still arrived late, due to traffic snarls outside immediate area. Fans indicated, as well, that there was considerable difficulty in getting public transportation to the site although bleachers had begun to fill as early as five a.m.

Newsmen and photographers welcomed the ext a space available on runway into the aud and its spacious lobby. By the same token, fans expressed considerable displeasure because area was so large they were not able to attract personalities to the ropes for autographs and pictures.

Santa Monica police had carefully controlled crowd details well in advance. Chief Earl Reinhold added 20 men to his regular staff of 90 for the job.

While everything went off smoothly there were characteristic bloopers: starlet Mara Massey, at the height of tension, was mistaken by fans for Liz Taylor, adding more excitement to the later arrival of the star destined to be honored as "best actress." Biggest goof of the evening came in the height of arrivals when Burt Lancaster who was to be named "best actor," was completely neglected until he got to the entrance.

Stars and production personnel of note were generously mixed in the [illegible] Allied Artists prexy Steve Broidy was the first studio exec arriving followed closely by Adolph Zukor and Jack Karp.

Central point of decor for the affair was "Oscar" himself, featured in a huge marquee cut out outside and in several large gold replicas inside. Color scheme throughout was blue and gold, which appears to be the regular coloring of the auditorium.

12 Oscars to UA for New Totals Record in Derby; U's 'Spartacus' Showing

Santa Monica, April 18.

United Artists, which this year set alltime record with 41 nominations, scored second alltime mark by spurting home easy winner with 12 Oscars in the 33d annual Academy derby. Highest previous win for any company was Metro last year with 11, all for "Ben-Hur."

UA's total, however, was spread among six pix, with Billy Wilder's "Apartment" copping five, Burt Lancaster-Dick Brooks' "Elmer Gantry" three. Each of pair romped in with two major awards "Apartment" getting "best picture" and "best direction" while "Gantry" snagged "best actor" and "best supporting actress." Score highest for UA since it racked up eight in 1952, six in '59.

Nearest competitor was Universal, boasting four Oscars, all for "Spartacus," including "best supporting actor."

Metro came in with two, including "best actress"; Columbia, 20th, Disney rated one apiece, latter also garnering honorary juvenile award for Britain's Hayley Mills.

METRO'S 'MOLLY BROWN' MAY STYMIE 20TH & WB

Hollywood, April 18.

Metro over the past weekend hauled off the shelf the late Gene Fowler's "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" and assigned Joseph Pasternak to produce. Studio thus may thwart both 20th-Fox and Warners in plans to bid for film rights to Meredith Willson's current Broadway musical of the same title.

M-G picked up the Fowler book many years ago.

meeting also will be asked to approve an increase in the authorized AB-PT shares from 5,000,000 to 10,000,000. Management says there's no intent at present to issue the additional 5,000,000 shares but it's advisable to have them available for general business and corporate purposes.

Highest paid officer of AB-PT in 1960 was president Leonard H. Goldenson who collected $181,000, including $25,000 as expense allowance. Oliver F. Treyz, topkick on the broadcasting end, received $98,000. Simon B. Siegel, financial v.p.-treasurer, got $84,961.

All incumbents are up for reelection to the board at the upcoming stockholder meeting, along with a new nominee, Jack Hausman, president of M. Hausman & Sons, textile manufacturing company.

New York Sound Track

In the seven months of "El Cid" production in Spain, the man of greatest self-effacement is associate producer Mike Waszynski, the celebrated aristocrat from Poland. Has anybody seen his name mentioned? No. Meantime the limelight beats upon director Anthony Mann, stars Charlton Heston and Sophia Loren.

"Disneyland is a wonderful place to visit, but I wouldn't want to live there!" quipped satirist Jorie Remus, current at Chicago Playboy Club . . . Gene Kelly finding it hard to get enough English speaking thesps for "Gigot" (20th) which he starts in Paris this week with Jackie Gleason starring.

Of all the independent young filmmen who have turned out highly praised short subjects recently in and around N. Y., writer-director Robert McCarty seems to be one of the first to make any profit. His "Rooftops" was just sold outright to Columbia for a figure which guarantees him a sizable amount of take-home change . . . Helen Thompson's Play-of-The-Month has bought out 25 performances of "La Dolce Vita," opening its hardticket run tonight (Wed.) at Henry Miller's Theatre . . . The New Yorker Theatre, upper west side artie, says its showing of Gloria Swanson's "Queen Kelly" Monday (24) night will be the first time the Eric Von Stroheim-directed pic has been shown in an America theatre open to the general public.

United Artists veep Ed Heineman will be attending a large number of the 16 special merchandising conferences the company is holding across the country to promote "The Young Savages." With producer Harold Hecht and sales veep Jim Velde, he launched the sessions in Chicago last Wednesday (12). Similar meet was held in L.A. Monday (17) . . . Tom Brandon's Brandon Films is supplying the product for the Bleecker Street Cinema's current 10-week fest of film classics . . . Nat Alper, formerly service manager for the color division of Movielab, has been named assistant sales manager of Guffanti Film Labs here.

John Griggs, the actor who is almost equally renowned among silent film buffs for his large collection of rare old prints including a pre-1930 "Birth of Nation," has come up with another raris avis, Rudolph Valentino and His 88 American Beauties of 1923. This was the "Miss America" whopdedo of that innocent year, with the maidens equipped for shepherdess work, complete with crooks, and the great lover in tails. A long way from today's bikinis . . . interestingly the Miss America of that year was Norma Niblock of Toronto.

Zenith International prexy Dan Frankel, who has recently been hitting it big with such French imports as "Hiroshima Mon Amour," "The Lovers" and "The 400 Blows," has taken on the British farce, "Follow A Star," Norman Wisdom vehicle. Pic opens Tuesday (25) at the Embassy here . . . Juliette Greco, all of whose American films have been made entirely abroad, goes into her first Hollywood production early next summer—20th's "Commancheros" costarring John Wayne and Charlton Heston . . . Jack Hoffberg has been appointed U. S. rep for Filmax of Barcelona, Spain . . . Amerpol Enterprises, U. S. rep for Polish films, expects its CinemaScope-color spectacle, "The Knights of The Teutonic Order," to be ready for this market late this year.

Cy Harvey, Janus Films topper, sees a similarity between the critical reception being given his Italo import, "L'Avventura," now at the Beekman, and Janus' first Ingmar Bergman imports. Most of the local reviews of the Michelangelo Antonioni film rave about the photography, the acting and the visual quality—a couple even call it a masterpiece—but they also persist in saying it is complex to the point of obscurity. It took the U. S. release of a couple of the top Bergman films before the crix decided the Swede wasn't really that far out.

More on the upcoming Nazi film cycle: 20th-Fox reissuing its "Diary of Anne Frank" . . . Allied Artists has finally gotten N. Y. a date on its highly praised German import, "The Bridge." Film which AA acquired just a year ago, opens May 1 at the 68th Street Playhouse.

Peter Dana, eastern sales manager of Pathe-America's Distributing, has set 110 New England openings July 26 for Pathe-America's first feature, "The Deadly Companions" . . . The Living Theatre, one of the most avent garde of the off-Broadway legit houses, is presenting a special series of three Monday night screenings of off-beat films from U.S. and abroad. Series started Monday (17), with further programs set for May 8, June 5.

Kahn-Weingarten Productions has been formed by scripters Bernard Kahn and Arthur Weingarten to produce features and shorts.

Theatrical barristers Edward Colton and Theodore R. Kupferman speak on motion picture copyright law before the Federal Bar Assn. of N. Y., N. J. and Conn., April 24, in NBC studio 6A . . . Unusual angle on Edmond Levy's Oscar nominee documentary, "Beyond Silence," is that it has no theatrical exhibition, having been produced for the U. S. Information Agency. Fed law says it can't be shown publicly or commercially in the U. S.

Richard Morris, who did the "Unsinkable Molly Brown" book, signed by Ross Hunter to screenplay "If a Man Answers" . . . U's "Secret Ways" set for the RKO Palace May 10 . . . John Huston on the Coast prior to putting "Freud" before the cameras in Vienna June 1 . . . Joe Levine figures his "Showmanship Caravan" played to some 1,100 exhibs representing more than 8,500 theatres and circuits . . . American Film Fest, primarily for 16m presentations, is underway today (Wed.) and tomorrow at the Barbizon-Plaza. Over 300 entries reported in 33 subject categories.

Allied States '61 convention down for the Eden Roc Hotel, Miami Beach, Dec. 4-7.

"Milk From Contented Movie Fans" is the gag head on an item in Maclean's 8'. It tells how U. of Maine dairymen soothe cows cooped up in barns all winter "by showing them films of alfalfa fields—and handsome bulls" . . . Perhaps not surprisingly since Dixie takes the War Between The States, as they deadpan the Civil War, most seriously, the first batch of booking contracts for the Times Film documentary "True Story of Civil (sic) War" has been in the South. This is the job written by Louis Stoumen.

Premier T. C. "Tommy" Douglas, who has headed Saskatchewan's socialist government for its 17-year life, may have to sneak into adjoining Manitoba to catch his daughter Shirley Douglas' latest picture, "Lonita." Young actress, now living in London, has a role in the Stanley Kubrick production, which Douglas (an ordained Baptist minister) thinks likely to be banned in Saskatchewan.

Allied States board powwow in N. Y. last week praised COMPO and urged broader financial support for the industry umbrella. Toppers also said the exhib body has "no financial problems." In for the parleys were Sam Meyers and Jack Clark, new prez and vicepprez of Illinois Allied, which is perking again following death of Jack Kirsch, longtime unit leader.

Unusual for Ballantine Books to publish but it's bringing out Federico Fellini's screenplay of "La Dolce Vita," translated by Oscar deLiso.

Metro stockholders were on the receiving line this week—40c per share via the dividend payoff . . . Columbia's Rube Jackter pressing his sales department to in turn press "I Aim at the Stars," this being the space-age entry coinciding with Russia's man in orbit . . . M-G had all exchanges well stacked with prints of "Butterfield 8" in advance of the Oscar announcements, obviously being mindful of Elizabeth Taylor's nomination. Thought around town was that with all the headlines for the actress, the Acad Award could hardly be more than anti-climactic . . . Bruce Balaban never headed Globe Photos; it was a mistake in last week's vaude section. William Eisnitz is prez.

Keeping up with prexy Spyros P. Skouras is obviously a tough job for 20th-Fox homeoffice publicity people. Last Wednesday (12), they sent out a release announcing that Julie Newmar and Barbara Eden were planing out to Cairo to join Skouras, veep Joseph H. Moskowitz and studio topper Bob Goldstein at the "inauguration of light and sound of the pyramids and sphinx." Girls took off, but the prexy was in his office the following day. By Friday (14), however, Skouras was in Minneapolis to look over the light and sound of 20th's KMSP-TV.

While in New York last week for the Eric Johnston gala, Geoffrey Shurlock, Production Code topper, took time out to tape an interview for Howard K. Smith's upcoming CBS-TV "Closeup" show on film censorship. Show will be aired sometime early next month. Shurlock and assistant Code director Jack Vizzard also indulged in a round of playgoing for both business and pleasure . . . 20th's general sales manager Glenn Norris says apropos of last week's VARIETY story on the increase in the company's first quarter bookings: "Don't sell us short. Bookings were up 13,109 over the 1960 first quarter." Story reported bookings up 12,000.

Anti-Commie Film Unions Resent Baiters-by-Trade

By ALBERT SCHARPER

Hollywood, April 18.

The grand alliance of all the key and certainly most of U.S. showbiz unions, formed late last year to extend their members' interest abroad and to protect them contract-wise while working out of this country, has mounted its first offensive. All the American unions involved will participate in a conference in Costa Rica next month designed to fuse an anti-communist federation of entertainment unions and guilds throughout the Western Hemisphere.

This move ties in closely with Kennedy Administration aims, for as the President enunciated last week—efforts by the U.S. to halt the Red infiltration efforts into this Hemisphere are getting top-level White House and State Dept. attention.

American unions within framework of AFL-CIO which are sending reps to the conference are Screen Actors Guild, American Federation of Musicians, Equity, IATSE, NABET, AFTRA, AGMA and Screen Extras Guild. Herman Kenin, AFM prexy, chairs the steering committee for the mission.

George Chandler, SAG prexy, defined one of the goals when he yesterday observed:

"The active participation of SAG and other Hollywood unions in this and other carefully planned anti-communist moves is the best answer to those few crackpots who, for their own gain, seek to fool the public into believing the atrocious tale that Hollywood is overrun with communists and fellow-travelers."

This obviously is a slap at, among others, Myron Fagan, author of the pamphlet, "Reds Are Back In Hollywood," now being widely distributed.

In joining the drive to nip further Red infiltration of this hemisphere (Castro's Cuba already is plainly under Kremlin's thumb) the alliance of showbiz unions is following a path blazed a decade ago by AFL-CIO prexy George Meany, who on several tours of Europe threw his considerable support behind authentic trade unions there, not self-proclaimed "unions" which were obvious communist stooge fronts. As Meany vividly explained at the time, once a country falls under Red control, free unions as they exist in the U.S. are outlawed.

This alliance of showbiz unions started informally last year, after Hollywood performers reported, particularly to SAG, of difficulties experienced in getting pacts lived up to when working in foreign productions. Thought at that time was that American unions could effect closer ties with counterpart unions abroad. The new goal, vastly more important and of more immediate concern apparently, since has been drawn.

Pat Somerset, of SAG's exec staff, will attend the Costa Rica conclave, probably accompanied by one of SAG's officers.

'Pull the Picture or Face Bail'

Pennsy Bluenoses Order 'Immoral Mr. Teas' Off Screen in Lancaster

Lancaster, Pa., April 18.

After six screenings on a two-a-night policy, "The Immoral Mr. Teas" was yanked out of Fulton Art Theatre here recently on threat of prosecution under Pennsylvania's "obscene exhibition" statute. District Attorney Alfred C. Alspach told Bernard Z. Schantzer, the exhib, to "pull the picture or else." The D.A. said he was acting on complaints (unidentified as to source) and also on the basis of a report given him by County Detective Howard M. Snyder, who viewed the film Friday night (7).

Snyder was one of a party of three "reviewers," the other two a city policewoman and a representative of the local Law & Order Society, who looked in on the bosom-ogling antics of "Mr. Teas."

While the county detective reported to his boss, the other two filed a similar report with Chief of Police William B. Hershner, who then contacted exhibitor Schantzer at his home in Coatesville, Pa., some 25 miles east of Lancaster. Schantzer also operates the Silver Theatre there.

Schantzer told Lancaster newsmen that Chief Hershner had "given me a real bad time on this." So much so that the exhib immediately called the disttrict attorney's office. The D.A., he said, informed him that he'd better pull the picture, at once, or "you'll be looking for bail."

The exhib decided to comply with the warning. However, "Mr. Teas" played to the 9 p.m. audience without hindrance, and it was one of the best houses Fulton has had in some time. The 900-seater is a 110-year-old former opera house, in business continuously since 1852 as a theatre. Schantzer operating art policy films there since 1957.

Theatre has a "no one under 18" policy on all films, rigidly enforced by matronly staff of boxoffice personnel.

Schantzer decided he wouldn't fight the arbitrary order (although fully aware precedent in jury acquittal of a Philadelphia exhib nailed on same charges for same picture, some months ago.)

He opened Saturday night (8) with "The Naked And The Wicked," his next skedded picture, but had to make a special trip to Philly to pick up the print.

The Pennsylvania statute with which Schantzer was threatened has been on the books for a long time. So long, in fact, that the wording of the act includes the word "vaudeville."

Violation of it is a misdemeanor, and conviction on a charge brought under it could mean a penalty of $1,500 fine or two years in prison, or both.

K-B Adds, Drops

Washington, April 18.

K-B Theatres, local indie chain, has acquired one neighborhood house while letting another go in a lease to Wineland Theatres, another local independent chain.

K-B has taken over the Kaywood in suburban Mt. Rainier, Md., and is renovating and redecorating it. The company leased the Naylor, in southeast Washington, to Wineland.

Teenagers Banned From Small British Cinema

London, April 18.

Teenagers have been banned for a month from the Astonia, only cinema in Stevenage New Town, Hertfordshire. Manager Martin Ayres put the bar up after figuring that seat-ripping and ashtray-stealing by rowdy youngsters was costing him $2,800 a year. Fireworks, wild, flying cigarette-butts and filthy language were also causing his staider customers some concern and manager Ayres blamed hooligan youngsters for it all.

After an appeal by local councillors, who feared the ban would mean more unruly teen-agers lolling about Stevenage streets, manager Ayres agreed to relax it for youngsters "who are obviously respectable."

Mort Nathanson Bulletins Field on UA's 10th 'Anni'

United Artists has instituted a special four-page bulletin which is being distributed to all its branch personnel throughout the U.S. in connection with the year-long celebration of the 10th anni of the company's current management team.

Publication, entitled "UA's 10th Anniversary Drive Bulletin," features current branch standings in the sales drive, sales tips, home office and branch news items, photos and cartoons. Bulletin is to be published weekly during 1961. Mort Nathanson is coordinator of the drive.

Driving As a 'Reward'

Hartford, April 18.

Faced by a barrage of legislation aimed at operation of cars by youthful drivers, ozone theatre ops last week were heartened by opposition of state police head to most of projected bills.

Some 22 bills are in the legislative hopper. These would limit driving by teeners to daytime, to certain types of scholastic attainment, to a higher age level, etc. Teens of 16 are now licensed by the state to drive.

One bill would limit teen driving to daytime hours. State Police went on record against daytime hours, 7 A.M. and 7 P.M. Commissioner Leo J. Mulcahy, in a bulletin, declared "Daytime driving bill is unenforceable."

Also opposed by the state gendarmes is a bill that would require all motorists between the ages of 16 and 25 to have their photos appended to their licenses. Purpose of this proposed legislation was to prove age when purchasing liquor. Several drinking spots statewide have had licenses revoked or suspended for serving minors.

Loew's Rochester Re-Do Keyed to New Centre

Rochester, N.Y., April 18.

Loew's Rochester may undergo a $500,000 facelifting job if home-office approval can be obtained. The remodeling is planned to tie in with the Midtown Plaza project here, a major surgery rebuilding program of the downtown shopping section.

Mayor Peter Barry and City Manager F. Dow Hamblin met recently with Loew's officials in New York to discuss the theatre's remodeling.

Charles Kurtzman, general manager for Loew's theatre operations, said the remodeling decision will not be made until he can meet with Laurence Tisch, chairman of the board of Loew's Theatres Inc.

Lynn Johnston, general manager of the Midtown Plaza project in Rochester, is pleased with Loew's plans for remodeling and will cooperate in any way he can. Kurtzman and other officials expect to come to Rochester soon to look at Midtown Plaza and consider what can be done.

Previous plans called for a series of retail stores to be built adjacent to the theatre. Target date for completion of Midtown Plaza is April 1962.
